saints, and moreover they say what this people will be like
and its conditions of existence under the social order of Jesus Christ.

2. As a consequence of this meaning, these to also be an immediate response to complaints

|. "4
e)

74 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

of the souls of the fifth seal: when then, Sei-
Lord, will you pass judgment and avenge us?
You, that is to say, will you avenge the Church and its saints, of those who inhabit the earth and have never-
But stopped persecuting them? The three visions anticipated and brought closer to the following seal re-respond without delay to these souls, and teach them-nent, that is to say, teach children to The Church is persecuted and besieged more than ever in these three periods, the continuation of the designs of God according to chronological order and events

whose realization they still have to wait for before the arrival of this reign, far superior to that which has been taken from them and which will be the complete reign justice on earth.

3. Finally, these visions are a twofold indication prophetic for the men who will live towards the End of the sixth age.

By anticipating these tables and placing them in sixth seal rather than seventh, the Holy Spirit wanted to warn them that most of those who would see and suffer the horrible events Seventh-age men
of their time, men of that sixth age and
penultimate. | p

And as these visions of the seals look at the ne ---- $

weaving is given especially to men who will be, to varying degrees, involved in the affairs of the end of the sixth age, or at least, which is—will be able to understand them, therefore who will all be grown men.

The Holy Spirit also indicates to us by this the duration approximate of the seventh age of the Church, the most terrible for her.

This age will be short. Many believe that it will only include the years of the great power and persecution of the Antichrist. We do not believe this sentiment is valid. Because the numerous and complicated visions of the The seventh trumpet necessarily requires, it It seems to us that this is a much more considerable amount of time. for their fulfillment. That is why we Let's assume that the seventh age will last longer than three and a half years, but it will hardly last that long. beyond sixty years; because we We are warned by the Holy Spirit that the last—new generation of men of the sixth age will see the major events of the seventh and the end of the world. But it takes about fifty or sixty years for men made of a period, that is to say, being at least twenty years old,

76 FRANUS—MACONS AND JEWS.

all disappear and are replaced by a completely new generation t.

In conclusion, we will note that these anti—These actions explain to us the meaning of the silence which takes place in the sky, that is to say in the vision permanente, for half an hour, after the opening ture of the seventh seal (wine, 1).

When Acneau had broken this last seal and unfolded the seventh compartment of the book, he did not Nothing appeared to be written on the sheet of paper, because the facts prophetic messages had been written on the compartment The revelation of the sixth seal in advance. There is no had nothing to read, nor to show. We could to infer from this passage that each of the visions presented at Saint John's lasted about half an hour. hour.

no particular facts relating to di-directly to the sixth age, although they are related.

perfectly to those of the other seals and that they
and continue the topic.

From a historical point of view, the whole point of interest lies

1 Here I would have to explain the main reason, which is at the same time the clearest and most peremptory time. of the anticipation of These three visions. But it relates to these personal ideas which I mentioned in the previous note.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 17

focuses, we repeat, on the vision of the
The sixth trumpet and the sixth epistle. The facts general and characteristic aspects of the sixth age are discussed there find themselves closed off. These visions alone will therefore the object of our study.

78 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

CHAPTER ONE.

SIXTH CHURCH AGE. SIXTH TRUMPET. EXEGETICAL EXPLANATION OF THE FIRST VISION.

The visions of the later ages of the Church are dis-distinguish the previous ones by points all around-individuals.

At first glance at the symbols, one judges that the struggles and trials of the Church will be increasingly terrible and will take on new forms every day more the character of universality; because a symbol that recurs with every trumpet
It is that of an army led by the demon.
We saw at the fifth trumpet a an enormous swarm of locust-scorpions, led by swaddling clothes of the abyss; in the sixth, it is an army of two hundred million riders and horses

mons; and in the seventh, an army also named more abundant than the sands of the sea, gathered and filled ordered by Satan himself.

,

HAS Ey
T
s

PETTY

...
} VISION:
|

to say ut ya uge that rounds of one jout te; Cat little.
demon.
all ue T0
born pë!
the army,
cherals hearth of <j no *
ef con

_ FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 19

The need for the warning is understandable.
that Our Lord gives to his Church before the "beginning of these dreadful times: "Mal-

Good fortune, misfortune, misfortune to the inhabitants of the land!" (vmm, 13.) For it will be much more difficult to

So many temptations and obstacles.

Until now, Saint John had not had, after the
the sound of each trumpet, as after the opening the nature of each seal, that only one vision, exposure health, in its special aspect, the future of each

Church period. In the last two ages

The visions multiply and lengthen. The sixth
The seal has three; the sixth trumpet has two.
followed by a long narrative. In the midst of his last
In battles, the Church will need, more than ever, another era, to have before one's eyes many prophetic data, to support and con-
to sow.

The first misfortune has therefore passed: Ve unum abiit.: Protestantism has produced its ravages physical and moral issues in the world. The Church has bravely endured the ordeal. Despite too much
With numerous defections, she took advantage of the struggle;
She has repaired and compensated in many places and...
points to the evils of heresy.

SO FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The other two misfortunes will follow closely:

Et ecce veniunt adhuc duo væ post hee.

The second misfortune is thus symbolically recounted-

how by the prophet in the first vision

of the sixth trumpet:

SIXTH TRUMPET.

FIRST VISION. NEW AND TERRIBLE HERESY.
(Revelation 9:13-21)

43. And sextus angelus tuba cecinit; et audivivocemunam
ex quatuor cornibus altaris
aurei, quod est ante oculos
God,

14. Dicentem sexto angelo qui habebat tubam: Solve quartet angelos qui alligati sunt in flumine magno Eu-phrate.

45. Et soluti sunt quatuor angeli, qui parati erant in horam et diem et mensem et annum, ut occiderent tertiam partem hominum.

16. And numerus equestris
exercitus vicies millies dena

13. The sixth angel sounded of the trumpet, and I heard a voice coming from the four corners of the golden altar which is before God.

14. She said to the sixth angel who had the trumpet:
Untie the four angels who are linked on the great river
of the Euphrates.

15. And immediately they were de-linked the four angels who were ready for the time being, the day, month and year, in order to
to kill the third part men.

46. And the number of this the cavalry army was

|
|
L
|

Millia. Et audivi numerum
eorum.

17. Et ita vidi equos in vi-Sione; and who sit super eos, habebant loricas igneas,
and hyacinthinas, and sulphur-
reas, et capita equorum erant tanquam capita leonum; and de ore eorum procedit ignis,
and fumus and sulphur.

18. Et ab his tribus plagis occisa est tertia pars hominum de' igne et de fumo et sulphure that proceed from ore ipsorum.

19. Potestas enim equorum
in ore eorum est, and in caudis eorum; nam caudæ eorum similes serpentibus, habentes capita; et in his nocent.

20. Et ceteri homines, qui non sunt occisi in his plagis, neque poenitentiam egerunt
de operibus manuum suarum, ut non adorarent demonia, et simulacra aurea, et argentea, and area, and lapidea, and linea, which does not need to be emptied

two hundred million: because I have I heard the number.

{7. And the horses pa-thus entered the vision;
and those who rode them,
clad in breastplates of fire, .
of hyacinth and sulfur; and the horses' heads were like lion heads and from their mouths came

18. And by these three wounds, fire, smoke, and sulfur
which came out of their mouths,
the third part of the hom-
My daughter was killed.

19. For the power of these horses is in their mouth and in their tails: for Their tails are similar.
to snakes, having teyours, and by these heads they harm-sent.

20. And the other men who were not killed by these wounds did not cause any pain-tenence of the works of their hands, by no longer worshipping the demons, and the golden idols,
of silver, of bronze, of stone and wood, which cannot

| 5.

82 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

sunt, neque audire, neque
ambulare.

21. And not egerunt penitentiam ab homicidis suis,
neque a veneficiis suis, neque
` a fornicatione sua, neque a furtis suis.

see, nor hear, nor walk-
Dear.

21. And they did not penance for their murders, nor their nor their shamelessness cities, nor their thefts.

poisoned-.

The interpreters are quite divided on the matter to hear this vision.

Some, interpreting it literally, see in it monstrous beings created by divine wrath to punish the criminal men of the last ages. But we know from the Holy Scriptures that, when God wants to physically punish humanity manipulated through the intermediary of animals, it does not do a new creation: it employs existing beings already existing (see Exodus, plagues of Egypt).

Others want this vision to be a symbol of physical ailments in general. This interpretation does not seem any more accurate to us. Because, during that the Apocalypse truly foretells plagues physically, she describes them simply and in the sense literal. We demonstrated this above. We let us nevertheless remind the reader of:

1. What is recounted in the fourth seal: the two characters, Death and Hell, receive the power-to see the four parts of the world ravaged by the phlegm, through famine, through plague, and through the teeth of ferocious beasts. History has taught us that - It was, in fact, by these plagues that he had been punished the Roman Empire; 2° an abridged description of the final punishments of divine wrath that prophesies, the outpouring of the seven bowls: all the plagues predicted largely relate to plagues real and historical ones with which God once struck the Egyptians, and have absolutely nothing in their description which prevents taking them at foot of the letter. Thus, first cut: wound horrible and extremely painful; second and third cut: changing of the waters of the sea and rivers of blood; fourth bowl: chaotic extraordinary; fifth bowl: darkness thick, etc.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 83

Others argue that this painting is the prelude to the story of great and cruel wars that devastate - would discuss this period. Some go further in this sense; they claim that these fantastical animals - Tanks are war machines that will be invented by human genius, whether our current standards, or a giving death on all sides.

These interpretations seem quite arbitrary to me.

84 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

milked and well forced. They are in opposition with this truth, which a simple reading reveals bright light, namely: apocalyptic visions they only embrace the peaks of history; they include only the highlights and key features risks of Church life in each period. It cannot be otherwise. The Apocalypse is a book of too short a length to be worth reading reasonably seeks the details of the story ecclesiastical and even less so of pro- history fane. We must start from this principle to arrive at a serious and solid interpretation. Now, to all Throughout history, we find... physical afflictions of all kinds, and in particular wars, some more bloody than others. would wars and calamities become even more frequent more appalling because of the number of combatants and victims in their sixth age, that would not be always only details, pertaining to history- secular history rather than ecclesiastical history. Inventions of war machines have occupied throughout history the human spirit, which has almost constantly striving to perfect the means of destruction. If the Apocalypse had had to go into some details about the successes of our inventive genius, printing, steam and

ns % men
fe Ea syo AE Sen JS oo |

~

=

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 85

Electricity deserved better, it seems to us.
the honor of a prediction that the powder, the ca-

The first of these inventions have undoubtedly had an impact on humanity has a completely different influence than these last ones nières.

We must therefore abandon all these interpretations-tions par trop J'antaisisles.

I believe that all the visions of the trumpets, without exception, are the symbolic prediction of scourges of the moral order, and especially of heresy. But as history testifies countless physical calamities that the heresies have always brought in their wake, nothing prevents fishing also means saying, in general, that the visions of the trumpets announce by way of As a consequence, the plagues and punishments that God punishes the impious and the wicked.

A symbolic trait almost constantly re-
It's fire! Every time I see the trumpets, it's like a fire!
or smoke.

We also find in this first vision of the sixth age this same characteristic indication Terristic: "From the mouths of the horses came fire, smoke, and sulfur" (verse 17 and (also verse 18).

86 FREEMASONS AND JOIBS.

We are therefore faced with a new heresy that will be more terrible than Protestantism ism.

But before offering an interpretation and to apply it according to history, it is useful to first present the simple commentary of text. |

One thing should strike us from the very beginning-our reading. After the signal sounded The scourge does not appear from the sixth trumpet. immediately before the eyes of the prophet, as in the other visions. In the five previous ones, The diaper rings, and immediately the symbol of appears Heresy. This time the signal is no longer enough. Saint Jean hears a voice giving orders. It is the the voice of the Lamb who is always on the altar at in the middle of permanent vision. It intervenes and

This detail should make us suspect that what—

something much more serious than in the fifth trumpet will come in the Church. Since Satan began to be unleashed during the period Previously, we are entitled to think that its The chain will be lengthened and he will receive it in this period a greater power to attack | the Church and to harm it. On the other hand, we have understood that the Lamb successively opened the seals of visions that recount the actions human powers hostile to the Church, because He was given all power over the nations and that he alone founds empires and overthrows them. If, therefore, he intervenes at the sound of this trumpet, Wouldn't this be an indication that, by its permit-sovereign sion, or else this heresy will form like a kind of empire, or rather that of its governments will emerge that will deliver to The Church under terrible attack?

"Mn Ce Len. . > QE e to, ES EN PRE, €

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 87

The voice, said the prophet, came "from the four corners of the altar.

The number "four" is often used in Writing to signify universality, totality, the whole,

In the prophets especially, the number four is used to designate the entire earth: the four corners of the earth, the four regions of the earth. "I have scattered you to the four winds of the heaven, said Zechariah, speaking to the Jews in the name of Lord (11:6). He (the Antichrist) "will seduce the nations that inhabit the four corners of the earth" (Rev. 20:7). He (Jesus Christ) will gather his chosen from the four winds of heaven (Matthew, 11:27). "I will send against Elam," says Jeremiah, "the four winds from the four corners of the earth; that is to say all possible enemies that will come from all sides (xLix, 36). Saint Augustine said that the number twelve est sacramentum cujusdam universitatis, because it is made up of four multiplied by three (Ennar. in ps. Lxxxvi, n° 4, ed. Migne). You have to also recall the four elements, including the universality of visible creation, water, earth, light or fire, and air. And, although science having broken down these elements into several others, formerly regarded as simple substances, it Nevertheless, it remains true that for the eyes of Man, the whole of creation, is summed up in all-days in these four things: air, light, earth and water. | |

The voice coming "from the four corners of the altar" thus emerged as one voice, from its en-seems, by its mass.

She said:

"Untie the four angels who are bound, solve quartet angeli qui alligati sunt. » These angels

are obviously, in the strict and literal sense, angels

reprobates, demons, like the swaddling clothes of verses previous, "the angel of the abyss" called... "exter-minister. » There is too much resemblance between this passage from the Apocalypse and that from the Book of Tobit

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 89

so that it is not explained in the same way:
"Tunc Raphael angelus apprehended dæmonium (Asmodæum) and religavit illud in deserto superioris Ægypti » (Tob., VIII, 3)'. Besides the good ones Angels can be neither bound nor unbound.

This number "four" indicates everything at once and all of these demons, that is to say this legion satanic, whose scope of action and power to harm were increased, and especially their four main leaders.

"On the great river of Euphrates, in flumine Magno Euphrates.

Here is how Father Drach understands this enright :

"We believe this river is named here by
"allusion to passages in Isaiah and Jeremiah where
"Great calamities, terrible invasions"
"are announced as coming from the con-
"entrances of the Euphrates to descend upon the people
"The unbelieving Jew and his God. It is from these lands"
"that Shalmaneser and Sennacherib came, with "their Assyrians, and Nebuchadnezzar with the "peoples of Chaldea" (Revelation, p. 103, note).

I completely agree. The Euphrates is

'Then the angel Raphael seized the demon (Asmodeus) and...'
chaina in the desert of Upper Egypt.

90 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

used here metonymically to designate the regions
that he waters and which were called Chaldea, Me-Sopotamia, empire of the Assyrians and Persians.

We will conclude that the first origin and the starting point of the great heresy of the sixth Fice will have to be found in these regions.

"Then the four angels were released, and soluti sunt quartet angeli. »

Previously, the actions of these four demons and of their accomplices were restricted to irrigated countries by the Euphrates. As soon as they were freed, they could-rent to act throughout the earth.

"Who were ready for the hour and the day and the month and year, which appear in horam and
"diem et mensem et annum."

"This enumeration, which proceeds by gradation,
"said Father Drach, its purpose is to show us
"how everything that happens in this world is foreseen and decreed in the eternal council of the di"vine Providence" (Ap., p. 113, note).

Without a doubt. However, it cannot be the sole purpose of the Holy Spirit who had indeed
other, less unusual ways of expressing oneself to remind us of this great truth. This fa-
The act of speaking should warn us more than the act-
The ritual of the four evil angels will begin to

-

eee

=

MAY

| v

'ai

Freemasons and Jews. 91

to practice at a very specific time. But for us
To provide this knowledge, it would have been enough to say:
They were ready for the day and the hour.
Why did the Holy Spirit create an accumulation-
tion of almost all words that in languages
Do human beings designate a portion of the duration? It Only the week and the century are missing. Wouldn't it-this step to teach us further that this aca more extensive and effective tion of the demon does not will only produce within a specific timeframe, and .
after particular events will have prepared and brought about a state of affairs and circumstances favorable factors for their success? The words annus, mensis, and especially dies and hora, are em-often used in this way in the Bible. Thus, annus and mensis sometimes mark time
of life and the state of life (See Job and Ezekiel.) Dies and hora signify a proper and com-method for doing something (See Dict. of sacred philology, ed. Migne, & these four words).

This merging of the four usual divisions
'of time can refer to all of these circumstances-favorable attitudes. We can also see four of the more important of these circumstances.

ut occiderent tertiam partem hominum. »

92 "FREEMAGONS AND JIBIFS.

This parenthetical clause depends on the verb "de-bind": Soluti sunt... ut occiderent, they were untied... in order to kill. We could also rap- to bring to the verb parati erant, they were ready... to kill. Some authors link it to words in horam and diem and mensem and annum, and They translate it thus: "Then the four angels who were ready for the hour and the "the day and the month and the year they were to kill the third part of men." According to this tra- incorrect translation, it should be said that the angels were ready to kill in a year, a month, a day and one hour, the third part of men.

This is not the meaning of the Greek text, nor of the Vulgate. This parenthetical phrase cannot mean gram- mathematically than this: the four angels ready for the hour, the day, the month, the year, that is to say for at a very precise moment, they were untied in order to kill; Or, alternatively: they were ready to kill.

_ "In order to kill, ut occiderent." The death that will Giving these angels is not physical death, the death of the body, but moral death, the death of the soul that heresy bestows. We have interpreted thus all analogous expressions of others trumpets: first trumpet: the third part of the trees were burned, etc. (vi, 7);

5 anen ad w

)

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 93

Second trumpet: the third part of the creations tures that had life in the sea died (wine, 9); Third trumpet: "And many men" "died because of the waters" (wine, 2).

No one is unaware that this meaning mo-frequently in the Holy Scriptures: "If secundum carnem vixeritis moriemini" (Rom., VIII, 13)!. "Nam que (vidua) in deliciis est, vivens, mortua est" (Ad Tim., 1, 6). "And your quum essetis mortui delictis et peccatis vestris" (Eph., 11, 1), etc., etc. And in the Apocalypse itself: "Scio opera killed; quia nomen habes quod vivas et mortuus es » (11, 1). Wisdom said: "Os quod mentitur, occidit animam" (Sap., 1, 2)°. And our Lord in the Gospel: "Nolite timere eos qui occidunt corpus, animam autem non possunt occidere," etc. (Saint Matthew and Saint Luke).

"The third part, tertiam partem." This

1 If you live according to the flesh, you will die.

? (The widow) who is in delight, though alive, is dead.

3 And you, when you were dead in your sins and in your sins.

I know your works: you have a reputation for being alive, but You are dead.

5. A lying mouth kills the soul.

6 Do not be afraid of those who kill the body, but cannot point to kill the soul.

94 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

expression often recurs in the visions of trumpets. It signifies an indefinite number.

We see from the Bible that the Jews loved to use the ternary number in the determination of their usual affairs. They hold account of the third day, of the third month, of The third year to do certain things. They divided their troops into three parts (II Reg., xvi, 3; IV Reg., x1, 6; II Parab., xxm, 5). Also the prophets, at God's command, make symbolic actions where this division lies in threes. For example, Ezekiel receives the order to to cut his hair and beard, to weigh exactly—take everything and divide it into three parts and to employ each part in the manner that suits it.

is prescribed (Ezekiel 5:1-2). This was the prediction plagues with which the Lord was to strike his people and who are also indicated under the number three. "Tertia leaves you peste morietur et fame consumetur in medio tui; et tertia leaves you in gladio cadet in circuitu tuo; tertiam vero par-tem tuam in omnem ventum dispergam et gla-dium evaginabo post eos" (Ezek., v, 12)'. Of even in Zechariah: "Et erunt in omni terra, di-

1 A third of you will die of the plague and be consumed by the hunger, in your midst; and a third of you will fall by the sword

%

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 95

cit Dominus, pars due in ea dispersegentur et deficient, et tertia pars relinquetur in ed. And educam

tertiam partem per ignem" (Zach., xin, 8, 9).

From these quotes, we should understand that this
The expression tertia pars means an in-determined. By using it in the Book of Revelation, the Holy Spirit used a form of language in the-
which the Jews were very accustomed to. Perhaps did he mean to allude to the passage quoted from Ezekiel?
Chiel, using it to count the victims
spiritual aspects of a moral scourge, in the same terms
who, in this prophet, indicate the number of Jews who perished in the terrible physical scourge of the ruin of Jerusalem.

And the number of this cavalry army was Twenty thousand times ten thousand. And I hear the number.

The prophet did not say so, but the context leaves room for doubt.
It's easy to assume that the four demons, one once freed, they assembled this formidable army - of cavalry by means of which they killed

The predicted heresy will therefore be formed by its supporters.

, around you; and a third of you, I, the Gisperseral, to every wind, and

I will draw my sword after them.

1 And there will be in all the earth, says the Sagnet, two parts which will be scattered and which will fail, and the third part will be left there; and I will force the third part to pass through the fire.

96 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

like a vast army. The previous heresy was presented under the symbol of a cloud of grasshoppers. The grasshoppers come and go, por- so much for their ravages, here and there, without order, without unity of action, in a capricious and irregular manner lière. That is indeed how the Protestant proceeded-ism. Its formation, its development, its attacks The attacks against the Church offered neither order nor unity. no fixed plan whatsoever.

The new heresy will be something else entirely. Elijah will act. like an army, and a cavalry army. It will not be led like a troop. of animals, as was led the flock of grasshoppers by exterminating blanket, which contented with exciting his supporters and presiding to their ravages, without inspiring in them the spirit of en- seems, and to impose unity of direction on them. By Consequently, this new heresy, as in every army will have a single leader, and under his orders from other leaders. There will be a battle plan, an impulse, a direction, an instruction that will be felt everywhere it establishes itself. And its action, similar to that of the cavalry, will be active, fast, formidable.

Twenty thousand times ten thousand, that is to say two hundred million. Through distraction, Father Drach traduit (Apoc., p. 104) "Twenty million." The Greek im-

The prize is worth only one hundred million. But many of the manuscripts have, like the Vulgate, two hundred millions.

Is this frightening number real or symbolic?
Many authors explain it in the symbolic, to designate an indeterminate number and incalculable.

We believe that the Holy Spirit is giving here a
a very real number expressed in round figures.

In general, I see no reason to-curious to take the numbers con- in a figurative sense astounding things that are found in the Apocalypse.
The numbers of the first and second
The series of numbers, the units and the tens, are symbolic, I understand. These numbers rap-they pelt ideas that ultimately relate analysis of the great truths of the faith, touching the internal and external acts of the Divinity, that is to say, to the dogmas of the unity of nature
divine, of the trinity of his persons, of the creation-tion and Providence. But when these figures amount to enormous quantities, of which can-
Are they the symbol? What ideas do they relate to?
They? At the thought, it is said, of a quantity that exceeds our conceptions, and which is indeterminate for us,

6

98 FREEMASONS BT JEWS.

although very determined for God. This explanationcation offers a contradiction in thinking as in words. It is not possible that the number of an indeterminate quantity for us and exceeding our conceptions, either symbolized by a
a very specific and easily understandable number;
because there is no connection between the two just and true. The Holy Spirit could not have predicted for us-to feel the power of symbols under such conditions, since nothing prevented him from giving us one Another very simple way is the idea of quantities in-determined, or which exceed the understanding of our mind. He used this ma- several times

Saint John sees a large group of people,
the quantity of which is assessed in these terms: "I I saw a huge crowd that no one could to count. » In several other places, for >

to render an indeterminate number, the Holy Spirit uses these words that we have just explained, third part And precisely in the passage which
This last vague expression is what concerns us.
used next to the precise quantity two hundred
millions.

These two hundred million would therefore designate in round numbers, and in our opinion, the number of members

ee À Ÿ |
ù e ag et 3 , iti

ae
Wares

= FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 99

rents that the new heresy will count, be & one at any given time, or for the entire duration of the sixth age, or even during the duration of his existence; for this heresy could well proto live longer into the next age.

After informing us of their number, the pro-
the phete will give us the description of these here-
ticks. |

The general symbol of the announced heresy is a horse carrying a rider. Now, we have seen, in the first four seals, that the horse symbolized the empire, the governmental power tale, and that the rider was pointing to the series of those who had possessed this power. The same symbols that must always be explained
In the same way, we will conclude that this here-sie will be constituted in the form of a government, and that it will have a series of leaders. Verse 18, by a
A different detail, we had already been provided with the same one.

In this equestrian army, the horsemen and also the horses, according to the Greek text, "had "Hyacinth and sulfur-colored breastplates," that is to say, breastplates the color of fire, of hyacinth and sulfur; therefore, breastplates red, blue, and yellow; for red is the color-

400 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

their fire, the adjectives bactylos and hyacinthinus mean violet or bluish, and the flower called Hyacinth or hyacinth has many blue species; Sulfur is yellow.

But red, blue, and yellow are the colors which predominate in the coat of arms and on the drapery skins, standards and flags of civilized peoples 'ses of Europe, America and Asia'. No Could this be a symbolic indication that Heresy will have adherents in these three parts of the world, and, moreover, that it will exercise its dominion and will possess the government in several of these peoples?

The prophecy descends into greater depths. tails.

These horses are not ordinary horses:

Their heads "were like the heads of lion," and their tails "like snakes having heads.

These horrible beasts therefore had the head of a lion, the body of a horse, and the tail composed of snakes; the horsehair was replaced by snakes whose head was descending towards the earth.

All of these frightening and chaotic shapes

1 See Atlas of History and Geography, Bouillet, 1877.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 101

one of them in particular must provide us

members.

The lion in Scripture represents the proud, the ambitious, the violent, the strong, the powerful and the persecutors (See Dictionary of Sacred Philosophy)

– The horse is a domestic animal that man dominates and leads at will by the bridle and the brake:

"Nolite fieri sicut equus et mulus quibus non est intellectus; in camo and freno maxillas eorum constringe qui non approximant ad te" (Ps. xxxi, 9). Father Glaire translates and explains as follows

this verse: "Do not become like a horse

"and a mule that has no intelligence. Res–"

"tighten the mouth of those with the bit and the bridle."

"who do not approach you, that is to say, do not

"They do not obey you" (the Holy Bible according to the Vulgate) gate, vol. 11, p. 300). The horse will therefore be the symbol exact form of submission and dependence servile. The serpent is the figure of hypo– men critics, liars, envious people, and slanderers. He also refers to people and things that are very harmful simplistic and very pernicious (See same Dictionary)

(under the word Serpent).

From this, we can see how formidable they will be.

and heresy and its followers are detestable.

6.

102 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"From the mouths" of these animals "came fire,

"Smoke and sulfur." – And by these three

"Wounds killed a third of the men,

"by the smoke, fire, and sulfur that came out"

"From their mouths." – "The power of these che–

"Worst is in their mouths."

It must not be without reason that the prophet repeated the word "bou–" three times in two lines

"We must pay attention to this and infer from it"

that this heresy, more than any other of the past,

will have at his disposal "the power of the mouth,"

that is to say, speech, in all its forms and with all its resources, to produce its effects disastrous.

Fire, smoke, and sulfur signify the en–

teachings and poisonous speeches that will

the life of grace and faith. Fire is the symbol bole, an indicator of heresy in all visions previous ones. This heresy will appropriate all the dogmatic errors of others. The smoke has the same meaning as in the fifth trom-pette: she points out social errors including the Protestantism laid the foundations. Sulphur rap-shovels the shameless cities buried beneath the Rain of fire and sulfur. Here it is the symbol of a E eee yp ; nn, eg mme * PP I

PRANGS-MACONS AND JUIBS. 403

impurity. So that these heretics will vomit
from their mouths all sorts of dogmatic errors
social and moral issues.

But the power of these symbolic horses
it's not just in their mouths, it is also in their "ser--- tails
cpents having heads; and by the heads they harm-
"sent." However, the action of this power of the
The tail is different from the mouth. By the
They kill by the mouth, they harm by the tail.
difference in expression indicates a difference
in the harm produced: by shower they kill mo-Finally, they had the souls; by the tail they did not will not cause moral harm, but physical harm;
they will harm the life of the body and the property of the body; they will take away life and worldly possessions.
Compared to the loss of the soul, the loss of life and the things of this world are but a sim-
What a shame: nocent.

The third group of men was killed by the mouths of these horses. These words refer to the Catholics who, without joining the ranks of the new Heretical calves will lose their faith by letting themselves to impress and seduce through the mistakes of all
so that they will teach.

In previous ages, the Holy Spirit did not

~

showed Saint John that heresy and its victims.
In this age, he broadens the scope of vision.
He makes the prophet do something like a general review-
the whole city of evil; and before his very eyes pas-sent two other categories of foreign men and hostile to the Church.

"And the other men who were not killed"
They did not do penance for these wounds. And so on.
homines who are not occisi in their plagis. »

These are not men who would have escaped these wounds while preserving the life of the grace and faith, but of men who, already dead
to supernatural life by other causes, remaining-
They remain in this state and do not want to get out of it.
Penance. The prophet distinguishes them into two classes by repeated expressions: Veque ege-runt penitentiam and not egerunt penitentiam These men are 1° the idolaters: "Ut non adore dæmonia, and simulacra aurea and ar-gentea, and ærea and lapides and lignea, que neque videre possunt, neque audire, neque ambulare »
(v. 20). The last words of this verse relate-too obviously in verses 4, 5, 6 and 7 of psalm cx, Zn exitu Israel of Ægypto, for that we don't have to listen to the whole thing in the literal sense.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 105

% The Holy Spirit taught Saint John that, at
In the sixth age of the Church, there would still be in the
the world of idolaters of all kinds, even the worst
1. Species: formal worshippers of the devil; 2. the © men who, not being idolaters, abandon themselves lead to crimes, homicides, poisonings,
|. lewd acts and thefts, in which computer-
* naire all those who do not receive from the Church - light and supernatural life.
From this, we must conclude that in the sixth age,
3 The Church will have many enemies. We
: let's find the number four in the enumeration-
the order and the classification made by the Holy Spirit:
1° The two hundred million heretics; 2° their 5 victims: tertia pars hominum; 3° idolaters,

The number four being the symbol of the universe
– salicity, it follows that in the sixth age the enemies
: members of the Church will surround him on all sides; they will be both inside and outside of society
| Catholic, which will find itself the focal point of attack–
'that starting from almost all the countries of the universe.
This general review of the enemies of the Church,
played on the sixth trumpet, it brings us even more,
As a result, valuable information was provided.

106 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The situation of humanity will differ greatly,
in this sixth age, from that of the preceding ages:
all regions of the universe must be in relationship with each other. The Catholic Church– |

lique, through these universal attacks, will acquire a universal notoriety as well. The persecution of– will come at this age, and even more so at the next, the more brilliant in all its notes.

Finally, since, according to past history, the he– Resia, a moral scourge, has always been the direct cause or occasional physical afflictions, it is logical– than to think that the same will be true in the sixth age, and that this era of the most abominable and
The more numerous the errors, the less they will suffer.
harsher punishments than others. One could perhaps– can be deduced from the warlike aspect given to the symbol bole and its designation as "equestrian army" that terrible and bloody wars will be the
a particular scourge of the countries where this will take root heresy.

Now, historically, what is this
What is this appalling heresy of this era?
whose prophetic figure we have just studied?
Does it belong to the past, is it of the present, has it?
Will he see her if he comes alone?

We say: we are in the midst of our sixth age, and the heresy described in such detail by Saint Jean, that's FREEMASONRY.

We believe and affirm that the vision
The sixth trumpet is the prediction and the symbolic description of this formidable society secret, which is the great heresy of our time.

To demonstrate this assertion, it is absolutely necessary for me to...
It is necessary to explain to the reader the Franc-Freemasonry in all its forms. This heresy, which is the repository of all past errors
and modern, is not yet as widespread known as Protestantism and other sects of centuries past. My interpretations would appear certainly arbitrary, or at least ris-

| qués, if I did not also make known com-
| as completely as possible the object of the prophecy.

I will hold this study on Freemasonry
within limits as narrow as permitted-

_ will determine the scope of the matter and its importance.

Here is the division of this work:

1° Definition of Freemasonry, its condamnation by the Church: sources and documents;
2. Origin of Freemasonry; 3. Its developments loppements; 4° its organization in general;
5° some more important points of this organisation: oaths, secrets, ruling authority;

108 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

6. Means of action of Freemasonry; 7. its but final.

CHAPTER II.

OF FREEMASONRY.

What is Freemasonry?

Freemasonry, or more simply the Freemasonry is a very secretive association.
Cienne, mother and director of all the others occult societies of our time, widespread pre-worldwide sentiment, which aims ultimately the destruction of the Church and religion
Catholics, the overthrow of the entire social order Christian, and the establishment, on these ruins, of the universal domination of the Jewish people.

A relatively small number of years ago, we ren-
still confronted men who denied the existence of Freemasonry, or at least its dangerous nature; some, in good faith, by Ignorance or thoughtlessness; the others, on the side taken and hypocritical, because they belonged to the sect. For a long time, Freemasonry has tried to hide. But ever since she

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 109

obtained citizenship in France, and that a decree Imperial declared it a public utility company.
especially since 1879, its existence was stated in the French Chamber, that of
At the top of the stands, without any protest,
but with the approach of satisfied laughter, the ma-
The joint committee of the national representation was signed listed as being enrolled in its frameworks, and that the highest magistrates of the Republic are understood to be specifically designated as its members!, we would be completely out of line to con-to now test the flourishing existence of France Masonry.

Can its dangerous nature do anything?
Doubt? No, for no one, except for those who, during these last twenty years, would have wanted to close their eyes and ears, and would have stubbornly refusing to read a single page or line of Catholic writers, religious newspapers, and doctrinal letters of popes and bishops, and works published by Freemasons themselves

The light is brilliant for anyone who wants

1 See L'Univers of July 19, 1879, report of the Cham-

Members of Parliament, session of July 8, speech by Mr. Baudryd'Asson.

7

410 - FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

to take the slightest trouble to look. All These writings, certainly, were not intended for a harmless ghost. The authors and journalists Catholics recorded the ancient facts and re-hundreds; the popes and bishops warned of danger to princes and peoples, and have con-Damn that pernicious sect! The Freemasons!

(1) It will not be useless to give here some extracts from the Papal bulls that denounced and condemned Freemasonry
nerie and secret societies, its branches.

1. Clement XII. 1738. Constitution In eminentt..... "We we learned, through public rumor itself, of the extension, the contagion and progress are accelerating every day in certain cases.
societies, assemblies or conventicles called of Liberi-Mura-tori or Freemasons, or by some other name, according to the variety of languages. In this: associations, men of all religion and any sect, careful to affect an appearance of natural honesty, bound together by such a close pact that impenetrable, according to the laws and statutes they have deeds, they commit themselves, by a rigorous oath sworn on the Bible and under the most terrible penalties, to be kept hidden by a st-inviolable silence regarding the secret practices of their society... If they They did not do evil, they would not have this hatred of the light... That is why, going over in our minds the evils which usually result from these kinds of societies, not only for the tranquility of states, but also for salvation souls, considering how much these societies are in disabling in accordance with civil and canon law..... of Our With full apostolic power we have resolved to condemn and to
to defend these companies, assemblies, meetings, associations, aggregations or conventicles called de Liberi-Muratori or

We condemn and defend them by our present
A constitution that will remain valid in perpetuity. That is why—which We absolutely forbid and by virtue of the holy obedience, to each and every one of the faithful of Jesus Christ, of

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 444

They unmasked her through their works. He cannot There is no longer any doubt. Freemasonry is whatever state, grade, condition, rank, dignity and preeminence

whether they are lay or clerical, secular or regular, meritorious even a specific mention and designation and indi-visual, to have the audacity or presumption to enter, under under whatever pretext or in whatever guise, in thesesaid societies of Liberi-Muratori, or of Freemasons or otherwise called, or to propagate them, to maintain them and to
to receive them in their homes or in their dwellings or elsewhere their and to hide them, to be registered there, to be included or to reside there, to provide them with the means or the facility to assemble somehow on the one hand, to serve them in any way whatsoever, to help them in any way advice, no help, no secret or public favor,
directly or indirectly, by oneself or by others,
as well as to engage, to bring about, to provoke, to decide the others to register in these kinds of societies, to join them to aggregate, to attend, to promote and to support them, of what kind-in whatever way. And We command them to stand completely foreign to these societies, assemblies, meetings, agreements gations or conventicles, and this under pain of excommunicationtion that all those who contravene the following prohibition will incur to be worn, and-by that very fact and without further declaration, excommunication by which no one, except Curtice of death, will not be able to receive the benefit of absolution from whom whether it be other than Ourselves or the Roman Pontiff then existing. » |

2. Benedict XIV. 1751. Const. Providas. In this constitution, Benedict XIV inserted in its entirety, word for word, the constitution-Clement XII's statement, saying: "We confirm it, corroborate it..."

Let us, and renew it with certain science and fullness.
of Our Apostolic Authority by the content of these presents letters, in all and for all, as if it were published for the first time, of Our own accord, of Our own authority and in Our name, and We will and We decree that she has strength and effectiveness forever." — I] then addresses the powerful secular bodies so that they may enforce these constitutions apostolic.

the worst heresy that ever attacked
the Church.

'in ancient times still happens, and especially in these days of af-

the conflict where we are, which seems to be lately foretold for so many centuries by the apostles, where "will come imposters, walking according to their desires on the path of impiety" (Judah 18). Indeed, no one is unaware of what number prodigious numbers of criminal men have, in these difficult times, ficles, united as one man, against the Lord and against his Christ, who, employing all their strength and tearing away to the doctrine of the Church the faithful "deceived by a false philosophy and by vain sophisms" (Colossians 11:8), have thus turned their helpless efforts to shake and overthrow the Church. To succeed more easily, most of them formed secret societies, clandestine sects, hoping by this means train a greater number in their association of revolt and crimes. It has been a long time-while the Holy See, having discovered these sects, raised.

Against them a strong and free voice, which he brought to light
the plans they were secretly hatching against Religion and even against civil society. He has been doing this for a long time now.
excited everyone's diligence so that everyone would be attentive to them to prevent them from attempting to carry out their unholy plots. But We must lament that the zeal of the Holy Apostolic See has not obtained the result he expected and from what these men cried Minels did not abandon their undertaking, hence are Finally, all the misfortunes we have seen resulted. Moreover,
These men, whose pride was constantly growing, dared to form new secret societies, it is necessary to recall here a recently formed company, which has made extensive and pro-funds in Italy and other countries, which, although shared in several branches and bearing different names according to their diversity, however, is achieved through the community of feelings and crimes, and by the pact that binds them, one in reality: it is the
a society most often referred to as the Carbonari.
affect a singular respect and a truly wonderful zeal for the Catholic religion and for the person and doctrine of Jesus-Christ our Savior, how sacrilegious they sometimes are!

– , men, m

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 113

– By proposing that I study and study Franc-Freemasonry and the other secret societies it has speeches... are nothing more than traits of these men treacherous men covered in sheepskins who, deep down, are that rapacious wolves use to wound more surely those who are not on their guard. This terrible, by which, to the limitation of the ancient Priscillianists, they undertake not to reveal at any time, under any circumstances reproach to those who are not affiliated with their society, whatever this concerns her, nor to communicate to the members who are in the lower ranks whatever things re-relations with higher ranks; and also these clandestine meetings-

time and illegitimate, from which they took their model from several heretics ticks, and this promiscuity of men of all religions and of any sect within their society, if there were no other evidence, would clearly show that we should not have any confidence in these discourse. But there is no need for conjecture or reasoning-ments..... Their printed books, where the practices are described used in their meetings, and especially in those of the ranks superiors, their catechisms, their statutes and other documents
authentic and highly credible statements, and also the testimony of those who, after having abandoned this society to which they had previously joined forces, and revealed to the judges...
The errors and artifices, all of this obviously proves that the Carbonari primarily aimed to give to each cun, through the spread of indifference in matters of religion, any license to create a religion according to one's fancy and following his opinions, to profane and defile by some of their criminal ceremonies the passion of Jesus Christ; of to subject the sacraments of the Church to contempt... and even the mysteries of the Catholic religion; to overthrow this See apostolic against which... they are animated by a singular hatred bind and plot the most terrible and disastrous attacks.
The moral precepts given by the Carbonari society,
as can be seen from the same documents, are no less hor-ribles, although she boasts proudly of demanding of her secta-brothers whom they love and practice charity and all kinds of virtues and that they preserve themselves with extreme care from all vice.
Thus, she shamelessly promotes debauchery.

produced and which she governs, I will not the pre-attempt to place before the eyes of my readers

the ways of voluptuousness; it teaches that it is permissible to kill those who would live the oath to keep the secret of which we have mentioned above... to incite sedition in order to strip them of their may she have power over kings and all those who command, and may she dare, by a supreme insult, to call all indiscriminately by the name of tyrants. Such are, and others still, the dogmas and pre-principles of this society... Our predecessors... condemned and proscribed the societies of the Liberi-Murutori or the Freemasons, or called by any other name according to the diversity of countries or languages, a society of which that of the Carbonari is certainly an imitation, if not perhaps an offshoot of it. Consequently- quence, after having heard a congregation among our vener- esteemed brothers, the cardinals of the Holy Roman Church, and also of Our own movement and of Our certain science, and after Our mature deliberation and in the fullness of power apos- Tolique, We hereby decree and order that the aforementioned society of Carbonari, or whatever other name he is called, and his assemblies, meetings, colleges, aggregations and conventicles, must be condemned, proscribed, as We condemn them- We do not, and do not, by our present constitution, prohibit or de- "Mevera vuluble forever." - Follows the prohibition sentence and excommunication in the same terms as those of the Constitution of Clement XII. Pius VII adds: "Furthermore, We we want all to be held, under the same penalty of excommunication munication reserved for Us and the Roman Pontiffs Our successors ceasers, to denounce to the Bishops or others that the matter Look, all those who will know because they enlisted in this society or for having tainted themselves with someone's crimes that we reminded them. Finally, to more effectively rule out any danger of error, We condemn and Weproscribe all catechisms, as the Carbonari call them, and all the books where the Carbonari describe their usual practices in their assemblies, as well as their statutes, codes and all books written in their defense, whether printed or handwritten, and We forbid all the faithful, under pain of excommunication major, reserved as we have said, to read or to keep none of these books, and We command them to deliver them without will be in the writings of Catholic authors and reserved for the ordinary people of the place or any others to whom it belongs the right to receive them.

—

4, Leo XII. 1825. Const. Quo graviora. In this constitution Leo XII reproduced word for word all those of his predecessors— sisters against the Freemasons and the Carbonari; then he adds:

"Those who then held power in their hands, may God have mercy on them." would have attached as much importance to these decrees as the demand— May the salvation of the Church and the State be upon them! May God have mercy on them! were persuaded that they should see in the Roman Pontiffs, successors of the blessed Peter, not only the pastors and the leaders of the universal Church, but also the defenders tireless guardians of their dignity, the most vigilant sentinels perils that threaten them! If only they had employed their power to destroy the sects including the Apostolic See had uncovered their poisonous designs! They would have then fully succeeded. But, either through the fraud of these silenced individuals who might have had the skill to conceal their maneuvers, either through the imprudent suggestions of some men, it is It turned out they saw it as nothing more than a matter that should be ignored. or at least which should have been treated very lightly, and of these old sects of Freemasons, whose lineage has never been cooled down. Several others came out even more... chants and more audacious. The Carbonari sect, which passed to be at the head of others in Italy and in a few others country, and which seemed to contain them all within its borders, divided in numerous branches under various names, undertook to combat the Catholic religion to the bitter end and in civil order the legitimate sovereignty... Pius VII, of happy memory, to whom We succeeded, condemned under the most severe penalties the Carbonari sect... It was only a short time since this constitution— The tution had been published by Pius VII, when We were raised on the supreme chair of Peter; and We have applied also— as soon as all our efforts to realize the state, the number and the power of secret societies. This investigation has... It is easy to recognize that their audacity had increased principally mainly by the new sects that have attached themselves to it. Among these, special mention must be made of the one that we

116 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Freemasons. Only I will apply myself to re— Sumer and to present with the utmost order and education in several universities where young people are, by teachers who focus not on instructing them, but on pervertir, initiated into the mysteries of this society, which we can call very truly mysteries of iniquity, and formed in all the crimes. That's certainly why, so long after the The torches of the rebellion were lit for the first time. in Europe by secret societies and carried far and wide by their agents, after the resounding victories won by the most powerful princes of Europe, victories that gave us hope that these companies would be stifled, however their efforts abodespicable acts have not yet ceased. Even in the countries where the Ancient storms seemed to have subsided, what a point the apprehension of new disturbances and new seditions What these societies are constantly plotting! What terror of daggers! impious ones, whose victims they strike in the shadows, whom they have doomed to death!... From this also come these calamities cruel things which are devastating the Church almost everywhere, and which we do not We can recall without pain or bitterness. We attack with boundless audacity its most dogmas and precepts sacred; they strive to debase his majesty; and not only they disturbs the peace and happiness which it has a right to enjoy, but They are destroyed completely. And you shouldn't think that this is falsely and slanderously attributed to these companies All these evils, and others that we keep silent about, are hidden. The books that their affiliates were not afraid to publish on the religion and politics, and where they insult authority, blaspheme the majesty, repeat that Christ is a scandal or a folly, where they even often teach that there is no of God and that the human soul perishes with the body; their codes and their statutes where their designs and plans are revealed, all clearly proves what we have stated, that the attacks to overthrow legitimate sovereignties and to destroy The Church, down to its very foundations, comes from them. And it must to hold, for certain and demonstrated, that these sects, although diversifies of name, are united together by the unholy bond of more infamous schemes.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 417

Clarity is possible given the numerous historical data points. and the compelling evidence they provide-

"Given the circumstances, we believe it is our responsibility." tasked with condemning these secret societies again, of so that none of them can boast of not being included in our apostolic sentence and under this pretext to mislead men who are neither suspicious nor subtle. Thus, in the opinion of our venerable brothers the cardinals of

and from Our certain knowledge and after careful deliberation, We Let us perpetually outlaw all secret societies, so those that exist now and those that might emerge in the following, and those, whatever their name may be, ap-peeled, who would conceive against the Church and against the sovereigns-civil entities, the projects we have just mentioned; We proscribe under the same penalties decreed by the letters from Our predecessors, letters which we have reproduced in Our present constitution and which We confirm ex-promptly. - The prohibition sentence follows in the same terms than those of the Constitutions of Pius VII and Clement XII.
Like Pius VII, Leo XII added to these prohibitions that of
to hold no rank in any secret societies whatsoever
Let them be. It affects all its members, affiliates, authors, supporters, advisors and approvers of the penalty of excommunication maejeure, reserved for the Pope. He imposes, under the same penalty, the obligation-grants the right to denounce members of these companies and pronounces the absolute nullity of the "completely impious and criminal oath"

"those who are affiliated with these sects are obliged not to re-
"to reveal to no one what concerns their association and to strike
"death to all their associates who would reveal it to superiors"
"priests, whether ecclesiastical or lay." The sovereign Pont-Tife then appealed to the vigilance of the episcopate, and to piety and to the prudence of princes... "The peril is so great at this hour
that it is not only for the defense of Religion Catholic, you must suppress these sects, but also for your own safety and for the salvation of the subjugated peoples to your empire... Those who are attached to these sects are also the enemies of Religion and of your power.
They attack each other, they exhaust themselves in their efforts

7.

RRRARARRA

118 FRENCH MACCONISTS AND JEWS,

sent. So that, by reading this work,
one can easily acquire knowledge

"to shake them both to their foundations..."
"But such is the cunning of these treacherous men, that it is "mainly when they seem most applicable to "development of your power, which on the contrary they have in "View of overturning it."

Leo XII urged the faithful to flee from the affiliates of the societies of se-Cretans: "Flee completely from these men who call for light-
 "Darkness is light, and darkness is light... They are alike"
 "to those men to whom Saint John, in his second epistle,
 "He is reluctant to offer hospitality and does not want anyone to know-
 "read and which our fathers did not hesitate to call the pre-
 "Firstborn of the devil. Therefore, beware of their seductions and
 "the speeches they will use to persuade you to
 "to enroll them in the sects where they themselves are registered. Te-
 "I'm certain that no one can participate in these sects"
 "without being guilty of a very great crime; close your ears to
 "what they will tell you to persuade you to consent to "allowing admission into the lower ranks of their sects..."
 "This criminal oath which We have spoken of and which is required
 "Even for initiative at lower ranks, it is quite by "himself so that you may understand that it is impious to be-
 "To play a role even in these lower ranks and to remain there. En-
 "continued, although it is not customary to confide what there is to "more compromising and more criminal to those who are not
 "Having not reached the higher ranks, it is nevertheless very evident-
 "The strength and audacity of these pernicious societies"
 "increase due to the agreement and the number of those who
 "They enlist there. And so even those who have no
 "Those who have fallen below the ranks must be considered accomplices"
 "of these crimes."

5. Pius IX. 186%. Allowance. consistorial Multiplies,... «Among "the numerous machinations and means by which the "Enemies of the Christian name have dared to attack the Church of "God, and tried, though in vain, to bring him down and destroy him"
 "To destroy, one must, without a doubt, take into account this perverse society
 "of men, commonly called Masonic, which, contained
 "First in darkness and obscurity, it eventually became

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. . 419

sufficiently complete session of the Freemason-nerie and all the other associations that in

"day then for the common ruin of religion and of the-
 "Human society." – Pius IX recalls the condemnations pronounced against Freemasonry and secret societies, by Clé-Leo XII, Benedict XIV, Pius VII and Leo XII. He deplores, as Leo XII, the inattention and laxity of governments towards of these sects. If they had listened to and followed the teachings apostolic: "Certainly, we would never have had, nor our fathers
 "Nor, to deplore so many seditious movements, so many "of inflammatory wars that plunged all of Europe into

"core the Church..." – "All these efforts of the Apostolic See did not achieve the success that should have been hoped for. The Masonic sect—the one we are talking about has been neither defeated nor vanquished; at the contrary, it has developed so much that in these very different days she shows herself everywhere with impunity, and raises her head more bolder than ever. We therefore deemed it necessary to return to this subject, given that, as a result of the ignorance where perhaps there are guilty designs at play in these clandestine meetings, one might falsely believe that the nature of this society is harmless, that this institution has no other aim than to rescue men and come to their aid. in aid in adversity; that finally, there is nothing to fear from it for the Church of God." Who, however, does not see how much a Does such an idea stray from the truth? What does this association claim? A group of men, of every religion and every belief? To what? Well, these clandestine meetings and this very rigorous oath demanded of initiates, who pledge never to reveal anything of What could this be related to? And why this frightening severity? of punishments to which initiates devote themselves, in the event that Would they break their oath? Certainly, she A society that thus flees the day must be impious and criminal. and light. How different from such an association pious societies of the faithful that flourish in the Catholic Church That! With them, nothing is hidden; no secrets, the rules that... they govern are under everyone's eyes; and everyone can see too charitable works practiced according to the doctrine of the Gospel gile. Thus, we have not seen without pain Catholic societies—

420 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

have emerged in the past and in the present.
First, I must provide my readers with what—liques of this kind, so beneficial, so well designed to excite the piety and helping the poor, being attacked and even de-trout in certain places, while on the contrary, they are encouraged, or at least the shadowy Masonic society is tolerated, so hostile to the Church and to God, so dangerous even to the security of kingdoms... If some think that Jes constitutes—apostolic pronouncements published under pain of anathema against the Occult sects and their followers and instigators have no power in countries where these sects are tolerated by civil authorities, They are certainly making a very big mistake. As well as As you know, Venerable Brothers, we have already condemned this false and evil doctrine, and today we re— We prove and condemn again... In this situation, for fear that imprudent men, and especially young people, might allows ourselves to be led astray, and so that Our silence does not give rise to per—

Brothers, to raise Our apostolic voice, and confirming here before you the constitutions of Our predecessors, of Our authority apostolic. We disapprove of and condemn this society Masonic and other societies of the same kind, which, while differing in appearance, they form every day in the same goal, and conspire, either openly or clandestinely—lies against the Church or legitimate powers; and We or we give under the same penalties as those specified in the previous constitutions of Our predecessors, to all Christians of every condition, rank, and dignity and from every country, to consider these same societies as proscribed and rejected by Us. Now there remains nothing left to satisfy—to do in accordance with the wishes and solicitude of Our paternal heart, that to warn and exhort the faithful who may have associated themselves with sects of this kind, having to obey wiser inspirations and to abandon these disastrous secret meetings, so that they are not not drawn into the abyss of eternal ruin; as for all As for the other faithful, we strongly urge them to remain in 'beware of the perfidious speeches of sectarians, who, under a outwardly honest, they are inflamed with a burning hatred against the religion of Christ and legitimate authority, and which have only one

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 124

LL a aD

details on these various sources of our study.

single-minded thinking, namely, to annihilate all divine and human rights hands... let them know that they must be included among those whose society and access the Apostle so vehemently forbade us, that he expressly forbade them to even say to them: Ave (greetings)... May God, restraining the fury of depraved men who, at with the help of the aforementioned companies, prepare documents impious and criminals, may the Church and human society may rest a little from so many and numerous ills "Inveterate!"

6. Leo XIII. 1878. Encycl. Quod apostolici muneris...

Leo XIII reports the new sects:

"As required by the office of Noge, apostolic ministry—From the very beginning of Our ministry, We have not not neglecting to point out this deadly scourge that insinuates itself through the members of human society and who put it on a grand scale peril... The evils we deplored then have so quickly... increased demands, that again We are forced to you

Brothers, we are speaking of the sect of these men who...
They call themselves by various names, and almost barbaric ones: Socialists, Communists and Nihilists, who, spread throughout the earth, and closely bound together by an unjust pact, do not ask—no longer helping the darkness of societies Cretans, but occurring openly and publicly in all confidence, strive to complete the plan they have formed of—and then for a long time to overturn the foundations of any society civil. » — The Pope then recalls the constitutions and allocutions of his predecessors, who condemned all different kinds of secret societies.

The writings of the bishops of our century, who condemned the Freemasonry and its pernicious character and actions were highlighted. heavens, not all of them are known to me. I quote: the circular letter of Mgr de Laval, Ason clergé, of December 10, 1865; — the instruction. pastoral letter of Bishop de Montpellier, Bishop of Liège, dated September 9 November 1871; — the pastoral instruction of Mgr de Ghent, September 10 December 1871; — the pastoral letter of Bishop Deschamps, archbishop Bishop of Mechelen, 1874; — the Lenten pastoral letter of

422 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

These sources fall into two distinct categories.
trenches: 1° writings of Masonic origin and 2° works composed by Catholics for to fight Freemasonry.

1° The first category includes writings
Officials and quasi-officials of the sect.

The official documents consist of: 1° disapproved Masonic statutes, rules, and regulations and voted on by general meetings or assemblies legislative elections of the Grand Orients;

2° Circulars, instructions, notices, programs
my letters, correspondence, bulletins, etc., published at different eras by the orders of the grand masters and their advice, or secretly addressed messages linked by the various leaders of secret societies.

These two types of writing usually concern
the government of the Masonic order and its branches.

Among all of these, we must point out:

Firstly, for the eighteenth century, Zes

Monsignor Limberti, Archbishop of Florence, 1871; – the letter not-
Letter from Bishop Martin of Natchitoches, USA
1875; – the Study on Freemasonry by Bishop Dupanloup, Bishop of Orléans, 1875; – the pastoral instruction of Bishop Besson, bishop of Nimes, 1878; – the pastoral instruction of Bishop Fava of Grenoble, 1879, from Bishop Turinaz's booklet, Bishop of Tarentaise, entitled: The Great Peril of Our Time or the Freemasonry, 1879, etc., etc...

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 123

Original writings or documents on Illuminism.

These documents consist of letters and inquiries.

instructions that Weishaupt and the principal leaders of Bavarian Illuminism wrote to each other or _ addressed to their members. These fanatics, for not being recognized, they gave themselves names of War caught up in history. Weishaupt was becoming to call Spartacus; the Bavarian Baron Knigge, the Weishaupt's right-hand man was named Philon;

the others bore the names of Minos, Cato, Ajax, Socrates, Marcus Aurelius, Bayard, etc.

These writings were discovered by the police at the home of main supporters. The Bavarian government had them legally published in Munich in 1786

and 1787, and deposit in the secret archives of this city. The Grand Duke, sovereign of this country, ordered expressly to make them available to anyone who would like to consult them, and to communicate them to screw the originals to all those for whom their au-Authenticity would be somewhat doubtful.

Secondly, for the nineteenth century: the Secret documents from the Italian high street. These documents contain: 1° letters addressed

collectively through this high-level sales, advice and supreme authority of Carbonarism, to the leaders of secondary advice called central sales;

424 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

2° letters written personally by the grand

director of high sales, & these same managers;

3° of the responses made by these agents to their su- | exteriors. These rooms reveal the plans of the high sale and the machinations of Italian Carbonarism link from 1819 to 1846.

A limitation of the Jansenists and the Illuminati |
Bavarians, members of the high court and their cor- | Respondents used pseudonyms to avoid being not recognized if their letters were intercepted.

Some are marked with a simple sign, for example of a set square: they emanate:
of the collective authority of the top sales force. The most-parts are signed with the following nicknames: Nubius, _Piccolo-Tiger, Volpe, Vindex, Felice, Beppo, Gaetano, etc. Nubius was for a long time the supreme leader.
preme of the high sale. Among these men there are a number of Jews. Piccolo-Tiger was one of those Jews.

These papers were seized by the Pontic police.
fiscal. They are deposited in the Vatican archives.
can. One can resort to it (See Bishop de Ségur, opusc. the Revolution, p. 26).

3. Masonic manuals!, tilers of

1. The manuals contain the rituals of the degrees, etc.; the tilers reproduce passwords, touches and

"Em aae aay, =,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 425

all rites and all ranks, official notebooks
the skies of the ranks, special instructions for the high degrees, etc., books which contain the Ri-formal or ceremonial aspects of receiving degrees, instructions and catechisms, sermons and obligations
the recipients' expressions, the signs and words of pass, the dictionaries or vocabularies of words used in Freemasonry, the songs or hymns that are sung in the lodges.

These writings contain, so to speak, the liturgy-Masonic gy. They are numerous. We indicatequons as the most famous and highly regarded in the sect the manuals of the Freemasons Louis-Guillaume de Saint-Victor t, Bazot?, Willaume ° and Teissier'.

In Masonic terms, "tuiler" means: to ascertain whether the person presenting themselves like he really is a Freemason, and what is his rank?

1 The Precious Collection of Adonhiramite Freemasonry, by Louis Guillemin de Saint-Victor, Knight of all Orders Masonic. 1787.

The Freemasons' Handbook and True Freemasonry adopted by the same author in 1787; also published in 1810.

2 Freemason's Manual, by E.*. F.-. Bazot, member of the Academic Society of Sciences of Paris, of the Grammatical Society maticale and several other learned and literary societies, 2nd edition, revised, corrected, considerably enlarged. Paris, Jourdan fils, 1812.

3 Masonic Manual or Tiler of all the Rites of Ma-nonsense practiced in France, by a veteran of Freemasonry nerie. Paris, 1220.

The General Manual of Freemasonry, containing the seven

426 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The F... Willaume manual is viewed by Freemasons as the most learned and the most complete with manuals or tilers.

As for that of F. Teissier, his authority is no less; for he teaches us in his preface stating that he is the Inspector General of Freemasonry, thirty-third degree, the former officer of the Grand Eastern France.

"This volume," he adds, "is the result of twenty "Years of hard work in all ranks"
"since I possess them all, and the various offices"
"that I filled in enabled me to study them
"In all their minute details."

To these authors we can add the Protestant Ber- © nard Picard; for, in his great work C'érémocustoms and traditions of all peoples, "rituals
"of the French Freemasonry were inserted into "entirely in volume IX, 1809 edition," the F.-. Clavel in the preface to his Pitto- History resque.

and the three degrees of Masonic initiation, followed by a form for banquet services, for memberships, for the installation of workshops and the inauguration of temples, for Masonic baptisms and funeral ceremonies, and from a dictionary of words used in Freemasonry, with the explanation of the cubic stone and the philosophical cross, adorned of planks by F. Teissier, manufacturer of masonry decorations-ques. Paris, 1856.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 127

This source is obviously the most direct and She provides the most irrefutable evidence.

The explanatory and interpretative works of doctrines and rites of Freemasonry and its branches form what we call the semi-official documents. They are also very numerous.

The following works are cited for the eighteenth century of the Freemasons... of the Third Order* and Enoch*. The Book of the first is one of the oldest French books on Freemasonry.

It is especially important to mention the published works. on French and Bavarian Illuminism; the book of Villuminé Saint-Martin? and those of Adam Weishaupt*.

In the nineteenth century, they appeared brilliantly

1 History, obligations and statutes of the very venerable confraternity of Freemasons, draw from their archives and conforms with the most ancient traditions, approve of all the grand lodges and brought to light for the common use of the lodges spread across the surface of the earth. Frankfurt am Main, 1742.

3 The true Freemason who gives the origin and purpose of the Freemasonry, by F. Enoch, dignitary member of the Lodge of the True Freemasons. Liège, 1773.

3. Of Errors and Truth, or Men Recalled to universal principle of science, by an unknown philosopher 1773.

+ Picturesque description of the Order of the Illuminati. System The Illuminati, by Adam Weishaupt. Leipzig, 1788. – System

by the same token,

/

198 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

in Freemasonry the works of the Brothers Bazot!, Ragon?, Clavel? and Rédarès*. –

The historical and philosophical studies of F.-. Rédarès were approved, praised and recommended sent to all the brothers by thirty-four venerated rables of the main lodges of France, including twelve were members of the Grand Orient.

The picturesque history of F.-. Clavel has this of in particular that the author was censored first, then excluded from the order in 1844 by the Grand Orient of France, because in this work he had di-= revealed some of the secrets of Freemasonry-nonsense. He later returned to favor and thus became that his publisher, F.-. Pagnerre, officer of the Grand Orient. |

But above all Masonic writers rises the F.. Ragon. His works are self-rite; he is the sacred author of Freemasonry.

a This is not only F.-. Louis Blanc

1. The historical, philosophical, and moral picture of the Freemasonry in France, by Brother Bazot, 1836.

2 Philosophical and interpretative course on initiations an-Ancient and modern. By Brother Ragon, 1840. – Orthodoxy
Masonic, by the same token.

3. A Picturesque History of Freemasonry and Societies secret, by F.:. GZB Clavel, 1844.

* Historical and philosophical studies on the three degrees of symbolic Freemasonry, followed by the moral influence of Freemasonry on the spirit of nations, by Brother Rédarès, 1858.

|

"who gives it that name, but all of France—
"Freemasonry with him."

His Philosophical and Interpretive Course was approved and praised in the most complimentary terms by the Grand Orient of France in 1841; then in 1842, on the initiative of the chapter lodge of In Nancy, it was done for the whole of Freemasonry a special edition that this high lodge calls itself a "sacred edition," for the use of lodges and Freemasons only.

F.—. Ragon also republished the Rituals of all Masonic degrees. But, undoubtedly in agreement with his superiors at the In masonry, he took care to smooth and retouch. or to correct what in certain points gave a light that was too bright and too compromising on the character and aims of the sect. There is For about thirty years, Freemasonry has re— She hesitated to show herself in public. She covered herself... true masks that she no longer fears to reject "Today. Among the uninitiated," Brother Ragon was head of office at the Ministry of the Interior; Among Freemasons, he held the following ranks

1 The Freemasons and Secret Societies, by M. Alex. de Saint-Albin. Paris, 1862 and 1867. Preface, 2nd ed., pv

2 Freemasons call profane all those who are not point initiated into their society.

130 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the highest of the French and Scottish rites and it had founded the Zrinosophes lodge in the East of Paris.

To all these special works, one must add Masonic almanacs, newspapers and magazines ideas that publicize the movement of ideas in their society.

All these different writings will provide evidence obviously as strong as those we can ti—

are the permitted comments.

In the category of official and semi-official documents Masonry work must be supplemented by the following: forgotten by the Freemasons regarding the actions of the order.

These historical documents are extremely valuable, since they come from Freemasons, all high-ranking members of the sect, and who were 'witnesses or participants in the events they recount or that they appreciate.

We list the main ones in order of date:

1° The Celebration of the Duke of Brunswick to all the lodges and various sects of Freemasonry Nonsense, published in 1794.

The Prussian general Ferdinand of Brunswick had been appointed Grand Master of all Franc-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 434

Masonry in the great congress of Wilhelmsbad in 1781. He was initiated into the mysteries of the double he-French and Bavarian Luminism.

2° The memorandum addressed to the Minister of State an-Windham, by John Robison, and published in 1797 under the title of Proofs of Conspiracies against all religions and all governments of Europe, etc.! Robison was a Freemason of the high grades. This is after having visited and studied all the lodges of Lo to which he composed his memoir.

3° The Memoir on Secret Societies, presented at the Congress of Verona in 1822 by Count de Haugwitz, Prussian ambassador to the same congress. The author had entered the congress at a very young age. Freemasonry and he had long been a high-ranking member. master or general manager of a considerable number group of lodges in different countries.

4 The Secret Memoirs published by the Swede Jean Witt? These memoirs contain the stories, the governments of Europe, plotted in the assemblies secret societies of the Illuminati, Freemasons and clerics ture, by Joho Robison AM, professor of physics and secretarial studies taire of the Royal Edinburgh Academy, 1797.

2 Fragments extracted from the story of my life and my era, or Secret Memoirs Relating to the State of the Revolution of Piedmont, and of the Spirit that reigns in Italy and of its

432 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Testimonies and actions of this famous Freemason conspirator. Jean Witt was the protégé of Mr. de Serres, under the ministry of the Freemason Duke Decaze, and the friend of the philosopher and Freemason Victor Cousin. J] was a carbonaro of the highest rank raised, prince-sovereign-patriarch, and he had been tasked with doing it himself and as an inspector the correspondence of high Freemasonry between Germany, France, Switzerland and Italy.

5. The General History of Freemasonry and the history of the three great lodges of Freemasonry cons, speaks F.-. Em. Rebold.

6° The constitution and organization of the carbonari!, a work written by Mr. de Saint-Edme who said of himself in his introduction:

"As a Freemason and Carbonaro, I was able to study the rap-ports that exist between these two societies", etc.

7. Finally, the International Labour Association theirs (Paris, 1872), by E. Fribourg, who was, for France, one of the first founders and propagers of this branch of Freemasonry-nonsense.

Secret Societies, by Jean Witt, translated from German, 1821: Also published in Paris in 1831, by A. Roullaud, bookseller, rue Saint-Honoré.

1 Constitution and organization of the Carbonari, or documents accurate in all matters concerning existence, origin and purpose of this secret society, by M. Saint-Edme. Paris, 1821.

II. Sources of the second category, that is to say—to mention the books written by Catholics against the Freemasonry, are at least as numerous as the Masonic writings. It would be impossible for me to... I'm only listing the most important ones.

Before anyone else, we must name the two authors of the eighteenth century, who were the first have unmasked the sect: Father Lefranc, who... He published his book in 1791! and was massacred at Carmelites in Paris, September 2, 1792, and the abbot Barruel, who published his work in London in 1796. This latter author reproduced all the important parts of the original writings on the Illuminism, as well as the Duke of Brunswick, without anyone ever having disputed it the truth and accuracy of his quotes.

Among the writers of the nineteenth century
The following should be specifically mentioned: the avo-
Saxon cat Eckert*, MM. Forgame', Crétineau-

1 The Veil lifted for the curious, or the secret of the Revolution of France, revealed with the help of Freemasonry. 1791.

2 Memoirs to serve as a history of Jacobinism, by Father Augustin Barruel. London, 1796 and ann. next. 5 vol. in-8.

3 Freemasonry in its true meaning, or Its organization, its purpose, its history, by Ed. Em. Eckert Lawyer in Dresden, translated from German by Abbé Gyr. 1854. Liège.

+ On the influence of the philosophical spirit and that of Secret societies of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, by M. Forgame. 1858,

8

Joly t, Abbé Gyr', Alex. de Saint-Albin', Le Coul-Cauteleu*, Armand Neut*, Gougenot des Mousseaux ê, Oscar Testut", Claude Jeannet $,

Challaye t', le Père Deschamps', etc., etc.

The Roman Catholic Church in the Face of the Revolution, by J. Crétien-Joly, Paris, 1858.

2 Freemasonry in itself and in its relations with other secret societies in Europe, notably with The Italian Carbonari, by Abbot Gyr. 1859. Liège.

8 The Freemasons and Secret Societies, by Alex. de Saint-Albin. 1862 and 1867. Paris. – The Freethinkers and the League of Education, by the same. 1868. Paris.

* Sects and political and religious secret societies; essay on their history from the earliest times to the French Revolution, by JHE Count Le Coultoux de Cauteleu. Paris, 1863.

Freemasonry subjected to the public eye cited, using authentic documents, by Armand Neut. Ghent and Bruges, 1866.

6 The Jew, Judaism and the Judaization of Christian peoples Here, by the knight Gougenot des Mousseaux. Paris, 1869.

1 The International Workingmen's Association, by Oscar Testut, lawyer at the court of Lyon. Lyon, 1871.

8 The International and the Social Question, by Claude Jeannet, Lawyer at the court of Ais. Lyon, 1871.

9 Freemasonry and the Revolution, by Father Fr. Gautrelet. Lyons, 1872.

10 Considerations on the International, by Father de Curci, translated from Italian by Count Gabriel de Cays de Saint-Amour. Paris, 1872.

11 Petition addressed to the National Constituent Assembly to demand the abolition of the Society of Freemasons and of other secret societies established in France, by Mr. Boudot-Challaye, honorary vice-president of the Montbrison court. Saint-Etienne, 1873.

12 Secret Societies and Society, or Philosophy of History

Re, gn

Mr. Eckert reproduced it in its entirety in his Address to the States of Saxony, the memorandum of the Count de Haugwitz on secret societies presented at the Congress of Verona.

Mr. Crétineau-Joly translated and delivered the first to the public's knowledge the secret papers of The high-end sale of Italian Carbonarism. These pieces important information was communicated to him by order of the Pope. The information found in the 'Life of Crétineau-Joly by Abbé Maynard', on the origin of these documents, now put them in Authenticity beyond doubt.

Mr. Le Coulteux claims that he composed his a work after ten years of research and in practice to the great benefit of an immense quantity of manuscripts and materials of all kinds, including col-selection of the manuscripts and papers of the prince of Hesse, one of the first leaders of secret societies.

Reverend Father Gautrelet, of the Company

contemporary history, by Father Deschamps. Avignon, 1874 and 1876, 3 vols.

– On the occasion of the general elections of 1877, it appeared The Bloud and Barral bookstore (Paris) has a very interesting booklet. Title: Freemasonry; revelations of a Rosicrucian. Nou: we will quote him several times, the author seems very knowledgeable things and schemes of the Masonic sect.

1 Jacques Crétineau-Joly, his political, religious and literary life terary, by Abbot U. Maynard, canon of Poitiers. Paris, 1875. Ch. v, § 3, p. 399 et seq.

436 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

of Jesus, demonstrates that Freemasonry and the Revolution, it's all one. Freemasonry is the laboratory, the most powerful instrument, and the the truest personification of the Revolution. She She preaches it, she fulfills it; she seems not to exist. that's all.

Finally, Reverend Father Deschamps, also from

'all his predecessors and several documents -

new, has made, in its three volumes, the requisition-
the most comprehensive account against Freemasonry and secret societies. He demonstrates, in pieces hand, which they extend through their principles, their teachings and their actions, to the destruction-of all religion and all morality, of all civil and political authority, of every homeland and nation-nationality, of the papacy, of Christian teaching _yours, property, and family. For three Father Deschamps has been in contact with the famous Freemason Henri Misley, of whom 2' Universe of September 13, 1857 said that, "in its long career as a cult leader in Italy, in France, England, Spain and Switzerland,
he had known the most hidden secrets of the Masonic sect. He had close ties with Espartero, Kossuth, Fazy, Cavour, Victor-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. A37

Emmanuel and especially Palmerston. The Father of-Champs received information from Misley numerous and valuable on Freemasonry and its actions. (See Introduction to the book Zes Secret Societies, etc., p. 21.) I will refer you to wind in the course of this work to this esteemed author !,

It is impossible to claim that the Freemason-
secret societies and societies are accused and condemned.
damned without witnesses and without evidence.

SECOND SECTION. - ORIGINS OF FREEMASONRY

Neither Catholic authors nor writers Freemasons disagree about the origin
certain of the association called today Freemasonry.

I will divide their diverse opinions into two large classes. The first seeks in France-Masonry of the sources to which the lap-gives an origin that can be called "historical-that. "

1 A second edition was published in 1880. Your the quotes relate to the first one, 8.

I. FARULOUS ORIGINS.

These origins are only accepted by some.
Freemason brothers. Some trace the Freemasonry to the very end; the others,
less ambitious, start from Adam; these ones con-
Some attempt to date it from Noah; others, from Solomon.
Others, more modest, see their origins |
in the secret mysteries of paganism; but they do not agree on the place of birth;
because they place it either in the pagodas of India,
either among the druids in the forests of Gaul, |
either in the Egyptian temples of Memphis or?
4'Heéliopolis, or in the Eleusinian Mysteries in | Greece, or in the worship of the Good Goddess among the Romans. Others, finally, more enlightened, accepted- | explore all these origins and compose their history ancient and unbroken tradition of lasso- |
Masonic cation.
I have called these different origins "fabulous" |

138 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

born, not solely because they have no proof, but because it exists in them, this.
It seems to me, as in pagan fables, .
a certain kernel of truth. In this sense, all for-would be true, and Freemasonry pl-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 439

* truly managed so far back into the mists of time

its ancient and diabolical roots. I will explain to the appropriate place the considerations which bring-try to give some credence to this idea.

There's no point in paying attention to this absurd opinion. and sacrilege which makes God himself the first & to-author of Freemasonry.

IT. HISTORICAL ORIGINS.

Historical origins are the only adopted tagged by all the Catholic writers to whom join the most esteemed Freemason authors my.

Some trace Freemasonry back to the heretics, namely Gnostics, Manicheans, and Albigensians, either Socinians; the others solely of the order of the Templars.

1° Heretical origins.

Those who support heretical origins rely on the many similarities that exist between the doctrines and practices of Freemasonry and those of these various heretics. The writings

140 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Vain Freemasons particularly insist on this resemblance. They strongly emphasize it. evidence of the perfect similarity that is found, of a on both sides, in the teachings, the rites, the symbols, the three degrees of initiation, the secret and the mysterious signs of recognition session, etc.

It will suffice to quote a few passages from the best-their authors.

1° Gnostics. "Only the enlightened ones," says Weis-"haupt in his speech of the initiator to the grade "of Scottish knight, are in possession of "Secrets of the true Freemason. It remains even for the "illuminated a large part of these secrets to un-"To cover. The new knight must devote himself to it." to his research. ZZ is specifically warned that it is through the study of the ancient Gnostics and the Manichean that he will be able to make great de-

F.-. Ragon (Philosophical Course, etc.) often also refers to the Gnostics and the Gnosis to complement or better highlight the meaning of Masonic rites and symbols.

Brother Clavel also traces his lineage back to the Gnostics.

AA

Year

1 Vith part of the Illuminated Code. Scottish Knight.

TT ee sa, A le RRRRRÉËÛ y

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 141

on which he expresses himself thus: "From the year 58 of
"Our era, ideas borrowed from Zoroastrianism,
"to Platonic philosophy, to theogonies"
"and to the pneumatogonia of Egypt, of Chal-
a dée and of Greece, were professed in the secret held by a host of sects, known
"under the generic name of Gnostics, because
"that they claimed to possess exclusively the "true gnosis or science... The Gnostics ap-
"They generally peeled children of the light."
"The teaching of their doctrines was by-
"Tagged in several grades!"

F.-. Rédarès, also a supporter of the origin
The Gnostic speaks of these heretics in these terms:
The Gnostics were "all associated with the ancients"
"mysteries, all elite masons, also remarked-
"Blessed by science rather than talent... I
"I want to show the perfect analogy that exists"
"between belief, rites, and the customs of Gnos-
"Ticism and those of Freemasonry?"

Every Catholic knows that Gnosticism is a monstrous and confused doctrine which, emanborn from the sanctuaries of the East, attempted, from the beginning, beginning of the second century, to infiltrate into

2 Historical and philosophical study, etc., pp. 72 and 254.

442 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Christianity, by associating the dogmas of the religion of Jesus, the mysteries of magic

Chaldean, Jewish Kabbalah, theurgy Egyptian and Alexandrian eclecticism. (Dic-tionn. of Religions, ed. Migne, at the word Gnosticism).

Here's what the Protestants say about it:

"Valentin's school, which Tertullian calls
"the most fanatical and the most numerous of the gnos-
"ticks, was at least the one who professed the most
"a great wealth of doctrines... He conveyed
v in his beliefs the ancient traditions
"theogonics of Egypt, and the spec-
"infinite tions of Zoroastrianism and Kabbalah" € JWC... »

Their contempt for all legislation was their motto.
"rail (the morality of the Carpocratians, another sect)"
"Gnostic"... (According to them) all souls are of the "Same condition... Nature reveals two great "principles, those of community and unity"
"of all things. Human laws contrary to "These natural laws are culpable offenses"
"to the legitimate and divine order. To restore this a order, 4 must establish the community of the land,
"Property and women. In general, the more one
"despises the laws of the Demiurge, that is to say all

To re Em

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 443

"The more existing legislation we free ourselves from
"everything that the common people call religion, the more we
"The more one honors the Supreme Being, the more one becomes like-"blabbed to God" (History of Gnosticism, vol. 1,

Mr. Matter, inspector and professor at the University Protestant of Strasbourg).

2. Manicheans. Manichaeism was born in three-sixth century. It was authored by Manichée, originally from Persia, or, according to Saint Ephrem, © from Chaldea. He was bought as a child as enslaved by a wealthy widow from Ctesiphon in Pe-Bylonie. This widow raised him as her son, the af-crossed and bequeathed his fortune to him.

In his religious system, Mani highlighted more clearly the absurd dogma of the two principles which are found at the bottom of all systems Gnostics and who had been formally taught to him appointed by the Magi of Persia. He called the pre-the first principle "Light" and the second "Darkness-Bretons." Manichaeism quickly absorbed all the sects of Gnosticism.

"The Manicheans honored the sun and the stars, not only as the symbol of the eternal light, but like the substance of God himself... They also condemned all

444 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"law and all magistracy, like the work of the A bad principle," say the centurions of Magdeburg... They even attacked and radicalized "They taught the right to property, and they taught, according to the testimony of Saint Epiphanius and Saint Augustine, whom one could not own outright, neither house, nor fields, nor any kind of wealth..." Mûsheim, another Protestant writer, goes so far as to "to argue that magic was not foreign to them-" _"manages, and that it was the natural consequence of the double principle. The centurions even say, According to Saint Augustine, Mani was immersed in it" All of them... They were also divided into three Grades: the listeners or believers, the elect and The perfect ones... Each of them was bound to the secret of - "His rank by the most inviolable oath: he swore, perjura, secretum prodere noli; swear, perjure and Do not reveal the secret," such was one of their principles. They recognized each other as Children of light, delivered from darkness, Saint Augustine and Saint Epi- also assure us" phane, with particular signs, words and speech"

"Saint Leo summed them up thus: they have no law
"that falsehood, for religion, that the Devil,
"for sacrifice only turpitudes" (Za Society)

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. | 445

and Secret Societies, by Father Deschamps,
t. III, pages 591 et seq.).

The author I just quoted puts in complete evidently the numerous sides through which resseem to be the errors and practices of the Manicheism and Freemasonry. It shows the ori-the origin of these words, all very particular to Freemasons: "The widow's sons are mine!"

When a Freemason, in imminent danger, physical or moral, wants to obtain help from his brothers, he must push this point out loud or replace it with certain equivalent actions. Everything mason, in defiance of divine and human laws, to at the very peril of his life, is obliged to answer this appeal and to bring the help of the brother in distress to-"Manés," said Father Deschamps, "should not-"
"Isn't everything due to the widow of Ctesiphon? And the mani-
"sheens and their sons the masons, by becoming his "brothers, didn't they take the famous one for their mother?"
"Which? Didn't it become quite natural to call eo

1 In August 1878, the newspaper L'Univers published an analysis Analysis of secret documents concerning the assassination of the king of Sweden, Gustav III, by the Freemasons, in 1792, published in German newspapers, and especially in Germania
Berlin. Following these important communications, the magistrate-
The Protestant traitor, to whom they are owed, recounts a judicial event which he witnessed and which proves the effectiveness of the appeal: "A "Me, the widow's sons!" (Universe, August 13, 1878.)

9

446 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"of his brothers?" (Ibid., p. 588 et seq.)

The enlightened Weishaupt, the Brothers Ragon, Clavel and Redares, also put the Manicheans in the name—the ancestors of Freemasonry.

F... Ragon (Philosophical Course) states that one took the real Freemasons for Manicheans or Priscillianists. E

Brother Clavel appreciates Manichaeism in these terms:

"On the ruins of the ancient initiation of Magi, had risen in Persia, starting from the third–10th century, several mysterious associations, who had mixed the doctrines of Zoroaster some new dogmas borrowed for the most of them to Gnosticism. One of them, that of maskéiges, or supporters of Maskek, warded off the ruin of all religions, preached equality and universal freedom, the indifference of all human actions and the community of goods and Jemmes" (Picturesque History, p. 345).

The language of F.–. Redarés on the same subject needs no comment and is valuable to remember.

"Manes' disciples... spread his doctrine–Trine throughout the East. Gnostics, the Copts

ae TEN 4 mm; CP, a Mn 7

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 147,

and other sects of Egypt and Assyria s'u–joined them and formed a single society religious. Persecuted, as one might imagine, by the Trinitarian consubstantialists, the dis–Mani's disciples had to hide and keep their a–seemed secret. It is to this time that we owe place the second historical era of the confra–Masonic eternity. To the dogma of the unity of God and to the principles of universal morality, they adapt–They concealed the method of initiation of the mages, similar roughly the same as that of the priests of Egypt. Three symbolic priestly degrees comprised the

a sign, a word, a touch that... was peculiar. The allegorical language of the 44-ballists, gnostics and ophites were confused
due to that of the mages and formed a set perfect of figurative expressions, all of which had a moral and philosophical sense. It was with these wise precautions, these mysterious forms, these secret customs that they were able to pursue the travail of regeneration, and preserve the rule and the compasses with which Zes di- had been established dimensions of the social structure. The Freemason brothers have the justifiable claim to follow point by point the early Christianity, which the Christians of the East

148 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

(Gnostics and Manicheans) transmitted it to them.
Thus, Christ the Savior or Christ the Sun is not something other than the sun Osiris, the sun Hiram, the Adonai sun and other mystical suns that do not were never, in the eyes of the wise, anything but true symbols of the divinity or emanations of its supreme essence" (Historical and Philosophical Studies) sophics, pp. 262-271).

Brother Willaume also said: "It is through the initiates of the East from whom we received the mys-current times" (Masonic Manual, p. T).

3. Albigensian. All Catholic writers, Protestants and Freemasons agree that the Albigensians are the continuation and descendants of Manicheism. "Under this name, we gather at the seventeenth-thirteenth century all the heretics of the south of the France, most of whom were imbued with errors
"Manicheans" (Bouillet, Historical Dictionary)
that). |

In northern France they were called "Braban-"Cons," in Italy, in Illyria, in Bosnia, they were known as the "Patarins."

Bossuet, Bergier, and Pluquet demonstrate that their doctrines and practices were fundamentally the same as those of the Manicheans (History of the va-rations, 1. IX. - Dict. of theology. - Dict. of (Aeries). In particular, they denied the resurrection future of the flesh... they rejected baptism as useless, and the Eucharist with horror; they They did not practice confession or penance. Their customs were abominable. The women were common to them. [They taught that one owed no obedience to the authorities, either ecclesiastical, or secular, and that no one had no right to punish with corporal punishment some crime or other. They singularly hated—the Catholic priests, and never ceased to to denounce; they wanted to be prosecuted and to They exterminated them like wolves. Everywhere they They were the masters, they acted in this way, breaking, burning crosses, images, relics, looting, devastating churches and monasteries, not sparing—neither age nor sex, and carrying everywhere the devastation—tation, fire and death (ibidem):

Saint Bernard compares them to snakes. He says that these sectarians were not seeking to defeat, but to harm, and that they would slip under the grass to bite and communicate more securely venom.

The historian Michelet speaks of it in this way:

"This Judea of France, as it has been called" Languedoc, did not recall the other senle—

150 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"Lying by its asphalt and its olive trees: it had "also Sodom and Morrrha. Now it was to be feared "that the vengeance of the Church should not give him his
"The Dead Sea..." "According to Eastern beliefs,
"Persian dualism, Manichaeism and Gnos—
"that tictsme have penetrated the country, that is what "will surprise no one. Every doctrine had "taken. But Manichaeism, the most odious of "all in the Christian world, makes one forget the "Others." Further on, he says of the Brabantines:
"Their doctors taught Aristotle aloud,
"very quietly, the Arabs and the Jews, with the pan—
"Averrhoës' theism and the subtleties of the Ca—
"bale" (History of France, vol. II, p. 404 et seq.
— 409 and 472).

It is also held that Freemasons are descended from Albi region. It relies on the complete resemblance—white from their doctrines and practices; and He concludes "that all the upheaval which undermines For more than half a century the foundations of the European society is nothing other than the work of the Albigensians, passed down by them to their successors—sisters" (Fr. Hurter, History of Pope Innocent VII) and of his century, translated by Abbé Jager. Paris, 1840, p. 284).

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 451

| & me

I deliberately lingered in these—interpretations of Gnostic doctrines and practices, —Manichean and Albigensian. Between them and the irreligious and immoral teachings of France Modern Freemasonry, its doctors, its af—relatives and friends, the rapprochement at this time is easy; because they are displayed every day with a cy—revolting nism in a thousand diverse writings of high and lower floor. The comparison is i aaa si—significant and instructive.

4. Socinians. "Abbot Lefranc," said Mr. Alex. de "Saint-Albin does not trace back so far lori—"The Freemasons' gin. Their hatred of Christ—"Tianism, with all its mysteries and all its "beliefs, he thought he recognized the heirs of to Lélío Socin and especially Fauste Socin" (Zes Freemasons and Secret Societies, p.42, 2nd ed.).

But Abbot Lefranc is the sole author of this opinion. It seems to me to be poorly founded. The resemblance—whiteness of doctrines and the history of the Socin can prove here that only one thing is that The Socin brothers and their followers have made themselves Freemasons and have contributed to the propagation of the Freemasonry: an ardor equal to their hatred of all religions. Freemasons existed. before the Socin brothers and their sect.

152 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

2° Templar origin.

Abbot Barruel and Abbot Gyr, among the Catholics liques, and the Saxon doctor Eckert, among the pro—Testators argue that Freemasonry has

This religious and military order was founded in Jerusalem Salem in 1118, by nine French knights. Their first house was located near the emplacement of Solomon's temple; from whence came to them the name Templars.

For this opinion to be true and accepted, It is necessary that the Templars have been covered-attributable to the crimes that weigh on their memory. However, this guilt is now undeniable. New documents, attached to those that we possessed, they peremptorily establish.

It falls neither within the object nor the purpose of the present written instructions to conduct a full study on this pro-historical problem. However, I can hardly... to refrain from touching it at all. I content myself-I will refrain from citing the documents from the trial and from making rest-to address the resulting consequences.

th

t

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 453

The Templars' Guilt.

Those who want to delve deeper into the question of Templars must study three kinds of documents, preferably to all written stories on this subject.

Firstly, the interrogations conducted in Paris in 1307, by the tribunal of the Inquisition, and the minutes of the seven commissioners of the Page, from August 1309 until May. 1311. These pieces were published in full by Mr. Michelet, in the Collection of innate documents sayings on the history of France (2 vols. in-4).

Some contain the confessions of one hundred and forty-Rante knights, examined by Brother Imbert, inquisitor. The others contain the confessions of the Grand Master Jacques de Molay and two hundred thirty-one knights t. |

Secondly, the original Acts of the pro-procedure carried out in England, which replicates the confessions of the English Templars °.

1 These latter documents were discovered in the Bibliothéque royale of Paris, towards the end of the last century, by a protesting from Germany, Moldenhawer.

3 They were found by the Danish Protestant Munter in the Vatican Library, 9,

154 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Thirdly, Za Bubble for the removal of the Order of the Temple, Vox in excelso, which was able to buried on April 3, 1312, during the Ecumenical Council from Vienne (Dauphiné). This bubble makes known the conduct of the entire procedure followed against the _ Templars t.

1 The text of this bubble, Vox in excelso, as well as the text complete with another bull of Clement V, dated May 6, 1312, Considerantes dudum (or otherwise Ad certitudinem), are remained unknown until 1865. The most highly regarded historians-mandables speak well of the bull abolishing the Templars; They provide a summary; but none of them produces the full text. All take the papal bull Ad Providam, published on May 2, 1312, for the abolition bubble; or even the bubble Considerantes dudum, of which we only possessed the beginning. However, the text The manuscript of these two bullae had been discovered & the end of the last century in the archives of the city of Ager, in Catalonia, by the Spanish writer Villanueva, who had it printed in 1806 in his great work Viage literario a las Iglesias de Espana (Madrid, 1806, t. V, in the appendix of documentos). But these two texts remained as unknown as before. because Villanueva's work became very rare. The famous The Benedictine monk Dom Gam, traveling in Spain in 1865, learned these details, was able to obtain a copy of the Spanish work, there He copied the two speech bubbles and sent them to Doctor Hefele, his friend, who published them in full in the Quarterly Review of Tubingue of that same year. August 18 of the following year The Civiltà cattolica of Rome published a work of the highest order

The Rome Correspondence summarized it; the Theological Archives
The Besançon authorities translated the two speech bubbles, and Le Monde, in several issues* of September and October 1866, reproduced the Summary of the Correspondence and translation of the Archives theological. This reproduction has been inserted in its entirety.
in the edition of Rohrbacher's History, published by Bishop Fèvre (1873) & the continuation of book 77*, under this title: Some Pieces relating to the trial of the Templars.

-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 458

Finally, other authentic pieces, more ancient...
well known, concerning this procedure and reproduced by Dupuy in his History of the condemnation of the Templars.

These documents have probative value that no one can dispute this, and in particular the Bulle Vox in excelso, which possesses not only the high moral authority of the sovereign Pontiff who
the public, but also that of an ecumenical council, composed of more than three hundred bishops, representing so much so that the entire Western world. One cannot to have more comprehensive guarantees of veracity.

From all these pieces emerges the undeniable truth.
Table of the following facts:

1° The passion of avarice had nothing to do with Philip the Fair's role in his pursuit of him
dent against order. Not only the letters that he addressed to the Pope fully justifies it.
but the Vox im excelso Bull said in for-Mels: "Our dearest son Philippe... pushed
"not out of a feeling of avarice (for he does not claim-
"did not claim or appropriate any
"of the Templars' property, since he has de-
"is established in his own kingdom, and has completed-(with his hands slightly away), but by the zeal of "the Orthodox faith...etc..." | sde

—

And indeed, according to the prescriptions of the Pope and the
At the council, the Templars' possessions were given to Knights of Saint John of Jerusalem, called then Knights of Rhodes.

2° This is not out of weakness or fear of King Philip, whom Clement V condemned the Templars folds. The Vox Bull in Hercelso claims that the
The Pope initially refused to listen to accusations that were sent to him from the very beginning cement of his pontificate, although the king had supported by his personal information, and that he had insisted strongly and repeatedly
to the Pope to have these religious figures prosecuted.
When, tired of the resistance and slowness of Clement V, Philip would have violently seized all the Templars of his kingdom in one day, and start against them, with the greatest diligence, information from the royal court and ecclesiastic, the Pope showed him a strong disapproval contentment with this usurpation of his power.
Tl suspended and cancelled all proceedings between-taken by the kingdom's inquisitor, the Dominican Imbert, the king's confessor. "It was not," he added.
in the Bubble, only after having questioned himself seventy-two knights, then the grand master and several of the principal dignitaries, having heard their consistent and repeated confessions, and those of a domes-tick of his own palace, that he determined to

to conduct a solemn and universal inquiry, all at both against order in general and against the Templars in particular. The bishops of each | diocese where Temple houses were located were tasked with conducting the personal investigation, and to then decide the fate of each of the knights in a provincial council, with the power to deliver the guilty parties to the secular arm, if necessary. Three
The cardinals were tasked with opening the investigation.
general against order.

3. All ecclesiastical inquiries, even that of the Inquisitor of France in 1307, were conducted with the utmost moderation, with remarkable prudence and gentleness. he employed neither torture nor procedural trickery. None. Every knight questioned was asked only to swear an oath on the Gospels of to tell the truth for or against the order, and to swear that they were neither solicited nor won over. Torture was only used initially by officers royals, and on a very small number of knights.

The papal commissioners invited many to...
The Templars repeatedly defended their order.
They received the defense presented by the great

e

158 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

master, then seventy-four knights, and the examination was conducted carefully. The general investigation lasted four years. Also, Mr. Michelet, in publishing the travail of the three cardinals, commissioners of the Pope, Is he forced to admit that this "interrogation was "Drives slowly and with great care- "Mentions and gentleness."

For his part, the Protestant Wilcke, after having studied all the documents we possessed in 1835 on the trial of the Templars, "observes at many-several times that, if the particular courts and royal authorities employed the question, according to the jurisprudence- At the time, the Pope's commissioners did not... They did not bend, but proceeded gently.

circumspection and awareness. He notes in particular-particular on the original documents found & Paris, that they show in a magnificent way the double heart and justice of the papal commissioners" (History of the Templars in German, 7 vols. in-18; the last one from 1835; volume 1", pages 291, 297 and 323 and 343, - cited by Rohrbacher, History of the Church, book 77°). - |

In France, the interrogations led to confessions. similar. According to the documents, seven to eight about a hundred knights were questioned, and more

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 159

Six hundred confessed to the same crimes. If a greater number of confessions were obtained in France as in other countries, that's the point. France was the main center of the order, and ren- closed the largest conurbation of knights. A bishop, believed to be Guil- Laurent Durand, Bishop of Mende, declared in full council that more than two thousand witnesses had filed against the Templars t. The Bull Vox in excelso explicitly states, in various places, that a very large number of brothers have perpetrated horrific facts: that an almost infinite number – of members of the order, including the grand master, the visitor from France, and the principal commanders their brothers were convicted of heresy, errors and crimes, through their spontaneous confessions.

These confessions were not made only once times and as if in passing. They were reiterated and confirmed repeatedly. The same bubble, Vox in excelso, clearly states that the con- confessions and depositions of the grand master, of the visi- teur and commanders of Normandy, Aquitaine taine and of Poitou, and of the seventy-two knights Questions posed by the Pope were written in script

1 Raynaldi, Ann. eccles., an. 1313.

460 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

public by four papal notaries, in pre- the presence of the accused and several witnesses tables, and that, after an interval of some days, they were given a reading and it was explained to them each in their own language:

"Persisting in their statements, they "have expressly approved as they see-
"were born to be read."

all documents relating to these personal investigations—
These new and general decrees were handed over to the Pope, who he personally examined some of them
concert with the cardinals, and who handed over the examination
men from others to a large commission
"of very zealous, prudent, faithful, fearful men"
"God, zealous and practiced Catholics,
"Both prelates and others." Then, that all this procedure, both the first and the second, was presented for examination by the ecumenical council, which formed a special commission to deal thoroughly and definitively this matter.

It would therefore be unfair to argue that
This trial was conducted with passion and haste.
tation.

6° Now, the confessed and recorded crimes, session tenant, in the rooms we have just

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 161

speaking, relate to five main chiefs.

Apostasy. Upon receiving it, or shortly thereafter, each knight invited or excited by the one or those who received them, and who were always pre—

First in command of the order, denied Christ,

sometimes as crucified, sometimes as Jesus or Savior, sometimes like God, as well as the good—Blessed Virgin and the saints. They would then say to her that Christ was a false prophet, that he had not suffered or been crucified for the redemption of humankind, but for its crimes. This pra—

The tick was common and that of the majority.
Idolâtrie. In their general congregations or large chapters, the Templars worshipped idols. Some of these idols had heads with three some had faces, others had only one face; others had a human skull for a head; another had a big beard, a terrible look, four feet;

According to these confessions, these idols were made "in figuram Bafometi, » or on them was « depicta figura Bafometi; » they were made or painted in figure of Bafomet. There were these idols in every province. These heads were encircled with cords or strips of fabric. They were made to touch cords, which the brothers then girded themselves on the flesh. In these major chapters, they would still have a cat or a dog, which would appear there-sometimes knows.

162 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Sacrilege. The recipients were forced to at the moment of their reception, spitting on the cross, at to trample it underfoot. These sacrilegious outrages were also practiced by those who had already been admitted. It was the custom of some to meet Good Friday, or another day of the week holy, to trample the cross underfoot, to do on she of even more odious outrages, and to make of it to be done by others.

Luzure. When a brother was received into the order, the receiver and the recipient would sometimes kiss on the mouth, sometimes on the navel or the bare stomach, tan-early on the anus or the spine, sometimes more indecently still. The recipients told the re-suspects that they could commit crime among themselves infamous, that the thing was permitted, that they should mutually lend themselves to it, that they themselves practice it quaiant, as well as a large number of others.

Theft. It was considered permissible in the order to seize the property in his own interest of others by all means, through good and bad, and we swore to procure them, by all means ways, growth and benefits.

v SD 2 A

|
+

All these things were generally done and commonly throughout the order, beyond as on this side of the seas. The grand master, the visitors,

. the tutors and other major leaders observe them-
They ordered them. These were observ-

i

general movements, ancient customs, ordinances

, finances and statutes of the entire order.

r

The defendants' confessions also contained the
The following specific features:
The receptions were completely secret and did not

The 8th only did so in the presence of the brothers. The new

The knight was forced to swear that he would never go out.

...but order.

The chapters that took place during the first

Sleep, or the first watch of the night,
-were so secret that all the _ doors of the house and the church in which `

The knights were gathered. Access was forbidden to all foreigners, and sentries ar-
The meters were placed directly on the roofs, so hear.

The knights were ordered, under penalty of death or prison, to swear an oath not to do anything again- to verify their method of reception, to be faithful to this wish, and also to keep under the greatest

-

164 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

everything that would happen in the congregations was kept secret. tions or major chapters. If someone were on- Caught making these revelations, he was killed, or for the least likely to be imprisoned. Those who, upon receiving them, or afterwards, refused to do what was required of them- ordered, were put to death, or imprisoned in per- pettiness.

The commander of Laon had frequently said in front of several knights that he possessed a pe- the book of the order's statutes, which he showed you- lontiers, but that there was another, more secret one that he would not want to show to the whole universe towards. The same had affirmed, in the presence of what- brothers, that in the order there was a point so singular and so secretive, that he would like to- They would rather have his head cut off than reveal it. added that, in the general chapter, there was another point of such an important secret, that, if unfortunately his closest friend, or the king himself- Even if he saw it, no one would stop the brothers as- they seemed to want to kill him if they could.

Some knights revealed that all these awful practices had been introduced by a grand master who, having fallen into the hands of the Sar- roots, bought his freedom by promising to make them observe in order. These sacrilegious and abominable customs had begun more than four-

|

confessed in 1307 that, forty-two years earlier—before, he had been received, also by denying the Christ. |

All of these documents together provide a such an overwhelming mass of evidence against the Templars that, after reading them, every man in good faith is forced to acknowledge guilt of the largest number of Knights Templar, otherwise of the order in its entirety.

The authors already cited, both hostile to the Church and the Popes, frankly agree of this guilt.

"Whatever opinion one adopts," said Michelet, on the rule of the Templars and primitive innocence In terms of order, it is not difficult to arrest a judge—He lies about the disorders of his later years. He sufficed it clear, during the interrogations that we Let us publish that the denials are almost all identical, as if they were dictated from an agreed-upon form; on the contrary, confessions are all different, varied by specific circumstances ciales, often very naive, which give them w
"A particular character of veracity" (Preface to the 2nd volume, 1851).

466 FBANCS—MASONS AND JEWS.

The Protestant historian also acknowledges that "The order was guilty from the Church's point of view" Catholic; that the course of the affair was, not arbitrary, but in accordance with justice, the law, and to the Church of that time."

Wilcke's assessment is all the more "It's remarkable that he's showing himself," said Rohrbacher. "full of outdated prejudices against the Church" Roman, and that he is far from condemning the doctrine se—Templar crest; for he says that, seen from the good On the other hand, it was Protestantism in general and the rationalism in particular, and that Zemplerism he only succumbed because he had come too soon. Elsewhere, he says that, considered historically, It was a Mahomelan Gnosticism*.

Several Freemason writers do not do so They, too, have difficulty recognizing the truth

three others, F.-. Clavel:

"The mysteries of the Templars, long shrouded in mystery"
"public attendance, were, in 1307, the occasion and the
"The reason for the abolition of their order... We have "attached, in the past century, & to exonerate the

1 Rohrbacher, History of the Church, Fèvre edition, book 77°,
p. 497.

2 Ibidem, p. 198.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 167

a memory of his order (by Jacques de Molay),
"and the truth of the accusations has been contested"
"of which he had been the subject during his "trial; but recent discoveries have established-
"feels that most of the alleged facts were
"With the utmost accuracy. It has been demonstrated"
"today that the Templars were a branch-
"of Gnosticism and which they had adopted in "most of the doctrines and allegories of "The sect of the Ophites" (Picturesque History,
p. 354 et seq.). |

However, there are still minds for the-
at least a shadow of doubt hangs over this guilt of the Templars. They think of these brothers who were declared innocent; they hear
the retractions and protests of the Templars, dead in prison, dead at the stake, in proclamation lying about their innocence; and above all they see the Grand Master, Jacques de Molay, attesting before the final torture that neither he nor his order are guilty, refusing to live rather than perseto verify in an abominable lie, and, from the middle-place of the flames, shortly citing its two perseducers at the tribunal of the sovereign judge.

But the real story makes it disappear as a smoke, these vain and romantic impressions.

4168 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The innocence of some knights was recognized naked, or at least accepted, by several councils.

There were about two hundred of them.

But even if we had absolute certainty—
read of the innocence of these knights, the greatest many would nonetheless remain guilty.
The denial of some does not destroy the confessions.
from others. No one has ever claimed that all members of the order, without exception alone, were criminals. The Order of the Temple for—He controls a vast secret society, as well as the the depositions prove it. Therefore, there was, as in all associations of this kind, initiations of different degrees, which varied based on rank and seniority. Good name—
a number of members might not yet be initiated Third parties. Legal admissions indicate that some knights were initially received in a way irreproachable, and later initiated into the doctrines and to occult practices. The superiors, in Prudent men studied their subjects before to open up to them.

But we are far from having uncontestable that all knights, declared innocent-cents, were indeed so in reality; for the judgment

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 169

relied solely on their repeated denials and persistent. But what can the deniega-tions of an initiate into mysteries so similar to Those of the Gnostics and the Manicheans? The leaders members of the sect must have foreseen the possibility of legal proceedings and inquiries, at less so for specific cases, and, in this prevision, to teach their men the way to

To answer. That is the thought of the historian Michelet.
He noticed during the interrogations that he could-blie "that the denials are almost all identical, as if they were dictated from an agreed form.

The number of truly innocent people should so it can be reduced by a lot.

tested to the best of their ability, right down to the last sigh, that neither the order, nor themselves, were guilty of the crimes they were accused of. Without No doubt, these knights had not yet were initiated, and they were among the small number of the ingenuine nucents.

Seventy knights in all were condemned to death and burned, namely: fifty-nine who were judged in 1310 by the council provincial of Sens, and nine, in the same year, 40

4

470 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

by that of Reims; then the Grand Master and his companion, Guy, the brother of the Dauphin of Auvergne, which were executed on March 11, 1314, by The king's order. All these knights retracted their confessions, and proclaimed their innocence with a great fortitude in the face of death and in the midst of tortures. This caused great astonishment and made a vivid impression on the minds of all assistants, say contemporary historians. These are the facts.

First, we must remove from real history the dramatic circumstances, invented after the fact by writers without judgment, or enemies of popes.

The Grand Master did not postpone Clé- and Philip the Fair to appear, one has forty days, the other a year apart at God's tribunal. That's a pure invention of the incredulous Mézeray, a seventeenth-century writer century t. None of the contemporary historians of it said not a word. They only relate the- astonishment and the impression of the people when he- forced the tortured to recant and proclaim their innocence.

1 History of France, 3 vols. folio, 1643.

_ FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 471

The Pope's death occurred on April 20th, and that of Philip the Fair on November 29, 1314. This is the coincidence that may have lent credence to the fable of the day of which, once again, not one author Time has not spoken.

The same applies to a speech in which Jacques de Molay is said to have proclaimed his innocence. retracted his confession and renounced life in the in the most pompous terms. It's Paul-Emile, an Italian author of the sixteenth century, who places him in the mouth of the great master.' Assuredly, this The historian must have heard this harangue at the Quintus Curtius far better than his contemporaries rains who remain completely silent about it.

Therefore, only the pure and simple fact remains true. a wave of retractions and protests.

No one would want to argue that these retractions are delayed. dives of seventy people refute the repeated and persistent confessions of more than six hundreds more; and indeed, one must say nearly thirty to forty thousand knights whose order composed. For, when they had undergone some canonical penances and a very short time of prison, all the Templars, without exception, were set completely free, not only in France, but in all other parts of Europe. Couldn't they, when their alleged persecutors were dead, attempting to justify their order, retract, explain their confessions, affirm- to lose their innocence and at least try to dispel it.

1 History of France, in Latin. See Rohrbacher, book 77°.

472 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

almost all parties, the people's participation countries to which they belonged by birth
sance, they certainly wouldn't have missed it.

But they all remained silent; none of them... neither protested nor demanded. Isn't that because, in their own consciences, as in the opcontemporary public union, there was no doubt about the reality of their crimes and the justice of The conviction?

These reasons have an obvious intrinsic strength.
However, we want to get to the heart of the matter.
difficulty and make even the shadow of a disappear doubt by showing the reasons for these retractions
of the last hour.

To understand it properly, and to dispel any
This kind of hesitation and remaining interest was created.
. which focuses on the torture of the Templars, he was born-
necessary to keep this dou- in mind
a clear and undeniable truth: the Order of the Temple for-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 173

has long been a master of a secret society and perfectly organized, and the seventy cava-
The members of the liers delivered to the flames were the
the most guilty, and consequently, the insiders
the most advanced and hardened. The first part of our claim has been proven by all the above.

That these knights were criminals,
their condemnation in the province of Sens and Their surrender to the secular arm surely indicates this.
They belonged to the ecclesiastical territory of Meaning, since they are judged by the Council of this province. Now, this was the region of France where found the Templars to be the most guilty; for
It was through this province that the commissioners Papal authorities had to begin their investigation, and that's where they first went in per-ring to make the quotes.

Such was the express order of the Pope, who certain-ment did not command this measure without The serious reason, and this obvious reason, is that the
the evil was greater than anywhere else, and that it was necessary

The remedy must be applied as soon as possible. It is undoubtedly necessary to...

The same could be said of the province of Reims, which was bordering.

The fifty-nine Templars tried by the con-10.

474 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the city of Sens, and the nine judged by the city of Reims, are the only ones in the entire order who have been handed over to the secular arm by the bishops. Therefore, they were found to be the most criminal of all. -prelates of the councils of Sens and Reims could not- had no other reason to be more se- worse than their colleagues. What crimes in Were these knights, in particular, convinced? It is unknown: the acts of these councils are lost. probably for crimes similar to those confessed to by their brothers, but in a more proportionate large and numerous and enormous.

As for the grand master and the first dignitaries- They confessed, not once, but five times. or six times in front of different investigators, during seven years, without retracting, but in demand- praying with tears for penance and absolution (Vox bubble in excelso). And it's only when a final sentence condemns them to prison perpetual that the grand master and one of the principals High-ranking officials retract their confessions and offer themselves They and their order claim to be innocent.

This way of acting by both sides is strange and suspicious; it doesn't bear the seal. of true innocence.

As well as we are, we must pay attention to it-

J av KA EN pa te ge es % Ag nr

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 475

tion, in the presence of the oldest initiates, the most

One of the most hypocritical and hardened of Templars. The Grand Master is forty-two years old. initiation. The other sixty-nine had none. Perhaps not much less. It was the core of the sect. Let us not forget, therefore, that not all of these men are Christians in appearance and name, they were penetrated and defiled to the bone by the detestable doctrine of Manichaeism, and of a long practice of his infamous morality. To avoid the suffering-France and death, they had confessed everything, they had feigned repentance and asked for absolution, hoping that, unlike others, they would not have to suffer that a canonical penance, not very daunting, and a short detention. But when they saw that Their hypocrisy led, contrary to their expectations, to a death sentence, or a life sentence perpetual which they considered worse for them than the dead, they ceased to feign and showed the big day their true feelings, their feelings-sectarian sentiments. They wanted, like all the neo-Manicheans of the Middle Ages, like beautiful-a villainous act by the secret societies of our days, "to die in their faith" t. They retract

2 See Goschler's Encyclopedia Dictionary, art. Fanatic

476 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

their confessions, affirm their innocence, not in the Catholic sense, as repentant Christians of having lied before appearing before the sovereign Rain Judge, avenger of perjury, but like... fanatical heretics who, having nothing left & mis-swim, proclaim themselves righteous, pure, free from They and their sect, who commit crimes, present themselves as martyrs. and boast of their beliefs and their works. Such, in our opinion, are the meaning and the cause genuine retractions and protests of these seventy victims. The French of the e- They interpreted the words of the great master. and his knights, according to their habitual point of view tuel and Christian, and they were singularly so impressed. But we who hear the descendants and successors of the Templars attempt to plead their doctrines and their way of life, and in Consequently, watching and teaching as good as possible which, for us Catholics, is wrong, and as What we consider good, we must

and the Roman Catholic Church in the face of the Revolution, vol. II, p. 87, 3rd edition: "Convicted of murder and conspiracy, Targhini and Montanari were expected to atone for a sullied existence through their death. ... On November 23, 1825, mounted on the scaffold, Targhini went cried: "People, I die innocent, Freemason, Carbonaro and im-"Penitent!" Montanari had the same audacity. He kissed the head of the tortured man... » See also The Jew of Verona, by Bresciani, te Ier, pe 75 et suir, better understand the feelings and words of their ancestors, and we would not know how to appreciate them- nor be affected by it in the same way as our forefathers of the fourteenth century.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 177

Jacques de Molay and the knights of his gold dre, for the vast majority, were therefore What a bunch of hypocritical sectarians and vile criminals. The Church treated them with gentleness and in- maternal tenderness, which they were not worthy of. Those among them whom secular justice has punished their final torment received only what they deserved were.

Templar lineage of Freemasonry.

The Templars' guilt being historical-
The lineage that Catholic authors-religious and Masonic ties are established between this order religious and Freemasonry becomes entirely plausible.

After its condemnation and canonical dissolution niques, they say, the Order of the Temple has no- abandoned, neither its organization nor its documents trines, nor his designs. He did nothing but hide more carefully. A number of che-
the most guilty and hardened valiant,

- AT8 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

among those who had been released,
otherwise, they all gathered for the preservation of deeper, more terrible oaths, and the

the most fervent wish to take revenge on kings and pontiffs who had struck their order, and of the religion that condemned their dogmas and their practices.

"To better conceal the fact of their existence"

With everyone's eyes on them, they entered the corridors
Freemason porations, widespread everywhere
then in Europe. This society, or brotherhood of archers architects and workers who, for several centuries,
had formed for the construction of the large cathedrals and castles of the Middle Ages, carried the name Freemasons, because its members were exempt from taxes and other charges usual activities of citizens.

Freemason writers specify more on the facts. They say that in the twelfth century, the Freemasons' guilds English were protected and administered by the Order of the Temple (F.-. Clavel, History of Painters-than). Nothing could be more plausible than the Tem-folds had a great impact, not only in England, but everywhere else, on a cor-

-û -

BRENT

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 479

a technique they frequently had to use for the construction and maintenance of their establishments so numerous and so extensive. It was therefore very It's easy for them to get admitted into the ranks.
of their protégés, especially in certain countries better disposed in their favor. The same writers af-
They assert that it was mainly in Scotland that

The Templars found the safest refuge there, and that

From there they worked tirelessly to extend lor-to restore it to its original splendor and to to avenge the death of the grand master. In fact, the rite the oldest in Freemasonry is the Scottish rite, and at the beginnings of the great

of the eighteenth century, it was from England that the Freemasonry is spreading across the continent and _ in America; and it is the Grand Lodge of London

which, as mother lodge, establishes and inspires all Masonic lodges.

This likelihood is raised to the point of certainty. study by the evidence they give of their opinion the authors who support the Templar origin of the Freemasonry. Not only the authorities

1 F.°. Rebold , General History of Freemasonry, p. 116. -F. Wedekind, Manuscript for the Brothers (Report) between the Pythagorean order and the Freemasons).

480 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Masonic, not just similarities surprising differences between the two orders, but also some Substantial historical data support this feeling.

l. F.-. Willaume, in his Manual already The quoted text expresses itself in these terms:

"The knights known as Tem- folds, or their Freemason successors, apparently- feel they are the authors of most of the de- the steps of initiation. We would think they had were conceived by the Templars in the time of their splendor, to isolate themselves from the crowd of initiates, if we did not notice that these new de- almost all of the initiation sandstones have the motif of the state of order after its fall. We do not- There is no doubt, as we can see, that the Tem- The pliers were initiates, even from the moment they were established. We still believe that Europe belongs to them Freemasonry must know these practices, and these are the practices. secrets that served as a pretext for the accusation irreligion and atheism that led them to a Such a tragic end. Everything confirms this opinion. The misfortunes of these knights, the persecutions of the- which they succumbed to, forced them & sought a final refuge in these same mysteries, at the-

They found comfort and help there...

The Templars disappeared into civil society, but they left successors in Freemasonry

"Nonsense, and their institutions have outlived them."

(Manual of Tiler, p. 10).

F.-. Ragon also said:

"It is natural to think that the crusaders, ar- but to conquer the Holy Land, having found the mysteries preserved in this part of Asia by the few Christians who were there (gnos- ticks and Manicheans), would have adopted them... Thus the knights... better known as Tem- folds, received initiation in Asia, with the for- mules and the Jewish veil. Initiated from the institution of the Temple, they spread in Europe the Masonic mysteries, and undoubtedly the practice the secret of these mysteries will have served as a foundation to the accusation of atheism and irreligion which caused their tragic end... »

"The crusaders, during their stay in the East, have studied all the variants that characterized the Christian sects. They will have attached themselves to the documents trines of the Gnostics and the Manicheans who appeared less altered than those of the priests of Rome. The Templars renounced following the The religion of Saint Peter. There was a secret schism,

11

182 Freemasons BT Jews.

And according to some authors who report these facts, it is this schism, combined with the mysteries gathered in Orient and preserved by them, which was one of the causes of their condemnation by the Court of Rome" (Philosophical and interpretative course, etc., p. 31, 32 and 33).

F.-. Rédarès states in his Æ'édwes that there is no a between the Templars and the Freemasons that a physiological difference; but they leave one another have the same symbols, the same emblems, the same documents philosophical trines, theories, initiatives, ideas ticks.

Brother de Branville, former officer of the Grand Orient de France, is even more precise and more clear in a speech he gave on April 8 1837 before the Brothers of the lodge Les Amis de La Believe and that the newspaper magan- reports in full Screw Ze Globe. The editor appreciates it in ees terms: The speaker € perfectly traced the origin of the Masonic Association.

"I hope to demonstrate in a few words," said the F. de Branville, that the Masonic order is a an offshoot of the Order of the Temple, and it cannot "It could reasonably be something else."

"I dare say that the Masonic order was established

RP mms SE y

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 183

in the fourteenth century by members of the Order of the Temple, under the authority of the Grand Priory of Scotland, and that this fine institution shone with this point and spread easily into the con-European frontiers, then covered with our pre-outlawed cessators. It would be easy for me to accumulate numerous pieces of evidence, drawn from comparison rituals in use in both orders, and one would be surprised at first to notice a system there identical reception, proceeding by way of e-Physical and moral evidence. We wouldn't be less struck by this singular analogy in the two orders of the same mode of initiation, of a certain series of grades, among which one sometimes finds such a resemblance to the che-Valerie Templière, which she can rightfully pass on for a perfect similarity. » (See 'Franc-Freemasonry Exposed, by Armend Neut, t. I°, p. 38 et seq.)

There's no need to multiply the quotes. It's quite certain for a large number of the most famous and most estimated in the order that this Templar lineage

In addition to their testimonies, there is the authority of rituals.

184 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The rituals of the order are no less assertive motives. The formulas and speeches that accompany the conferral of the knighthoods of Saint Andrew, Knight Kadosh, Prince of royal secret and unknown philosopher-judge, no leave no room for doubt. In these last three especially in terms of ranks, the statement is categorical.

"Who do you know?" the receptacle is asked. Kadosh's descendant. Answer: Two abominable ones. D. Name them. R. Philip the Fair and Bertrand of Goth » (Clément YV).

According to this ritual, the duty of the Kadosh is to to avenge the unjust condemnation of Jacques de Molay, "either figuratively on the authors of his torture, implicitly upon whomever is entitled, » that is to say, on the Pope and on the King.

When the knight Kadosh appears for to receive the higher rank of prince of the royal | secret, in the ritual of reception the great com- The man asks him: "Who are you?" J1 re- pond: "My name is Kadosh, offspring of an order unjustly outlawed for five centuries and more. The speech that the Grand Commander delivers then expressly attaches to the recipient the Freemasonry to the Templars.

In the rank of unknown philosopher-judge, the

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 185

speeches and explanations of symbols are even clearer, if possible. They explain clearly that Freemasonry has been a mask adopted by the Templars to hide and to avenge himself more surely for Jac-'s death ques Molay and the destruction of their order, in working tirelessly towards the annihilation of popes and kings. (See Masonic Orthodoxy)

Saint-Albin, p. 47 et seq. and p. 169 et seq., and Society and secret societies, by Father Desfields, vol. III, p. 190 et seq., and 227 et seq.)

2. It is difficult to explain in a satisfactory, other than through a common origin-gine, the points of similarity that exist between The Templars and the Freemasons.

In higher or occult Freemasonry, one encounters at every moment names which obviously relate to the Order of the Templars. The lodges are called chapters, chapters- lodges. It's about ranks that are reminiscent of The Order of the Temple and its sojourn in the East: "Che-Knight of the Temple, Grand Master, sovereign commander commander of the Temple, commander of the East, she-Knight of the East, Knight of Palestine, Prince of Jerusalem, Prince of Lebanon. These ranks appear-

186 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

they adhere to several rites, but primarily and in greater numbers to the Scottish Rite, which is the the oldest form of Freemasonry,

A large number of practices are all similar blasphemous. On both sides lies the law of secret, the oath to keep it under penalty of death, the precautions for stealing knowledge of it & all profane. The assemblies are at night; of Sentries are posted at the meeting place. At the ou-The Venerable Master of each Masonic lodge meeting The lodge leader invariably asks if The lodge is covered, and the Warden replies: "The temple is covered," or: it is raining, according to that the lodge is guarded and hidden from all foreign eyes to be, or is not. Among Freemasons as with the Templars there exists the abominable the practice of denying Jesus Christ, which makes the essential point of the Rosicrucian grade, a grade where One begins to truly become a Freemason. say the rituals and the Masonic authors.

3. Thirdly, several historical data Risks shed a brilliant light on this issue.

A. In their depositions, some knights Temple officials revealed this previously reported fact: a bought his freedom by promising to observe

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 187

in all order the practices that led to more late, its destruction.

By comparing this data with what we contemporary historians of the order learn of the Temple, we will undoubtedly touch upon the first starting point of his lamentable apostasy, and we will find details reproducing both Freemasonry and its temporary origins. Pler alone can explain them.

In their accounts, William of Tyre (twelfth century), Matthieu Paris and Jacques de Vitri (thirteenth – thirtieth century), claim that the Templars maintain close and intimate relationships were formed with the Assassins, a branch of the Muslim sect of Ismailis: |

These sectarians formed a kind of religious order religious and military. They settled towards the end of the eleventh century (1090) in the mountains of the Persia. Their growth was rapid. They seized – resulting from a large number of fortresses and foundations run several establishments, including two principals main ones; one in northern Persia, the other in Syria, 'in the Anti-Lebanon mountains, between Antioche and Damascus. It was with this last one established –

1 V. Bouillet's historical dictionary, under the word Assassins.

188 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the fact that the Templars found themselves in relaxation

tion. The leader of the Assassins was called "the Old Man" of the mountain," that is to say, the lord of the mountain, because of the fortress's position or where he resided. Historians note with surprisingly, while the other sovereigns were forced to pay tribute to the Assassins, the Templars received two thousand of them each year gold coins. Matthew Paris reports that Frederick II, The German emperor said of the Templars: "I know from a reliable source that several sultans with pump in order, and that the Templars themselves—these same things allowed them to celebrate their superstations with invocation of Muhammad and pump secular!» There is every reason to believe that «these su-

"tans" were none other than the leaders of the Assassins, The Old Men of the Mountain.

F.—. Clavel supports these facts in these terms:

“Eastern historians,” he said, “show us—thirty at different times the order of the Templars maintaining intimate relations with that of Assassins. They insist on the kinship that existed

1 Historia major Angliae. V. Rohrbacher, book 77°.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. . 489

between the two associations. They note that they had adopted the same colors, white and red; that they had the same organization, the same hierarchy of grades, the degrees of Fédayi, of Æefik and Dai of the one, corresponding to the degrees of novices, of professed men, of knights on the other; that Both were conjuring up the ruin of religions that they professed in public and that all Both owned numerous castles, the first in Asia, the second in Europe. It is at least certain that they were linked through clandestine transactions and that they meet reciprocally offered all sorts of good deeds fices f. » |

However, the Ismaili sect, outwardly Muslim—mane, was a secret society which, in its mysterious hidden rooms, kept absolutely nothing of Islamism.

"She was no less political than she was philosophical; for religion for her was merely a pretext to have the means to raise in a favorable opportunity for the people against the sovereigns. That is indeed what happened several times. » The Ismailis did not reveal their documents

1 Picturesque History, p. 354 et seq.

190 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

trines that little by little. They had up to nine de-Initiation steps. "The condition common to all was blind obedience to the sect leader and to his delegates, and a sincere willingness to dedicate-to create all its natural and financial faculties to the success of his ventures and the execution of his wills, » In the first three degrees, len-
The teaching remained purely Muslim, but in the Shiite sense and with the nuance specific to Ismailis. In the following three degrees, the initiate learned to despise Islamism and all its practices:
ticks, and in general all religions and laws positive. He was given some knowledge philosophical opinions, the nature of the elements
ments, the virtue of numbers and some principles principles of geometry. Very few Ismailis penetrate-dealt beyond this sixth degree. It was there that The largest number of affiliates stopped there, who However, they believed themselves to be initiated into all the secrets of the sect. In the last three grades, the teacherghement reproduced the fundamental ideas of the ancient religion of the Persians, the dualism of with that of Mani and the belief in genies, emanations of the Divinity and charged with . the administration of the universe, therefore the cabalism, and finally, as a last term, the materia-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 194

lism. The practical consequences of such doctrines
The trines can be easily guessed!

From this historical data result two con-certain sequences.

The first is a new demonstration of the Templars' guilt. We understand easily than these knights, proud of their power and their renown, "raised in the de-
the lices of the barons of the Orient, » were promptly-relics of austerity and essential purity related to religious life, and that their corruption and the Assassins' chain of commanding them led them to do so initiate.

The second is the Templar lineage of the Masonry.

The points of similarity that exist between the the sect of the Assassins and that of the Freemasons of Our days are numerous and striking. Thus the Freemasons have long insisted on They passed for Christians: but they only had the ap- the parentage of Christianity, and in their mysteries They keep absolutely no secrets.

Freemasonry is a secret society

1 V. Dictionary of all religions, ed. Migne, at Ismaili word.

492 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

which is as much political as it is philosophical, and which uses religion, philosophy, and policy to incite the people against the sub- verains. The Freemasons do not reveal their doc- a trine that little by little. They have, like the Ismailis, numerous degrees of initiation, and the condition common to all their initiates is obedience blind to the sect leader and his delegates, and a sincere willingness to dedicate all his faculties intellectual and its resources to the advantage and to success of Masonic enterprises.

In the past, to be received as a Freemason, one had to to profess Christianity, but, from the first degrees of initiation, one learned, as today, to despise Christianity and all its practices, and in general all religions and all positive laws. The speeches that the Masonic rituals put into the mouths of Venerable ones, during the ceremonies of the reception- tion of the first grades, reproduce the background of the teachings that the Ismailis gave to their initiates of the first degrees.

Few masons reach the higher ranks; and yet they all believe they possess the entirety of the secrets of the sect.

Finally, in its rites and higher ranks, the

'FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 193

Freemasonry teaches, as we will see—rons, dualism, cabalism, materialism and the most detestable morality.

However, this striking resemblance between the practices
the practices and doctrines of current Freemasons and those of the Ismaili sect of the fourteenth century long since extinct, cannot be explained that otherwise than through the reports that the Templars with some and others, with these from whom they received initiation, and with those to the—
which they transmitted it and who are their descendants.

B. Numerous epigraphic documents confirm this Templar origin of Freemasons.

We read in the confessions made by several chevaliers that they had described thus one of their idols: she was in the form of Baphomet or Ba-fomet; and again: on it was painted a figure of Baphomet. What was this figure? What What form did this idol take and where did it come from?

Some claim that the word Baphomet is a simple alteration of the word Mahomet which we Bahoumid is also written. This feeling seems unlikely. Others, with more reason, dear-elsewhere the meaning and origin of this expression sion and say that it comes from the Greek Bagn Myttog or

194 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Mnzeos and means baptism of Métis or Mété. Métis means in Greek: prudence, wisdom. The Greeks and the Romans had made her a goddess, daughter of Oceanus and Tethys. The ophites placed it in the name of—
They brought forth their Aeons and called him Mete. He was the even Aeon, who, among other Gnostic sects, bore the name of Sophia, Achamoth, etc. The ophites they transformed this Aeon into an androgynous deity and attributed to him, as the Cypriots did to their Venus, a long beard. The ophites were a was eternal; the evil principle washed organised and the multitude of Aeons administered it. They worshipped the serpent, in Greek oph; hence their name. Their morals were execrable. Perone was not admitted to their mysteries without having previously denied and cursed Jesus Christ. For them, Mété's baptism meant the baptism of hisbaptism or spiritual baptism, that is to say, purification of the mind by the light of wisdom that gives initiates knowledge of the mysteries. It's the same as the baptism of fire of ancient Gnostics who also meant by this the illumination of the mind. The ophites explained this illumination and purification of the mind in an infamous manner through charcopulation

E

<

1 number

ti
+ of a cup or goblet that was fixed to the base of a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 495

nelle. This symbolic baptism was carried out by means of

: mysterious figure. It was filled with fire, then

ig

THE

We received initiation.
As a result of their affiliation with the secret doc:

: trines of the Eastern Gnostics, the Templars

- . accepted and worshipped, not only the Aeon or
- . the androgynous deity Mete, but also the figure

7
+

If
s

wer À Ut oo e

representing the baptism of wisdom or fire of which They made a second idol under the name of Baphomet:

An Austrian orientalist scholar, Mr. de Hammer, found carved on a large number of monuments
Templar-owned buildings, castles, churches and tombs, both in the East and in the West
tooth, a multitude of figures of Mete and Bapho-

. met. I] reproduced them in the Afines de l'Orient, as well as a host of hieroglyphs and symbols

`

ve
>
has 3

if

relating to the dark mysteries of the Templars.
The idol Mete is represented, in accordance

- . to the ideas of the ophites, in human form

combining the attributes of both sexes, with a

: a long beard, a woman's breasts, and horns on the head. It is accompanied by the cross in

. form of Thau and the serpent so famous in all Mythologies. The Baphomets are represented

196 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

in pretty much the same way: they wear snakes at the waist, as a symbol of the so-Domie. -They have the cut and the representation of the Fire baptism. Furthermore, a characteristic detail and all the Masonic symbols that are displayed in the lodges, such as the sun, the moon, the blazing star-boyante, the apron, the chain or serrated tassel, the seven-branched candelabra, etc., etc. These idols, these hieroglyphs and symbols are found on the monuments built by the Templars in 'Europe as in Asia'.

Importantly, these various figures are surrounded by:

1 See the works of Mr. de Hammer and Dictionary of all religions, under the words Mete, Baphomet and Templars.- Mr. de Hammer has published several memoirs relating to doctrines secrets of the Templars. I] maintains, as we have explained above, that these religious figures were affiliated with the Ishmae sect-

ot

FAR

links, whose doctrine and practices they had embraced, and that the Ismailis were themselves only one of the sects of the Gnosis, originating from the Ophiuchus, the explanations of this scholar were opposed in its time (around 1810-20) by other scholars of France and Germany gave different explanations to the figures engraved on the Templar monuments. But in 1852,

Mr. de Hammer's thesis and victoriously established it in his

Monograph of Mr. de Blacas's box, or proofs of the ma- |

The niche-based approach of the Knights Templar. We possess several of these. caskets that were part of the treasure of the Temple houses. One was found in France (Côte-d'Or), another in Tuscany, in the site of former Templar houses. On the walls These boxes are engraved with vile representations of ma- Nestled in the Middle Ages, Cathars, Waldensians, Albigensians. We savons that Manichaeism had absorbed all Gnostic sects.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 497

Two further developments emerge from this discovery: obvious things: the guilt of the Templars, which were truly Gnostic sectarians, and Yori-Templar lineage of Freemasonry. Because one does not could not explain the simultaneous existence differently a whole lot of identical symbols on the monuments Templars dating from the thirteenth century at the latest, and in the Masonic lodges of the nineteenth century.

C. Finally, a historical piece of the highest order interest will complete the demonstration.

This document is a circular letter written in Latin. dated Cologne, June 24, 1535, and addressed to all members of its lodges through an association which calls itself the "Order of Saint John or Freemasons. A copy was found in 1637 in a Masonic lodge in The Hague. It was the Freemasons themselves who published this document which has been called "the charter of Cologne, and for two centuries they held it unanimously for authentic. In these last At some point, some Brothers, finding the confessions of this charter is too clear and too significant in addition to... several points, have striven to shake the authentic. They were unable to produce it for any reason. than these two miserable quibbles: the charter puts renerandus where there should be venerabilis, and two letters are missing (c and h) in the signature Melancthon's ture! "But," said Mr. de Saint-Albin, these efforts were unsuccessful, even in The lodges. Freemasonry remained deaf to the pleas. to these insinuations of caution. She retained, She adopted the Charter of Cologne as her own charter. as the "most orthodox monument and the more classical of royal art" (F.'. Rédarès, Studies, etc., p. 182; M. de Saint-Albin, the Freemasons, p. 68).

From the date of this document, the fie Masonry is definitively entering the field of history.

The Cologne Charter includes a preliminary section bubble followed by thirteen articles.

It begins with these words:

"We, the elected masters, members of society venerable consecrated to John or of the order of Freemasons, directors of the L.'. (lodges) cons- titled in the cities of London, Edinburgh, Vienna, Amsterdam, Paris, Lyon, Frankfurt Hamburg, Antwerp, Rotterdam, Madrid, Venice, « Ghent, Kenigsbere, Brussels, Danzig, Middel- "burg, Bremen and Cologne, united in chapter" "in the said city of Cologne, on the days, months and "as stated below, and under the chairmanship of

AAMA DM

mn. "PO

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 199

ed

- "Master of the lodge founded in this same city,

[

"our F.*. P.-. Vén.:., very learned and very pru- -

- "tooth, unanimously chosen by us for this purpose,

"knowledge we share with all members of the order"

"both current and future, through the means of the pre-_sentences which will be sent to all the lodges"

a supradites... »

The elected masters then complain about the accusations accusations that are brought against them:

"Considering that, in these unfortunate times,
where discord and dissension among citizens
They attribute trouble and calamities everywhere to our society and to all of us FF.*. admitted in the order of John or the Freemasons, of the princes tips, opinions and machinations so much secret as well as public, also co-owners in our sensetimeñts than to the character, the purpose and the doctrine of our society; that the members are also accused of the order's blows (in order to attract contempt for us)
piofanés and to dedicate ourselves in a more sure to public execration, and because we
we are all bound by a pact and invisibly mysterious circumstances.
Labels religiously guarded and observed by us
all) of being guilty of the crime, wanting to restore you the order of the Templars; that we be designated publicly that as such; and that, consequently, as st

200 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

We were affiliated with this order, we would be united and conspired to recover the property and estates which belonged to them, cf. to avenge the death of last great master on the descendants of princes and kings who were guilty of this act and which caused the extinction of the said order; that to that In effect, we would seek to introduce the schism into V'E'qlise, unrest and sedition in the em-worse and in temporal dominations; that the Hatred and envy would drive us against the pontiff.
supreme, the emperor and all sovereigns; that, obeying no power in the world and submissive
only to the elected superiors in our association-

and their clandestine orders through trade in secret letters and by agents charged with express missions; which we would not give access to our mysteries is granted to those who, having examined and suffering from bodily torment, would have bound and consecrated to our assemblies by an oath "Horrible and detestable..."

The master masons reject these accusations and to exonerate themselves and their brothers,

"They announce and publish:

Article 1°. That the Society or the Order of Brothers admitted F.°. M.-., dedicated to Saint John, does not derive

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 201

neither the Knights Templar, nor any other order of ecclesiastical or secular knights; that he is not a separate part of it, that it is not joined neither to one nor to several of them, and that finally he has no connection with them, directly or indirectly, by any connection whatsoever, none at all, not even the slightest relationship... » |

The negation is formal and absolute: the F... dedicated to John, or Freemasons, do not come. in no way were they Templars, and they have not no kind of link or relationship with them.

However, a negation, however pronounced that it That being said, it is not proof. It is easy to deny. This is the most convenient and the most... shorter to hide the truth and get rid of compromising and unpleasant accusations. But the existence of these accusations, which the masters elected officials themselves reveal, we learn more long, all alone, on their Templar origins that they cannot hide it by their inte- negation reamed.

For spirits that are not satisfied with words, who look at things closely and reflect, will tell the elected masters of 1535:

Your own words condemn you. If the accusations that you reject had not whatever the basis, they would not have been united-formulated in a way. If we hadn't recognized in your actions and words, in your speeches and your trends, at least some ideas and practices of the ancient Templars, we would not have told you point "publicly designated as such." If your action in "the dis- rope and the dissensions of these troubled times and of calamities, » one would not have imputed to your society "of principles, opinions, and machines" both secret and public nations" also con- damnable. If you had had a true conscience- In a peaceful manner, you would have dropped these The slanderous remarks have since dissipated. of themselves in the face of your innocence which had become evident- tooth; or rather you would have done as the Church Catholic, also accused, but of crimes imaginary. She hid from the persecution- tion, but as soon as his enemies had ceased to To oppress him, she opened the doors wide. of its sanctuaries; she has publicly shown its mysteries, its dogmas, its cult, its leaders and his administration; and it turned out that all this that she had once hidden from the eyes of the im- pious and violent, it was truth, purity and charity. Why, you too, in the sixteenth century, at the time of free thought, while no one... persecuted and couldn't even think about it, didn't you not revealed all your practices, all your rituals, All your mysteries, all your doctrines? Far from it. From there, you do the opposite. In the document where You say: "We are not those who believes, this is what we are; we mop- "open trunks," you loudly assert, without you having to deal with the contradiction, that you are and that you remain a secret society: "Our The order is very ancient and secret; » « we We are all bound by a pact and mysteries. inviolable, religiously guarded and observed by all of us." And, in fact, you maintain your signs, your words, your rites and your mysteries

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 203

Supreme leader and his principal assessors. You
So you always have something to hide and you force us to think that this is precisely the something you are criticized for. If you weren't really, as you still claim in the same piece, that "doctors and masters practicing the mathematics, astronomy, or other sciences
between which a "reciprocal trade" is established
"Do doctrines and lights;" if you were only humble "Brothers of John," or fellow members

204. FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Freemasons, solely occupied with building

hospices to heal the poor who were attacked

of the darts of inflammation, known as Saint-'s disease
Antoine, or any other illness, how could one not

Don't stop these atrocious calumnies by:

stripping away as quickly as possible all mystery and secret? In such a case, the interest of good, of truth, charity, imperiously requests to pass before humility. The truth, once exposed to
On that great day, humility will prevail. But you are careful not to act with this frankness
who is not afraid of the full light; for you persist in your occult practices. Article IX and XII of your charter expressly preserve them-
ly. "The secrets and mysteries that hide

manuscript © 1999

our works*. (works), says article IX, do not serve |

that for the sole purpose of letting us spread our benefits without ostentation, and to drive without trouble to its perfection the work that we

Reputed Brother of the Society of John or Free-Freemason, only he who, legitimately initiated into our mysteries by a chosen master, aided by less than seven brothers, is capable of giving the proof of its reception through signs and words which the other Brothers use.

—

“

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 205

So you are giving everyone the right to de-
to conduct and to legitimately believe this triple con-Conclusion: the work to the perfection of which you working so secretly is something quite different from:
charity towards the poor and the infirm
my; you only hide your work so well by fear of being disturbed and stopped in their execution;
Therefore, despite your self-serving denials
Sées, you leave all the accusations standing of public opinion in the sixteenth century: you are Templars, successors of this order per-towards; you have the spirit, the practices, and you pursue their criminal designs.

But the second article of the Cologne Charter offers even more obvious proof of this final conclusion.

Article II. (We announce and publish) "that our association still consists of today
as in the past, of these three symbolic grades called apprentice, journeyman, and master; and beyond of mastery, of elected masters and of supremes

elected officials. That any association or confra. ternity thus called, which admits other denominators nations and subdivisions, or which claims another

. origin, which tends to meddle in political affairs

or ecclesiastics, who devote themselves to hatred and to envy against anyone, whoever they may be, and whatever be those who emphasize their power such gatherings of men, although they arrogate to themselves the title of F.. M.. (Freemasons), of F.°. ad- placed at the command of John, or any other sort- blable, do not belong to our order, but that they are rejected and expelled as schismatics ques. »

This article is full of interesting revelations. According to its content, at the beginning of the sixteenth century, there was in "the venerable society con- sacred to John" or the order of Freemasons, a number of members who claimed another origin (than that given in Article I) by the chosen masters and from which we will (soon to speak), which tended to be busy with business politicians and ecclesiastical figures, who devoted themselves to hatred and envy towards other men. They were most certainly part of the order, then- that the elected masters expelled them in 1539 and they declare them schismatic; for obviously one cannot be rejected from a society if one does not have not previously included. However, the report given here by these men perfectly corresponds to accusations publicly levelled against the order of John. These excommunicated members claimed

SEE at "+:

therefore to be the successors of the Templars and in con- to maintain order and projects. These men were not not a few isolated individuals; they were quite many to form an association or fraternity ternity, or meeting which was supported by powerful protectors. They too claimed this power. the title of Freemasons and of "Brothers admitted to the order of John," and they "admitted" into their company with other names and subdivisions, that is to say, other grades beyond the five degrees listed by the elected masters. But the latter matics. Nineteen lodges adhere to this condemnation. How much the schismatics had of it—What about them? We don't know. Only it is certain—that, in this year 1535, the order of John is split into two parts: one, quite benign, as far as it was concerned said, who only deals with art, science, mathematics, construction and care of the poor the sick and the sick; the other, ardent and active, true descendants of the Templars, who want to continue their work.

From which of the two do the Freemasons descend? current? Assuming that this kind of excommunication was serious and that it produced The true split within the order of John, the Fratic-

208 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The current masonry surely descends from the second part and very likely both.

One might believe that the benign order of the F.-. of Jean has passed away; for neither he nor the name nor trace; while, in the eighteenth century, arrive from England, as we will see—rons, and they proliferate on the continent, and especially in Germany, Masonic lodges including members clearly declare themselves descendants and successors of the Templars. On the other hand, towards the At the end of that same century, the merger took place between all Masonic rites and systems which have now formed a single society. Therefore, if the The Society of Saint John had preserved itself until then, It must be said that current Freemasonry draws its origin from both parties, since it is very certainly the continuation of the unique society formed at the end of the previous century.

But in truth, the excommunication was only a mask and schism than a fiction. The first pages of the Cologne charter have already given us the measure of the sincerity of the elected masters of the Freemasonry.

Concerned by such specific and serious accusations that public opinion was rising up against on all sides

ON, ne mt 1 ne Ay

Re n

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 209

to give the impression. There were still too many christianism among the masses, even Protestants, so that the sons of the Templars might reveal themselves Fully exposed. Feeling, however, more assured amidst the difficult circumstances that were then crossing the Church and the Catholic powers

The Templar association dared to appear, in dissimulating, however, as much as possible, his her appearance and her face. Gathered in congress in Cologne, She took a mask and borrowed clothes. She shouted loudly, and wanted all her mem-Bres repeat everywhere: This is what we sums, in order to better conceal what she was. And to satisfy the public, to confuse its To silence his suspicions and silence his complaints, she rejected his of Templar origin, and apparently repelled from its heart all its most ardent members and the more enterprising ones who jeopardized its existence tence. Let them maintain their meetings, let them continue to act as before, the order Jean or Freemasonry doesn't care; she is perfectly innocent; they do not belong They are more to the true Freemasonry: they are schismatic. For her, it remains, as before, a society completely harmless, which only deals with works of intelligence and charity.

49

me

210 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Success through Freemasonry. Secretly united heart and direction to active companies, their providing their leaders and their occult cadres, She benefited from their success, without being affected. by their downsides. This age-old hypocrisy has made its strength and its duration.

This is the true meaning and purpose of the cat from Cologne. His text logically emerges the Templar origin of Freemasonry.

We should stop our study and our citations at 14. tions of this important piece. It seems to us It is useful, however, before concluding, to examine the origin and the new name that the elected masters, and also to put before the eyes of readers the articles of the charter that concern the organization of Freemasonry in the sixteenth century.

After having assured that the company or the order of the Brothers admitted F.:. M.-°, dedicated to Saint Jean, "does not derive from the Knights Templar, hi of no other order of knights ecclesias-"ticks or secularists," the elected masters affirm that their order x Is older than any order of chivalry of this kind, and that it already existed so much in Palestine that in Greece and dats both parties of

S0 LS ©

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. ai

Roman Empire, before the holy wars and the time when the aforementioned knights departed for the Judea; as demonstrated to us by various documents elements of a well-established antiquity, that the origin

* of our association goes back to the earliest time, when, fleeing the disputes of the different sects of Christianity, a few followers, imbued through a wise interpretation of true principles, secrets of moral philosophy, separated of the multitude. It was during this period that...

which were not tainted by any of the errors of the paganism, believing it sees religion altered and corrupted, spreading schisms and horrors of war, instead of peace, tolerance and charity, united and bound themselves by oath

_ sacred, in order to preserve them and make them firmer and purer

the principles of morality of this religion, principles engraved in the hearts of men; they are there devoted themselves, so that the light, shining brighter than ever, might shine forth. in addition to the heart of darkness, could manage to chase-

to eradicate superstition and to establish, through the worship of all human virtues, peace and happiness among mortals. Under these auspicious circumstances, the authors members of our association were appointed consecrated Brothers created for John, following the example of John-

212 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Baptiste, precursor of the light that was going to... priest and of whom he was the first apostle and the first martyr. » |

A simple reading of this pathos shows that the Sixteenth-century Templar-Masons gave themselves for ancestors the Gnostics. In "these men learned and enlightened (yiüsvs, ywstinot), true Christians links, imbued with the secrets of moral philosophy, followers who, in the early days, separated of the multitude, are bound by a sacred oath, which would not recognize the first Gnostics, their their pretensions and their appearance?

Here the elected masters do not tell the whole story. truth about their origins; they confess them in convoluted terms, the least compromising part-aunt to them at that time; for, in fact, the Freemasonry dates back to Gnosticism. They They remain silent about the other person, whom they have an interest in hiding.

It's not clear how, "under the happy "under the auspices" of this Gnosticism, the authors of the association-

Brothers consecrated to John. We know perfectly well—where the term Freemason comes from; but What is the source of this other one, Brothers of John? or from Saint-Jean? We haven't proven anything. on this point.

|

– FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 213

This name may have been taken from the boss which would have been adopted in the past by the corporations of the former Freemason workers of Angleland or Scotland. Among the rites of France—In modern Freemasonry, one finds the rite of the Ancients. Free and Accepted Masons of England, who divided into Royal Arch Masonry and into Jacobin—Saint John's folly; or when the knights Germans from Saint John of Jerusalem, called by the following knights of Rhodes and Malta, embraced If they embraced Protestantism, did they allow themselves to be invaded? by the Templars, like the guilds of old. medieval workers, or did they spontaneously—newly fraternized with them in their lodges, in bringing and retaining their original name? It's possible. Or perhaps the Templars were... affiliated with and in connection with a religious sect Jewish-Gnostic tradition of the East that survives still and who are called Christians of Saint—John the Baptist or Johannites? There would be nothing astonishing, and one could almost infer from the origin claimed by the elected masters of Cologne. |

Regarding these Christians of Saint John the Baptist, we have that the data is inaccurate, or at least not very accurate consistent. The sentiment expressed by Mr. Jacques

214 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Matter, in his History of Gnosticism already The one cited seems the most likely.

According to this author, many Jews, looking Saint John the Baptist as a man of God, a zealous prophet of ancient Mosaic law, a doctrine and his way of life. But through the revolutions that shook the eastern lands, They made an incoherent amalgamation of Gnostic ideas! tics and Christian rites which made up their teligion. They proved to be open opponents of the Christianity and Jesus Christ, to which they attribute they follow the words and actions of their boss Jean-Baptist. Driven out of Judea by the Muslims, then dispersed for some time in {a Chaldea, Mesopotamia, and Persia, they succeeded most of them died on the banks of the Tigris and the Euphrates, first submitted to the authority spiritual of the Nestorian patriarch of Babylon, then shook off this addiction to take a religious leader of their sect. According to Mr. Matter, they would still be widespread among these today two rivers, at whose confluence the would live more educated than their society.

In any case, let's note once again
This remarkable fact: from whatever side one ji

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 215

seeks the origin of Freemasonry, something no matter what authority one questions, one is always met- sent as a last resort, doctrinally Gnosti- cism and the religious mysteries of the East, and geographically in the regions watered by the Euphrates.

To conclude this long study, let's listen again.
the elected masters of Cologne, who are going to make us
Now, let's learn about the organization of their company:

Article TII. "Among the doctors and masters of this order practicing mathematics, astro- in the fields of economics or other sciences, it is established, after that they were scattered across the earth, a trade reciprocal of doctrine and of Enlightenment, that from there is The custom arose of choosing from among these elected masters. One of them, more perfect than the others- very, and who, revered as the elected grand master or patriarch, and known only to the chosen masters, visible and invisible at the same time, must be considered as the prince and head of the entire association;

Although stupid, very few brothers still exist really today.

"And these principles, drawn from the most ancient manuscripts and charters of the order, compared with care, by the authority of the patriarch, with documents

216 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

sacred ments entrusted to the president and his successors—sisters, having been determined, we, equipped with the authority of Our aforementioned illustrious patriarch, we have decreed and established the following articles as precepts: »

Article IV. "The system of our society, the
The manner and means by which the rays of The fiery light reaches the enlightened Brothers and extend into the profane world, are in the power—the power of the supreme elected masters; it is up to them to to watch and see that nothing is being plotted against the true principles of our society or the state of none of its members; these are also the masters who—premen of the order who are responsible for de—to split, to preserve and to protect the rights and the freedoms of his state, and to maintain them, the case arriving, at the risk of their fortune and at the peril of their lives, in whatever place and at whatever time it may be, against all those who would want to to harm.

Article VI. "Although in granting our goods—
In fact, we had absolutely nothing to worry about.
neither religion nor homeland, it seemed to us however necessary and prudent not to receive until pre—feels within our order that those who, in the world
lay or unenlightened, profess the Christian religion.
yours.

ip, ay T0 auae

` ` FREEMASONS AND JEW3. 247

Article X. "We celebrate every year the commemoration of Saint John, forerunner of Christ and
"leader of our community,"

– very similar ceremonies, when they have place, whether in reality, in discourse, or in any In another way, in the meetings of the Freemasons, they did not However, no rapping with the rites of the E- ": church."

Article XII. "The following is not considered a brother of the company

: of John or Freemason that only he who,

– legitimately initiated into our mysteries by a master
– elected, assisted by at least seven FF.*, is capable of

: to provide proof of its receipt by the – and
: words used by the other FF.'

"Among these signs and words are

Also admitted are those which are in use in the lodge from Edinburgh, as well as from Hamburg, from Rotterdam, Middelburg and Venice, which – are affiliated with him, and whose occupations and trav.*., although regulated according to the Scottish manner–

"I know, yet they do not deviate from ours in this

– which concerns the origin, the purpose, and the institution.

Article XIII. "Our society being governed

+ by a single, universal leader, and the different magistères which compose it by several gr.'.

13

218 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

master..., according to the position and needs of the countries and of diverse kingdoms, nothing more is needed that perfect uniformity among all those who, spread across the earth's surface, form like separate members of a single body; nothing is no longer useful than a correspondence of deputies and letters, conforming everywhere to it– even and to his own doctrine; and, to that end the these letters, attesting to the nature and

each and every one of the colleges of our order ac-potentially existing.

The document concludes by stating that nineteen exem-original, entirely similar designs have been bearing the signature of the elected masters.

The original found in The Hague bears twenty and signatures. Some are reminiscent of Well-known names that give food for thought. Philippus Melanthon: he is undoubtedly the famous friend of Luther; De Colligni: was he of the fa-
A thousand Colignys? It is followed by a French name
Also: Virieux; Doria: did the signatory belong to the Doria of Genoa? Johan Schroder: perhaps the author of the Masonic rite that bears this name;
Falck: could he be an ancestor of the Prussian minister?
executor of the Kulturkampf?... |

ns | In nn -

i
FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 219

The Cologne Charter thus informs us
with complete historical certainty of its existence,
at the beginning of the sixteenth century, of a so-
a perfectly organized occult society, which calls itself
She herself is a "Member of the Order of Freemasons." composed of members divided into five grades or degrees of initiation. It is led by a chief unique, unknown to the mass of affiliates, known of a very small number of superior initiates and chosen. It comprises two rites, one the rite Scottish, which seems the least extensive, the other, - best known, practiced by a large number of followers.

At that time, a considerable schism appeared to have occurred within this society.

Despite their denials, the members of this Masonic associations demonstrate through their propres to say that they are the direct descendants and the successors of the Templars. That their schism of the sixteenth century, whether real or apparent, that whether it lasted or ended shortly, the Modern Freemasonry is nothing else.

She admits it; she claims it. Besides, the perfect resemblance of the two societies forces to say that this one is the daughter of that one.

220 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The Templar origin of the Freemasons is therefore Undeniable.

Nowadays there is a secret society which takes the name of the Order of the Temple, and which has the claim of being the exclusive descendant and direct from the proscribed Templars. This order does not want to recognize Freemasonry for his daughter, but nevertheless he does not disown her not.

"The different orders of Freemasonry," said the Manual of the Knights of the Order of the Temple (edition of 1825), "are undoubtedly only continuations of the traditions of the Order of the Temple, which will have had place in the different countries where the first knights had withdrawn." With these words, Mr. de Saint-Albin makes this very accurate observation: "Counterfeits of the Order of the Temple made by Knights Templar are something more than just simple counterfeits. The hatred of The Church is equal in both orders, which are equally careful to keep this hatred secret to better ensure his triumph and the ruin of The Church!" For their part, the Freemasons, all taking care to distinguish itself from the order of Temple acknowledges that he fraternizes with them.

1 The Freemasons, p. 51.

SES ne,

. ln. aon, set

SS ee ER

_and that he visits them "under the title of masons of the Eastern order, but without having any ma-rite connic" (Willaume, Manuel).

The Protestant Wilcke does justice to these childish things. hypocritical lies and demonstrates that this order, born in eighteenth century, has only the name and something something about the costume of the ancient Templars, and that at Instead of going back to Jacques de Molay, it is not that an outgrowth of modern Freemasonry nerie f.

The fact remains that current Freemasonry
It is actually and directly derived from the Templars.

3. Summary and agreement of the various opinions on the origins of Freemasonry.

Now what should we think of these various | opinions that we have just presented on the origin of this secret society?

In our opinion, they all have a certain underlying principle.
of truth, and the total truth would be in their reunification union in the following manner.

The outlawed order of the Templars provided the body and trained the cadres of Freemasonry actuelle.

1 Work already cited, book HI, pp. 399-466. Rorhbach, book 77e.

222 Freemasons BT Jews.

This order survived its canonical dissolution
by hiding like all those sects that have perpetuated under the Christian society of the Middle Ages age. Either remnants of Gnostic heresies, manifest-Chéan and Albigensian sects, that is, cabalistic sects, Jewish, Muslim, these associations tenebreuses had between them and the followers of Temple, a community of origin in their iniinitiation into the pagan and heretical mysteries of the 0-laugh. There was for all the same point of dispart. But, strangers to each other in their own lives and their actions, they were infected more or less certain regions in in particular without having a dissolving action gé-general.

When the opportune times arrived,

a special impulse pushed the putrid waters
of all these cesspools within Freemasonry Templar, which became the great sewer collector of These hidden rots. That's the thought being expressed in this way by Pius IX: "All societies
"secrets carried their waters into the marshes"
"of Freemasonry." The merger was easy.
and prompt: they recognized the same origin, the 1 Speech of May 29, 1876.

—

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 223

same goal and, with a few variations, the same doctrines, the same initiation rites and the same practices. The immense army of evil thus found its frameworks and was formed.

But since the source of the Templar errors,
Albigensian, Manichean, Gnostic and Kabbalistic-tiques must be taken in the Orient and that they pl-writers trace their roots to paganism Freemasons are right when,
establishing their genealogy, they go directly to the Templars, pass through the Albigensians, the ma-Nichaeans and Gnostics, and arrive at the myspagan lands, whether from Rome, Gaul, or From Egypt, or from India. They are right again.
when, from this mysterious idolatry of the sancancient texts, they go back to Solomon, the most famous of the idolaters, initiated into all the secrets of Memphis, Heliopolis and the Orient by his Egyptian, Moabite, and Ammonite wives, Sidonian and Hethean (Book III of Kings, Chapter 11).

But the beginning and source of all this
The worship of idols and Satan, that's Babylon, that's the Tower of Babel, where the first temple was erected pagan, which reminds us of Baal, Sabianism, the cult

Dualism. From there to the flood and Noah, there is only one

224 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

No. If they put it in the nomenclature of their Ham, the cursed son of the patriarch, the malleons would be in the truth. That one is one of them; Noah never belonged to them. From Ham to Cain, Adam's eldest son, the journey is long; the Wéphi- The dims, or giants of Genesis, have been forgotten. However- whose lineage is logical, and, by excluding Adam, the first sinful man, but also the first penitents, we will readily admit that Cain was a bricklayer, and a good bricklayer all his life for his Oh dear. We are now very close to the origin. Angelique. And by the way, I agree with several Fellow Freemasons, we will not hesitate to re- to know in fallen language the primitive ancestor of Freemasonry.

In discussing their origins, the writers ma- conical, like the Protestants, apparently- They are very concerned about establishing a tradition. We think they're doing well and they say vral.

In reality, and by their own admission, its belong to the city of evil, to the society of children of Satan, who have their tradition and their point from the start, just like the city of good and the Church of Jesus Christ. Now, in this city and society of error and crime, the Freemasons form

mms

* +.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 925

the devout part; they are the religious and the de- votes of the devil; and the exposition of their origins is not that the true and continuous history of the sata- devotion naught. Indeed, Cain, the Nephilim, Ham, the worshippers of Baal, the stars, and the spirits of stars, the Kabbalists, Solomon, the initiates of the Chéens and Albigensians, the Templars, and finally the Freemasons of all rites and their societies

Have not crests of all shapes been and not Aren't they still among the other children?
from the city of evil, the most devoted to the works, to limitation and devil worship?

Historically and philosophically, such is our appears to be the most well-founded origin of Franco-Masonry.

THIRD SECTION. – DEVELOPMENT OF FRANCO- MAGONNERIE.

From its merger with the brotherhood of Freemasons, the occult order only progresses slowly.

King Bruce of Scotland is cited as accepting, for | 45.

296 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

for himself and for his successors, the great mat-order, towards the end of the first half of the fourteenth century. It is said that, in the middle of the fifteenth, Henry VI of England entered the Freemasonry and involved part of its nobility. We have just seen the developments that the company had acquired at the beginning of the Protestantism.

From then until the eighteenth century, we
we no longer know anything rigorously authentic-A tick on Templar Freemasonry. Everything points to to believe that she will have taken an active part, according to the
to the extent of its strength, in the affairs of the Reformation, especially in Germany and the Netherlands, and still in the religious wars of England and from Scotland. A writer of great authority in this matter' assures that Cromwell, confused within the army ranks and long unknown,
but a high-ranking initiate into Masonic mysteries,
used it to organize his vast conspiracy
and come to power.

The eighteenth century opens up for the major developments and successes.

1. Count Lecoulteux. Sects and Secret Societies,
p. 105.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 297

I. Eighteenth century.

Horror and desolation, such would have been the impression produced in the soul of the faithful to whom God, to beginnings of this century, would have revealed the future and my- the formidable struggle that was about to begin against the Catholic Church.

Four kinds of enemies fought against she openly declared: Protestantism, the gal- Likanism, Jansenism, and philosophism. The The oldest, Protestantism, was in its pe- period of decline and death; dangerous enemy reux, less by its action than by the elements numerous and easy that its decomposition held all ready for new combinations of the er- , The fear and the crime. Gallicanism and Jansenism were at their strongest. Philosophism was born in England. The last to arrive, he was due to strike the most terrible blows against the Church and the Religion.

Even more formidable were the ca- enemies
The times were approaching for rapid progress and major developments for Freemasonry nerie. The two main centers of this movement-

225 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Masonic principles will be present during this century.
France and Germany.

What had become of the lodges in Paris and Lyon?
from Frankfurt and other cities whose existence is noted in the sixteenth century by the charter of

The development of French Freemasonry had to be quite restricted under religious rule and energetic Louis XIV. Under the Regency and pen- During the reign of Louis XV, everything, on the contrary, went favor it.

Writers who have dealt with Freemasonry
nerie unanimously acknowledge the existence of Masonic lodges in England and Scotland from the early years of the eighteenth century.

The official historian of Freemasonry, Brother Cla-vel, informs us that lodges were founded in France by the English in Dunkirk, as early as 1721, in Paris in 1725, in Bordeaux in 1732, in Valenciennes in 1733. It was only in 1735 that it was established at Paris, the first central lodge, which took the name of Grand English Lodge of France. The diploma of authorization was granted to him by the Grand Lodge of An-England a few years later. The two pre-
The first grand masters were two Englishmen, Lord Dervent-Waters and Lord of Harnouster, to whom

– Gh. e D, |

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 299

They were succeeded by the Duke of Antin in 1738, and the Count of Clermont, prince of the blood, in 1743. The con-currents of the latter were the Prince of Conti
and Marshal de Saxe.

In Germany, numerous lodges were founded dated and always by Englishmen. One was studiedblie in 1716 in Cologne, according to the Freemason Robison, and another in Hamburg, according to the F.:. Prestan, in 1733. In this latter city,
In 1740, the Grand Lodge of England founded the Absalon lodge itself, which brings together all the others.

In the year 1737, this grand English lodge had appointed Prince Henry William, Mare-hereditary chal of Thuringia, to the dignity of grand provincial master for Upper Saxony, and the first lodges that were established under his auspieces had their headquarters in Altenburg and Nuremberg. |

The following year, 1738, Freemasonry allied itself with the British monarchy and made an acquisition of the highest importance rebuke. Still a royal prince, Frederick, known as the Great, was received in Brunswick. Under his reign, began in 1740, the progress of Templar Freemasonry knew no bounds. "All these lodges," said Lecoulteux, they were called Za Stricte Obser-advancement and the successors and the res- Templar bullfighters. All demanded initiates blind obedience, and for a moment their power was immense in Germany and prepared the "Beware of the fanatics!"

230 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Masonry was established in Spain around the same period. It was in 1726, says F.-. Clavel, that a lodge dependent on the Grand Lodge of England. In 1727, another one formed in Madrid, also falling under the same jurisdiction. But, in 1779, the Madrid lodge separated of this obedience, constituted itself as grand lodge and founded workshops in Cadiz, in Barcelona and in other cities.

They were delegates from Parisian lodges. who introduced Freemasonry into Portugal, by founding several lodges there as early as 1727. The Grand Lodge of England, from 1735, founded directly herself several lodges in Lisbon and in the provinces.

Italy did not escape this propaganda. several lodges of freemen existed in Rome in 1742 Freemasons. A lodge was founded there around 1768 or 1769. The Sincere Friends, which was affiliated with other lodges

1 Sects and Secret Societies, pp. 115, 117, 118.

has

L

- ey, m

wer

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 231

from Paris, from Lyon, from Liège, from Warsaw, from | Malta, Milan and Naples.

In the Kingdom of Naples, the Masonic lodges—niques formed a grand national lodge in 1756
national in correspondence with Germany.

The Masonic Templar society pushed its action as far as Russia. There were lodges of F.:. M.:. in Moscow and Saint Petersburg.

America itself received the initiation.

No obstacle could stop this development.
frighteningly calm, and quite the opposite seemed conjured up to maintain and increase it.

In Germany, Protestantism provided to Masonic associations their contingent
more influential and the most numerous.

In France, the nobility, bewildered by novelties
and of pleasures, he would throw himself blindly into the boxes,
without foreseeing that she was preparing her own downfall.
with your own hands.

Gallicanism paralyzed the results that... should have produced the condemnations of the sovereigns
The pontiffs and the decrees of the princes. A great number of Gallican magistrates in the parliaments
had entered the lodges, and their collusion

1 Clavel, Hist. pittor., p. 108, 118, 127, 128, 129, 216, etc.

232 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"Schools where proselytizers were made for the maxims"
with Freemasonry rendered the golds illusory royal donations against her.

secret society in Bourg-Fontaine since 1644, accordingly he gave his eager support to Freemasonry, introduced it to Austria and, with his help, worked-milk to destroy the faith in this Catholic country f. The philosophers, without exception, became the the most fervent and accomplished Freemasons, all Masonic authors tell us and documents from that period. Helvétius, Voltaire, J.-J. Rousseau, Diderot, d'Alembert, Condorcet, Laharpe, Franklin, Lacépède, Cabanis, Dupuy, Lamettrie, etc., etc., were in the first rank in the various Masonic lodges?

"We must not believe that this system" (the Freemasonry), said Robison, "has succeeded in-bite to this dangerous state; but it is certainly-" "that before 1743, 17 had become universal, and "that the Freemason lodges were

1 See Secret Societies and Society, by Father Des-fields, vol. III, p. 18, note and page 22 note, and p. 40. – And the Jew, by Gougenot du Mousseaux, p. 374 et seq.

See Henrion, Hist. ecclés., vol. X, pp. 274 and 275. – Ragon, Course, p. 58. – Bazot, Historical Table, p. 10. – Clavel, Hist. pittor., p. 168–172. Secret Societies, etc., passim.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 233

"The strangest and most criminal. The
"The lodges were found to be populated by lawyers at the para lement, of abbots without benefices and of so-di-
"sant philosophers who discussed everything there"
"Matters of religion and politics."
Freemasonry therefore found itself having acquis, from the middle of the eighteenth century, a considerable secret influence. She wanted to try its forces outside. The first blows were directed against the Society of Jesus.

Aided by the complicity of the Jansenists and the Gallicans, the Freemasons succeeded in raising almost all European governments against the Jesuits. They had them expelled from... everything. Finally, urged on by the conspirators, the princes Europeans exerted so much pressure, through threats of schism, on the determinations of the royal court maine that Clement XIV found himself obliged, to ev-suppression of the Society of Jesus*.

1 Robison, Evidence of Conspiracy, etc., pp. 49-50.

2 See Secret Societies and Society, by Father Deschamps, Vol. III, pp. 40-78.

– At the beginning of Satan's unleashing (sixteenth century), God raised up the Jesuit order to establish in the defense of the City of Good and its Church, as a kind of...

advanced labor. That is why these religious people always suffer and everywhere the first assaults of his enemies.

234 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

'This was the first triumph and the first victory—
The legacy of Templar Freemasonry. Many others were to follow. Before long, the kings and the nobles,
His inept and blind accomplices were going to pay
dear their cowardice, their violence and their betrayals sounds towards the Church.

It would have been little for Freemasonry in Multiplier its followers and lodges and to already count successes. The important thing was to connect all these forces, isolated until then, by a center of direction and action. In this regard, the year 1772 became a memorable date in the history of the Masonic sect. It raised to the rank of Grand Master for France the Duke of Chartres, so sadly famous since during the Revolution under the name of Philippe-Égalité. The new grand master had nothing more at heart than establishing unity in French Freemasonry. He abolished the irremovable—the authority of the venerable masters, heads of each lodge, and the council established a central and regular direction under the Grand Orient name. "There," said Brother Louis.

White, "was the central point of the correspondence
"General assembly of the lodges. There they met and reconsidered"
"the deputies from the cities that the movement is hiding"
"embraced; from there came the instructions which
"a special number or an enigmatic language"

ee) –

=e

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 235

"did not allow enemy eyes to pe-
"To make sense of it!" "It was, in a way,
"said Father Deschamps after Barruel, the parliament
"Masonic, having its four chambers, of which
"The meeting formed the grand lodge of the council,
"where everything related to the interests of
"The order was decided as a last resort."
Then, it would appear, they were included in this Masonic movement of an infernal activity all the scattered remains in Europe of the so-Manichean and Albigensian societies of the Middle Ages.
Similarly, no doubt, in Germany...
merged with Freemasonry, the occult society of the Rosicrucian brothers, founded in the fourteenth century
thirtieth century by a German named Rosen-Creutz. This character, after having indulged in the magic, after traveling to the Orient, where he inbuilt within the Cabal, upon returning to Europe, to-would have attempted to establish a secret association under the
the name of the Rosicrucians. It was a sect of illucabalistic miners who claimed to be in contact with the most powerful demons and spirits and to be obeyed. They openly proclaimed that the
The pope was the Antichrist and one day they overthrew him.

t History of the French Revolution, vol. II, p. 75 et seq.
2 Secret Societies and Society, vol. II, p. 266.

236 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

would have his triple crown. Some writers have claimed, without providing strong evidence of their
the feeling that this sect had never existed, and that all that was believed and said about it had no foundation that in a satirical pamphlet by An-dreæ, a Lutheran pastor and German writer of the Seventeenth century. Which is unlikely.
The Rosicrucian brothers left traces of their existence in the high rank of Freemasonry

But in the second half of the century emerged—

new information is available in France and Germany

secret societies which, through their merger with the Freemasonry brought him new developments and elements of a power irresistible.

A certain Martinez Paschalis, a Portuguese Jew established in 1754 a cabalistic society of elect whom he called "cozens" (in Hebrew, priests). He preached his system in Paris, in Marseille, in Toulouse, to Bordeaux. A number of of followers. It was in this last city that he initiated Saint-Martin into his theurgic mysteries, who was his principal disciple, whose renown eclipsed that of the master and who gave his name to the sect.

cee EE

— q

bat ne

~~

v

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 237

Several Templar Masonic lodges adopted— suppress the doctrines and rites of this kind of Kabbalistic illuminism. But the center and the The Lodge of the Knights was the leading force of Martinism. benefactors in Lyon. "He trained himself," said Robison, in several French cities, lodges which "They joined it. Those of Paris, Strasbourg, Lille "and Toulouse added to this title that of phila—"Lethes. They then took the name of Reunited Friends—"

. "extended his correspondence to Germany and

"in all other foreign countries, and there are—"
"saw regulations and systems according to
"which all their lodges directed their operations"
"rations." In 1773, the book Des erreurs was published.
and of the truth, etc., by an unknown philosopher.
Saint-Martin was the author. In it, he explains his doctrine. This nebulous work caused much... noise and increased the number of followers of the martyr Lism.

Around this same time, a famous adventurer in the rest of the eighteenth century. He was the famous Count of Cagliostro, whose His real name was Balsamo Joseph. He had
He visited Greece, Egypt, Arabia, and Persia.

1 Work already cited, p. 53 et seq. P. Deschamps, t. I^o", p. 451,

238 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

there is every reason to believe that he was initiated into the mys-theurgic traditions of the East, because, following During these travels, he established himself as the founder of a new... old cabalistic-magical sect. Its sign-Cagliostro mixed elements of magic and cabal alchemy, medicine, magnetism and fantasmagoria. Its success was immense in France and in the rest of Europe. The craze became general and indescribable. "People flocked towards him,
"mingled with common people and simple ou-
"clerics, princes, scholars, nobles of the robe and no-

"wounds of the sword... His disciples called him only |

"beloved father, august master, and they placed at his disposal
"To obey with fervent eagerness. One
"wanted to have his portrait on medallions,"
"on fans, and, carved in marble, cast in "Bronze, his bust was placed in palaces with"
"This inscription: the divine Cagliostro!"

The Tinists quickly fraternized with the lodges founded by Cagliostro, under the name of Maconne-Egyptian or Misraïm rite.

Cagliostro began to travel throughout Europe. He visited Germany, southern Italy, Spain and England. From there he went to Venice, crossed

1 History of the Revolution, L. Blanc, t. II, ch. im.

/

nn i,
- 0 j =

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 239

Germany again to go to Russia, from where he came to Strasbourg on September 9, 1780, preceded by an extraordinary reputation. From Alsace He went down to Lyon, where he was received with great honors, and from there to Bordeaux. Everywhere he founded lodges of his rite, or Masonic lodges affiliated with them. Finally, he reappeared in Paris for the second time. He was welcomed with boundless enthusiasm. But, compromised in the Necklace affair, He was imprisoned in the Bastille, from where he was released to pass in England. He founded a lodge of the rite in London Egyptian. Pursued by his creditors, he re-fled to Basel, where he established the mother lodge of the Masonic Swiss nonsense. From Basel he went to found new lodges in Turin, Rovereto, Trento, and Verona, and finally came to Rome again, where he created a final lodge in union with those of France and England. But his correspondence

- with the French revolutionaries having been seized by the papal government, he was translated from before Roman justice. Condemned to death in 1791, he saw his sentence commuted by Pius VI to a life imprisonment, and died two years later. His confessions before the Inquisition, although mixed with

The lies were quite complete. He declared:

"That Egyptian Freemasonry is divided in

240 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"several sects, but there are two more

"particularly valued compared to others; that

"The first is that of the followers; that of the initiates"

"had sworn to destroy religion"

"a Catholic and all the sovereigns; that they had

"This oath was written and signed in their blood; that

"This sect had decided to carry its pre-

"First blows to France; that after the fall of "This monarchy, it was supposed to strike Italy and Rome in particular... etc.!

During this same period, things were born and developed...

paid in Germany with extreme speed a another sect, which was going to have an influence on Freemasonry

Templar influence even more powerful and more decisive.

In 1776, Adam Weishaupt, professor of law

in Ingolstadt, Bavaria, founded the sect of the Z//w-mined. This sectarian considered all religions to be a

Lies. He especially hated the Christian religion.

yours and above all the Catholic faith. Whatever one

if he cannot provide conclusive proof, he

It seems quite plausible that he was initiated into Freemasonry.

Templar nymph.

Here is how he defines the purpose of his so-

HAS

1 Bernard Picard, Religious Ceremonies and Customs of all peoples, vol. IX, p. 392.

a - -! eh

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 241

"To bring together, with a view to a high interest and by a lasting link, educated men from all backgrounds parts of the globe, of all classes and of all religions, despite the diversity of their opinions and their passions; to make them love this interest and this link, to the point that, together or apart, they act all as a single individual; that in de- Despite their different social positions, they treat each other as equals and that they do, spontaneously and out of conviction, what one could not be carried out under any circumstances public since the world and men

exist. » – |

"The sect's statutes required its members an absolute abandonment, a complete sacrifice- using all his strength, all his faculties, of his freedom, his honor, his property, his life, of his church, of his homeland; they were asking at the same time as an inviolable silence was promised and the strictest and most blind obedience to all-powerful superiors of the order having the right of life and death over all partners, and in ou- to have the right to compel them, in the interest of order, to the most immoral and unjust actions, In some cases, they even imposed a confession-

| 14

249 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

oral sion and the obligation to discover even the secrets of others and the affairs of their own family thousand. A crucial obligation was also to pro- to find new partners, to recruit cons- especially the staff, taken from all ranks, in all classes, all states, that the conditions, even among the workers, etc... f. »

To better succeed in this last point, Weis- Haupt had established insinuating or enlisting brothers theirs, to whom he gives instructions and advice of diabolical skill.

This secret society began with three members. But she quickly gained a multitude of followers in Germany, mainly in the south in Bavaria, and even in Sweden and in Spain. The Hanoverian Baron Knigge, a Freemason...

He recruited numerous new members to Illuminism. He undertook to... to merge into Freemasonry, and to make of This was the instrument of the enlightened. He succeeded in in effect to introduce the doctrines and practices of Illuminism in a considerable number of German lodges. From then on, a completely new element The Jewish element entered into Templar Freemasonry.

¹See Feller's dictionary, supplement, under the word Weishaupt, and Goschler's encyclopedic dictionary, under the word Illuminated.

has

Li + 4

e

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 243

Until Weishaupt, not a single Jew had crossed the threshold of the Templar lodges in the States of Germany. Article 7 of the Charter of Cologne had been perfectly observed. The masons Templars only admitted Christians among their ranks. Well. But the Enlightenment system posed in principle, a completely opposite practice: he gave initiation into the lives of men of all religions indistinctly. The Masonic lodges which are affiliated affiliated with Illuminism were therefore opened by the fact to the already enlightened Jews, and had to open themselves open now in accordance with the doctrine of action accepted to any Jew who wished to present himself at the initiative Templar Masonic association.

In law, the Templar lodges, by receiving the Jews, did not go against the Charter of Cologne, because it explicitly stated: It seemed to us necessary and prudent not to receive until now in our order that those who... profess the re-Christian religion. Prudence, still necessary In the sixteenth century, it no longer had any reason to exist.

The Enlightenment, article 6 of their charter, the Freemasons-
The Templars therefore did not stray from his mind.
However, there were opponents and protesters.
tions. Nevertheless, in fact, a number of Jews

244 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

were admitted into most German lodges.
We have this as an indication, if not as proof-two testimonies. The first is that of the Duke of Brunswick, Grand Master of Freemasonry, in his major circular of 1794, by which he denounces Illuminism as having perverted the Freemasonry which he claims to dissolve for this reason.
He complains that they were recruited to introduce them in the lodges, "companions of all ranks and of omnipotence. » I] concludes by affirming, se-according to Article 6 of the Charter of Cologne, that the division
The unity of Christianity was the first basis of the
The doctrine of Freemasonry and its purpose. All This obviously only applies to the intro-
the induction of Jews into lodges by Illuminism, '
since in Germany there was then no made up of members of different religions than Jews, who have always been very numerous in Germany, and Christians, Protestant or Catholic. The se-
The second testimony is that of the Count of Haugwitz: "Freemasonry," he said, in his Memoir
"at the Congress of Verona, it was then (after 1777)
"divided into two parties in its secret work."
"The first one placed the explanation in these emblems-

mee

n

mn in «+ o

"tion of the philosopher's stone; deism and |

"Even atheism was the religion of these sects-

"res... It was not the same for the other one"
"party of which Prince F. of Brunswick was the "apparent leader. An open struggle between them, the "Two parties joined hands to achieve
"To world domination... etc..." This struggle was the one she later complained about so bitterly this same Duke of Brunswick, and she was wearing, said the
P. Deschamps, on accessories of the Ritual;
one retained certain forms of Protestant worship
"as long as the other rejected, by opening her breast
"To the Jews themselves." This was the consequence of Illuminism, and this was for Freemasonry generally the first origin of a unit which His strength was multiplied a hundredfold.

Now let us mentally turn towards the year 1780, and let's take a look at the state of Freemasonry at that time. We see that the societies of Freemasons and Templars, more or less modified, but certainly fortified by the introduction of new rites and systems,
have spread across the entire surface of the world
known. They invaded all of northern Europe;
They are proliferating in all forms in England.
land, in Germany, France and Switzerland; they have crept silently into Italy and Spain
gne; they penetrated into Poland and Russia

| 14.

– 946 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

and as far as the borders of Asia; in America
In the North, Freemasonry had become a kind of of religion. Masonic statistics por-the number of initiates was three million and in accounted for one million for France alone.

But divided and subdivided ad infinitum, like the Protestant sects and, as in the past, the Gnostics and Manicheans, subjected to divergent and conflicting actions among themselves multiple rivalries, the Templar societies did not-what they had in common, fundamentally, was hatred of the Catholic religion and the impatience of all-legitimate authority; for the sake of form, that the three graapprentice, journeyman and master or of the chosen one, which they had received from the Manicheans and principle, good and bad, of which all the temp-Masonic symbols offered from that time the symbol bole in both columns Boozet Jakin (F.-. Cla-vel).

Despite the proliferation of its lodges, the Franc-Masonry had only a limited scope and isolated. She was gradually erasing the spirit of faith and subordination of the hearts of peoples, but without producing a general and decisive effect.

The idea was launched of a convent or uni-

SE ELE, te of

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, Q47

the Masonic order, in which one is formed-
, would form a single body from all these scattered members.
Where did this idea come from? It is said to have originated from... their excessive ambition, their hatred more ardent of those against the established order of things bli, etc., etc. But these are only sources secondary, it seems to us. Ordinarily, and the history-
The story itself is proof of this, all the ambitious and vindictive-Hairs, even those of the highest rank, have always been limited
the object of their ambition and their revenge
First, in the country they lived in. At that time, the only country in Europe where the ambitious and the ar-teeth could hope to give themselves a career, it was France. But for France, unity of leadership
'in every respect existed in Freemasonry French, and she had enough strength there to
to be in the hands of ambition or hatred
a weapon capable of achieving all their goals.
Several hundred lodges were operating regularly legally; and all, as well as a great many others in foreign countries, Savoy, Switzerland, Brabant, Germany, Poland, Russia and America-
that, reported to and received orders from the Great the East of Paris, of which Philippe d'Orléans was the grand master.
In our opinion, the originators of this idea of u-

The universal union was the Jews. She would have left, either Martinist lodges of France, or lo- . German groups affiliated with Bavarian Tluminism. More than anyone else, the Jews, who have been formed since the hundreds of years in a universal secret society, must have had this idea; and better than anyone they had to know the advantages and be ca- | capable of putting it into practice, since, in de- Apart from divine intervention, this was the main human resources that had supported them and their had allowed the peoples to cross over without disappearing and centuries.

In any case, the idea was accepted and propagated managed primarily by the Martinist lodges of France, whose founder was a Jew. It was realized in 1782 at the Willemsbad convent!

No Masonic meeting had equaled and | this convention was not equaled, either by the number of deputies | tés, either for the variety and quantity of sects: that they represented.

The agents of the secret societies were accustomed to Russians from all parts of Europe, from the depths of America and the far reaches of Asia. The union general-

1. Locality located near Hanau, capital of the province.

This name, and a short distance from Frankfurt am Main. Station of thermal waters.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 249

ral of all the rites or systems of Freemasonry Stupidity was decided and established there, firstly, based on this fundamental principle:

The three grades of apprentice, journeyman and master would be the absolute and universal basis Freemasonry's saddle. All the rites, all the systems, all the secret societies, founded or to found, in order to truly belong to France Freemasonry should rely on these three constituent degrees. Every initiate of these three degrees would be recognized as legitimate brother in all the lodges, of whatever class he made. Besides, and in whatever system or rite he might have been initiated into.

this base, or to retain therein, the ranks which are would have been judged the most suitable to achieve the goal supreme and to complete each system.

It was settled secondly that in France
* Ordinary masonry, which would consist of these only three grades, it would never be done
no mention of high ranks or unknown leaders;
that any direct dispatch to Masonic superiors—that would be forbidden to the brothers of Freemasonry ordinary, and that consequently they could not to address only their immediate superiors, the venerable—ble and the officers of their lodges.

250 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Thirdly, that each lodge would have the choice of its leaders, that is to say, of its venerable and of its officers and also of its ruling lodge, that is to say, the main lodge, or grand lodge, to which she would submit and on which she depends would immediately t.

At this meeting, the Freemason deputies took knowledge of Bavarian Illuminism to which they They all initiated it with enthusiasm. There was conceived the idea of bringing all the lodges into Templar doctrines, rites and practices of the Enlightenment. This idea was partially realized. from that moment on, for most of the lodges of Alle-Magne, Austria, Italy, and the Netherlands. She was adopted in principle at a second convention which was held in Paris in 1785; but it was not complicated in the lodges of the Grand Orient of France that after a trip and a secret mission of Mirabeau in Berlin in 1786. Mauvillon, professor at the Carolin school in this city, and a student of Knigge initiated the pardoned man and the envoy of the unfortunate man Louis XVI and the most secret mysteries of the Enlightenment nism. The year after 1787, three commissioners

1 See Original Writings on Illuminism, vol. II, report of Philon (Baron Knigge), January 1783.

Enlightened ones came to Paris and carried out the fusion

, completed in this way:

HAS

b

It was decided to retain the old form of the lodges. Templars, and will unite them with Illuminism, without their to make known the very name of the sect which brought its mysteries.

From this time onwards, Freemasonry was established across the entire surface of the globe in a complete unity of intention and action. His power had become formidable. It was a immense army. It was about to march on the assault of religion, of the monarchy, of society: It tended towards universal revolution.

So we could see, in the boxes of Paris and of France, all the men who, a few years later, played a more or less significant role glant in the French Revolution:

Philippe d'Orléans, Talleyrand-Périgord, the

* Prince de Broglie, Mirabeau, Sieyès, Brissot, Du-

puy, Robespierre, Marat, Danton, Péthion, Bar-Nave, Fouquier-Tinville, Saint-Just, Hébert, Camille Desmoulins, Collot-d'Herbois, Couthon,

Carrier, Napoleon Bonaparte, Lafayette, Grégoire, Billaud-Varenne, Fouché, Santerre, etc., etc... !, |

For all these names, see Louis Blanc, Hist. de la Révol.,

ae

252 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Those were the leaders. But for the execution of their dreadful plans required "strong arms— They were devoted, driven by a blind will. They were found in the working class. They were admitted to the initiation and the small mysteries. It was a beginning of equality fraternal. We could count on these thousands new brothers, especially since we had gathered a crowd of people without confession and capable of everything*.

This is not the place to recount the days of the triumph of Freemasonry, which were the terrible days of the French Revolution: — What infamies, what crimes and atrocities! The historian would have to trace every kind of history here! If his Plume doesn't refuse it, said an expert.

t. II, ch. 111, et passim; Alexandre Dumas, Mémoires de Gari-Baldi, the series, p. 3; Barruel, Memoirs, vol. IV, ch. 11 and 11,

— — ee

and all the Freemason and Catholic authors who wrote |

on Freemasonry, and particularly Father Des-fields which summarize them: t. I°, p. 260, 267, 460, 546–48 and 563, and t. II, p. 266 and 267.

— "All the Jacobins, a large number of Cordeliers, were masons under the grand master Philippe-Égalité, say Alexandre Dumas and Louis Blanc, as well as Barruel; the clubs of The Jacobins themselves were nothing but Masonic lodges in red cap, the color of their god" (P. Deschamps, vol. 1, p– 267).

1 Abbé Blanc, Course in Ecclesiastical History, 2nd ed., vol. II,

~

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. " 253

—— M

. deep within secret societies, which he traces the multitude and enormity, but may he never lose—but from the point of view of the sect that gives birth to them; that he of follow the march; the actors may vary,
The conspiring legislators succeeded one another, all emerging—will come from the same dens, where his followers will have for—their plots. The story will have gone through Different hands, it will always be the same.
Equality and liberty will always be the principle.
cipe, the consequences will continue against kings and society, as well as against God and religion. In the revolution of this equality and from this freedom crimes become intertwined; it is today against Christ and his priesthood, and Tomorrow, it will be against the monarch and the nobility.
the day after tomorrow against the rich and the merchants,
to resume against the altar and against the throne, against the landowners and merchants.

"But all the advice, all the plans, all the Even the means of execution originate from these hideouts.
lodges, clubs or sales, where we saw the followers gather under the name of Freemasons, Bavarian or Martinist zealots, Scotsmen, of Misraïmites, Cordeliers, Jacobins, and more
late, of federates, liberals, or carbonari" (P. Deschamps, vol. I", pages 561–62).

fo

\

254 ` FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The infernal sect succeeded beyond its expectations.
rancid. |

She became mistress of all of France, which she turned everything upside down. The outfits and the work in secret and closed lodges was no longer needed: clubs opened in their place. The general meetings or conventions became the Convention composed solely of brothers and High initiates. The doctrines, the rites, the symbols Masonic workshops came to light and were put into practice. But the Freemasons cons, less men than wild beasts, reveal themselves. They soon grew tired of each other. Weariness and the Disgust came to the survivors who, in the interest even from the sect, thought it wise to let themselves be tamed to be disciplined by one of them, the general Buonaparte, Italian by birth. Moreover, the great The work was accomplished in France, the throne and the altar had disappeared; it was necessary to make it triumph in the the rest of Europe the principles of Freemasonry-nerie. The martial genius of F.*. Buonaparte would fulfill this mission. Under the dictatorship of Bonaparte, then under the empire of Napoleon I", the F.:.M.-. He returned to his lodges and resumed his secret work.

1 On this Masonic role and mission of Napoleon Bonaparte, voy. le R, P. Deschamps, ouvrage cit, t. II, p. 322 to 340.

|

- =

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 235

However, according to the FF .:. Bazot, Clavel and Jean Witt, lawyer Eckert, and Alexandre Dubut, this era, which begins with the tenth-ninth century, was the most brilliant of France-Freemasonry. The Emperor had taken it under his control. protection. All the greatest figures of the government officials were part of it. Military lodges regiments were formed, and there were few regiments to which a masonry workshop was not attached. That. It was a way to spread Freemasonry in invaded or conquered countries. The Floris- sect is also known in the rest of Europe.

It is primarily during this period,

that Freemasonry endeavored to do or—
She forgets her criminal works of the Revolution.
took on the task of affecting the appearance of a society devoted solely to charity and philosophy
Isophy, with its grand speeches and elegant suppers.
She readily agreed to pass before the eyes of greater numbers for a harmless association—
sive, made even more ridiculous by its strange ceremonies that useful to men, outside the circle of its members. The rule was strictly observed.
from the Wilhelmsbad convent: it was by no means question of neither high ranks nor unidentified superiors

256 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

naked. Since the sixteenth century the sect had no
He lost his sense of skillful hypocrisy. As long as In his eyes, the Emperor of the French was only the executor of her designs in Europe, she supported and promoted his policy of his in-all-powerful influence. Outwardly, it pa-he would do nothing but drink from his honor and to sing his praises. But as soon as he
It was shown to him that Napoleon was looking for... all the interests of his ambition and his dynasty-tie, from one end of Europe to the other the sect a-Napoleon
fell.

God laughs at his enemies and their schemes.

Freemasonry had believed it could destroy the Church and the Catholic religion in France: she wanted to make them disappear from the entire universe. A frank-Freemason, high initiate, in agreement with his brothers, re-established both of them in the French empire which he founded, with the firm intention of enslaving them,
to distort them and use them for domination

1 See. P. Deschamps, t. II, p. 338, 39, 40, 41. — “The order (Masonic), said Eckert, considered Emperor Napoleon I”
as an instrument intended to overthrow all nationalities European: after this gigantic excavation, he hoped to achieve more easily his plan for a universal republic” (The Freemasonry in itself, p. 322),

The universal vision dreamed of by the sect. The sectarian-
The crowned one passes away, and he leaves behind him this same:
_ Church, freed everywhere from age-old constraints,
and which, growing daily in strength and in Courage, the only opponent standing will be found facing the powerful Freemasonry and the only power-to see the world capable of resisting him and of
to back down.

Napoleon was succeeded, despite all efforts
of Freemasonry!, the legitimate prince, Louis XVIII. True to his hypocritical habits, the
The Masonic Society protests its loyalty and its obedience. She asks for his protection from the new-new government, which had the blind impreclairvoyance to grant it to him.

But at this point begins, for France-Masonry, a new phase that we will to study.

1 See. P. Deschamps, t. II, p. 344, 345.

258 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

` CONTEMPORARY PERIOD

During the eighteenth century, Freemasonry Stupidity had hidden its existence and concealed her plans as best she could; but she had conspired and fought under his own flag and at its own risk, as a sect. Nowadays
she adopted a different, less dan-
She's a good manager for herself, but more treacherous for society.

She carefully maintains herself in the role and the attitude she adopted under the Empire. The Ma-ordinary stupidity, that is to say, of the first three degrees, asserts itself as being the whole of Freemasonry-nonsense and the only true Freemasonry; it wants to be that an association of honest and esteemed men
bles that exclude politics and religion from their works; they desire only the good of humanity

to the best of their ability. The sect even managed to be recognized as a public utility company republic. It was, admittedly, under the government of the Freemason and Carbonaro Napoleon III.

Such is the appearance, such is the mask.

ne lle +

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 259

In reality, Freemasonry is still the perverse and formidable society of the eighteenth century century, nurturing and pursuing the same projects in its back rooms and its high ranks. Hidden and safe behind the Masonry and the dine and ridicule of the three symbolic grades, the Masons from the back lodges form, under other names and with different initiations and even without initiation, new societies more or less secretive, which are the active instruments of their plans. If they succeed, these high-ranking officials The Freemasons reap the benefits of the victory. If their members are discovered and fall under the wrath of governments, the Freemason-Nerie declares that she has nothing to do with such companies and disavows these scoundrels. And safe Behind her were the senior initiates and the chiefs Masonic high-degree ceremonies will resume. in one form or another, their actions underground until they reach the full success. Freemasonry is like a man-hazel tree with a vigorous trunk that constantly extends on society and its poisonous branches. If one is broken, others grow in its place. To destroy evil, the axe would have to strike and cut the tree down at the root.

260 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

In the nineteenth century, Freemasonry superior and occult has successively organized two kinds of secret or patent associations. Some of them deal specifically with the issues political and social issues, the others, moral and of religion. We cannot study them main ones and especially to prove their origin

Masonic. | |

Among the earliest was Carbonarism.
the International and Fenianism, and among the secondes, the Universal Alliance, Solidarity and the League of Education. |

1° Carbonarism. It is undeniable that the Car-
Bonarism is a branch of Freemasonry.
Nonsense. The most authoritative testimonies and the More formal sources confirm it; its history demonstrates it.

The sovereign Pontiffs, who have always over-closely monitored the actions and developments Secret societies claim that not all are that one and the same company, and that, in particular-To link, Freemasons and Carbonari are one and the same. I have quoted above their words.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 261

The Swede Witt, whose self-

: rarity in these matters, carbonaro of the highest grade,

mason of all rites and the most eminent degrees
vés, Inspector General of Masonry and of Carbonarism, explicitly states: "The Carbonari
"They derive their true origin from Freemasonry!"

This statement is joined by that of Mr. de Saint-Edme: "Macon and Carbonaro, I was able to study-
"To examine the relationships that exist between these two societies"
"companies, and I found the same statutes there, the "same uses, especially in the last grade of
"Carbonara?"

Moreover, in the current Masonic liturgy,

published with the approval of senior leaders by the sacred author of Freemasonry, are included the particular rituals of the Carbonari and its

branches, |

To find the first origin of Carbonarism, or of the Carbonari, we must go back to the Empire.

This secret society originated in this month.

1 Fragments of secret memoirs, etc., p. 17.

3 Constitution and organization of carbonari, introduction.

3. F. Ragon includes under this title: Ritual of the Ma-forestry, the initiation ceremonies to the Charbonnerie, at the Fenderie, etc., and he includes an analysis of fourteen secret political associations stemming from these two former Masonic institutions.

15.

262 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

where, says Eckert, "the (Masonic) order acquired "the conviction that it was not the Emperor who "had been his supple instrument, but that the

"Freemasonry had only been a means by which..."
"Served Napoleon."

From 1807 onwards, high Freemasonry, beginning to be disillusioned with Napoleon I," she said was in Germany the occult society called Tungendbund, which, shortly afterwards, under the same direction, was transformed into the German Association order. The political goal of this society was, with opposition to the Emperor of the French, the formation of the unity of Germany.

Around the same time, in France, the upper masons were organizing another secret society at republican aspirations. Besançon was the place where they took place.

. habits of Freemasonry, the conspirators hide-operate under the name and practices ex-interiors of a very old workers' guild which existed in this country, and bore the name of Char-good cousins?

1 Freemasonry in itself, etc., vol. II, p. 155 et seq.

2 This maneuver, which worked so well for the Templars, is passed on, in principle, to Freemasonry. Here is what we Links in the secret papers of the Italian high street:
"Given the impossibility for our brothers and friends to say

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 263

In the Middle Ages, Franche-Comté was covered of forests inhabited by a population
numerous men solely occupied with killing the trees, to split them, to saw them and to con-

Having given them the final word, it was deemed good and useful to spread the word.
light everywhere and to set in motion all that aspires to stir things up. It is for this purpose that we keep reminding you-command to affiliate with all sorts of congregations, such which, provided that mystery prevails, all kinds of people.
Italy is covered in religious brotherhoods and penitents.
of various colors. Don't be afraid to slip in a few.
of our own in the midst of these herds guided by a devostupid tion; that they carefully study the staff of these con-brothers, and they will see that little by little there is no shortage of harvests to be gathered. Under the most trivial pretext, but never political or religious, create them yourselves, or, better yet,
Have others create associations involved in commerce.
industry, music, and fine arts as subjects. Bring together in one place or another, even in the sacristies or in the chapels, your still ignorant tribes; put them under the guidance of a virtuous, well-regarded, but gullible and easy-going priest to deceive; inject the venom into chosen hearts; infiltrate it in small doses and as if by chance; then, on reflection, you
"You yourself will be amazed at your success" (Letter from the Jew Pic-Colo-Tigre, January 18, 1822. The Roman Church, etc., vol. II,
p. 104). p

Freemasonry has always put this rule into practice.
of hypocrisy. We know what happened recently in Brésil. We read in L'Univers of August 23, 1878: "The awakening of "Freemasonry in Brazil dates back to 1872. It was par-
"coming under the guise of religion to infiltrate
"seminars, chapters, convents and religious confraternities,

"a favorable tooth for throwing off his mask and attacking the public"
"lying what she had always fought against in mystery" (Read the articles entitled: Bishop d'Olanda and Freemasonry)
s nerie in Brazil, same newspaper, same year, See also Uni-(around November 10 and December 31, 1879.)

_ BA FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

To turn to charcoal. Afflicted by religious ignorance and the rudeness of all these workers that their daily tasks completely isolated them from ordinary society, a few holy priests, of in concert with pious laypeople, undertook to to remedy this situation. They had the pen- the idea of uniting these men with each other through other bonds that those of their work and to give them the ins- religious and moral instruction, which they lacked. Under the influence of this Christian idea was established the guild of woodcutters, sawyers, woodcutters and charcoal burners. Days were set from the sale of coal, the meetings of piety and Catechesis of the confraternity. Hence these assemblies. took the name Vente. And to mark the pa- spiritual return formed by the bond of the association among all these men, strangers by nature, their wise and zealous teachers prescribed them to look at each other and treat each other as close friends rents, as cousins, and in their ha- customary to call themselves cousins. From there, their name. Later, reputable people, priests, gentlemen, wealthy bourgeois and merchants, were admitted as protectors- members, or as honorary members in this confraternity, which always remained very Catholic

nn. mn

FRENCH MASONS AND JEWS. 265

and highly esteemed until the nineteenth century t.

To better evade the watchful eye of the police -

lice, the republican masons, opponents of Em-mules of the pious Charcoal Burners' Association good cousins. They called themselves #açons charbon-_ niers, and also philadelphic masons, and among themselves They, too, called themselves good cousins. "The "General Oudet was their leader," said Witt; the most-

"A portion of the members were military personnel. These "spread the order in Piedmont and in the "Northern States of Italy," during the wars of the following years.

...€ In 1809, the first vendita (sale), which was, at the same time, the principale" (alta vendita, high sale, supreme con(seil governing body of the Carbonari). i

In 1812, this high sale was related with the Grand Orient of Paris and was solemnly admitted and recognized by the Mason-official and external nonsense. We have some for Proof of this is the assertion of the same Carbonaro writer who became aware of the following decree, issued by the Grand Orient and sent to the followers: "The as-"Society of Adelphe and Philadelphes is

'See Dictionary of Religions, under the word Good cousins.

266 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"incorporated into the order. Each brother or phila-

"Delphi will receive, immediately admitted, if it was not |

"already a Freemason, the three symbolic degrees..."
"Given under the Equator, on the 22nd of the seventh month"
"Lunar 5812." At that time, the company founded Besançon had not yet lost its second the name of the Philadelphic Masons. This was not that after 1815, according to the same author, that she "settled in the south of the peninsula, where, favored by the former government (that of Murat), she re-pandit quickly.

This is because, around that time, the association ma-çonique des charbonniers philadelphes avaic renencountered along the way by another occult association
like her, but which, originally, had come out

In order to protect the throne and religion against the invasions of the French Revolution Queen Maria Carolina, wife of Ferdinand I", King of Naples, had created, in 1799, concert with Cardinal Fabrice Ruffo, in the Calabria and Sicily, "an association that has grown" and was strengthened by the very mystery in which people delighted to surround it." It was called the Society of Carbonari (charcoal burners), or perhaps another A name we are not familiar with.

ms. D Se. y=

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 267

She rendered undeniable service to her founder. vices during the time of the invasion and the domination of the French. But as soon as the government—the overthrow of the usurper (1815), the carbonari displayed a completely different spirit from their primitive institution. "Hardly," said Crétineau-Joly, has demagoguery lost its power? "that they pass under his flag and that they "They adopt all the errors." Society does not had more members than Republicans.

This transformation can only be explained by through the relationships that were established between the association charcoal burners of French origin and the carbo-Calabrian and Sicilian Freemasons. The Freemasons philadelphes, skilled and long-practiced in this kind of success, breaking into society royalists gradually changed its spirit.

"So sudden (in appearance), so unexpected that it "was, this transformation, continuing the same to—"Theorist, should have worried statesmen... Alone, "the government of the Holy See had the press—"The science of danger."

"Through Cardinal Consalvi, the Pope "Pius VII reported it to foreign courts... and, the "January 4, 1818, Consalvi sent a letter to the Prince of "Metternich:

"Things aren't going well anywhere, and I

"I find, dear Prince, that we believe ourselves |

"far too many are exempt from the simplest pre-

"Caution. Here, I maintain the embassies every day-

"Europe's future dangers that the "Secret societies prepare for the order barely re-

"constituted, and I realize that I am being answered by "The most beautiful of all indifferences. We are i-

"I imagine that the Holy See is too quick to

"To be frightened... The elements that make up

"secret societies, especially those that serve to

"forming the core of Carbonarism, are still

"scattered, poorly melted, or in ovo; but we

"We live in a time so prone to conspiracies"

"and so rebellious to the sense of duty, that the circum-

"The most vulgar constancy can very easily make

"a formidable aggregation of these secret meetings"

"Scattered."

The Holy See was right. I] had had the intuition of the underground work that took place between

French and Italian charcoal burners.

And, indeed, in 1819, the high sale wrote to all his followers a circular letter, in the-

what are the plans of Carbonarism and the steps she prescribed to achieve them:

"Since we have been established as a body

`S

|

"action and for order to begin to reign at the bottom"

"from the most remote sale as well as within that

"the closest to the center, it is a thought

"those who aspire to universal regeneration:"
"It is the liberation of Italy, from where it must –
"to release on a specific day the liberation of
"the whole world, the fraternal republic and the har–
"the memory of humanity. This thought has not–
"core was seized by our brothers from beyond the
"The Alps... etc!"

From this it follows that in 1819, the elements which were supposed to form Carbonarism were all at made them melt together, and that "the event
more vulgar, that is to say, the chance encounter of some members, French charcoal burners and Italian Carbonari, had brought, in a few years, "a formidable aggregation of all these _ scattered secret meetings" previously, and foreigners to each other.

From this moment on, Carbonarism is firmly established and its followers from all countries
they are now only called carbonari or charcoal burners.
They have become so numerous that in rap– port of historical authorities, cited by Alexander

1 The Roman Church facing the Revolution, vol. II, pp. 67–79.

370 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

men ee cm

Dumas, in his Memoirs of Garibaldi (1st series,

(p. 2 and 5), they were counted in the kingdom of the Two– –

Sicily alone has more than eight hundred thousand followers.

Revolutionary movements were im– minors. The head of high-level sales notes this in his circular and fears them. He complains that one things are moving too fast, let the fools lead the wise astray and that they will bring about an armed intervention Austria. In 1820, the Carbonari-Masonic revolt from Spain to the American continent, where by-

All of this she suddenly brought about, creating republics.
In 1821, Austrian forces occupied
Naples. | |

So, F.-Witt tells us, the high sale thought about changing residences: "In the summer of
"In 1821, the eleven leaders gathered in Capua;
"They resolved to send two initiates abroad"
"dieds charged with reaching an agreement with the leaders of the Grand
"Firmament (Grand Orient of Paris), and to see
"if it was not appropriate to move the seat of the di-
"The Carbonari rectorate. They were inclined to believe "that it would be good to transport it to Paris. This
_ "The capital is the one with the most communications
"with the rest of Europe. Hille was inhabited by "the most influential members of society, and

SS Ge. a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 271

"possessed the most abundant financial resources"
"dants." Witt informs us of the names of two delegates and we learn that everything was prepared to melt together the Alta vendita and the.
Great Firmament; "and that, for him, he was prayed,
"at that point, to accept the position of inspector"
a general of the Carbonari of Switzerland and Germany, » whose patent had been brought from Germany by
'the delegates'. Now, the delegates arrived in Paris in the following circumstances:
"It existed in Paris at that time," said the Freemason historian.
"L. Blanc," an association, a veritable club, has emerged
"of Freemasonry, and whose childishness"
"of the Grand Orient served only to mask the ac-
"political tion. Founded by four clerks of the administration"
"Ministry of Excise, Messrs. Bazard, Flottard,
"Buche and Joubert, this club, under the name of the
"The lodge of the Friends of Truth had initially re-
"cruted in law schools, medical schools, of "pharmacy; then, on Bazard's suggestion,
he had called upon a large number of young people
"Men dedicated to learning about commerce."
"The lodge of the Friends of Truth was thus par-
* "which came to be created among Parisian youth"

2 History of Die Ans, vol. 1, p. 82 et seq.,

272 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"a powerful influence, and she was able"
"to command the agitation t."

According to the confidential documents of the high-end auction,
It is certain that the idea of its displacement and its merger with the Great Eastern France. The high-ranking Freemasons of Paris do not
They did not approve of this plan. But from their deliberations-tions with the Carbonari delegates, he produced an authree projects. It was decided that the lodge of the Friends of the C rit  would be affiliated with the Italian Carbonari.
Two of its members were sent to Naples and reported back, in that same year 1821, the statutes of Carbonarism. These statutes preserved in their initiation ceremonies some appa-necessary aspects of Christianity in the midst of a countries of faith like Italy. They were modified and appropriate to the French state of mind by the FF. Buchez, Bazard and Flottard, members of administrative committee of the lodge of the Friends of the Ve-
The Italian organization was maintained, but the high sale initially consisted only of seven members: the three Freemasons, appointed higher up, and the FF. -, Dugied, Carriol, Joubert and Limperani. The famous Lafayette, from Corcelles and A few other deputies entered shortly afterwards.

1 Louis Blanc, Histoire de dix ans, t. Ie", p. 82 et seq.

ne ee, es

|
|

P

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 273

Driven by this high sale, the Char-

in Paris and the rest of France'.

I'm not sure. Here, the story is told and... complete of Italian and French Carbonarism. I cons-Just know that this secret society is very certainly a product of Freemasonry and that it has always been run by Freemasonry

occult of the high ranks.

However skillfully organized the sales
French and Italian supremes, they did not know
The point is to avoid internal divisions...

Even before 1830, the French high auction had to
to dissolve as a result of the rivalry of its members
bres. | oo

The high Italian sales held up well longer.
time, but, around 1845 or 1846, it deteriorated, it also, amidst its internal discord, it disappeared.

And yet the work of both does not he did not perish with them, as he infallibly would have arrived, if they had only been iso- companies unrelated and without common origin. Under other namesnominations they persisted and continued ardemented their first goal. And that's because they had as their supreme center and rallying point-

1 Louis Blanc, Histoire de dix ans, t. It", p. 82 et seq.

274 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Freemasonry, whose supreme leaders
the laughing group immediately reorganized under a another form of what discord had jeopardized.
This is how the French Carbonari became successively the Family Society, then, after 1830, the Society of the Seasons, which prepared 1848*.

The Italian Carbonari, in turn, called itself

Italy, etc. Under the direction of Mazzini, and deburdened by him with mysterious initiations, she for its part, prepared the European revolution of that same year.

The papers from the high sale tell us that this famous agitator, Joseph Mazzini, was carbonaro and that, in 1836, he requested, we do not know nor how, nor by whom, the honor of being part of the supreme sale. But the chiefs did not judge him not capable of this task. They silenced his his claims, threatening him with a dagger. Pride The conspirator's offended state later became one of the causes of the discord into which the high sales. As early as 1834, Mazzini had begun to organize a portion of militant Carbonarism in this form of Young Europe, divided into Young

1 Louis Blanc, History of Ten Years. – The Freemasons, by Saint-Albin, pp. 451, 452,

TI D cum. Meee 2,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. – 275

Italy, Young France, Young Switzerland, Young Poland Young Spain, Young Germany, etc. The leader of The high-level salesman, Nubius, let him do it, holding little account of his work. About ten years-born later, the management of the Carbonari escaped Nubius, unrecognized, neglected, half poisoned, and she passed into Mazzini's hands whom high Freemasonry recognized as leader Carbonarism!

Despite all these divisions, the charcoal burners had made immense progress in Europe.

– One of the members of the Italian high-level sales force, Piccolo-Tigre, writing to Nubius, January 5th In 1846, he noted it in these terms:

"The trip I have just completed in Europe
"has been as happy and as productive as we
"We had hoped for it. – The fall of thrones does not make "No more doubt for me, having just studied in France, Switzerland, Germany and as far as Russia, the work of our societies. The assault which, within a few years, and perhaps even in

In a few months, he will be delivered to the princes of the earth will bury them under the wreckage of their armies powerless and of their defunct monarchies.

an AAAAA

1 The Roman Catholic Church in the Face of the Revolution, vol. II, p. 125 and so on.

276 ` FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

And, indeed, two years later this [event] erupted storm which, in a few months, overturned the thrones of the kings of Europe and replaced them with republics.

A noteworthy occurrence that happens again
eighteen years apart! the movements re-revolutionaries prepared before 1830 by the carbonari only succeed in France; and in that country,
They immediately became Freemasons.
find themselves at the head of affairs. The FF.°. M... Laf-Fitte, Dupont de l'Eure, Gérard, Maison, Dupin
The eldest son, F.-. Odilon Barrot, become ministers, Prefect of the Seine, and F.°. La Fayette, francmason and carbonaro all at once, is named commander general of the French National Guard French. At the top of power stands F.*. M...
Louis-Philippe, son of Philippe-Égalité, acclaimed Citizen-king, not to say Freemason-king. The F...
Lafayette, fully expecting this royalty
would be a Masonic royalty, he had called it
"The best of republics!"

Similarly, in 1848, and this time throughout Europe, the mine loaded by the Carbonari Nubius, Piccolo-Tigre, Mazzini and others, burst out,

1 See P. Deschamps, Secret Societies, vol. 31, appendix, and Louis Blanc, A Ten-Year Story.

– ad

my nn

Freemasons and Jews. 277

and everywhere the leaders of the new powers who Those who appear are Freemasons. We are con-let's try to provide evidence for France only.

Members of the provisional government:
Dupont de l'Eure, the man of 1830, Lamartine,
the Jew Crémieux, Ledru-Rollin, Louis Blanc, the historian
Torian, Marrast and Marie were all Freemasons Cons. F.*. Cavaignac was appointed governor from Algeria, F. Garnier-Pagès, mayor of Paris, the F.-. Caussidière, police prefect!

No one will admit that the Carbonari were found to have worked everywhere and at the same time | for the benefit of Freemasonry solely by the effect of chance.

The Italian charcoal burners had their moment of particular triumph in Rome, in 1849, during the triumvirate of Mazzini and his two acolytes.
This success was short-lived. The republic
Mazzin's regime was overthrown by the French republic
French, who reinstated the Pope. But in those days Italian Carbonarism was also achieving success of greater consequence than the previous one. The car-

. Bonaro Louis-Napoléon Bonaparte, pushed and supported-held by all the forces of Freemasonry

1 See Eckert and Gyr, and Father Deschamps, vol. II, p. 252 et seq.
16

978 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

and the French Carbonari, also supported became president of the Republic, soon after emperor.

More politically astute than Mazzini, he calculated his time to execute opportunely, by means the power placed in his hands, the project more expensive than Carbonarism, the unity of Italy and the abolition of the temporal power of the papacy. The great leader of the Italian Carbonari to him Orsini's bomb reminded him that he had to hurry to fulfill his oaths. Obedient to this injunction—brutal execution of the master, the emperor inaugurated the following year, 1859, the foreign policy which realized in a few years three of the principal plans—Masonic lodges: this unity of Italy,

ue dom pme

the destruction of the papal principality and the unity of —

Germany.

Then the role of Carbonarism came to an end. | to undertake the execution of his other plan, the social revolution and the universal republic, the Freemasonry needed a new institute. tool.

The cursed tree grew a new branch,
The International.

1 See Eckert and Gyr, and Father Deschamps, vol. II, p. 352 et seq.

Ear aen E Ta A oa —

— r

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 279

II. International. — Socialism.— Nihilism.

"After a few years of gestation," said the
"P. Deschamps emerged... fully armed from the flanks"

"for the terror of the world and the destruction of "Society. It was Saint-Simon, it was Fourier,"
"It was Robert Owen, with the immense lever of
"the Masonic organization, but, without secrets,
"His masks and his hypocrisy. We believed the o-
"public assembly prepared enough to be able to
"To do without it and march with doctrines deployed!"

Socialist and communist ideas? are emerging,
Indeed, directly from dogmas and morality
Masonic principles, including materialism and natura-Freemasonry forms the basis. Furthermore, Freemasonry has always had the ambition to remake society

Volume 1, p. 280.

2. Under the general heading of Socialism are included various systems that claim to remake and renew society entire. As for how to execute this project, the sys-Themes are divided into two main classes: one aims specifically-how to transform property and family through association of which the State would be the regulator: that is socialism proper.
said; the other wants to abolish all private property and put all common property, outside of official action
The state: that's communism.

280 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

its image. We will see the development later.
and the proof of these assertions.

It was also Freemasons who, first in France, in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, brought socialist ideas to light and attempted to organize communism.

The Freemason philosopher J.-J. Rousseau, in his two works, Origin of Inequality conditions among men and the social contract, overturns the foundations of society, proclaims the so-
the truth of the people and the legitimacy of suffrage universal.

After him, the Constituent Assembly, composed of majority of Freemasons and philosophers, con-consecrated these utopias and introduced them, so to speak officially in the French nation by the ce-the famous Declaration of the Rights of Man." Because,

Proudhon: "Equality of rights necessarily implies"
"How can equality of conditions be achieved?"

Five years later, the conventional and frank-Freemason Babeuf, in his newspaper the Tribune of people, openly preached communism, the

- 1 Let us add: And by his decree of confiscation of property of the clergy and the nobility,
- 2 See the famous brochure "Property is theft".

Camm.

Fr +

>

FREEMASONS AND JEW3. 281

shared happiness, as he put it. He wanted to-river by the abolition of property, the sharing lands and riches. Not content with writing, he tried to apply his theories. In concert with the Florentine Freemason Buonarotti, who was at century following one of the first organizers of the Italian Carbonarism, he founded a secret society | whose members reached the number of ten-seven thousand. The conspirators were to overthrow the Directorate and form a government that would achieve Communism in France. The plot was uncovered.
green: Buonarotti and Babeuf were seized and tra-brought before the High Court of Justice, which con-
The first was condemned to deportation and the second to The scaffold (1797).

Babeuf made the mistake of trying to practice too soon -
The Masonic principles are largely defined. The minds were not yet ready. The sect leaders they made him pay for his excessive zeal and his lack discipline.

The beginnings of the nineteenth century
saw the same ideas presented in a new way manner.

four movements that made little noise. In this book and in several others that appeared in 1822

16.

282 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

and in 1829, he claimed to achieve perfect happiness on the earth, by placing it as the pivot of the organization social satisfaction of all passions, even the most disgusting. He wanted work to become a pleasure, that all men gathered in one immense society, which he called Phalanstery, there found satisfaction for all their needs and of all material appetites. After the revolution In 1830, he managed to gather a few followers who were called Fourierists and Phalansterians.

The most famous was Victor Considérant. The essays of

The phalanstery made the sect a laughingstock.

At the same time as Fourier, a gentleman of the old French society, the Count of Saint-Simon, a great supporter of the 1789 revolution, and a Freemason like all the noble revolutionaries—of that era, succeeded, after many failures, to form, around 1823, another sect which also had the ambition to reshape society, the Property, religion, and family. There was that—of particular in the system of Saint-Simon that he made science and industry one of the main means of improving the lot of 'humanity and especially the poor classes, and that he preached the association and organization of workers. So much that the Saint-Simonians were content to de—

to develop the master's doctrines on economics socially, they achieved some success; but from that they tried to put his other theories into practice on property, inheritance, marriage, family, religion, widespread contempt, and condemnations. The justice system put an end to the sect, which had to disband. to solve in 1833. The most famous disciples of Saint-Simon were Bazard, Enfantin and Pierre Le-Redhead. Bazard was recognized for some time by the Saint-Simonians as their leader, after – the death of Saint-Simon, which occurred in 1825. France – A bricklayer and Carbonaro, Bazard had been one of the founders of the lodge of the Friends of Truth, in 1821, and one of the authors of French Carbonarism. Enfantin, who called himself "Father," was the last leader of the sect. Pierre Leroux was elected deputy in 1848, in the elections. additional members of the National Constitutional Assembly killer.

Shortly after the failed attempts of the Saint-Simonians and Fourierists, an Englishman, Robert Owen founded a communist sect around 1840 which grew rapidly. It was known as the name of New-Harmony (New Harmony). Owen had given him the following lyrics as part of his program: the following ideas and the goal: "The real Satan is religion, Marriage and property.

284 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

I was unable to find conclusive proof that Owen and Fourier belonged to the Ma- order conical. But what is beyond doubt is that Freemasonry officially accepted, on the one hand. In general, in 1840, subversive theories sives of all socialists and pushed the francs-asons to carry them out. Brother Ragon, the interpreter.

authorized and the sacred writer of Freemasonry, we
He stated it formally in these terms:

"It is to Freemasonry alone that we owe the af-
"lineage of all classes of society. ..."
Every generous reform, every social benefit comes from her, and if they survive, it's because the Freemasonry lends them its support. The past... belongs to him, and the future cannot escape him. By its immense lever of association, it is alone capable of achieving, in a general communion rale, this large and beautiful social unit, designed by the Saint-Simons, the Owens and the Fouriers.
May the Freemasons will it, and the generous
"the conceptions of these philanthropic thinkers will cease
"to be vain utopias." And he adds in a footnote:
"The social movement, moreover, has long-
"time occupied by Freemasonry in general"

AAAAAA

HAS

po

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 285

"Ral and the Grand Orient of France especially!"

The Freemasons wanted it vigorously and persistently. The failure of the Fourierists and
The Saint-Simonians did not prevent the Franks-
French masons Cabet, Louis Blanc and Proudhon
to teach the same doctrines, but under other conditions
very different forms and with new names. The words socialism and communism were born around this time (from 1835 to 1848).

Cabet professed pure communism. Louis Blanc he addressed himself mainly to the workers: he put all their woes on the account of the unjust constitution of society. He seduced them primarily through his Utopias on the organization of work. Proudhon summarized Masonic and socialist doctrine in these two blasphemous aphorisms: "Property,
"It's theft" and "God is evil."

The revolution of 1848, carried out by their brothers of Freemasonry and Carbonarism, gave hope to the socialists the realization of their ideas. Louis Blanc was a member of the provisional government. The creation of the national workshops, which was his work, placed an army under the control of active leaders of more than one hundred thousand fighters. Socialism mounted for the first time in a violent manner

1 Philosophical Course, etc., pp. 46 and 47.

286 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

slow to assault society. He was defeated. The France repelled this with horror and by force.
_ criminal and senseless undertaking (June 1848).

So, in England, the German Jew, Karl Marx, a Freemason, originally from Prussia, doc-Professor of Philosophy from the universities of Bonn and Berlin, in concert with a certain Engels, protested So much religion and perhaps also Jewish race, organized a secret society in London, having with the aim of creating practical communism and which was aimed particularly at workers of all nation. |The party called itself communist, to which he later added the epithet democra-social association. As early as 1850, the sect formed an association international association. Its organization was complete: she had communes and a fund power plant funded by contributions from various members. The program, printed in 1851, por-The title read: "Workers of all countries, unite-"Get into it!" [J] contained exactly the principles faux traits of the International's program of today.

The "international" festival organized in London, in 1861, in the Crystal Palace, in honor of five thousand French choral singers, for the most part part workers, put in contact with them the mem-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 287

The beginnings of Marx's communist society. The year following, by the Universal Exhibition which took place in that same city, they found themselves in different civilized nations. In these two circles—

Constances on exchange of ideas and views.
Frequent correspondence was subsequently established between Marx's International and the associations.
female workers from all major European centers.

In Italy, Freemasonry did not remain any more inactive only in England and France. In the year—
Born in 1863, Mazzini convened a congress in Palermo Italian workers. He presented a plan for a union there.
of all the workers' corporations in Italy, including
He had drafted the statutes, which were adopted.

Under the same influence, the same grand ideas were saying and were taking on more and more substance in the spirit of Parisian workers. In the beginning From 1864, they set forth their thoughts in two manifestos addressed successively, one to > voters of Paris, the other to all the workers of Europe. ee

Towards the end of that same year, Mazzini issued the project and made the usefulness of a meeting clear general assembly to which the delegates would be summoned workers from all corners of the globe.

288 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

On September 28, 1864, a meeting was held in London.
Saint Martin's Hall, this meeting, now historic toric, from which dates the great International act-tuel. At that moment, she was born of the Franc-Ma-stupidity which, after having prepared it for a long time,
the form of the various pre-existing elements in An-England, in France and in Italy. For these were the Carbonaro-Mason Mazzini and the Freemason of high rank, Ledru-Rollin, who presented to congress the act of alliance between the associations of workers from various parts of the world.

They requested that, by means of a pact
of union to which full and sincere adhesion, all workers' associations, all any groups of workers from all the countries were formed into an association
unique, and as if in a single, immense network.
To facilitate the operation of this company
universal, they proposed to group the associations
citations of the same region around a committee works of an all-powerful general council that would sit in London.

These proposals were unanimously accepted.

A provisional supreme council was elected which accepted the task of drafting the statutes. He was conceived

– 4 – –4

–^A aS.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 989

it was decided that a congress would take place starting in 1866 each year; that at the 1866 congress he would be appointed the regular and definitive general council, and that, in the meantime, the provisional council would govern. veraiment l'association.

From that day forward, the International Association was founded. union of workers, or more simply the International. |

From the first month of the following year, January 1865, a central committee was established in Paris which entered into correspondence with the grand council of London. We find there, among the main members, Messrs. Fribourg, Tolain and the Jew Jules Simon.

GERMAN SOCIALISM. It was towards this only then did the International invade Germany. However, Freemasonry was not there. remained idle.

As early as 1812, the famous Freemason Krause could not forget his ideas about the organization of society. He had even proposed replacing the Freemasonry and its mysteries by the institution of a universal society which he called the Alliance of humankind'. His theories then had little impact. of success. Socialist systems did not take hold.

1 F.°, Ragon, Philosophical Course, etc., p. 344.

mt

seen in Germany only after 1848, under the efforts persevering members of the Jewish Freemason Ferdinand Lassalle.

While, in England, the Jew Marx founded dait his international, another jutf was working also to organize socialism in the countries al-Lemands. This coincidence is remarkable and instructive.

Since 1848, it had been formed in Germany Magne a large number of workers' societies of very innocent looks and tendencies at the origin Lassalle applied himself with all his might and throughout his life he preached socialism these associations. His key phrase was this: "You are disinherited; you are nothing and "You must be everything." This Jew was acting ostentatiously- blement, writing numerous pamphlets and provoking meetings in all Germanic countries. In At the same time as his socialist ideas, he advocated Universal suffrage and centralization. "When "All the hungry will vote together," he said. reform will be implemented.

Mr. Bismarck protected Lassalle because he worked with no less fervor towards unification Prussian unification of Germany. This unification having been one of the most expensive projects in France aw -

--- Soul,

a oe, EE

Leipzig a central society of al- workers
Lemands, and in the same year in Solingen, ten thousand votes elected him president of the socialist league.
was killed in a duel the following year in Geneva, by a Romanian, his rival for the affections of a prostitute.

German socialism developed under the under the direction of Lassalle's successors, Becker!, the baron de Schweitzer, Bebel and Liebknecht, in conserving its autonomy until 1868. In this that year, the German association joined the Interna-
national and it sent delegates to the congress of Basel in 1869, and in 1870, united with Stuttgart, it merged entirely with the Internationale to to be nothing more than one of its branches. Since that moment-lying, and especially since the religious persecution
From the Kultuicampf, socialism is propagated in Germany with terrible zeal and does it.
Every day the most frightening progress.

The brief history we have just outlined would be more than enough on its own to prove the origin
gine and Masonic training of the International-final. We can add other facts that increase-will lie in the conviction.

1 Becker later established the International in Austria.

292 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

In all the congresses of the International which have taken place since 1866, alongside the first adherents, the Marxes, the Engels, the Tolains, etc., to Among the newcomers were the Russian Jew Outline, the famous Bakunin, another Russian, founder of Nihilism, we constantly see it represented by what-some of the leading figures of Freemasonry, such that the old mason Garibaldi, honorary grand masterraire detoutesleslogesitaliennes, les haut masons, Félix Pyat, Blanqui, Edgar Quinet, etc., etc...

And to better show where it comes from, the International wants its most prominent members
enter Freemasonry, if they do not app-
They're not leaving yet.

Thus Jules Simon, senator and minister, internationalist since 1865, registered under the

to send and be admitted into the lodge the Awakening maconical, East of Boulogne-sur-Mer, July 3 let 1870 t. M. Tolain, one of the first members from the central committee in Paris, since becoming a member of parliament, received as a Freemason by the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite in the lodge La Prévoyance, Orient from Paris, in August 1875. Questioned by the

1 Masonic World, July 1870, p. 147. Report cited by [Universe of September 7, 1872.

Á e, 4°
e- ---

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 993

Venerable Mr. Emmanuel Arago, who asked him-
He explained why he wanted to be a Freemason, he replied-essentially said: Having entered political life,
concerned about social issues and eager to arrive Quickly, I hadn't thought, I confess, of Franc-Freemasonry. I must even say, I believed it an outdated institution, and, while respecting it,
I neglected it, believing I would find some on my way more precise weapons. I recognize today that I was wrong, that Freemasonry can still make immense services, and I come to her. »

The internationalist had until then ignored and He didn't know his mother. She was introduced to him: he became eager to throw himself into her arms.

But more than these private matters, there was a public fact,
brilliant, demonstrated with the latest evidence that Freemasonry and the International do not
They are all one and the same thing: the tree and its branches.

The Commune of March 18, 1871 was uncontested
The International has been working towards its goal.
openly sided with the Commune in an act published almost immediately after his defeat, in June 1871. The Higher Council of the International-nale had it printed in London and sent to everyone
the members of the association, living in Europe and the United States, an address whose essential purpose is— it is important to explain and justify the actions of the Com— Paris municipality. This document contains about thirty signatures, including that of Karl Marx, among others which show that all nationalities are re— presented to the association's council; all— at times the German element appears to dominate.

1 Universe, August 11, 1875.

However, on April 29, 1871, fifty-five lodges and ten to eleven thousand Freemasons, both men and women, led by their dignitaries, they proceeded solemnly— how to plant their banners on the ramparts of Paris next to the red flag of the Commune. All members of the Communard government accompanied them. One of them, Citizen Char— The Beslay family said at the demonstration: "I have de— asked to come and meet you as dean of the Paris Commune and also of Freemasonry —French nonsense which I have the honor of making gone for fifty-six years.

The Freemasons swore, if the government— The Versailles court did not accept their media— tion, to declare war on him to the death and to com— to beat relentlessly in the ranks of the communists.

At the same time the Freemasons were launching in the departments an appeal to their brothers of France and the whole world. "This manifesto," says

|
|

te — +

Moan

born.

Z'Univers, was annexed to the Com- program
Paris commune, which was then dispatched and distributed to "Abundance throughout France." It read as follows:

"When Paris is the target of terrifying attacks-tables and fratricides, the Freemasons and the com-companions emerge from their sanctuaries.
mysterious tunics, held in the left hand
the olive branch, a symbol of peace, and of the Right hand, I wield the sword of reclamation... At-tense that the efforts of the Freemasons have been rejected three times by those who have the pretension to represent order, and that their long patience is exhausted, all the Freemasons and the Compa-
The thugs must take up the weapon of vengeance and shout:
Brothers, stand up! Let the traitors and hypocrites
Let them be punished! Hostilities having resumed with indescribable hatred by those who dare Bombing Paris..., Freemasons and Brothers, companions, we no longer have to take other resolutions than that of fighting and of...
Let us unfurl our sacred aegis on the right side. Let us arm ourselves We for the defense! Let's save Paris! Brothers and companions, you will not want to allow that Brute force prevails; you would not tolerate not that we would go back; and that's what would happen if you weren't with your

296 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Brothers from Paris, who are calling on you for help...
Long live the federated communes of France with
The one in Paris!

All the Parisian lodges adhered to this call.

Freemasonry tried to disavow the Commune after her defeat. But she could not to succeed in clearing herself. She is too accustomed to these hypocritical and deceitful protests, when his children failed in one of the o-virtues that she secretly inspired and fostered.

The International in its early days

sandstone and complete emancipation from the class or-
"It was just a mask. There again the

1 Universe, August 5, 1877. – Among the names of the signatory lodges-
In this document, we find that of Clement Friendship.

A certain notoriety has been acquired by this lodge. Mr. Littré, of the French Academy, was admitted there with great pomp in the year 1877. Mr. Gambetta, president of the Chamber of Deputiesputés, Mr. Jules Ferry, Minister of Public Instruction, in are part of it. One of the principal engineers of the railway of In the North, Mr. Cousin boasted and publicly congratulated himself on being dignitary of this lodge, such a fervent protector of the Commune.

– Another document, published by the newspapers, "proves,
after so many others, that Freemasonry was at heart and
"of body with the Commune." It's an invitation, sent by the Scottish Rite lodge, the Union of Peoples, to all its members Bres, on June 18, 1871, to summon them to the civil funeral of one of their brothers, Jean-Pierre Budot, who died "as a result of injuries-safe havens received at the outposts while defending communal rights
"nals."

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 297

Masonry added its particular hypo-
Crisis: the mother dressed her daughter just like herself.
young. But in the congresses that took place at
From 1866 onwards, the growing International... increasingly revealed. Its programs have become anti-religious, anti-political que and antisocial.

Today in religion, the Internationale is arriving at formal atheism: she expressed herself-
She has declared herself an atheist. She wants the abolition of all religions.
religion and all forms of worship; she wants "the substitution-tion of science to faith, of human justice to Divine justice.

In particular, it shows a deep NC
of the Catholic religion and Church, of which she seeks to bring about the complete destruction by all means at its disposal.

In politics, his ideal is a united republic.
universal and absolute freedom. All self- states rituals must be overthrown and all national-nurtures disappear.

In social economy, the International continues the abolition of all private property and of all inheritance rights. She requests the unions li- bres, divorce, "political legalization, economic-
"The social and economic dynamics of classes and individuals"

17.

298 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"two sexes, so that, in the future, enjoyment
"is equal to each person's production." She wants "for all children of both sexes, from their birth into life, equality of means of development, that is to say maintenance, education tion and instruction at all levels of science, of industry and the arts." This education and This education must be secular and free. and mandatory for everyone.

It demands qualities and Jes from its members
The following provisions: "The revolutionary does not must have nothing personal, neither personal, nor sentimental Neither ment, nor interests; everything in him belongs to the Re- Evolution. Ruthless enemy of the civilized world, It must exist only to destroy it. Everything, this whoever supports the Revolution is moral and honest; "Everything that hinders it is immoral and criminal."

Internationalists, without exception, mar-
They agree to continue and achieve the ideal social, which we have just summarized above, by all the forces at their disposal and by all the paths that the circumstances will open for them

1 This teaching is given in the Revolutionary Catechism- naire, written by Bakunin, and which Karl Marx had printed and distribute thousands of copies, Bakunin also published a brochure entitled: Passive, Absolute Obedience to revolutionary towards his leaders.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 299

trances. But a split occurred between them profound as to the way in which they will function- to function this society of their dreams, after their current.

Some, retaining the ideas of pro- socialism
As previously stated, they accept the omnipotent theory.
state authority, and want to organize the commun-
nism through its actions and under its authority.
The new society would be regulated and managed, as that of today, by a central government reader first and foremost, who would hold in his hand absolutely all of its resources and all of its ressorts. State administrators, appointed by universal suffrage would only be the delegates
fords of collective power, that is to say of the people.
Governments everywhere, in republican form,
Caine, would be united among themselves by a pact of alliance, and would support each other for
'to establish and maintain order throughout the world new social order. These internationalists are called-authoritarian, centralist, or simply social lists.

During its early years, the International
had no other doctrine, nor any other objective.
The Jew Karl Marx, a staunch supporter of this system

300 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

+

and appointed from the outset as a member of the general council
The London governor, held her back on this path by her high influence.

The others present themselves as resolute antagonists of the State and any bour- political constitution State geoise. They do not want power centralizing. They claim to organize society from below, taking as a starting point the common, that is to say, groups of workers,
the associations, whether agricultural or industrial.
Each municipality, or workers' association, would be autonomous. It would have sole ownership of all the soil, all the tools of the trade and of all local movable wealth, in kind as in capital, property which could not be used only by her and for her. That would be the tra-compulsory work. Delegates, chosen by the suffuniversal rage, would direct the administration.

would make the immense international state of labor-theirs. These internationalists are called anti-authoritarians or anarchists.

These ideas were introduced into the International-final by the Russian Bakunin.

This famous revolutionary, after having participated-tie of the League for Peace and Freedom, founded by Freemasonry, in 1866, withdrew from it in 1868 at the congress of this league in Bern, because he had been unable to get his system adopted by bourgeois Freemasons of France, of Germany and from Switzerland, who were mostly there. With a few Frenchmen and all the Russians in the league, he formed, under the name of the Democratic Alliance socialist, another society, including Geneva-then came the center, and who accepted the ex-program placed higher up. It was Bakunin's, his chief. The new association asked to join. in the International, Marx, fearing the ideas and the influence of Bakunin, which opposed it, but without success. With a few more concessions apparent as well as real, the International opened its ranks in the Alliance of Socialist Democracy (1868).

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 301

At the annual congress of the International, which in 1869 was held in Basel, Bakunin clearly expounded his theories.

He demanded the abolition of all power central, posala commune as pivot of the gov-revolutionary ment and spoke of operating "the liquidation social dation. » « I vote, » he said, « for the-"soil activity in particular, and in general of "all social wealth, in the sense of liquidity-social liquidation. By social liquidation I mean

302 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"the expropriation by law of all property owners"
"current issues through the abolition of the political state"
"and legal, which is the sanction and the only
"guarantee of current ownership and all that

"In fact, everywhere and as much as it is possible to position"
"as quickly as possible, by the
"The very force of events and things."

"When these words were spoken," he said
Mr. Oscar Havard, editor of Le Monde, Europe paid only distracted attention to it. One did not there was little doubt that Bakunin was formulating there the program of the future revolution. It was with the same indifference with which she learned that this pro-
The gram had been voted on by 53 votes against 4.
And, oddly enough, the opposition was not represented
than by the French element! The Tolain delegates, Langlois, now members of parliament, Murat and Tartaret, were indeed the only ones who spoke out against a system whose first application was to
to be tempted, alas! in our unfortunate country t.

Bakunin's views made an impression on many internationalists. His program,
"Boldly innovative" and free "from all

1 Monde, September 18, 1872.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 303

bourgeois prejudice and of all theo-
"logically," he rallied many zealous supporters to his cause.
gans. , |
Therefore, it is primarily to him that we must turn.
to go back to the initial idea of the Commune of Paris (March 1871).

Bakunin personally took part in the uprising
from Lyon. After the fight he managed to escape.

Socialism failed again in this second violent attack against society. But the theo-the ries of the Russian internationalist did not cease to gain ground. Marx tried to stop this progress. He maneuvered in such a way as to exclude of the International, its formidable antagonist, who, in fact, was expelled at the congress of the
The Hague in 1872. Karl Marx himself tells us this-even in a letter addressed to the Corsair:
"Bakunin's expulsion... was motivated by the creation within our association of a secret society, 2nd Alliance of Social Democracy

national towards goals contrary to its principles
pes $. »

Bakunin died shortly afterwards.

Neither this death, nor the measure of the congress of

1 Cited by L'Univers on September 5, 1872.

304 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The Hague, did not bring the dissidents back to Marx's ideas. At the annual congress in Ghent, in
In 1877, the split became more pronounced than never within the fold of the International. The newspaper of the sect, Ze Mot d'ordre, was forced to agree
at that time "that an agreement is not possible"
between the two very distinct groups of the party socialist, between the so-called anarchist group and the group of federalists or centralists!
But the members of this congress, like those of the
In the following years, they declared that they would march in perfect agreement to overthrow society and seize all its resources, and that they ver-would then have to agree amongst themselves on the allocation-tion of goods and the operation of the new order of things.
It should be mentioned that Karl Marx was appointed,
at this congress in Ghent, president of the grand council
and that, today, he is the head of the movement European socialist. J
Nevertheless, it is to be assumed that the pro- | assault
to |

2 x nement nn ee ss ae

"

THE

chain, prepared by the International against the so-society, will be directed in the direction and under the action of the anarchist or anti-authoritarian party.

We will therefore be dealing with the Commune and

1 Cited by L'Univers on September 18, 1877.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 305

its battalions, which are reinforced daily by their veterans brought back from exile*. They will to receive new strength and greater audacity through the introduction in France of a company Nihilism, a secret society whose members will have to be viewed by the internationalist-anarchists as doubly their brothers, since they have the same father as them.

RUSSIAN NIHILISM. In the army of societies secretive, Nihilism is the youngest body, the latest arrival. Its earliest origins date back to 1860. |

This year the students of Saint-Petersburg and Moscow organized among themselves scientific and literary meetings or circles. The example set by the capital cities was followed by the provinces, and in a short time almost all the capitals governments of Russia had their cer-student keys.

Soon under the occult influence of the Freemason-

1 Later, after terrible struggles, in which the monster of socialism will once again, we must hope, defeated and silenced, at least for a time, the Jewish ideas of The first founders of the International will regain the upper hand. Then we will prepare for a future, perhaps less distant than we think. I don't think, this appalling tyranny of an almost universal state salt, organized according to socialist principles, and governed by a dictator, emperor or president, who will be the Antichrist.

306 _ FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ee OS ee ee

rie, who likes to found associations everywhere and who is skilled at penetrating those that she has not formed, all these circles, with few exceptions, became more or less revolutionary, and Friends of the people, Friends of truth and goodness of the people, etc. Finally, as always happens, a more ardent party formed among them and the most violent one, which triggered all the others.

At that moment two men appeared who entered into intimate relationships with the students Russians and who were the true founders of the Nihilism, the Jew Herten! and Mikhail Bakunin. They pushed Masonic and social principles further. lists, even those with the most extreme consequences. The doctrine can be summarized as follows: nothing that exists of present-day civilized society is not worthy of being preserved in Russia and throughout the world, nor religion of any kind, nor any morality whatsoever, nor social organization, governments, administrations tions, cults, clergy, magistracies, armies, pro-Priesthood, family, rights, education, morals, customs, etc., etc.; everything, absolutely everything, must be ren-poured out and utterly destroyed; it must not

1 I have not yet found absolutely certain proof of Herten's Jewish nationality,

ms \ |}

~

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 307

NOTHING remains of the past; everything must start again. on earth as on the first day of the race human. This doctrine is aptly named of Nihilism, that is to say the annihilation of everything that exists.

To spread these savage teachings, Herten founded and directed the underground newspaper Ja Bell, which appeared in London, and which, despite the efforts of the imperial police, were widespread and read throughout Russia. It was A princi-pal of the sect.

Bakunin, for his part, multiplied his speeches and brochures of all kinds.' After the dead d'Herten, he wrote Za Cloche for a while.

Mikhail Bakunin, Russian gentleman and officer of artillery, was a distinguished conspirator and a revolutionary in every sense of the word. abandoned his military career to devote himself Body and soul devoted to demagoguery. He was the friend and the dis- Cliché of the socialist Freemason Proudhon. His height colossal and with its enormous bust, made Bakunin a complete type of Mongol or "Barbarian" "Russian," as he liked to call himself.

1. The Catechism of the Revolution, the Epistle to the Officers Russians, Political Murder, Religion and Revolution social, passive obedience, etc., etc.

308 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The spread of Nihilism in Russia was not enough to its all-consuming activity. We have just done the account of his entry and actions in the International. It was in 1861, in London, that he began for the first time in relation to the social-Western lists. For a reason that is not still fully explained, he opposed everything his life stubbornly devoted to the introduction of the International in Russia, which led to accusations of treason the socialist cause and belonging to the Mossi police COVID. The most likely motive is that he wants to-milk remain the sole master and director of the movement revolutionary of his country. And, in fact, his influence has always been considerable and preponderant-weight on Russian youth. Through his words and through In his writings, he was the true prophet of Nihilism. In one of his pamphlets, he outlined to nihilists, a campaign plan they follow faithfully. "Municipal democracy," he said, will reign in Russia with the Tsar first, if he accepts and favors her; against the Tsar and without him, if he the fight. » After his death, his disciple Chernichetsky brought all the youth associations that had remained there foreign until then. He organized a huge propaganda which, from 1874 onwards, spread rapidly

ms eee 1€

: quickly over most of Russia.

Since that time, following the injunction that Bakunin had made the czar, the nihilists, by the _ the most violent means, through fires and Repeated attacks force the autocrat to walk with them: they demand a constitution and a A parliamentary government for Russia. under this condition, they say, they will leave it in Rest. Alexander has not yet given in.

If during the life of its first leader the Nihilism had no unity within Russia, nor relations with the International, outside, by With its centers of operation located abroad, it has forged relationships with this company.

In 1871, Nihilism had a center and a newspaper in London, whose editor was a Mr. Serebrenicoff. This nihilist leader addressed in that same year, to the members of the Commune, a certain number of copies of his journal , in each of which was inserted a ballot, originally written in rnsse probably, and translated in very poor French. This play was entitled:

FRENCH BULLETIN OF THE SOCIALIST ORGAN

RUSSIAN AT THE Commune. OUR PROGRAMME;

then the epigraph: The fundamental principle, lega-

First and foremost.

es oe

310 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

In a series of articles, this bulletin presents the practical organization of Bakunin's system.

After his victory; that is to say, as soon as the party active socialists will have overthrown the governments and all current public authorities, he will have to pro- to claim, without any delay, national property All individual possessions and wealth. Immediately following this decree, the following will be organized agricultural and industrial activities, or partisan groups workers, who will have to make up each common. A specific period of time will be accorded to the Citizens to gain admission and inscribe in one of these sections or partial groups to bind, which he will choose at his own discretion, according to his abilities and its strengths. That is the meaning of the first three articles. The fourth one deserves to be quoted in fullment. I'm slightly modifying the style which, in the original is not French.

"All those who remain isolated and do not enter in none of the sections of the commune work - use, without serious and excusable causes, will be deprived of the right to receive anything from the national property. Z/s will not be admitted to any public establishments that will contain the supplies intended to meet the needs

-ni m ee,

Fri

oy

-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 311

-

members of the Commune. For them, rooms at eating, sleeping, communication routes, posts and telegraphs, etc., etc., everything will be forbidden and closed. They will remain completely deprived of everything means of subsistence and will only have to decide "To work or starve to death."

Thus everything that constitutes physical life and social life for each individual will be in the possession of the commune, and whoever does not appear will not hold to one of the workers' or in- sections industrials that will make it up, who won't be there introduced, registered, recognized as a member, of-

'Neither material nor moral, possible!'

And all these utopians claim to their followers that their beautiful social organization is based on Liberty! What scoundrels!... and what dupes!...

1 Suppose socialism triumphant, having organized society according to its principles, even if only for a time, with the State or

= Ja commune for center, do they not become very

The verses of chapter x111 are understandable and very applicable. of the Apocalypse?

16. "And it (the second beast) will cause all the little ones and the great and rich and poor and free men and slaves have the sign of the beast in their right hand or on their front" (according to the Greek: receive characters, signs) on, etc).

17. "And that no one may buy or sell except whoever has the sign, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

+

312 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

At present, Nihilism has two centers main areas of operation outside of Russia.

One, in Geneva, is headed by Mr. Michel Dragomanoff, former professor at the University of Kijeff, leader of Nihilism for Little Russia or Ruthenia. Its organ is a Russian newspaper. At this center is attached /a Revolutionary Social Society-list or Jacobin Society. It also has its private journal. Dragomanoff writes these two newspapers, and, in addition, a third one intended for Ruthenians. He is the one who sends agents to Galicia, in Vienna and throughout the Slavic provinces from Austria and Hungary.

The second nihilistic center interests us furthertage. It is based in Paris. Its supreme director is Mr. Pierre Lavroff, main coordinator of Bakunin and leader of Nihilism for the great Russia. J] employs thirteen secretaries and his newspaper In Russian, it appears in London under a title which means: Zn before! From this large center, the most One important of the two, another depends directly on company bearing the name 'Association for the delivery-liberation of the homeland. It is also called the Section of the action; which clearly indicates the role that she plays. Her leader is the Russian Skatcheff, and as its organ a Russian newspaper, the Tocsin.

pao

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 313

The two leaders of Nihilism, Lavroff and Drago-Manoff, work perfectly well. I] there is the difference between them lies in the means employed by both to achieve the common goal. The names of these two gentlemen are known in the French press by the letters they write about nihi- affairs
lists.

In addition to these two centers, the primary driving forces and all-powerful, Nihilism possesses an orga-Complete nization in almost all capital cities of Europe. Everywhere the orders of its leaders are executed with precision and, above all, speed truly astonishing statements. We can cite as proof
Two very remarkable facts. First, what happened believed to be the assassin of General Mesentzoff.
Three anonymous letters were received by the police
Russian. They threatened to avenge the condemned man.
Kovalsky (a nihilist) if the court's sentence
The Odessa order was carried out. "Head for head," it was stated in each of these three letters. The
The police ignored these threats. Ko-Valsky was executed on August 14, 1878, in Odessa. However,
"the day after next, two thousand kilometers from distance (500 leagues), to Saint Petersburg, in In broad daylight, in the middle of the street, the leader of the gen-weapons of the empire, struck dead by a hand remained unknown!

The second fact is more recent. Mr. Nicolas Mourawief, Advocate General at the Court of Appeal of Saint Petersburg, is sent to Paris regarding the Hartmann case. His mission, purely legal-dique, had been kept absolutely secret in Saint-Petersburg. He arrived in Paris on March 2, 1880. The

The next day, two strangers showed up at the hotel.

where Mr. Mourawief got off. They told him that they are members of the revolutionary committee Russian sitting in Paris, whom they know in detail the object of his infamous mission. They threaten him with death if he persists in filling it, and, upon withdrawing, They inform him that he will soon receive the ruling from his conviction. The Russian Attorney General has confirmed this account, adding that already a few days before his departure he had received his |

printed death sentence ©.

We must acknowledge the organization and the universal leadership of the Judaico-Masonic sect-fuck.

Nihilistic propaganda no longer stops at 1 Universe, August 23, 1878. Correspondence from Saint Petersburg-town, August 17.

2 V. the newspaper Le Figaro, cited by [Univers of March 7, 1880.

J

)

j

\

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 345

Only Russians; it is now also gaining followers among the French.

A society of French nihilists has emerged. recently established in Paris. The statutes of this companies have been frankly accepted by several of our most important radicals.

On the other hand, the Universe teaches us that it has received the program "of the French nihilists," in which these interesting people make known "that they declare a war, without mercy or truce, to the execrable brigandage, decorated by anti-phrase from the name of social organization, and of which Even more than men, they are the victims times?

One thing that cannot be doubted is the existence- tence and the current distribution in France of a nihilistic press.

"Among the signs of the times," said the Po/ybiblian, "we must classify the appearance in France of the

_ "Nihilist press; it is still only at its de-

"goals, but rest assured that before long she will "will produce, certain of impunity, with an au-

, "ever-increasing dace. Meanwhile, various +

"Booksellers announce: Alexandra, letters from a

1 The Tablets of a Spectator, cited by the Universe of March 7, 1880.

2 Universe, March 10, 1880.

"nihilistic, with the author's portrait; the Reli-"Gion and the Social Revolution, by Michel Bakou-
"nine, annotated by Arthur Arnold (member of the "Commune); he is an amnestied man, Mr. Elisée Reclus,
"whose ultra-radical opinions are well-
"nudes, which is responsible for reviewing and classifying the writings of the Russian socialist... The theories of "Bakunin, which will be spread in France"
"on all sides, while waiting (something perfectly
"certain) that they will be put into practice, is reduced-
"senses the annihilation of all that remains of
"Today's society; it pushes to its ultimate limits-"
"This is the thesis that our radicals do not yet admit"
"Only partly!"

From this entire study on Nihilism, it
It is clear that this socialist system is deviating from the same sources as the International, which previously he feels he is completely attached to it and that it is of-
The most advanced and violent part has arrived.
Recent facts support this conclusion
demonstrate that Freemasonry, International
And Nihilism, it's all one thing.

The nihilistic Jew Hartmann, or Meyer, author of the Moscow assassination attempt (December 1, 1879), is arrested by French police in Paris on February 16

1 Cited by L'Univers on May 10, 1880.

| PE -M

RER AT mt "+. L

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 317

1880. Immediately, our radical deputies became agitated.
to secure his release; the presidents of three left-wing groups are taking action with the ministry for this purpose. For its part,
The Russian ambassador is requesting extradition.
The French government is hesitating between these two options.
commands. All internationalists and free-Freemasons are passionate about the assassin's cause.

as one defends a brother: "If Hartmann is delivered, France is dishonored, they do not support—"The ministry will no longer be involved, etc." Their newspapers they speak the same language; they circulate and recommend a petition to the Houses for prevent the extradition of the nihilist. In short, the go-Masonic government which leads France, not able to bring himself to hand a brother over to his death, and especially a Jew, at the risk of bringing the most serious external complications, refuses extradition and had Hartmann driven to England. The secret high chiefs of Freemasonry have expected from Catholics and conservatives their strong resistance to their anti-laws religious and antisocial. In order to defeat it, they prepare, according to their old and usual method, through the introduction and protection of Nihilism in 18.

318 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

France, a more terrible instrument of destruction even more radical than the International itself—same. We can judge this by the way the Nihilists appreciate the Communards.

A new clandestine newspaper appears in Russia. Its Russian name means Awakening. Here what she says about the Paris Commune in her second issue (April 1879).

... "Above all, don't plagiarize: don't Don't be inspired by doctrines, actions, or gestures. "Western revolutionaries... These examples" "are poor and unworthy of attention. See "1871. What did these people who erected themselves do?" "modestly, as reformers, as benefactors" "of humanity? Didn't they imagine..." "to remake the old world, because, on a single "A tiny point on the globe, they were able to burn a few "houses, demolish some neighborhoods, shoot "A few individuals! They thought they were doing something" "Thing by overthrowing a government... They have I forgot that behind governments are... Ja company... that behind the company was found—"was the family... that behind the family..." "found unity, the individual, as he is present—" "... All of this must be swept away, mowed down, "Washed thoroughly, in torrents, as nature does"

R

D. 0b

,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 319

"When she starts erasing something. Before"
To build, the land must be cleared. One does not build
"not on ruins, on mud, on de-
"Broken, on dung; the building is erected on a "flat, leveled, cleaned surface, on new-
"Sound foundations. And what have they done?"
"These people from 1871? We had to strike, to strike down" the world, to dazzle and terrify it; and they have
"Amused, these reformers, to invent new "uniforms... to play at government, to mimic
"
"

HAS

HAS

ministers... to appoint ambassadors...

They were dwarves, and, being dwarves, they could not
"What to do about their size?"

When the Communards and other internationalists lists, reinforced by nihilists, will have been put in place by These at their level, 'judge the terrifying days-tables that France and Europe will see.

From all the previous work must be drawn the
The following general conclusion is: |

The International was merely a simple transformation
the establishment of Carbonarism, carried out under the direction occult practices of high-ranking Freemasons; this so-society has successively absorbed, or become attached to,
all the other militant secret sects*, but

1 Universe, April 26, 1879.

3 Such as Fenianism, which we will discuss, Marianne, the Universal Republican Alliance, etc., etc.

320 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

secondary, formed on different sides by the Freemasonry! Today, under the name general of international association or simple- As a form of Socialism, it constitutes the active army of the Masonic order.

One remarkable thing that cannot be This has been passed over in silence; it is the intrusion of the element Jewish in training, leadership, and gestures of the International, of Socialism and of the Nihilism *.

3. Fenianism. Fenianism emerged, it also, -of Freemasonry, but of a maelless direct than Carbonarism and International. It developed solely in England and America. Here is his lineage:

The documents that were used to compose this paragraph
The graphs were taken: 1° for the International and Socialism German, in the following works: [International and the social question, by Mr. Claude Jeannet, lawyer at the court of Aix. Paris, June 1871; [International Workingmen's Association, by Oscar Testut, lawyer at the court of Lyon. Lyon, 1871; the History of the International, by Fribourg. Paris, 1272; in the newspapers: Le Monde, June 20 and July 16, 1871, September 8 and 15 November and December 5, 1872 and September 7, 1873; the Universe, June 12 and July 4, 1871, September 4 and 15, 1872, August 5, September 18 September and October 15, 1877, July 19 and 13, 1878, February 15 and May 1, 1879, February 22, May 3 and 16, 1880.

2° For Nihilism, in the newspapers: Le Monde, July 13 let 1871, April 8, 1876; l'Univers, December 18, 1877, August 23, 1878, March 18, April 26 and December 18, 1879, and February 21 and 22, 1, 2, March 7, 10, 19, 21, 24, 26, April 4 and 19, May 3 and 20, 1880.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 321

_ - + - - M)

Before the 1848 revolution, in the time of the greater excitement of the Carbonari French, transformed into the Society of the Seasons, a Irish conspirator Colonel O'Mayony, constrained to request asylum from France, s'engaged in the Carbonari, there made a new ap- The conspiracy theory was introduced, and imported into Ireland the organization of this secret society.

"The company he founded, with the aim of making Ireland, to Ireland, first received from him the name of the Emmet Monument Association, or EMA This is in memory of the Irishman Robert Emmet. that Lord Clare had condemned to the torture of gallows, and who, at the moment of dying, had prized the wish that his fellow citizens not raise a monument to his memory which after having delivered Ireland, under the yoke of the Saxon race. Little by little, The conspiracy grew stronger and more widespread; it took hold. cinema in Canada; it developed powerfully- ment in the United States, where she had her council su- first, where she was represented hierarchically in each of the States of the Union...

"In the United States, affiliates, having no In danger of running, they naturally found themselves dis- thoughts of resorting to mystery. Not having the name of fenians, from a word which, in the Irish language,

"322 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

means Phoenicians, and which thus seemed to link the Ireland's hopes in the memory of its pre- First colonizers, they marched with their heads held high, and Their number increased remarkably. The pou- seeing action in the light of day is refused by the the very nature of things to the Fenians of Canada, and even more so to those in Ireland. A government- provisional ment, composed of four members, re- _ presenting the four provinces of Ireland; to- Below these four leaders were twenty chosen colonels. by each of them and called in turn to choose a set number of captains, who, of For their part, they have to recruit soldiers from among those whose patriotism they had the opportunity to experience:

met is known only to the colonels designated by him, the colonel, only captains, the captain who soldiers, and the soldier that of those whose contact with him is essential: that's what May of this year (1865), New York Herald declared that it constituted the mechanism of the Fenian society, in Ireland.

The American newspaper reported the number of Fenians at 80,000 in the United States, without including Canada, and 65,000 in Ireland. These details demonstrate that Fenianism has taken hold.

$

Freemasons and Jews. 323

its organization of the Society of the Seasons, and that, Therefore, he is a son of the Carbonari French and grandson of Freemasonry. (See a London correspondence published by the French newspaper Le Temps, and reproduced by the World, September 24, 1865.)

It would be useless and tedious for the reader. it seems to me that the author is extending this work by making it without passing before his eyes the genesis and history of all these other political secret societies lesser importance than those produced and that pro-Freemasonry is constantly and everywhere being produced. The names and forms vary; essentially, it's the

* Same thing. The great conspirator Mazzini says so formally:

"Secret sorceries give an irresistible to the party that can invoke them. Do not fear-
"Don't be surprised to see them divide: the more they
"The more they divide, the better. They all go to the same place."
"But by a different route t."

Masonic actions that attack religion and the morality. They multiply every day, modify-trusting, like the previous ones, their names

1 Manifesto of 1846 cited by Count Edouard Lubinski.
War and revolution in Italy in 1848 and 1849, pp. 44-49.

324 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

and according to their gait, according to the need and the sides that they want to hit. He is not a single one of essential points of Christian morality and social bases that are not currently the subject of their assaults. We will say a few words about those of these Masonic societies which seem to us-sent the most important and are the most damanagers.

4. The Universal Religious Alliance. The Freemason-nerie is fond of these universal alliance companies saddle. We were just referring to the poli- society tick the Universal Republican Alliance. We let us now study several other kinds of universal alliance, whose objective is the mo-Rage and religion. The first one that comes to mind In chronological order, it is the United Religious Alliance-Verselle, founded in 1854 by the Freemason Henri Carle, venerable "in 1873, of the lodge Le Libre Exam, Orient of Paris!

This association takes on, from 1865 onwards, a significant expansion. It was founded at this time, to serve as its organ, a weekly newspaper-daïre, which she calls Za Free Conscience; Henri Carle is the editor-in-chief. His main

In 1867, the collaborators were Freemasons.

1 V. Univers, September 15, 1879.

r

|

well-known figures, such as Brother Henri Martin, the F.:. Victor Hugo, Br°. Edward of Pompery, Brother Vidal, Brother Charles Fauvetty, Venerable The R.-. L.-. Renaissance by its emulators of Hiram, etc.

This religious association is appealing to everyone those who want to erase the supernatural from their beliefs. – "It is," said M. de Saint-Albin, a temple open to all enemies of Christia- nism. It establishes only one between men "Link, hatred of Catholic truth?"

Here's what its founder says about it:

"The Universal Religious Alliance is working on triumph of rational and progressive religion, founded on the light of reason... The great question for us, and our concern cons- aunt, therefore, is to lead minds to consider the religion as human, in the sense that it derives of our faculties, without any miraculous intervention- use of God.

"We want to bring intellectual men to agency and goodwill, whatever their starting point, to banish from their minds all `

1 V. Les Libres Penseuses, by M. de Saint-Albin, p. 97 et seq. and the League of Education.

2 Ibidem, p. 109.

' 19

. he Sii ee
A re eet

the idea of supernatural revelation, any belief in God's miraculous intervention in things of religion... Our first concern must be to-eliminate the priestly element that is attached to the idea of the supernatural and is a logical product of it.

"The Alliance and its newspaper, La Libre Cons- science, vigorously combat the priestly authority dowry, and demand that the clergy be abandoned by all those who have lost their faith. In short, we want the complete secularization of religion; which leads to the secularization of institutions of charity, that of the hospital offices of charity, military ambulances; in short, fraternal drinks of all kinds; the elimination- tion of the mysteries and sacraments, in the sense that the Church of Rome attaches to these two words; the abolition of the distinction between the ecclesiastic and of the secular; The civil celebration of the birth, of the wedding and the funeral*.

How can one not believe that the religious alliance universal, whether directly from France- Freemasonry? Ever since they came to power in In France, Freemasons are carrying out This whole program. They eliminate as much as they can- They are going away with the priestly element. They are secularizing everything; they

1 The Freethinkers, etc., pp. 101 and 102.

RQ P0

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 327

They secularize everything, they come, through a recent lay, to eliminate the priest from hospital administrations charitable and charitable work; they seek to distance themselves from to leave the beds of the sick and dying; they want to chase him out of schools.

One of the coreligionists of the Universal Alliance- The saddle will complete the process of making her known to us:

"Our religion," he said, "is religion itself- It is the same. It has no name and cannot have one. It is, whether we know it or not, the religion of everyone, including temporary religions local and regional issues that their errors, and satisfactory

Those who practice the principles will confess them; those who practice them will confess will the teachings deserve to be called religious men. Those who misunderstand them will adhere to the principles or those who, in their conduct, will... will violate the teachings, will be men Irreligious. That's all. But it doesn't matter anyway—whether they call themselves Jews, Catholics, Protestants so many, Muslims, Buddhists, that we believe ourselves Deists, pantheists, or even atheists!

This claim by the Universal Alliance to be religion, calling to itself all forms of worship,

. 1 La Solidarité, journal des principes, 1^{er} December 1867.

328 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Your eee

is in all similar to that of the F Sane acor: Nonsense. She too claims that she is religion: "Predating religions, it is the principle of all religions!; » « universal religion, it embraces all the others and connects them together by what they have in common'; » she is the universal temple in which the men of all faiths and all religions °.

New evidence of the Masonic origin of the Al-alliance: the daughter has the same aspirations as her mother.

Suppose these fine principles, supposedly religious, widespread to some extent in the world, what difficulty, do you think, will it find? The Antichrist, to be worshipped?

What is the organization and what are the means of action of the Universal Religious Alliance saddle? Let's listen to the founder again: |

(For the present... 1867). "...Our means of actions are very limited, but that's not our fault. Above all, we have a great strength which is our union... Our newspaper and examples that each of us takes on the task of giving to 1 Philosophical course, etc., by Ragon, sacred edition, p. 128, note.

2 History of the three great lodges of Freemasons, by F.:. Em. Rebold, p. 310.

3. Ritual of Masonic Protectorate. Masonic Documents ques, pp. 501, 502.

ee N me. ©7Ye

aa ee l anann amaa. "ty, na S0 "net

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 329

Outside will do the rest. However, I consider our small family circles like the beginnings of the future religious society.

"The Alliance includes within its ranks fa-whole thousand, from the grandfather to the little one-fant; the women themselves appear there in very large number. When circumstances allow it-births and marriages are part of the part of the members the subject of religious demonstrations
gious women of a very high character. For death, We're sticking to a secular funeral. From time to time
At times, two or three families gather to discuss various moral issues or religious philosophy... Once or twice per year, the members of the most rap- groups relatives gather for a fraternal banquet.
It's Freemasonry, minus the shadow. 3l
the mystery...

"While a pre- direction
prepares for the future, specific groups, complete-independently of each other, continue to train. New ones are being established every day.
calves. I'm not just talking about Paris; at Paris, unsurprisingly, but also the provinces and abroad. Go to Lyon, to Bordeaux, in Rouen, go to Aix-en-0the, which is not that a very small town in the department of Dawn; everywhere there, you will encounter groups uniformly constituted. Belgium, Germany—do they and our colony in Africa provide—even a large number of members. Provisional—

Each of these small family circles...
It manages itself as it sees fit and lives its own life.
No foreign influence interferes in their determinations. All are isolated, and all nevertheless and are united in a common goal of liberation

"Moral oath and religious renewal!, etc."

The reader will have easily noticed the contradictions that are found in these lines. Comment: "these particular groups," if they were in reality "completely independent of each other"
of others," and if "no foreign influence"
If they did not intervene at their home, could they be by-all "uniformly constituted?" Who gave them—
This uniformity would therefore exist, if not for "this experienced leadership that is preparing for the future," and which connects them to each other by giving them
the same impulse? "Provisionally, each

1 V., in the Saint-Simonian newspaper L'Opinion nationale du November 17 and October 8, 1867, the articles published by Mr. Léon Richer on this subject, articles of which Mr. Carlea himself provided the elements to which he gives his full approval in the Libre Conscience, no. 21 September 1867, p. 79. See also Les Free thinkers, p. 94 et seq.

be At His e

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 331

"It can be administered as it sees fit," but later?...
We encounter there, said Mr. de Saint-Albin', "the ancient and ever-new practice—
"The new Freemasonry, the organization of "Servitude under the name of liberty." The great
The sect's skill is "to take people
"by words whose sound delights them, to en-

"this multitude in hand" for a future that we are preparing.

The Universal Religious Alliance did not have,
So far at least, a very bright life.
Since 1865, it has received little attention. Is-
Is she dead? We don't believe it: there are au-
Today there are too many elements of life for such things.
works. She progressed, no doubt, in silence.
all the more dangerous because it makes less noise.

However, in the year 1879, the Freemason-nerie felt the need to push another rea token of roughly the same type. We are told the foundation of an association called Society of secular faith, and of a newspaper bearing the same name, to spread and support the principles of the association. The goal is the annihilation of all religious faith; the means, the propagation of

1 The Freethinkers, etc., p. 107.

332 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Civil faith. The Civil Faith Association is a
A secular church which, according to the proposed program, must have "nature as its Bible, and the Gospel as its Gospel" Conscience, for God, truth. She has two founders: Mr. Victor Meunier, editor of Reminder, and Edmond Lepelletier, editor of Za
The Marseillaise, both Freemasons! That's it.
obviously a new branch of the tree
cursed by Freemasonry.

We learned very recently from the newspaper
The motto that the association, without modifying her program, changed its name; she ap-
It will now be called: "Free Thought Group." It was one of the founders, F.-. Lepelletier, who introduced this other name in a public lecture in Paris. He gives for The reason for this change is that the word "Faith"
despite the adjective "civil" that accompanies it, con-
still carried a certain air of disheartening clericalism agreeable to free thinkers. Under this second
The name, the "grouping" will have as its object-

"Three major periods of life: birth,

1 V. Le Courrier de la Vienne, February 26, 1879, and L'Univers of December 9, 1879, which summarizes the motto. The F.:. Lepelletier, editor of La Marseillaise, is included on the list of Freemasons given by [Univers of September 15, 1879.

FRANUS MAGONS AND JEWS. 333

"There is marriage and death." Secular ceremonies

~ impressive events will be organized for these three _ circumstances. The speaker made a warm appealreux to the Freemasons, his listeners, so that Their dedication will ensure the success of the company.

These "civilian" sectarians realized that the soul of man, naturally religious, "natural-
"Christian," instinctively repelled
the secularization of the three greatest acts of our | earthly existence. Freemasonry is... then pressed to establish "civil worship," "worship of free thought." But that's not enough. The F.-Lepelletier warns us that "the group of the "Free thought" still wants, like the Catholics, laws that are building on the hill of Montmartre
a church dedicated to the Sacred Heart, erected on the hill of Ménilmontant "a temple to law, to justice-
"Tice, to brotherhood."

From all this, we can conclude that [Alliance Universal religious and the Free Pen- Group
both of them having left Freemasonry, soon will no longer form, or perhaps even, to

"this hour, form only one and the same association. |

9. The Universal Israelite Alliance. Another universal alliance, which has much more to retain-

| 19.

334 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The weaving of the previous one is 7 Alliance universal Israelite. It was founded around 1858 or 59 by Jews'. F.*. Crémieux, a Jew from race, one of its founders perhaps, was named President. Mr. Crémieux is one of the examples of Judaism and Freemasonry. He was elected in 1869 sovereign grand master of the eco-rite I know, the highest dignity of the Masonic order In France? Here's how he himself explains it Purpose of the association:

"The Universal Israelite Alliance comments on pain, and already its beneficial influence is felt-long-range shooting... It doesn't stop at our worship On its own, it addresses all faiths. It wants to pe-to be found in all religions, as it penetrates-to be in all countries?... Well then! Gentlemen, Let us continue our glorious mission. May the men-My enlightened ones, without distinction of religion, unite in this universal Israeli association, of which The goal is so noble, so broadly civilizing...

1 The founder appears to be the Jewish Mr. Cahen, director of Israelite archives, which established it "to strengthen the bond" "Fraternal to the Israelism of the whole world." And the thing to him seems urgent; "for," he said, "Freemasonry has lost "much of its ancient vigor." See [Universe of the 11th Jan-1859.

2 V. Jewish Archives, p. 187. 1869. Mr. Crémieux died February 11, 1874.

3 Ibidem, XXV, p. 514. 1861.

ms

be Siaa -

o

born into a religion other than our own, we extend their fraternal hand, recognizing that all religions, whose foundation is morality, of which God is the summit, must be friends between them; thus breaking down the barriers that separate what must come together one day; there you have it, gentlemen, the – beautiful, the great mission of our Israeli Alliance – | universal lite... I'm calling on our association our brothers of all faiths; let them come to
with what eagerness we will go to them...
The time has come to build on an in-'Destructible, an immortal association.'

It seems to us that these abbreviated principles of The Universal Israelite Alliance bears a singular resemblance to linked to those of the Universal Religious Alliance saddle and Freemasonry, with a cer-
There is a slight nuance, however. These last two associations recruit believers under their banner and unbelievers, even atheists. The other fact appeal only to those who believe in God and to God-dependent morality: The real purpose of one and the other is absolutely the same: as-to associate under one pretext or another, under Under one flag or another, the more men there are.

1 Israelite Archives, RXV, p. 514; 520. 1861.

336 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ne and ee nee o

possible to put them in the hands of France
Masonry.

But F.°. Crémieux further indicates in his presentation had a practical and very specific purpose of the Israelite Alliance: |

"The great mission of our Israelite Alliance universal, it is to relate to the authorities of all countries these Jewish populations
so neglected, when they are not treated in enemies; at the first news of an attack against a cult, with violence incited by hatred religious, we rise as one and to demand everyone's support, to make our voices heard in ministerial offices and up to

is misunderstood, persecuted, attacked '... »

So far, it does not appear that the Alliance Universal Israelite community took care to protect of another faith and religion than religion Jewish and the Jews. She allowed herself to be persecuted by everyone. In a way, without saying a word since 1861, the Catholics— from Italy, Russia, Spain, Switzerland and of Germany. And today, the entire press from Austria, Germany and Belgium, which is largely in the hands of the Jews, on 1 Archives israélites, XXV, 514, 520. 1861.

an *

i . RS See ee ae =

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 337

_: the order of the Universal Israelite Alliance $, defends Minister Ferry applauded his persecution laws. trices. And in 1861, the president of the Israelite Alliance— | Lite solemnly affirmed that it would protect All religions? With the exception of the Catholic faith, Probably.

On the other hand, it has covered and still covers with the great brilliance of its all-powerful protection Jews from all countries, and especially those from Romania mania. F.. Crémieux made his voice heard. within the offices of ministers and up to the "ears of princes," by obtaining an audience with Emperor Napoleon III in 1866, writing to Prince Charles, sovereign of Romania, in 1867, and to Mr. Bismarck in 1868. And all these authorities respond with great deference to the pre-President of the Universal Israelite Alliance, high dignitary of Freemasonry, whom they will take care of to grant its requests in favor of its pro-Tégés. Later, in 1878, the Israelite Alliance universal, through its illustrious president, and through his delegates, used all his influence on the French representative at Congress of Berlin, in order to obtain for the Jews

1 Universe, August 12, 1879.

Romania, perfect equality of civil rights and policies. Article 41 of the congress establishes, in effect, thanks to the French plenipotentiary, this principle general for all inhabitants of Rumania, whatever they may be. Since then, Mr. Waddington, urged on by the president of the Alliance, he has not ceased to put pressure on the Romanian government so that it put this article of the congress into practice, and that he deleted article 7 of its constitution, by: that Jews are excluded from this equality.

All of Romania is protesting against this pressure and strongly rejects all civil rights and politics to the Jew. The national representation agrees with the country. It's a matter of life or death for the Romanian people. Because, de- Then, for several years, Romania underwent a period of intense activity. veritable invasion of Jews "which amounts to several-hundreds of thousands of individuals," and who do not It doesn't stop. They are "men without a country." "determined, without any nationality other than their "quality of Israelites," who seek "their means" "of existence, not in the work which contributes" "dedicated to the development of production and the 1 Universe, October 22 and November 15, 1878. Mr. Waddington protects the Israelite Alliance and the Jews as far as the East. V. Uni- around June 18, 1879, an article signed by Abbé Joseph Lémann.

Pa

/

(

. FREEMASONS AND JUDS. 339

"Wealth of a country, made in trafficking and usury"

= "

which ruin him.

"By these means, and under the very protection of Romanian laws, the Israelites surrendered masters of a significant portion of the capital of countries and mortgaged them on buildings. In Moldova especially, a large part of the rural property is involved between their hands.

These Jews "remained strangers in the midst of the nation, not only by their religion, but through language, costume, customs and aspirations, in short, by everything that constitutes the distinctive character of a man in the so-society. »..... « Supported by the action of /'Al-Universal Israelite Alliance... they knew how to to form a separate community, having a almost absolute autonomy, not only in from a religious point of view, but still to the point from an administrative and financial point of view; they found same means, through the assistance of the 2nd Alliance to establish itself as a strong Israelite association political, with its agents throughout the country, and receiving the impulse and direction from a center to be established outside of Romania.

Therefore, if there is perfect equality of civil rights and

340 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Policies were granted to the Jews, soon all lakes territorial property would pass into their hands | and they would quickly become the masters of ~ all of Romania from a political point of view and ' governmental.

This is the summary of the Memorandum addressed to the authorities. European sessions, in July of this year, by | Mr. Campineano, Romanian Minister of Foreign Affairs | external (Universe, July 22, 1879)!

What purpose does the entire-
A powerful universal Israelite alliance? One goal;
which goes far beyond a simple work of philosophy Lanthropy: The Jews want to make this little country a new Palestine, while waiting for them so that they can resume the old one, the object of all their DOUBT. |

From this we see that the Universal Alliance is not,
purely religious and philanthropic, like |
She wants to get some fresh air. From which we can conclude Furthermore, Freemasonry has many tender moments.
for the eggs.

The following lines from Florence's Journal
will help us understand these things, and con-'

1 V. also on this question: The Israelites in Romania, by Emmanuel Crezzulesco, former diplomatic agent of Rou-mania in Paris (Dentu). The author claims that the Jews are more four hundred thousand in Romania. V. Univers of November 5, 1879.

i>

L

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 341

æ =. -

to be born even more /'Universal Alliance'

Israelite. | ;
"However unfathomable the mysteries of Freemasonry, there are manifestations

which bear the unmistakable marks of the sect

that no sensible man can deny-their origin. We see the powerful em-Father (Alexander of Russia) to give a warm welcome to London to a delegation from the Universal Alliance, plomates intended for him. This is an unheard-of fact in the history of diplomacy, which an initiating sovereign-holding a congress without consulting those who should to send their representatives there, and who summons him based solely on the request of some association.

What is this universal Alliance that sees
To bow down before it, a power of the earth?
The Universal Alliance is the elite of Freemasonry.
laughter of the entire universe, a kind of Masonic senatenique, above all parliaments, and which has the aim of asserting that, since Freemasonry
dominates in all the courts of Europe, there is none |
There is no longer any need for war. War was commendable as long as the sect was not in power
see; its chances and alternatives could him
to open the doors; but as soon as she entered,

342 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

His only concern should be to maintain his position there:
...and therefore no more wars. The whole program and
The goal of the Universal Alliance can be summarized as follows.
How to explain the Tsar's adherence to this program, without admitting that all his hesitations have ended and he has just entered with a determined step in the lodges to beat the path of the world Modern? That's how Tsar Nicholas put it. is being realized to the letter: Europe no longer has gendarmes: the responsibility for maintaining the offer is con-trusted by men of disorder, that is to say, by men who have worked for a long time at everything
a new building about which nothing else is known, except that it is entirely contrary to the established edict by Christ" (Univers, May 29, 1874).

It is reasonable to believe that we owe this approach to...
the Universal Alliance's failure to see,
In 1875, Bismarck launched yet another |' Germany
against France.

But is it really certain that "the entire program and the goal of the Universal Alliance can be summarized as follows:
Love of peace and peaceful mediation? This Isn't a universal alliance the same obvious-dementia that "Universal Israelite Alliance, if powerful in the eyes of princes and their ministers, composed mainly of Jews and chaired by

+ AAD ~o, ia

FREEMASONS: FET JEWS. 343

"A Jew, one of the leading figures of the Masonic order?

There is therefore a great deal of intimacy between the Ma-

. stupidity and the Jews.

6. Solidarism. Solidarism is an association of an association whose members commit themselves through service

both in person and in writing:

1° To repel from their deathbed the presence

. from any minister of any religion whatsoever, to refuse

all religious assistance and to demand the absence of their funerals of all kinds of religious ceremonies
that it be; 2° to procure according to their power to their fellow members the means of empil en en-
to third their commitments.

The idea for this infernal association had been proposed for the first time and presented by a Freemason, in 1843, at the Brussels lodge, Work. A commission was appointed to examine-to pose the question, to communicate it to the other lodges from Brussels and consider the means of execution!

| It was only in 1862 that the association was definitively founded and, under the active patronage of the Freemasonry, was spreading in Belgium, in France and the rest of Europe, "in the middle of a horrified Christian society.

Free thinkers, pp. 19 and 20.

344 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

This abominable idea is truly all
Masonic; for we see it exposed and developed Loppée in several other associations outings!
of Freemasonry. The Universal Religious Alliance!
and the International, with Socialism and the Nihi-lism, extend to all acts of life, and in - particularly to the most important, birth, ma-riage and burial, this absolute rejection of all religion. |

7. The League of Education. This is its name a Masonic society whose every effort tends to tooth: 1° to place under the control of the State the teaching-public education at all levels; 2° to elevate it _ to absolutely undermine the supernatural and religious idea from primary education inclusive up-than to higher education; 3° - to be removed from all citizens, by legal prescriptions, the;

The right and the possibility of giving and having others give?
to their children or to the children of others an en- | different teaching and outside that of - the State.

It is obvious that Freemasonry, what else:
almost everywhere the state is absorbed and holds the government >
government, wants to seize control of future generations
to train them as he sees fit.

This satanic and antisocial project had been attempted.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 349

aa ee ee

...also by the ancestors of Freemasonry.
The Albigensians strove, in the thirteenth century,
g monopolize women's education in the countries they infested. They began to give themselves-same, free education for young girls
to attract them more reliably to their schools.
In the eighteenth century, the fathers of Freemasonry

* Illuminati members were trying to infiltrate the schools and even in seminars. Philosophers in- were saying that it was necessary to wrest it from the hands of the E- i church the instruction and education of childhood and of | youth, to make them common and uniform for "I put them all in their main elements and put them in the hands of the State. The Masonic revolution- nique of 93, in France, realized these ideas, des- which later, under the dictatorship of the high-ranking Freemason 4 Napoleon I", the University* was released. The Carbona- Irism had worked in Italy with the same goal. Shortly after its formation and consolidation- 1 tion (1819), the high Italian sale formed /a Li- | that academic whose goal was to corrupt the "Youth in schools. Leo XII, by his bull Quo

read

has

ie 1 V, Secret Societies, etc., te III, ch. vin. The Societies

Secrets and Teaching, sect. iv. Masonic Teaching- nique under the Empire, p. 163 et seq.

f +
has

346 FRANKSAGONS AND JEWS.

born

Graviera (1825) made it known to the world in these terms: | | "Among the number (of secret societies), we We must especially point out the one called "academic, because it has established its headquarters and "his home in most universities" "schools, and that its aim is to give to the "youth of the masters who apply themselves, not to | "to instruct them, but to corrupt them, by initiating them" "to these mysteries which we must call in all | the truth of the mysteries of iniquity and in the AD

In 1842, in Belgium, in this lodge of Brussels, the Work, where Solidarity had already been born Islam, a Freemason brother! made "a proposal which "contained, as the kernel contains the tree, everything"
 "The League of Education, minus the name." This-Meanwhile, as with Solidarism, this does not...
 It was only about twenty years later that the
 The League could be founded. The lodge of Work and the Freemason brothers, authors of these two projects, were,
 as they say in Freemasonry, ex advances on the century. But "what a long way we've come since then."
 "Twenty-one years!" Le Monde rightly stated.
 Masonic in September 1867 (p. 316).
 | Natural Religion, February 12, 1843, pp. 282, 233. |
 4

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 347

On February 16, 1865, the League was founded
 'for Belgium. France was close behind. The -, December 14, 1866, the first bulletin of the League
 "The French education system said: 'It is the
 ; "It was on November 15th that the challenge was launched-
 "Initiative in favor of settling in France"
 "of a league of education, in imitation of "The one that has existed in Belgium for two years."
 - Le Monde maçonnique (May 1867, pp. 57 and 58)
 , introduces us to the author of the fran- association French: "The initial idea belongs to Brother Jean
 "Macé; he was the one who conceived it, exhibited it the first-
 At "mier," which brought together the first members, launched
 4. The first calls. Done at your own risk.
 "The initial expenses."
 We have just seen that "the initial idea"
 did not come from the brain of F.:. Jean Macé;
 It existed before him in Freemasonry. He has : France was the chosen and promoted instrument
 ; by his Masonic superiors.
 F According to Article 4 of its statutes, the League of the En-
 + teaching "is not the work of any party; it does not
 ., "will concern itself neither with politics nor religion." A
 At present we know perfectly well that this
 This article is simply a mask that de-shows the provenance of the work. The Franc-Ma-crisis.

In that same year, 1867, the newspaper maconical noted the eagerness of all the _ lodges to adhere to the book of Brother Macé:

"We are pleased to see that Za
The F.-Macé Education League and the statue Brother Voltaire is encountered in all our lodges
the deepest sympathies. It was impossible to unite two subscriptions more in harmony. Voltaire, that is to say-to speak of the destruction of prejudices and superstitions
tions; the League of Education, that is to say, the publishing formation of a new company, solely based on science and education. All our brothers thus include" (the Masonic World, April 1867, p. 730).

"The influence of Freemasonry on the success of the work founded by F... Macé will be > certainly one of the happiest and perhaps most decisive sive. The means of propagation, including the workshops have, thanks to their special organization, se-will provide powerful assistance, and, on the other hand, the principles of our association, the same as those which have just been expressed (those of the League of teaching), make it a duty for Freemasons me - ka af Ma memes + S

. af

S AS

to register as a member of the League of the En- |

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 349

_ teaching, and to show themselves in the forefront of the "Tireless propagators and devoted soldiers"

between age-old darkness and accidental ignorance such or systematic" (Masonic World, May 1867, pp. 59 and 60).

Three years later, Freemasonry proclaimed masters its principles in teaching. The as-general assembly of the Grand Orient of France, the June 11, 1870, voted in favor of gratuitous, compulsory and secular, that is to say without religion, "Religion, without the supernatural, without God." She declared to join the efforts made in our country to make it such an instruction. In his circular in dated July 4, 1870, Grand Master Babaud-Laribière consequently wrote to all the French lodges: "We agree on the principle of free, compulsory and secular, so warmly acclaimed by the last-last assembly" (Masonic World, June 1870, p. 106, and July 1870, p. 13.— See also 2' Union around May 1879).

Here we observe one of the hypomaneuvers criteria and usual practices of Freemasonry, when she wants to attack the polite order from some angle tick, or the moral and religious order.

: 20

3a0 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Through the intermediary of F., masons of a certain rank High up, the great unknown chefs make proposals their projects and plans in a private lodge—the area where they have a better chance of being adopted. adopts the facts as his own and, in order to put them into action, Depending on the case, it produces either a new secret society, or a registered association. If the as—The association fails, the Grand Orients disavow it the company. Times and people not being When the matter is ripe, we bury it for the time being in the deepest silence. If, on the contrary, she succeeds—sit, Freemasonry brings her before its general assemblies and officially adopts it.

The League of Education had succeeded. The The newspaper Le Monde thus indicated, in 1873, its efforts and successes:

"A campaign, undertaken for some time now"

religious education given in schools primary schools have been pushed in recent times with an ardor and an obviously ins-driven by the certainty of victory. A vast league composed of Jews, Protestants, free people thinkers and radicals, swore to remove the en-resistance to all religious teachings, and to make primary education, not just secular education,

IN

1

|

X

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 351

as they say, the word doesn't quite express their Thoughtful, but impious, atheist, materialistic... prevent to regenerate France by coercing childhood to attend schools where Christ and God are-
"will be banished" (July 11, 1873).

Returning to this subject in 1875, the same newspaper
he said:

"Under the pretext of disseminating the instruction-tion in the countryside, the founders of the Li-gue, all tainted by democracy, have, from the beginning-gine, combined their efforts to wrest childhood and adolescence to religious action, by instituting libraries and by equipping them with books where the Science was everything, and faith was nothing... At-Today, according to the news we are receiving
On all sides, the League is busy organizing itself more solidly than ever. She always keeps his mask, but under this transparent mask
"pierces the most dangerous radicalism..." (January 22, 1875).

and its propaganda! And it obtained the greatest successes; for his mother and protector, the Ma- stupidity, has become "the sovereign of the Re-

1 V. the daily newspapers l'Univers, le Monde, l'Union, etc.; in particular the Universe of January 22, April 22 and August 16-17, 1879.

352 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

French public. The government itself-
"It's just a branch of the lodges."

Taking advantage of a situation so favorable to his desires-breasts, Freemasonry immediately put itself in remains to accomplish the work of the League and the wishes of its assemblies. A ministry, pres-that entirely composed of Freemasons, proposes the sanction of the legislative power, in the name of the government and through the organ of F.:. Ferry, Minister of Public Instruction, and of F.:. Paul Bert, a member of parliament, proposed tyrannical bills which destroy the freedom of fathers and put education entirely in the hands of the state of childhood and youth.

As expected, the League congratulates the minister*;

The lodges applaud and promise support to his | laws? : "F.:. Jules Ferry, known as the Chain of union, who had the distinct honor of being initiated into our mysteries, along with the illustrious Littré,

is currently fulfilling the program he has!

himself drawn... But, if the #.:. Jules Ferry continues a work ESSENTIALLY MASONIC-THAT, it is up to us, as masons, to
to support in the accomplishment of its mission;

! Universe, March 20, May 5, 15 and 16 He 1879.
> Universe, May 4 and September 22, 1879.

mast

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 353

and he needs to know that, if he has in front of him
a band of clerical reactionaries who are trying to make a lot of noise with the petition,
He also has behind him a reserve army which,
to be calmer because she feels more strong, but no less ready to support him in at the peril of his life" (the Chain of Union, newspaper of Universal Freemasonry, May 1879.

We have already said that all the foreign press-
Jewish management brought its contingent of approvals
tion and encouragement of Masonic laws of F.-. Ferry.

It is not only in France that the Ma-stupidity undertakes the absolute ruin of teaching Christian education in schools. The conspiracy is active worldwide. "Each
"knows what role this question of godless schools plays"
"played a role in the last presidential election"
"from the United States, in what concern she "held the politicians of Great Britain-
"Tagne and several other states 2," and comit has just been resolved in Belgium according to the vows of Freemasonry*.

4 V. in addition to the Universe of September 22, 1879.

2 Universe, November 6, 1878.

3 V. on the League of Education, the complete book and excellent work by Mr. Jean de Oussac, entitled the Ligve de l'Ensei-

In this matter of such crucial importance—tate, Catholics will not submit to despicable descendants of the Manicheans, of the Al-Bigeois and Templars. Supported by their rights sacred, supported by the teachings and the—
With the courage of the Church, they fight everywhere and will fight to the bitter end.

IT

We now know the Freemason—nonsense with its numerous developments. This detestable tares, perhaps the last of heresies—
being, extends now more than ever over the field of the family man.

To summarize what we have just read and in order to
to give us a clearer idea of the devastation to combat this cancer in today's society, we must
to establish figures.

1° Current geographical and digital extent of Freemasonry proper.

In this work, we will only deal with Freemasonry proper and of the International-nale. |

government, history, doctrines, works, results and projects.
Paris, 1880.

P

= a- x -I

(~

is

a. nanan (ny f

=f

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 355

In the first, we will understand the personnel of the Universal Religious and Israelite Alliance, of Solidarity and of the League of Education. These associations undoubtedly have many members. a Freemason coup, but they must certainly- nement also contain a good number of mem- foreign brothers to the lodges. However, we we will neglect, being unable to know at what figure it amounts to. Similarly, we will include in the International, whose leaders are well distinct from those of the Masonry, the Carbona- Felism, Socialism, Nihilism, and all the popular associations dependent on Freemasonry, such as, in France, the Ma- rianne, the Brothers of the Republic, of Lyon and from Marseille, etc., and others of different denominations, which are proliferating in foreign countries, Germany, Switzerland, England and the United States. TL It is undeniable that, today, all the mem- branches of these associations, which form the arms of Freemasonry, are incorporated into the sections of |' International.

In 1832, F.-. LJ d'Asfeld, in a written on Freemasonry, it says that "the Masonic order- The Temple's order is divided into three classes, » and that the third class, or political faction, is established as far as China, under the name of the Society of Three united or of the Trinity, which she possesses there of numerous affiliates and that it extends throughout the other parts of the world under different names nations. (Quoted by Armand Neut, Ja Franc-Ma-

396 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Another general testimony of this extent
The geographical location of Freemasonry is provided to us.
by a recent decree from the Bishop of Grenoble:

"Those who were then (around 1845) traveling through lands and seas, he said, often had at heart both the spread of secret societies and the success of their own businesses. A few years-born after we met them, these companies which penetrate wherever a ship can land:
at the tip of Africa, in the islands of Madagascar,
in Zanzibar and in the various countries that we have evangelized. They are flourishing in our colonies denies that they contribute to dividing and ruining.
We saw them and caught them in the act in the religious associations of a diocese in the Antilles which was entrusted to us: they had slipped in per-faithfully among the pious people who com-
They were asking. Where are they not? In the West
They are at the head of the movement; in the East their Progress is rapid too. They planted their

com EL

these: – eee, EEE of a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 357

tents in the desert. We saw them in the Capital of Islamism: Let's tell the whole truth

with pain in our hearts: we have ren-countries as far as Jerusalem. They are searching for Catholic children to raise them; but they lead to the Holy Sepulchre, for their education to laugh at our religious ceremonies. We
To put it simply, let us call upon the testimony of the Fathers.
guardians of the tomb of Jesus Christ. So that secret societies cover the world and him offer poisoned fruit everywhere" (Mande-From Bishop Fava. Lent 1879. V. Universe of February 24 and 26, 1879).

The Venerable Master, head of a lodge, said to the applicant who is applying to be received as an apprentice mason:

"Sir, any layman who is received by ma-

"THAT... belongs to an order that is widespread"

"over the entire surface of the globe" (Ritual of the apprentice. See the rituals published by the F.-... Ra-gon). |

A Masonic circular published by Le Monde (July 21, 1875) indicates that, in 1873, France Freemasonry of the French rite possessed Grand Masters Orients in Belgium, Germany, Spain, France Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Italy, Luxembourg

358 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

burgh, Netherlands, Portugal, Switzerland, Egypt, United States United States of America, Brazil and Mexico.

Therefore, in all these countries, the Franc-Freemasonry of the French rite possessed of name-numerous lodges, not to mention those of the other systems themes. |

By combining data from four different Masonic documents that we have under the eyes, 1° of the Masonic Calendar of Berlin, of 1863 (cited by 7' Unirers, January 1863); 2° 2' State Masonic lodges in 1873, published by Ze Di-ritto cattolico of Modena (cited by Ze Monde, 20 and January 21, 1873); 3° of 7 Almanacco del libero Muratore (of the Freemason) for 1874, published in Milan by the Ragione lodge (Reason) (cited by (National Assembly, January 30, 1874); £ the Se-Masonic Maine, published every eight days by the newspaper /'#event (cited by Le Monde, May 27, 1874), we arrive at the following figures as for the number of Masonic lodges in The old world and the new world.

This information is incomplete in several points; this will be easily noticeable.

"4.

ak

as

See, 4.
ECS, Ate

NAMES OF COUNTRIES

France

(Scottish Rite.)

Prussia. 3 grand lodges and 263 lodges... 3 grand lodges and Holland. 1 grand lodge and 329 lodges. 332 – 68 lodges... (1 grand lodge and 71 lodges. . '\ 100
More in the colonies
Sweden . . 1 grand lodge and nies: 28 lodges. .
24 lodges. – 1 grand lodge and States of Germany: 5 Grand Lodges and 28 Lodges... to – (minus Prussia.) 74 lodges... 5 grand lodges and Luxembourg. 1 large lodge and 2 lodges.
lodges... 1 grand lodge and 2
Denmark. ^ . 1 large lodge and 7 lodges.. . . . =
lodges... 1 grand lodge and 5
United States . . 38 Grand Lodges . . . =
And? 38 Grand Lodges and Brazil. . 1 grand lodge and 65 6,068 lodges . . 6,068 – oges. e . . . l Grand Orient and 122 lodges; plus 68 chapters and
– 50 advanced workshops
Canada 1 grand lodge and laughers. 221 –
| 130 lodges. . . .131 –
Venezuela. . sl prance lodge and 17
Oges + + to ? 18 –
Peru. 1 grand lodge and ? i ? j ee
New Granada. 1 Grand Lodge and ? ? 1 Republic of Argentina
tine. 1 grand lodge and? ? –_
Haiti... 1 Grand Lodge and? ? T=
British Isles. 3 Grand Lodges and |
| © 1,620 lodges...? 1,623 –
Belgium. . 1 Grand Lodge and 60 lodges...? 61 –
Switzerland, . . 1 grand lodge and ? ? Lee

Portugal... the grand lodge and? Teas
Sicily... the grand lodge and...? eo Austria. R? ? 1 grand lodge and 8 boxes.
To be reported. 9,061 log.

FREEMASONS AND JUIB. 359

YEARS 1873 AND 1874

YEAR 1863

TOTALS

. 1 Grand Orient etl] Grand Orient and 172 lodges . .) 514 lodges . .

1 Supreme Council)1 Supreme Gal 366 log.
and 50 lodges. . and 50 lodges. . ./

360 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

NAMES OF COUNTRIES YEAR 1863 YEARS 1873 AND 1874 TOTALS. 4

Report. 9,061 log.

Hungary...? 1 Grand Orient and 60 lodges. . ; 6l - `

Italy...? 1 Grand Orient
3 consistories, |
8 conclaves, {
20 chapters and 171 lodges, total: 203; plus
about a hundred lodges approximately,
other rites
maconiques.

D

300 -

W nr.:

Thus, in 1874, Freemasonry counted [in the world at least nine thousand four hundred Twenty-two lodges. This number is most certainly... inaccurate, since the previous table does not offer at a single piece of data in the year 1874 for twelve countries, in which Freemasonry had to do great progress during this ten-year period years.

A German work, published in Freiburg-en-Brisgau, in the year 1875, and cited by the publisher Secret Societies of Father Deschamps, gives a complete statistic of Freemasonry for 1874. According to this statistic, the number The number of grand lodges rose to 110, and the lodges in 1. At Herder's, octavo edition,

ey, a ar, a mt" |

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 361

in bn

dependents exceeded eleven thousand. The total of lodges of all kinds would therefore be at the end of 1874 of more than eleven thousand one hundred and ten lodges. The author of the work we have just cited points out that these figures do not include the Popular associations affiliated with Freemasonry which are very widespread, especially in Germany in Switzerland, England and the United States.

We are provided with a more recent statistic by a German newspaper which cites, without naming it-Mer, J'Univers of October 3, 1878. | |

what is currently (end of 1879) in the "world fifteen thousand Masonic lodges, with
"approximately five million members."

France has 297 lodges. Report: 1,612 lodges.
Germany... 342 -

Switzerland... 33 - Africa... 27 -
Hungary . . . 44 - The Cape Colony. 61 --
Romania... II - India... 134 -
The Servie. . . . 1 - China 13 -
Ireland. . . . 330 - Ledapon. . . . 4 -
Malta 4 - Australia . . . 226 -
Gibraltar 5 - North America 9,894 -
Sweden... 18 - Canada... 535 -
Spain . . . 330 - Cuba 30 -
Portugal. . . 22 - Haiti... . . 32 -
Italy, 110 - Mexico . . . 13 -
Greece 11 - Brazil . . . 256 -
Turkey . . . 26 - The rest of America
Egypt 2 - South Egypt. . 179 -

To be carried over. 1,612 boxes. Total, . . 13,016 boxes.
21

362 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

As reported by the newspaper 7 Univers, this
The document contains several obvious errors due to
to the distractions of copyists or composers printing. First eight very rich countries
In the lodges, the following were omitted: England, Scotland,
Prussia, Austria, Luxembourg, Denmark-Mark, Holland, and Belgium. Then the figures given for France, Italy and the Sweden is necessarily at fault; for it is im-
It is possible that the number of lodges is smaller in these two countries in 1879 as in 1874. The proof that there is an error of detail by omission and printing errors in the reproduction of this
The important document is that the total gene-
The number of lodges indicated is 15,000, while the sum of the partial figures culiers only rises to about 13,000. These errors corrected and explained, it appears from this statistic-
the tick that, for the past five years, Freemasonry _ has expanded considerably in its scope is now also active in Greece, in the

Türkiye, Egypt, Africa (European colonies)

European), in the Cape Colony, in India,
in China, Japan, and Australia.
It is not, therefore, a corner of the world

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 363

where it is not established and which escapes its action.

As for the number of members belonging to lodges, here is the information provided by the Freemasons: |

F. Fabre says in his book, published in 1867: |
"A (Masonic) work entitled the Z'toile"
a flamboyant event raised the name to ten million-
"Break of the currently existing Freemasons!"

In January 1873, Ze Rappel, a revolutionary newspaper-
a Freemason and Freemason, published the following note that the Universe was relating around January 21st of the same year:

"As of January 1, 1865, Freemasonry
"had nearly thirteen million members"
"Worldwide. The latest statistic from "January 1, 1872 gives a total of sixteen million"
nine hundred and thirty-two thousand Freemasons.
"Within the space of seven years, the mason family-
a nique has, therefore, increased by three
"Nine hundred and thirty-two thousand members."

It should be noted that, in these figures, are without
No doubt understood. Zes, the women and children affiliated.
"The Freemasons and who form a contingent"

1 Masonic Documents, Introduction. Historical Essay and philosophical, p. XXII. |

364 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

considerable, especially in Protestant regions and especially in America. This explains the differences that are found between the four figures .nis by Freemason authors and those who They present the Catholic writers. Thus the Ze Français newspaper (cited by L'Univers on September 15th) (December 1879) counts only three million five one hundred thousand Freemasons in the world; the German newspaper—mand, which we have just mentioned, bears this number to five million. These journalists and other writers Catholics and Protestants alike only give in vain

the total number of men belonging to the lodges, .

while Freemason authors list all members "of the Masonic family," men, women and children.

Even if we were to admit that these totals Masonic practices are exaggerated for pleasure for a specific purpose interested, one can believe, without fear of being mistaken—For many, it seems to us, that today, in July 1880, after more than eight years, and What years! Freemasonry itself includes worldwide, in men, affiliated women and children, about twenty thousand lions of sectarians.

This figure may seem to have no proportion with the much smaller quantity of lodges. To resolve this apparent difficulty, he _ You should refer to what we say below. (pp. 392 and 393).

_ FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 363

Under the generic name of "lodge" are included taken several separate meetings of francs—Masons, which are called "workshops." A single lodge. can have up to three workshops, each of which closes a staff of completely different men and often very numerous, and in addition another per—considerable number of female Freemasons and children.

international.

Mr. Oscar Testut noted in 1871 that there existed numerous directly affiliated workers' sections international relations in France, Switzerland, and elsewhere. Belgium, Spain, Italy, England, in Germany, the Netherlands and the United States!

In that same year, after the uprising of the Commune, a Times correspondent wrote In June: "I have before me a report a of this society (the International) which does not count "no less than – according to this report – two mil-

1 The International Workingmen's Association. Lyon, 1871.

366 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"Lions five hundred thousand members, and still in this
"Many do not include all companies"
"who are affiliated with her and whom she helps in their "political and revolutionary enterprises, such
"than those of the Fenians, Marianne, the Brothers
"of the Republic of Lyon and Marseille, the "numerous secret societies in Russia and
"Poland, and the Carbonari who are widespread"
"All over Europe."

Father de Curci asserted, in 1872, in his fort remarkable work on the International, that "this
"The sect has become so powerful, according to the testimony-
"a collection of trustworthy writers, which it includes
"today {only three million members
"In France, and ten in the rest of Europe."

It is evident that, in his calculations, the P. of Curci includes the various companies affiliated with the International, which the correspondent did not count dant du Zimes.

We can consider it certain that in this moment like all militant Masonic societies, Carbonarism, Fenianism, Socialism, Nihilism, Marianne and other popular associations of names and various forms, are melted into a single, immense company.

. nr a

7

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 367

Total number of followers of all secret societies,

3. If we now add up the forces digital tools of Freemasonry and the International information provided by the cited documents higher, sixteen million nine hundred and thirty-two a thousand on one hand and thirteen million on the other, we let's get the really frightening number of twenty-nine million nine hundred and thirty-two thousand, almost thirty million, in 1872 and 1874. And since these past years we have just gone through,
so favorable to Freemasonry and to societies
-i crests, to what total can their combined forces rise-denied worldwide? About forty Millions perhaps? Let's take into account the exaggerationsvoluntary and self-interested actions, and let us stop to the figure of {rent millions. What an army!!!

FOURTH SECTION. - ORGANIZATION OF THE FRENCH MASONRY

Our knowledge of Freemasonry is-
would be incomplete if, after having studied its origin and its development, we neglected to carry our perspective on its internal organization.

308 FREEMAONS AND JEWS.

-

In this section, we will examine the organization
general information; we will refer you for more details clarity in the following section some partial details-
members of this organization.

We have to take care of the organization 1° of Freemasonry proper; 2° of its main branches.

I. MASONRY PROPER.

Freemasonry proper forms two major classes: Freemasonry for men and the Women's masonry.

、

]° MASONRY OF MEN.

Male Freemasonry is divided into names numerous rites or initiation systems. This number exceeds sixty'. According to the historian of the Masonnerie, the F.-. Clavel, eighteen systems are the most

What are the practices generally used?

Let's say a few words about the main ones alone-
ment.

1 F. Ragon, Masonic Orthodoxy. — The Freemasons Saint-Aubin, p. 76.

2 Picturesque History. See Dictionary of Religions, ed., Migne, under the word Freemason.

has

has —

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 369

Masonic wings.

The rite of the ancient Free and Accepted Masons

the system is a remnant of the old corporations of medieval stonemasons.

2° The rite of Strict Observance, also called Rectified regime. This rite appears to be the continuation of the Templar rite of the elected masters of Cologne. He was reformed at the Congress of Wilhelmsbad, hence its Corrected regime name. It was followed especially in the last half of the eighteenth century in Germany. The lodges called themselves from the Strict Observance and the continuators called themselves the restorers and restorers of the Templars. But their lewd and infamous mysteries were revealed by a brother in a writing entitled La Pierre d'achon—either scandal or scandal. They then began to dissolve and, among their members, some entered into different systems, and the others, The small number continued to attach themselves to the grand lodge of the Three Globes of Berlin, which still exists today and forms a rite to part, continuation of the rite of Strict Observance.

21.

370 FREEMASONS AND JEWS,

The brothers claim to still be the descendants Templar knights!

3° The Ancient Scottish Rite, also called the Rite of Hé-redemption or perfection. This rite must be that which the Cologne Charter mentions and which was accepted by the chosen masters. Frederick the Great, king of Prussia modified it. This reform gave birth to a new rite called:

4th Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. The Great Orient de France has annexed this rite.

Further modifications produced the rituals following:

5° The primitive Scottish rite;

6° The philosophical Scottish rule, and

7° The French or modern rite, which is a simplification of Scottish rites;

9° The rite or order of the Temple;

10° The rite known as the Order of the Philosopher Judges in-KNOWN;

These last two rites are entirely temporary.
folds.

11° The Rite of Misraim in Egypt. The authors Masonic texts tell us that this rite has as its origin-gine and based on the system of Cagliostro. This

1 Lecoulteux, Sects and Secret Societies, p. 118.

an = ann. Te

m
+

Te aig ee le

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 371

The system has always been maintained. Around 1805, in
In Italy, it was combined with the Scottish system and several others. Put into its current form and Brought back to France in 1814, it spread there, thus than in Belgium, Ireland and Switzerland. The F.-.
William brought it from the East. Cagliostro, in Indeed, he traveled to the Orient and had to be initiated there into the cabalistic and pagan mysteries of the Asian lands ticks. Brother Ragon calls it a "Jewish rite," because the Jews dominate there. According to the F.-. Clavel, "the leaders of this rite claimed to privilege of directing indiscriminately all the branches of Freemasonry, including Misraïm, according
"They were the common stock." This rite was annexed, in 1816, to the Grand Orient of France.
12. The Swedish rite; 13. The Haitian rite; 14. the rite or system of Svedenborg; 15° the rite or Zinnendorf's system; 16° the Adonhira ritemite; 17th rite or system of Fessler or of the Grand Royal Lodge of York to the Friendship of Berlin,
etc., etc. | |

Division within Freemasonry: these are the

- 1 Masonic Manual.
- 2 Philosophical Course and Orthodoxy ma.
- 3 Picturesque history.

3

72 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

different regiments of the same army. The au-Freemasons are unanimous in recognizing this principle enshrined in the constitutions maconical. Thus the sacred author of the Freemason-F.-Ragon, in his own words, expressed himself thus:

"

"Freemasonry belongs to no country: it is not neither French, nor Scottish, nor American; she is not Cannot be Swedish in Stockholm, Prussian
In Berlin, Turkish in Constantinople... She is a and universal. It has several centers of action, but it only has one unit center, which is the most
a great benefit of ancient philosophy. If it lost this character of unity and universality,
"It would cease to be Freemasonry!"

"The brotherhood that binds all Freemasons, F.-. Favre, in turn, said, this implies solidarity-the rite of all the Easts; for, if it is true that it
There may be several mason administrations.
niques, there is and can only be one Freemasonry throughout the world, like
"Can there only be one humanity?"

In 1871, the Italian lodges affirmed this

N. ry, erer
Masonic doctrine in an energetic manner
in a remarkable circumstance.

Philosophical Course, p. 40.

It was after the Franco-Prussian War of 1870, Lodge 7' An-clay, from Bordeaux, took, on June 27, 1871, a decision according to which it had resolved: 1° of

to expel from its midst all the Germans who, previously, were part of his workshop; 2° of henceforth refuse entry to the lodge to any Freemason German; 3° to no longer receive any at initiation man of German nationality.

These resolutions were entirely French. Even before that date, this question of future relations of the lodges of France with the The Freemasons of Germany had risen up in the council of the order in Paris. He had declared himself incompetent to solve it and had abandoned it. The decision was given to the general assembly. In August 1871, the Grand Master of the Grand Orient of 'France posed the question to all of Freemasonry'

French in a circular where he gave knowledge decision-making of the English Lodge of Bordeaux. The Italian Freemasons, assembled in a large meeting of several lodges, expressed. They expressed their deep regret and blame for the arrangements. tions and decisions of the French lodges, because that they were "in flagrant contradiction with the principles of universal Freemasonry. They decided to send to the Grand Orient of France

374 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

a response to fight them and bring about change of feelings and resolutions to the Freemasons French. In this piece, we find what follows:

"We will remain in the mys- chain

"the ring, and we will give ourselves (the masons)"
"Germans and us) the triple kiss of the con-
"rope of peace and brotherhood.

"Freemasonry is one, like the har-
"The universe is one; the pyramid of our

"symbols are based on the surface of the globe and for.

"scmmet the highest ideas of humanity.
"All branches, whatever they may be"
"French, Italian or German, were attached to it-
"sing and merge into one. Just like our ins-
"The institution is one, and so is our love."
"This love forms the fundamental basis of this "great edifice of the progressive civilization of
"Peoples and nations."

The unity of Freemasonry is energetically asserted, as we see, in this play, but to the detriment of the national spirit and Pamour of the homeland. Freemasonry, it is true, has as its principal-

1 Correspondence from the New Vienna Press, October 80
bre 1871, cited by Le Monde on December 14, 1871,

ATT

D.

Madam, TO BE USED,

Soe

ae

'FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 375

the idea of rejecting and destroying these two noble senses
times. | |

explicit:

The statutes and general regulations of the order
Freemasonry in France, of the French or modern rite [year of the V.-. L.+ 5826 (1826)], bear:

Article V. "The masons may follow in to their trav.-. different rites, but the pui in
"It's always the same."

The general regulations of Eco- Masonry seizure for France and its dependencies, O.°. of Paris, 1846, also say:

Article I. "The Masonic order is divided

"in various recognized and approved rites which,

HAS

Although diverse, they all came from the same source.
"They both originate from and tend towards the same goal." Article II. "Of whatever recognized rite may be a mason, he is F.-. of all the masons of the "globe."

Article X. "Out of respect for the principles of
to Freemasonry which he maintained and maintained
"will hold, the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite admits"
the existence of other legally established rites and x recognized, and working Somme to accomplish-
"The Great Work."

"has

Pa

¢

m

316 NN EP AND JEWS.

The order's sacred books, rituals, manuals and tilers confirm this unity by listing all the various rites and their numerous ranks.

Moreover, by studying all the masonry,

at the bottom of their strange variety of sys- w

themes, grades, symbols and formulas, a one single doctrine, and one single goal.
Father Deschamps demonstrates, in his three volumes, in a clear and irrefutable manner,
this perfect unity of doctrine and purpose of all Masonic rites.

However, we would be inclined to think that he must
there must be a certain hierarchy between these various rites chie, established by the supreme leaders of Freemasonry-nothing and known only to them.

F.*. Ragon therefore formulated the ndame law:
tale of Freemasonry when he said: "Za Freemasonry is one and its starting point is A'. "

All rites, whatever they may be, re
in turn two major divisions: Freemasonry
exterior and interior masonry or oculus,
who are always | one and the same Freemason-
nonsense.

1 Masonic Orthodoxy, p. 4.

|

eel

4

_ FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 377

Exterior masonry.

The first is also called Sym- Masonry ballistics and Blue Masonry.

This symbolic term is applied by the ritual to the master's degree, which he calls "the three-sixth symbolic grade. » This is the origin of the expression "Symbolic Freemasonry." The call-
The term "Masonry" (d/ewe) comes from the fact that the lodge is draped in blue for the reception of the apprentices and companions.

The exterior masonry comprises only three grades or degrees of initiation: apprentice, companiongnon and master, who make up the staff of the lodges ordinary. It forms the basis of all the Freemasonry. All rites, all degrees raised, whatever names are given to them
given, in all countries, are built on this foundation
dement, without which, according to all writers
the most authorized Masonic, no system and No rank can be regular. That's the rule.
posed by the Wilhelmsbad congress and rigorous-observation since then.

But this Freemasonry, as we have
As already stated, this is not true Freemasonry.

378 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

It's just a mask with which she disguises herself.
Guise, it's a house with an innocuous appearance.
and honest, in which occult Freemasonry
He hides with all the skill of a criminal.
"Grown old in crime."

The Jew, a member of the Italian upper echelons of commerce, Piccolo-Tigre perfectly exposes the nature of the role that symbolic Freemasonry plays:

"...This vanity of the city dweller or the bourgeois to Becoming subservient to Freemasonry has something to do with of something so banal and so universal, that I am always in awe of human stupidity... The the prestige of the unknown exerts a powerful influence on men such power, that one prepares oneself with trembling
ment to the phantasmagorical trials of initiation-tion and the fraternal banquet. To be a member from a box, to feel, apart from his wife and of his children, called upon to keep a secret that one cannot voluptuousness and ambition... We dine too much at the T... C.. and T... R.°. F.°. of all the Orients;

but it's a storage place, a kind of stud farm,
a center that must be passed through before arriving
to us. The lodges only make a relative mess...

1 The Freemasons. Saint-Albin, p. 92.

|

|
|
|
!
|
|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 379

but this is a goal that must be encouraged without ceases. By teaching him to carry a weapon with his glass, thus we seize the will, the intellect-Liability and human freedom. We have it at our disposal,
We examine it, we study it. We discern its inclinations, _ his affections and tendencies; when he is mature
For us, he is being directed towards the secret society.
of which Freemasonry can no longer be anything but
The anteroom is rather poorly lit! It's on the |, lodges that we count to double our ranks;
They unknowingly form our preparatory novitiate-
They discourse endlessly on the dangers of fanaticism, on the happiness of social equality and on the fundamental principles of religious freedom. They between feasts, they hurl scathing anathemas.
against intolerance and persecution. It's more
* that it doesn't take much to gain followers. One A man imbued with these beautiful things is not far away of us; 47 all that remains is to enlist it. The
The law of social progress is here and entirely here; do not take
"No need to look for it elsewhere" (Papers)
(to secrets, letter of January 18, 1822).
Today the lodges discourse and feast
just as much as in the past, but perhaps act to be more. Times have changed and many precautions have ceased to be necessary.

|

380 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

However, most of the lodge members
Symbols are nothing but dupes.

Occult Freemasonry.

The occult Freemasonry, which the Freemasons
they call it "Chapter-based, philosophical Freemasonry,
"Superior" and "Red Freemasonry!", is formed by all Masonic degrees above that of the master.

These ranks are called "chapter ranks,"
"philosophical degrees," "higher degrees,"
"High degrees." The masons who possess them are called "high masons", "superior masons", etc.

The higher ranks are extremely nombreux in Freemasonry. The F.:. Ragon in account' more than 1,400. A large part, it is True, it now only has purely historical value.
This number varies greatly, depending on the different rites. We will only mention a few of the principles
main ones: | |

The rite of Za Strict Observance has five parts in total

1This name is given to it because in the lini- ceremonies

The lodge, with its various high degrees, must be hung with
red. ;

HAS ::

ee ee aE ... me sn

tse

ranks; only two higher ranks: master Scottish and Knight of Charity or of the Holy City. We have seen that the charter of Co-Logne does not recognize any more: elected master and supreme elected master; above him, the grand master or patriarch, head of the entire order.

The French or modern rite has seven degrees,
four superiors: elected, Scottish, Knight of the East and Rosicrucian. The Scottish Rite and the Egyptian Rite
They count many more. The philosophical Scotsman a twelve grades, nine superior; the Scottish an-Cien or Heredom has twenty-five, twenty-two superiors; primitive Scots and Old Scots and accepted, they have thirty-three, thirty superiors; the Misraïm, or Egyptian, surpasses them all: he has four-twenty-ten ranks, eighty-seven higher ones!

These grades are often repeated in the different rents rites, under the same names or under names equivalents. We will only mention a few-one of the most important and highest which they are found in almost all rites: "great Scottish elected official, » « Knight of the Sun or great Scottish-Saint Andrew's knight, "knight of the East or of the Sword, » « rose-cross knight or sovereign prince Rosicrucian, » or simply Rosicrucian, » « horse-

"to link the great chosen one Kadosh, or simply Kadosh,"

382 Freemasons and Jews.

"Prince of the Royal Secret," "Grand Inspector"
general, etc., etc. |

Note that, in the order of the Philosopher Judges
unknowns, there are no more than two grades in total,
but which can only be conferred on free men Freemasons of the thirtieth degree of the Scottish Rite, that is-that is to say, Knights Kadosh.

In the Schroeder Rite, the higher degrees have Its foundation lies in magic, theosophy, and alchemy.
is the same in the rite or system of Svedenborg.

As for the Misraim or Egyptian rite, the brother Ragon tells us that this rite, welcomed by the The Grand Orient of France in 1816, is part of the Masonry practiced in our country. Here is what what he said about his last four ranks:

"Passwords, sacred words and signs" the 87th, 88th, 89th and 90th degrees of this rite, indicate especially its purpose, its sublimation, its dogmas and its morality. We know almost all of Masonic science—nique, when one has delved deeper into the developments—elements of the emblems and allegories that were related to "They fall at these four degrees."

He speaks of the 89th degree in these terms:

"89th degree. In this grade, one is given..." can call the last of the Freemasonry of the rite Misraïm, a detailed explanation of the rap—

mn ae

/ FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 383

ports of man with the Divinity, through the mediation of celestial spirits. This grade, the most astonishing and the most sublime of all, demands the greatest strength of spirit, the utmost purity of morals (Masonic?!) and the most absolute faith (!) The slightest indiscretion on the part of insiders is a crime whose consequences can be the more terrible. The sacred word is Jehovah. The password is Uriel, fire of God, name of a the leaders of the celestial Zegios who communicate more easily to men. The sign, which is a shovel of intrepidity, is done by touching each other reciprocally The heart. The command is: my "heart does not tremble" (Philosophical Course, p. 239) and 347).

This all sounds exactly like the cabal and to spiritualism.

The study of these multiple degrees of initiation demonstrates that these various rites and ranks are derived for most of the Scottish system. Which we It brings us back to the Templar origins of Freemasonry. In principle, the Order of the Temple, like the

- the three fundamental degrees and a small number of higher ranks. The numerous high ranks were added, more or less recently, by the supreme leaders of Freemasonry, for better to conceal the plans and the goal from the uninitiated the sect's final stage, to develop successively and more firmly the spirit, the trends and the Masonic ideas among initiates, and finally for to give Freemasonry a particular direction recognized as suitable for each country. Also these grades are often just a duplication, or even a simple repetition, of each other. Upon closer examination, one can see that almost all derive from the ranks of elected and supreme master elected master of the Cologne charter, and the rest, of the systems of French and Bavarian Tluminism. The masons holding high degrees compose the questions of the meetings which are called in Freemasonry: "Chapter lodges," or "chapters," "conclaves" and "consistories," etc. Laypeople call them "back rooms." These "backrooms" and their high ranks make the true Freemasonry that is hidden and acts safely behind symbolic Freemasonry. Freemasons strive in every way to conceal the existence of this occult Freemasonry to the uninitiated. In principle, according to the article from the Wilhelmsbad congress, meme enthusiasts Those of symbolic Freemasonry were supposed to ignore it.

384 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ee a ee The

te ten ii De eit tk:

FREEMASONS AND JEWS... 385

The need to recruit prevented the Mason-superior nonsense to maintain this rule. Since is the constant ambition of master masons.

But the Freemasons seek through their parables and through their writings to give the impression of laypeople and to dissuade them from believing in the back-lodges. i

They will say with F.°. Ragon that the high degrees "are not Masonic," that they are "schisms" (Orthod. magon., p. 11).

After him they will ensure, with F.:. Soibert ', that they are "a wart," an "outgrowth that developed within the Masonic institution at a relatively modern era," that the disappearance of these "so-called superior workshops" is desirable.

All these statements sound like those of the masters. elected in 1535. They are hypocritical and liars.

The very constitutions of Freemasonry, as well as the facts, demonstrate the existence and the real superiority of the back boxes and the upper levels grades throughout Freemasonry as a whole.

We must first remember that lexis-

1 V. the Masonic newspaper L'Événement, cited by Le Monde of May 27, 1874.

22

386 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

tence and the authority of high ranks in general are attested by the Cologne Charter and the conferences de Wilhemsbad.

Furthermore, it is expressly stated in Zes statutes and general regulations of the Masonic order in France, French rite, already mentioned:

Article 356. "The series of grades comprising each of the rites admitted by the G.:. O.°. is gen-
Primarily divided into classes, and each class is culminating in the most important of these grades:

and the specific ceremonies and each ritual. The Only intermediate grades can be awarded through communication.

Article 357. "The following are considered as ranks: more important and not likely to be conferred by communication, the first and the third grade symb.'. , those of Gr... E.-. Ec.:., of Chev.... R.°. +.°, from Chev.'. Gr.. E.. K.. St, from P.. D... R.+ S.°:, and of Gr.. J.°. G.*. »

It's impossible to deny it; these two articles of the the constitution of French Freemasonry affirms formally the existence and superiority of – high ranks, and on this point in particular, as with the main point and the substance, all the the constitutions of the other rites resemble those–

Py +–

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 387

These high ranks, clearly distinguished from the ranks symbolic, are distributed into classes, and the grade who finishes each class, being the most important– so much, cannot be conferred by simple communion cation, muis must be given with the entire pump ordinary. Among these high ranks, the most important– many are named:

1° That of the great Scottish chosen one or of Truth, which is the twenty-ninth of the Primitive Scottish Rite and the pinnacle of initiation in this system, the four others being purely administrative grades tratives; 2° that of a rose-cross knight, which is the . seventh and final degree of the French rite; 3° that of knight, grand elected Kadosh, sublime or remembered rain, which is the thirtieth and final degree of initiation The three the following being merely administrative ranks; 4th degree of Prince of the Royal Secret, the last degree of the rite ad' Hérédóm and the penultimate of the ancient Scottish Rite and accepted; 5° finally that of Grand Inspector General– general, which is the last degree of the preceding rite and the seventy-seventh of the Misraim rite.

The manuals and tilers published by several Masonic authors, and in particular by the approved by all lower Freemasonry and

388 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

superior, contain all the rituals of the col-
The awarding of all these degrees. These rituals, as well as These high degrees are consecrated by the article cited of the French Masonic constitution.
So, when Freemason writers deny the high ranks, when Brother Ragon dares to write in his Mac. Orthodoxy: "The higher degrees... are False. And dangerous, since they give rise to schisms, enmities, lawsuits, libels
excusable Barruel and others, and to the persecutors-
"actions of authority," they all knowingly lie
They lie; they intend to deceive; they have no other purpose than to hide from the uninitiated and from the other-the truth about the existence of the true Mac.:., of the Mason-inner and occult thievery of the chapter ranks.

And the reason for these self-serving and men- denials

We have thought about it, we get it from the same F.+ Ragon:
"It is the high ranks who, in these last
"Time has drawn attention to Freemasonry and
"Sometimes the persecutions of the authority and the "hatred of secular writers" (Philosophy course) pique, etc., p. 44).

The good apostles! They would like to be treated... in innocent lambs, to better keep the freedom to act like wolves!

In fact, the higher degrees and the chapter lodges

_ n. ee ee lee

ee. notes, DA nr

Fr,"

'ye

exist –and exercise authority within Freemasonry– nonsense.

Mr. Alex. de Saint-Albin quotes in the preface to his book a (circular) plate strong. curious of a chapter house, or back house, existing at Nancy, dated August 1, 1842 and signed by seven Freemason brothers, three of whom add to their name the Rosicrucian title. It is addressed to all the Freemasonry "of both hemispheres," for to announce and recommend to all the F.°. "a a reprint entirely masonic*, called sacred edition, at "the use of the LL.*. and masons only, of the "Philosophical and interpretative course of the initia- "ancient and modern tions of F. Ragon, "thirty-third degree, Venerable, founder of has three workshops of the Trinosophists at Gold.:. from Paris. »

The R.:. back-box was completely unmoved insults directed at dignitaries and lodges chapters by Brother Ragon, a high-ranking officer, however himself (thirty-third degree). She con- The intentions and the goal were perfectly clear.

1 This high lodge is called: the chapter lodge of Saint John From Jerusalem, Or... from Nancy. – L'Univers, September 15, 1879 rous learns that Mr. Edmond About, editor-in-chief of the 19th century, belongs to this lodge since March 1860. We com- now better understands his hatred of the Catholic religion and of the clergy. Ed. About is a high-ranking Freemason.

22.

390 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Gr. Or... of Paris, supreme authority of the Mac'. French, did not object to this act of power wielded by these so-called schismatics and intruders. In the examination and approval of books From F.*. Ragon, he only made a reservation that specified- lies about his attacks against the higher ranks (The Freemasons, preface).

A few years ago, the same man recounts– believing oneself to be in possession of complete Freemasonry and perfect, since it is mattve, dared to resume the senior conservatives, provisionally in charge of the Freemasonry government! His His recklessness earned him this reply: "That's being good young enough to speak with great authority about interests of our institution against men the youngest of whom has over twenty years of experience as a bricklayer—nothing, and all of them, while Mr. Fauvety does not possess

— a cane, + nn mn, OS here aan)

1 "We announced," said Le Siècle, "a few days ago that Freemasonry of the Grand Orient obedience of France was to be governed until next May by a five-member commission. This commission was, said Time, instituted by Prince Murat... upon leaving power (Grand Master). The five members of the commission... grand officers of the order..., will take the title of Grand Conservator—and will possess both executive and administrative powers administrative and leading" (Siècle, November 8, 1861. Quoted by the World, November 9, 1861).

P y

Ya

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 391

that the rank of master, possess the ranks higher in the order."

There's no need to multiply the proofs. It is certain that external and symbolic Freemasonry, that we readily make known and of which only we proclaim its existence, is simply a mask and a veil. It is certain that behind her There is the inner and occult Freemasonry which is the real one. "The boxes hide the back boxes, The symbolic ranks conceal the higher ranks. The avowed doctrine conceals the mysterious doctrine. The grotesque rites and ceremonies conceal the hidden agendas, the public company hides the company Secret?

Lodges.

The word "lodge" has two meanings:

1° 11 refers first to the Masonic society or particular subdivision, to which belong Freemason initiates.

All the rites or systems of Freemasonry have their lodges or restricted associations, which are

1 Letter from the leading conservatives to Mr. Havin, political director of the Century. V. the Freemasons, p. 91. The F... F.°. Fau-Vety is currently the editor-in-chief of La Religion laïque.

2 The Freemasons, p. 72.

393 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

more or less numerous and which include more or less followers.

We have already seen that, depending on which ones they meet ferment of the masons of the three lower degrees or brothers belonging to the higher ranks, the lodges distinguished themselves in symbolic or computer- lodges naires and in chapter or superior lodges, appealed by us, the uninitiated, backstage.

Each lodge has a particular name, including the | choice is dictated by circumstances or by the The founders' intentions. We have named some of them several during the course of this work: the lodges "Absalom, the Beneficent Knights, the Friends" of truth, the Masonic Awakening, Foresight, ©

The Future, Work, the Trinosophists, etc., etc. The chapter lodges also have their own names, which we conceals as much as possible from the knowledge of laypeople.

The latter word has a less broad meaning:
The lodge may comprise several workshops. Thus the famous lodge of the "Trinosophers," founded by the
The famous F.-Ragon owns three workshops: one symbolic workshop, that is to say the ordinary lodge,

1 V. in the Universe of August 5, 1877 the names of about twenty of Parisian lodges.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 393

and two higher workshops: namely, a chapter
or chapter lodge of the Rosicrucians, whose members are all R.:. + .*, and a council, or other lodge
superior, also called areopagite, of Kadosh,
of which all members must have received the train-
The twelfth degree of initiation into the Scottish Rite. It is why does Gr.:. O.-. qualify F.-. Ragon as "founder of the three workshops of the Trinosophists at Y0.-. from Paris. »

f It therefore happens that, most of the time, at
"The lodge" is staffed by a very large number of people.
breux. In his Philosophical Course, the V.+ of

| the lodge of Trinosophists taught us that its

The symbolic workshop brought together nearly four hundred brothers, among them the F.-. Dupin the elder, Dupin

-young, Dupont de l'Eure, Odilon Barrot, etc., etc.
He does not tell us how much it contains-members of its two superior workshops laughing.

Thus, we see that, in the enumeration lodges of the Freemasons* that we have carried
"at approximately twelve thousand for the whole world, he

'It is only a question of symbolic lodges.' In _ the past, the masonic documents give little or _ information point on the chapter lodges.

It is possible that, at the present time when the pre-

Cautions are hardly DISEMEE, we're talking more
- openly.

In their meetings, Freemasons are wearing common insignia; such as the apron of white skin and white gloves, and insignia by-individuals, who indicate their functions and their;
ranks: these are the mallet, the cords and the ru-belts of different colors, usually worn
the decorations and the color of the apron and {jewelry. This name "jewelry" is given in general to all symbolic movable objects { in use in Freemasonry. There are bi-
The elements of order, which are the square, the level, and Ca perpendicular; the jewels of the grades, which vary according to the grades and rites, and which are the most usually set squares, triangles, etc.
compasses, crosses, phalluses, daggers,
etc., hanging from cords or ribbons; bi- |
lodge games, which are sometimes the distinctive signs, lodges, sometimes rewards granted to,
brothers who deserved them.
= Many of these symbolic furniture objects are painted on canvases displayed for all to see!
brothers during meetings. It should be noted |
among other things: the figure of the sun and the moon, Ut globe, the blazing star, the stone

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. |, 393

X

~ rough, the cubic stone with a point, the base of which is cubic and pyramidal apex, Za trowel, the e-
"War, the compass, the level, the plumb line,
' the twenty-four-inch ruler, the serrated A,
The candelabra, etc.
'Masonic writers give: to the insignia,
'to jewelry and all other symbolic objects
| _ interpretations that shed a great deal of light on the "doctrines and tendencies of Freemasonry!"
+ In these meetings, the masons employ a * more like a kind of slang they only speak among themselves.

i, Thus: the true light, the royal art, means the
* Freemasonry; to receive the light is to be * received Freemason; son of the widow, children of the | widow, designates members of the Freemason-
"Frankness; we know the origin of this call-lation; cub, wolf cub or lowton is the name
'given to the child of a Freemason, and mopse ` means his wife; to ask for, to receive an aug-
'payment, or wage, or salary,
; means to ask for a promotion, to receive a
At a higher grade, etc., etc.
* Masonic meetings are called lodges;
* The speeches delivered there are called plays

-

1 jae

f

See especially the Course of F.:. Ragon and P. Deschamps.

396 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

or architectural drawings, plans. A letter,
any kind of writing is still called a plank, e

Furthermore, column, baluster: send a plank
It's like sending a letter; engraving a column, bu
To viner un balustre is to write a letter. Brigue:
means coin; large brick, trap: of |
five francs, etc., etc.

Following certain ceremonies, the Franks-masons give themselves hearty meals which they call-Table boxes. Here is the slang used by-them to designate the various utensils with which one salts serves. The table and eating is called: scaffold; the bread, stone and rough stone; wine, strong gunpowder, fire;
water, a weak powder; plates, tiles; bou-
bottles, glasses; drinking glasses, cannons, lamps;
to load the cannon, to fill the lamp, means to re-
bend the glass; blow one's lamp, drink; the dishes |

union, to form a chain, is to get up, to come together in a circle around the table, each holding his neighbor by the end of his napkin. The brothers pray always raise eyebrows at "this majestic ceremony" 4 at the end of each banquet and their solemnities,

1 The Freemasons also have their style, but it is not French. This will be easily noticed upon reading the many quotations unique that we are forced to do.

—

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. = 397

The two main festivals of the order are the day of Saint John the Evangelist, December 27, and of Saint John the Baptist, June 24. They are called — "Solstitial festivals." During these days, there is a gathering solemn and grand banquet of obligation for all Freemasons. Masonic liturgy made of These two saints are a single character who has nothing to do with common neither with the apostle, nor with the forerunner.

These two festivals and their names were a` — numerous masks of Freemasonry, when

She needed to hide. Because, for her, Saint John, or John, is Janus, the Janus of pagans. The Venerable Master, head of the lodge, took good care to explain it, according to the ritual, to the companion he receives the rank of master.

Freemasons call each other brothers. To recognize each other, they use certain words, signs and specific touches. The words vary according to rank; they communicate the sacred word, the word of order and the Word or password. Signs and symbols These changes also occur at each degree. the tilers who, along with the vocabulary, provide the words, signs and touches of all

Just as they have their own way of speaking,

| 23

398 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Similarly, masons have a way of writing certain words. They remove the last syllables. that they replace with three dots '.', or even they they simply put the initial letter of the word followed by these three points. Thus they write the formula which is placed at the beginning of all their boards: At the glory of the great architect of the universe, in this form: At the G1.-. of the Gr.-. Arch.. of the Un.-. -Lodge written: L.:.; lodges: LL.-.; brother: F.-.; brothers: FF.:.; mason: Mac.:.; freemason: Fr.°. Mac.:.; Freemasonry: Fr.:. Mason.'.; light: Light.:; East: W.°. or Or.:.; Grand Orient: G.-. O.°. Or Gr.. Or..; workshop: At.:.; works: Trav..; very Dear brothers and most reverend brothers: TT.-. CC... FF.., TT... RR.. FF.:.; venerable: Ven.... ; plate, column: Pl.:. Col.*., etc., etc.

This way of writing is very old in Freemasonry, because we see it employed in The Cologne Charter.

2° The word loge still means the room in which the Freemasons hold their meetings. In this sense, they also call it a temple. Their ritual comes from the Sanskrit word Zoga, which means the world, because Freemasonry must embrace the universe (Companion's Ritual, p. 3).

Here, according to F. Clavel, is the description of a symbolic lodge, its decoration and its personnel! :

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. ` 399

"What is called a lodge is a large room"

long. The four sides are named after the points cardinals. The most remote part where the
The Venerable Master (head and president of the lodge) is called The East, and faces the entrance gate. She consists of a raised platform with three steps at the-above the floor of the room and bordered by a balustrade.
The altar, or desk placed in front of the Venerable's throne
rable, door onto a second high platform of four steps: which makes seven steps for arriving from the churchyard to the altar. A colored canopy Sky blue, sprinkled with silver stars, surmounts the
The Venerable's throne. Deep within the canopy, in the the upper part, is a radiating delta, or glory, in the center of which one reads, in he- characters Braic symbols, the name of Jehovah. To the left of the canopy is the disk of the sun, to the right, the crescent of the moon... »

"To the west, on both sides of the gate of-
At the entrance, two bronze columns rise, whose
The capitals are decorated with pomegranate seeds.

+ Picturesque History and Dictionary of Religions, published by Migne, at Freemason word.

400 >> FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ajar. The left column is drawn the letter J; on the other, we see the letter B... The the temple is adorned around its perimeter with ten others
-columns, bringing the total number to twelve.
In the frieze or architrave which rests on the colonnes, a cord reigns which forms twelve knots or lakes of love. Both ends terminate by a tuft, called a serrated tuft, and lead to columns J and B. The ceiling describes a curve; it is painted sky blue and studded with stars. From the east, three rays emanate.
which depict the sunrise... »

... "Near column J stands the first supervising, and near column B, the second super-watching. These two officers have before them a triangular altar adorned with Masonic emblems niques. They are the assistants and substitutes of the Venerable, and, like him, they are attached to the hand a mallet, as a sign of their self-ritual... »

"The Bible, a compass, a square, a sword"
with a twisted blade, called a flaming sword, are placed on the altar of the Venerable, and three great flames Beautiful ones topped with a long candle are distributed in the lodge: one to the east, at the bottom of the steps of the East; the second to the west, near the first

"rs "(fill nf a -: en. th

<aa +.

—

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. | 401

overseeing, and the last one to the south. On both sides Several rows of benches preside over the box.
where the non-civil servant brothers take their place.
This is what is referred to as a column
"North and South columns."

a. Regardless of the Venerable and the overseers—lants, which are figuratively called the three lights,
there are a number of others in the lodge _officers who, like the first three, are elected by ballot every year, on Saint John's Day of winter. Such are the orator, the secretary, the treasurer—
sorier, the hospitaller, the expert, the master of cere—monies, the Keeper of the Seals, the archivist, Varchi—tecte, the master of banquets and the roofer or temple guard. Most of these officers occupied—each occupies a designated place in the lodge, and each One of them has a desk in front of him: they are also dis—distinguished by special insignia. In the other countries (besides France) and in lodges Tell me, Misraimites, there are officials, in a greater or lesser number... »

"It's always in the evening that the brothers meet—nissent. The temple, which has no windows, is illuminated by a specific number of lights of stars. This number is nine, twelve, twenty and one, twenty-seven, thirty-six, eighty-one, sui- |

402 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

given the size of the room and the importance of the solemnity, »

Next to each box there are rooms or apartments used for initiation ceremonies tie-up.

When the Venerable wants to open the proceedings, he strikes the altar several times with his mallet. All the brothers take their places. The F.. cou-

the mayor makes sure that "the temple is covered," that is to say meaning that nobody was outside, neither in the street, nor from neighboring houses, cannot see or hear what will happen in the lodge. The FF.:. surveil- the members go around the assembly to be certain certain things that no outsider has ever entered. To their approaching, each brother must make the Masonic sign- nique, so that no Cauter only notices the supervisor.

With everything in order, the Venerable declares the his lodge was open, and he cried out: To me, my brothers! The assistants, turned towards him, follow his example. the sign and the apprentice's battery, with the acclamation Houzzé prayer in Scottish lodges,

1. The drum kit is a form of applause with its own rules and... The number of shots varies according to rank. The battery is always accompanied accompanied by acclamation. The mourning drum is an applause- ointment on the arm followed by this invitation: let us moan! (See the Freemasons, vocabulary.)

v

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 403

vivat in the French lodges, and of a/leluia, sui- before the Misraïmite rite. Then the Venerable said that The work has begun. It is supposed to begin. always at noon, which is the time of full moon the sun's light, symbol of the 'full and true' light that Freemasonry, say the masons, procure to the entire universe. The F.-. secretary reads the drawing of previous works, that is to say has no observations to make on this piece of architecture, the northern and southern columns manifest- they show their approval by raising both hands and letting them fall noisily back onto their apron. That's when the visitors are brought in. if there are any, that is to say the foreign brothers who They come to visit the works; they are received following a specific rite and receive honors neurs according to the rank they hold.

It is following these preliminaries that... apprentice, journeyman or master, when necessary.

For initiation into these first two degrees, the
The lodge retains the same decoration as we just saw.
to describe. For the awarding of the Master's degree,
It changes completely. Its curtains are black,
strewn with funereal emblems, heads and bones of the dead,

404 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

skeletons, etc. The lodge takes the name of chamber in the middle. It is only lit by a single Yellow wax candle placed in Lorient. In the middle
A mattress covered with a sheet was placed in the box.
funerary urn above which a branch is placed of acacia. The brothers, besides their aprons and their cor-official gifts, wear a wide ribbon around their neck
moiré blue on which the sun and moon are embroidered and seven stars. The Venerable is given the title of very respectable. It is in this initiation that the "very respectable," said the chairman of the meeting, ra-tells the famous legend of Hiram or Adonhiram, this architect of Solomon's temple, traitor-
he was murdered by three companions to whom he had refused to speak the master's word, and who, by The sequel is found lost and must be recovered.
The recipient is notified, after listening to this It's a long story, and it's purely symbolic.
The following ranks, if he is deemed worthy to receive them seeing will make the new master understand that this symbol hides something quite different from the "revoannual revolution of the sun and the seasons.

For the chapter lodges, the room is arranged
in the same way as for symbolic lodges,
at least in its main lines. Some apartments
Various elements, some more numerous than others, are added to it.

But the decorations are very different and vary according to rank. There are other initiation ceremonies, other symbolic objects, other batteries, other legends and mysterious meanings laughing, recounted by a president who receives various honorary titles, according to the dignity of the lodge and the elevation of the conferred grades.

We'll skip all those details. What we
We have said that this is sufficient for our purpose.

ADMINISTRATION — GREATER EAST.

All lodges, symbolic or chapter-based, fall under the jurisdiction of a supreme lodge which bears different names, according to the different rites, and which directs all Freemasonry within the same country. In the French rite— This ruling lodge is called the Grand Orient; In the Scottish Rite, Supreme Council; in the rite of Misraïm, Supreme Power; in the others rites, Grand Lodge.

Brother Clavel, master of all degrees and a officers of the Grand Orient of France, made us know its organization.

"The Grand Orient is formed from the venerable men of the lodges proper and presidents of the di-

n
95.

406 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

towards workshops that practice the high degrees of French, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rites; and to de-Lacking their presidents, these various bodies are represented by special deputies, elected by them annually by a majority vote. The Grand
The East attributes to itself supreme dogmatic power legal, legislative, judicial and administrative all the workshops, of all the rites and of all the

France.

The Grand Orient is subdivided into five branches main ones: 1° the correspondence room and of finance, constituting the administration; 2° the symbolic room, which takes care of everything that relates to the workshops of the first three grades; 3° the supreme council of rites, which decides on all which relates to the workshops of the higher grades; 4. The chamber of the appeals council, which gives its opinions on all matters of interest to existence workshops and who makes the final decision in the disputes that arise between the workshops or between the brothers; 5° finally the committee central or electoral body, which deals with the same ma-closed-door sessions. Regardless of these five chambers, the Grand Orient contains in its within the great college of rites, which confers the

,

— ied em We ee ee —,

=. BA j

er oo

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. = 407

high degrees, a finance committee and a committee inspection of the secretariat t.

At the top of this organization is located, as executive power, the grand master. This constitution of the Grand Orient of France date of the end of the eighteenth century.

The organization of the Grand Orients, of the Su-First Councils, Supreme Powers and Grand Lodges of all systems and all The country is, more or less, the same everywhere.

Here we cannot hold back a thought.

These Freemasons of all rites and all shout in their speeches, in their newspapers and in their books against despotism and intolerance dogmatic bias of the Church; they accuse him of—nearly all governments are a state in the state.

Don't these criticisms apply much more precisely to Freemasonry than to the Church Catholic?

The Grand Orients, the Grand Lodges, etc.; of different countries are not strangers to each other They are not independent of each other. All maintain accredited ambassadors to 1 Picturesque History, pp. 26, 27.

408 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

of all the Masonic societies of the two worlds. |

The governments were led to believe, for the to reassure, that these sovereign steering committees of Freemasonry acted in complete interdependence, such as states themselves. It's one of the thousand deceptions of the Masonic sect. They act first, very certaining, in concert: what is common practice easily through their ambassadors. Furthermore, they all depend on a superior authority. laughter at their own. We will have to search What is this authority?

WOMEN'S FREEMASONRY.

The enemies of the Church and the Catholic religion—liques have always understood that they would not come never tired of destroying both of them, so much that they would not have entangled the woman in their ranks. They have applied themselves to it in all eras. The Freemasons could not fail to... to pursue this goal. From the early years of the ten—In the eighth century, they established in France the Women's masonry.

qn
+

T a rn mn ee

cre
-- ----- Se

aa

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 409

that the Freemasonry of women was instituted.
It is unknown who invented it, but she made her First appearance in France... The forms of However, this masonry has not been definitively fixed.
tively only after 1760, and it was not recognized and sanctioned by the administrative body of the Freemasonry (the Grand Orient) only in 1774!

"The Freemasonry of women, called Mason-
adoption agency, takes its name, according to the F...
Teissier?, from what the masons adopt in their special tasks... for the ladies to whom they reveal the mysteries that make up the base of this Masonry, which is quite particular-Lierre and which has no connection to Freemasonry-

the folly of men, but which has a purpose and principles moral principles which tend only to the purification of customs and feelings.

This women's Freemasonry was a di- product
The right of Templar Freemasonry. Illuminism
Bavarian, which merged with it after 1786, reveals to us the main purpose of this institution

- and the advantage that Freemasonry has in at-

Here are the ideas of the first leaders of]'Jllumi-

1 Picturesque History, p. 111.

2 Masonry Manual, p. 243.

410 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

nism on the projected establishment of a ma- order
women's conic:

"This project deserves the most serious consideration"
tion... Women exert too much influence influence on men, so that we can reforming the world, if we do not reform women-
"My..." "But they need something that directs and stimulates them: an order, a reception tion, mysteries, etc. This should be adapted to the point and appealing... We would need five or six grades... This order will have two classes, forming each with their own company, each even having their own That's a secret. The first will be composed of female-my virtuous ones (!), that is to say philosophers and well above their sex in matters of religion, according the idea of the provincial and brother regent Minos'. The
The second group will be composed of fickle, frivolous women.
voluptuous. Both must
to ignore that they are run by men.
The two superiors will be led to believe that he is at-above them a mother lodges of the same sex, their transmitting orders which, in essence, will given by men. The brothers, in charge of directing them will send them their lessons without

1 Baron Dittfurth, Councillor of the Imperial Chamber of Wetzlar.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. AMM

- to make themselves known. They will lead the first

by reading good books(!), and others, by reading them

| training them in the art of secretly satisfying their

Passions. The advantage one can promise oneself from
*This order would be to procure the true order

_ first all the money that the sisters would start by paying, and then, screw the one they promise-were trying to pay for the secrets that one would have to

to teach them. This establishment would serve as more
To satisfy those of the brothers who have an inclination

|

"For pleasure." Who could deny that these...

< enlightened ones did not offer themselves in the Mac.:. fé-
* Minimize the purification of morals and feelings?

;

Brother Ragon, with his usual hypocrisy,
gives a completely different cause to the establishment of

.,, Ladies' Freemasonry: "This amiable insti-

is
f

j
E

t

»

tution, he said, was established with the aim of exonerating pushing women out of their meetings, like the former initiates who made a virtue of Chastity? For a very long time, the Freemasons

+ have ceased to uphold this virtue. Freemasonry < feminine and what happens in the lodges proves it-

1. Original writings or documents on Illuminism, notebooks, 2nd collection, quote from Armand Neut's Freemasonry, t. I, p. 336 and 337.

2 Complete Manual of Adoption Masonry, p. 96.

419 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

wind in abundance. "For," said Clavel, "the Ma- The stupidity of adoption, like the other, has its trials.

its ranks, its secrets, its insignia, but this sound

the pretexts for the meetings: the beef, it's the ban- | quet which they are always accompanied by and eq

ball which is inseparable from it!; and what follows eS ball, which no one talks about.

In principle, these Masonic meetings men and women were called the entertainers mysterious things. This name was by Too transparent for the uninitiated. On's Giga? to put a mask on the thing that was named Adoption masonry.

The Freemasonry of women was all the rage at the time. eighteenth century, especially after Cagliostro had founded a mother lodge for the adoption of high society | Egyptian Freemasonry. "The rites of adoption have "spread from France to most of the "other countries in Europe and even in America.

"The masons welcomed them everywhere with em-!" a hurry*.

Under the Empire and under the Restoration, according to The same author, the enthusiasm was the same.

1 Picturesque History, p. 33.

2 Picturesque History, etc., p. 112 et seq.

r- sar

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 443

F.-Ragon tells us. He recounts that, "in 1852, the lodge Friends of Peace, wishing to celebrate a adoption celebration, requested permission from G.. O.: The speaker holding the symbolic chamber demands the agenda: Adoption Freemasonry not being a Freemason, having never been admitted by the G.:. O.-. This heresy of an orator who ignores the history of the body in whose name he speaks, was raised up, as she should be, by more educated members, jealous of the honor of the order. They proved that this adopted daughter of the G.. O.". , from which its name comes, had, since seventy-six years, rendered distinguished service to the Masonic institution, by propagating a effectively implements its civilizing principles. symbolic room, sufficiently lit, ac- corda granted the authorization and appointed, to represent at this celebration, the Grand Orient, the Brothers who had "Victoriously fought the order of the day."

The Masonic World newspaper notes, in 1866, which the male Freemasonry surrounds at this hour, more than ever, of tenderness and care his adopted daughter: "To claim the rights of the "woman, proclaim her legal from man and da to involve my family in acts of charity

1 The Freemasons, etc., pp. 204 and 205.

414 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"conical, such seems to be the preoccupation of a

"a number of masons at the moment" (May 1866). Then he lists the lodges and the brothers who are involved in Women's Freemasonry*.

The great liturgist of Freemasonry, the F.-. Ragon, made sure to include in the publication of its rituals, that of Freemasonry feminine. Brother Teissier did the same in his General Manual of 1856. These two authors reproduced, almost exactly, the Manual of Freemasons or the true Freemasonry of adoption, by F.:. Guillemin de Saint-Victor, printed in 1787. There is therefore no difference between the Eighteenth-century women's Freemasonry and that of the nineteenth. The only reservation to make, that is because, in the eighteenth century, the Freemasons perhaps applied more to training debauched women, while today they

They also strive to make them free thinkers.

Like the Freemasonry of men, that of Women's rites include many different ones. In some, women alone form the lodges: However, the brothers are allowed to visit the sisters. and to take part in their work: In the au-very men and women in equal numbers

1 The Freemasons, p. 205. |

ln... | LS of mm €

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, | 415

| compose each lodge. The name An-
© drogyne to this last female Freemasonry.
Thus there is the rite of Cagliostro, the rite of Scottish Ladies of Mount Tabor Hill,
: the Order of the Palladium or Sovereign Council of the Wisdom, the order of Perseverance, the order of to the Phileides ladies, etc., etc. For the andro- rites among the gynes we find the order of Felicity, the order of Knights and Knightesses of the Anchor, the order of © Woodcutters and Woodcutters, Knights and | Philochoreite ladies, or lovers of pleasure, etc.
"The organization of the rites of Freemasonry of a-
; the option is modeled on that of Freemasonry
"masculine,
The three fundamental levels of apprentice, of companion and mistress, form the Macon-

The president of the lodge is called "Grand Master-braid. The first two officers are named sister inspector and sister custodian, etc. In the androgynous lodges, female dignitaries are accompanied by male dignitaries of the same grade, etc.

* Behind these lodges and the first degrees exist T° also of the artery-lodges and high ranks, of the _ chapter lodges and chapter degrees. This

wi. AL:

416 FREEMASONS AND JEWS. o

Superior female masonry possesses mat-T: perfect braids, chosen ones, Scottish ones, § > Dove signet rings, sublime eco-seizures, sublime Scottish sovereigns, of | « Rosicrucians or Knights of Benevolence, of the { " princesses of the Crown or sovereigns ma-\\ connes, princesses of Constance, etc... He A would have a few hundred ranks according to the F.-. Ragon. Father Deschamps claims that today This Freemasonry would have ten degrees, the last of which is She is Princess of Constance. She was even carried up to fifteen degrees.

L

Freemasons have their honorific titles their badges, their cords, their ribbons and their jewelry, like the Freemasons, according to the ranks. Usually the local or lodge in which the men assemble also serves to The masons' "outfits". In these meetings the rites of reception into grades and the "works" are; consist, as in the male lodges, of | speeches, trials and grotesque ceremonies | and, moreover, immoral.

Children's Freemasonry. Masonic Baptism.

i

` FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 417

it seizes men and women; it extends

"+ also the children.

* The sect, says M. de Saint-Albin, "the re-

"...cries, as the Church demands the new-

"Born of the faithful: she parodies Christian baptism"

; "in an adoption ceremony that takes place,

1, "in the lodges, through a symbolic purification."

"She tells these children she adopts: That the | Masonic light shines in your eyes, as

Later we will make it shine in your mind!

"Just as the baptized child becomes a Christian, the child adopted becomes wolf cub, or wolf cub and she-

- gives; for even little girls cannot escape it-

* do not take. As the Christian child receives at baptism-

1. Even with the name of a saint, the wolf cub receives a name new, and it's one of those vague words that affect-

They discuss deism and atheism. The wolf cub, at

: instead of being called Pierre or Louis, will henceforth be + called in the lodge Benevolence or Philanthropy-pie, or Independence or Progress... As in the

At baptism, the child has a godfather who answers for him. "

It appears that, in the ancient mysteries of Isis,

+ each initiate wore, even in public, a mask

| that golden, in the shape of a jackal's or wolf's head,

1 The Freemasons, pp. 808 and 209.

118 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

'and from there it received the name of wolf or jackal;

Consequently, their children were called /ouveteauz. + d

This would be the likely origin of this given name!

also to the child of someone initiated into the mysteries of the | !

Masonry!

The adoption ceremony must take place in the lodge.

symbolic. The brothers are especially yt summoned for this celebration. The lodge is decorated with;

Foliage and flowers. Small casseroles are placed there.

to burn incense. After opening the computernable by his father and the two brothers supervised-lants who are the born godfathers of all the she-wolves lodge members' rates.

The Venerable asks who this child is and What name do we want to give it? The godparents having replied the Venerable, accompanying each with his actions of explanatory speech, successful touch-gently caress the child's eyelids and ears, puts honey on his lips and plunges his hand into his mouth right into a basin filled with water; then, extending
With his hand on his head, he addresses a message to heaven for him long prayer.

All of this is a clear parody of the ceremonies- - denies of Christian baptism.

-

1 Clavel, Picturesque History, etc., p. 40.-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 419

=

Following this prayer, the Venerable, having put
of incense in the censers, pronounces the ser-
the apprentice's training, which the godfathers repeat to
; name of the wolf cub, and, girding him with an apron
'white, he establishes him and proclaims him an adopted child'
From the lodge, he applauded this adoption by the .} usual battery. The entire lodge is engaged~ ged by this adoption. All contracted members-

thus implies the obligation to oversee education
* of the child. A detailed report of the

The ceremony, signed by all the brothers of the lodge, is .\ handed over to his father. This piece dispenses the she-wolf-
...to undergo the trials when he reaches the age

required to be able to participate in the work of the _ Freemasonry. We will then limit ourselves to making him re-
,;, renew his oath!

To complete his sacrilegious imitations, the Freemasonry has instituted another ceremony
_ by which she claims to replace marriage
* Christian and which she calls Conjugal Recognition ~ gale. This ceremony is still performed in a symbolic lodge.
$ bolic. It imitates the rites of the Church and the Venerable-

1 V, Dictionary of Religions, under the word Franc-Magon, Lou-calf. - See the Franks-Magons, p. 208 et seq. - F.°. Ragon Ritual for the adoption of young wolf cubs.

420 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Rable acts as priest. In the presence of the brothers assembled, the V.° questions the mason and the masons, who first presented themselves in front
the registrar; he has them renew their mutual consent; before him, and on his
In order, they give and pass the finger back and forth
They present a ring or wedding band; they bow and the V., after throwing incense into a casserole dish, he says, extending his hands
over their heads, the words of the consecration con-Masonic jugal. To conclude the ceremony,
The Venerable and the Senior Warden are listening
a dialogue between the two spouses about legitimacy of divorce!

Finally, like the ceremonies of burial
Christian Freemasonry imagined what it in his jargon he calls the mason's funeral pump Nonsense. Today it's just a charade and Everything happens inside the lodge, because that it is not yet permitted for masons to seize the mortal remains of their F.-.

But tomorrow this charade could become, by the law, a true funeral ceremony. All the solidarity, then, instead of being carried in civil burials will take place on earth, according to Masonic tradition.
ment.

|
|
|
|

\

SN the

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 421

Freemasonry wants to organize society.
HIS IMAGE.

The foregoing demonstrates that, while saying,
to better deceive the uninitiated: "We do not Let us concern ourselves neither with politics nor religion, France-Freemasonry is organized like a religious sect:
geriatric woman with her inner cult and her signs sacramentals.

Moreover, she views herself as a religion.
and even as the only true religion. To be clear about it To convince, one simply needs to open up one's rituals and writings.
the most authorized ones. We remind you of the steps-sages already mentioned:

"Each temple brings together the faithful of its community"
"Communion, here (in the lodge, in Freemasonry)"
"Men of all religions gather there,
"of all sects t. "Thus Freemasonry would be the universal temple of humanity.

"Predating religions, it is the principle
"of all religions®." "Universal religion, it
"embraces all the others and connects them all"
"between them by what they have in common; she

1 Ritual of the Masonic protectorate (Scottish rite), p. 501.
V. The Freemasons, p. 261.
Philosophical course, etc., sacred edition, p. 128, note.

"does not need priests, since each
"one of his disciples understands without difficulty(?), without
"Mystery (?), this religion as simple as
"Sublime," etc., etc.

Freemasonry therefore claims to be the religion of religions, the religion par excellence.

Come now for her a day of A universal triumph, she will impose her religion on the universe. France has already seen this in operation.
religion in all its splendor in 1793.

This is not only from a religious standpoint
It is difficult for Freemasonry to display the pretension to impose its ideas and organization, but under all the others indiscriminately, political, administrative administrative and social. "She wants to re- sensitize-
"gently or violently, depending on the inspiration"
"that she will receive in time and circumstances,
"Civil society in its own image." "The Freemason-
"Nonsense must be the matrix of modern society."

These are not empty words. When she is mistress, Freemasonry acts according to its claims. We have proof of this for the _ 1 History of the three great lodges of Freemasons, by the F.*. Rebold, p. 310.

2 The Freemasons, p. 337 et seq.

in F. Louis Redon, Masonic World, November 1866,
p. 406.

mee | i ee SS, nn, _ A PTS, EE EE, P0 - An

P

"France, to whom it has inflicted, with its three republics-

bliques, not only the motto of its lodges,
but also its own external organization.

F.-. Ragon explains and demonstrates very well
how our departments are organized,
of our justices of the peace, the national guard and its regulations, the form of our elections, partial elections and general matters, the conduct and customs of assemblies parliamentarians, everything is borrowed from France Masonry. It can also, he adds, "return-to display the three colors: the symbolic ranks
"What provided the d/ew, color of the cord of "Master; the chapter degrees, the red, color"
"of the Rosicrucian cord; and the philosophical degrees"
"sophists, the lance, the color of the scarf of the "Senior Inspector, 33rd degree?"

The sacred author failed to mention that the republic |
Masonic law of 1793 borrowed from Freemasonry
the cult of Reason or Nature, which is its re-religion, in the guise of a prostitute, and, moreover,
his supreme jewel, as a means of preaching persuasive, this steel triangle that he invented and bapnamed after him, F.-. Guillotin!

1 Liberty, Equality, Fraternity, motto of the Mag.', according to all the Mac.* authors, in particular according to the testimony Brothers Brémont, Bertrand, Crémieux and Louis Blanc, etc.

2 Philosophical Course, p. 1, 9, 377 et seq.

424. _FREEMAGONS AND JEWS.

The Mag.'s claims to "redo insens-
"Easily or violently," depending on the circumstances society in its image, assert themselves, and unfortunately-fortunately they impose themselves, in a way that is all too obvious to be able to be denied, especially in France
the current time.

II, MAIN BRANCHES OF FREEMASON-
NERIE.

1. Carbonarism. We can say that the Carbonarism had two rites, the Italian and the French.

The Italian rite was organized in the same way as the Freemason: He had a supreme governing center called high sale, which catered to mothers lodges or Grand Orients of Freemasonry. Under its management acted on sales called central offices; These women managed sales specifically called paricul- lières, which were the meetings of the initiated correspondents corresponding to the symbolic lodges of the Freemasons.

Italian Carbonarism had three grades fundamentals of all Freemasonry which called at home: apprentice, master, and chosen one. Beyond-Above them were four other ranks: apostle,

great light, sublime perfect master, prince sovereign patriarch.

Initiation rites are more or less cal-

N

NS sn sh, TI, y

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. | 425

based on those of Freemasonry. The Carbonari
They called each other "dons cousins".

In 1834, Mazzini made a reform in the Carbonarism. He removed all symbols and all the sails, as well as all the ranks. All of this
The external form was reduced to practical statutes that the initiates pledged by oath to execute- cut and have it executed. The company remained secrete, as in the past, but the reformer himself. imposed a new name, Young Europe. She composed of particular associations bearing the names of the countries where they were established. There were First, Young Italy, then Young Germany
Magne, La Jeune France, etc.

This new rite quickly recruited many people. many supporters and operated alongside the former for about ten years, until the fall of the high sale, around 1846. The members of the Italian Carbonari grouped themselves under the di-Mazzini's leadership, who became the active head of everything Carbonarism.

The French Carbonari is older than Mazzini's reform. We have seen that in 1821 the Freemasons of the Parisian lodge Les Amis de la truth had affiliated themselves with Italian Carbonarism and had adopted its statutes, after having 24.

On the side of FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

makes the necessary changes in France.
F.-. L. Blanc explains the organization in these terms:
tion of the French Carbonari:

"It was agreed that around an association mother called high sale, we would form, under the central sales names, other associations at-beneath which private sales would operate res. The number of members was fixed at twenty for to escape the Penal Code. The high sale was ori-formally composed of the seven founders of the Carbonari: it recruited itself. For

to train central sales, the following method was adopted: |

before: two members of the senior sales team joined-were ignoring a third party without confiding in them their quality, they appointed him president of sales

future, by taking one of them the title of The deputy, the other that of censor. The mission of the MP being to correspond with the association superior, and that of the censor to control the secondary association walk, high sale it thus became like the cradle of cha-one of the sales she created, while remaining vis-in their eyes, she was mistress of her secret and her actions. Private sales were only a subdivision-

complication that the progress of the Carbonari

|

|

fs

:

y
(
q

4

of LS

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 497

| could bring about relations between the upper – sales and central sales representatives. Furthermore,

just as these originated from the company

| mother, likewise the inferior societies. proceeded secondary companies. There were in this The combination had admirable elasticity. We had
* well anticipated the impossibility of completely thwarting police efforts: to reduce the limit-

| weight, it was agreed that sales would act in common, without however knowing each other

|
)
t

j

?

i

i

o

the others and in such a way that the police do not pit

`that by entering the high sale seize everything

the entire organization. I] was consequently prohibited to any charcoal burner belonging to a selling by trying to gain entry into another. This prohibition was punishable by the penalty of death.

"The founders of the Carbonari had relied on the support of the troops. From there the organization- The double tion given to the Carbonari. Each The sale was subject to a military hierarchy. parallel to the civilian hierarchy. Alongside the Char-

_. hosiery, high-end sales, central sales,

has

i

"private sales, there was the Zégion, the cohorts, centuries, maniples. When the Charbonnerie acted civilly, the hierarchy

498 FREEMASONS AND JEWS, = :

On the contrary, the hierarchy acted militarily. Civilian life was disappearing. Regardless of the force which resulted from the interplay of these two powers and of their alternative government, there were in the | double denominations that they required a | way to make the police lose track of 1 the conspiracy t.

This skillful and learned organization is admitted | rightly so, according to the Masonic historian. The French Carbonari having become disorganized | due to divisions and mutual distrust, of its leaders, it was reconstituted by the Freemason- § | higher rite in new forms. It first named it the Family Society; but soon | changing its name, in 1830 it took the name of So- society of seasons, with an organization always j modeled on that of the Carbonari. It was no longer * | question of supreme sale, of central sale, nor of particular sale, but of weeks, of months, |: and seasons. Six initiates, under the direction of a The seventh day, called Sunday, formed a week; (four weeks led by a leader called July formed one month; three months, under the leadership of a spring, formed a season, and four

TI

L

n

1 History of Die Ans, vol. V, p. 99 et seq.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 499

seasons, under the command of a revolutionary agent
^ a nameless, unnamed, lutionary

! army. Mr. de Saint-Albin rightly says that this
"It is these Julys, born in 1830, who made the February of 18481.

2. Fenianism. In recounting its origin,
We have presented its organization in Ireland.
It is reminiscent of the Charbonnerie des saisons.

3. The International. Quite different from its counterparts.
_ grénères the other Masonic societies, the Inter-
The national event was organized in the open air. The times
They had marched and the men were making progress.
We could say without hesitation what until then he had
It was necessary to hide under the emblems of Multiple theorems. Common sense had declined everywhere with the Christian faith.

The organization of the International was indicated in the account of its origin and development
! ments. A supreme council, called the general council,
'the central director of the entire association, resides at
"London and has a branch in America.
5 central councils, in communication with the con-
The supreme leader and those under his authority, direct the

* numerous workers' sections in each country.
x

e

p

1 The Freemasons, p. 452.

430 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

At the head of these various meetings are | tr
chiefs who bear the same names as in: g public administrations: president, secretary-
to silence, treasurer, delegate, etc. | you
Each section is usually subdivided into plu-f e
several groups. Monthly contributions are} p imposed on each member. They put between, p:
the hands of the central councils and the general council-ral of considerable resources. S
The organization of the International, under the name / n
of Socialism in Germany and of Nihilism in E ca
Russia is pretty much the same.
The specific statutes of Nihilism, elaborated there by Bakunin, have recently been brought to light. § C Here they are: l

3

>

Organization of the Brothers' Alliance
international.

Three grades:

1° International Brothers.

2° National Brothers.

3. Brothers of the semi-public organization of the international democracy.

-3 LT Es

X =

`

ESEE

Emma,

International brothers' settlement.

1. The brothers do not know any other pa-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 431

March

—

x trie than the general revolution, no other foreign-2 ger and other enemy than the reaction.

+ § 2. The brothers reject any conciliation or no compromise. Every move is watched by

They are considered reactionary, as long as he hasn't x not for direct or indirect purpose the triumph of revolutionary principles.

x. § 3. The brothers can never among themselves to attack or resort to the courts. They do not con-

a different tribunal than the jury of honor is born
: chosen equally by both parties. This jury
, sovereignly statue.

#8 4, Each brother must be sacred to the other.

Each brother has the right to count on help and the assistance of the brothers who are required to do everything for him, up to the limit of what was possible.

§ 5. Only international brothers can be those who accept the revolutionary program
in all its theoretical and practical consequences ques, and who have the intelligence, the energy, the honor-rehabilitation and the desired firmness.

§ 6. The service of the revolution must be re-kept by each brother as the first and the
2. The holiest of duties and interests.

§7. The brother always has the right to refuse the x services required by the central committee or the comi-

432 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

local authorities. But if these refusals seemed to be consistent-

Therefore, he can be suspended from his rights as a brother.

§ 8. No brother may manage a function public, without special authorization from the co-local community. He cannot take part in any ma-hostile demonstration against our cause. Every time he
There is a meeting of more than two of our brothers,
They are required to deal with public affairs.

§ 9. All international brothers must
- to know each other, and they must have no connection whatsoever political secret. They will not be able to belong to any-

to reveal to the central committee all the secrets of | the other company, which may be of direct interest or indirectly the international community'.

4. The organization of other companies, daughters of Freemasonry, Universal Alliance, Solidarity,
The teaching league offers nothing in particular.

These associations operate openly.

|
|

FIFTH SECTION. – ON SOME IM- PARTICULARITIES IMPORTANT IN THE ORGANIZATION OF FREEMASONRY
NERIE.

We have three points to address in this section.

See the Reichsbote in Berlin, the Vaterland in Vienna and
The Universe of March 25, 1880.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 433

of considerable interest in Freemasonry:

1. Oaths, 2. Secrets, 3. Real authority and truly a leader.

I. THE MASONIC OATHS.

In each of the grades of all the ma- rites

conical men and women, the one or the one

v

who presents themselves for initiation is obliged to pronounce |
cer a solemn oath, or vow, which varies for the form, according to the various grades, but which at The background reproduces the same ideas and the same elements.
commitments.

This requirement of the oath dates back a long way in Freemasonry; because Article VII of the Charter of Cologne mentions it. He speaks of "duties" prescribed, the practice of which must be sworn to by a solemn oath.

By this act of vow or oath, the Freemason-nerie intends to fully engage the freedom of the initiate and claims to oblige him towards her and towards his leaders to complete devotion and obedience absolute. The initiators do not allow this to be ignored
this extent of their wishes to the recipients.

The words of the rituals are formal and very clear.

on this point.

We know that the French rite has seven 20

434 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

degrees, the Scottish Rite of Heredom or of perfection,
twenty-five, the primitive Scottish rite and the rite
Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, thirty-three, and the rite From Misraïm or Egypt, ninety. One can judge what number of oaths, or vows, must have done to Freemasonry the mason who received all the ranks of his rite.

Obviously we cannot reproduce
in full the oaths of each of the ma- degrees conical. A volume would be needed, the reading of which would be would quickly become tiring. We we propose to bring back only a few of them,
and in particular those of the rites practiced in France.
By reading them carefully, one will know the meaning of all the others, and one will acquire knowledge of the mind and the trends of Freemasonry more than light that could not be given by long and eloquent considerations.

We will first mention two of the required oaths before the great Revolution in the lodges of Bavarian and French Illuminism. This reading will be useful. Because it is important not to lose sight of the fact that at penetrated and transformed by the Illuminism of Weis- .

Haupt and Saint-Martin, and that they accepted it.
and retained the spirit, the doctrines, and the means.

!

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 435

1. Oath of the first degree in Freemasonry of Weishaupt.

This first grade is that of novice. The initiation-the author begins by introducing him to the article fundamental of Illuminism:

"Our society demands the sacrifice of its members-"
sacrifice of their freedom, not over all things,
but absolutely on everything that can be a means of achieving its objective; however, the presumption for the goodness of the prescribed means is always in accordance with orders given by superiors; they are more insightful on this matter; they consider themselves born better, and that is the only reason they are superior beings; they are made for you to lead through the labyrinth of errors, of darkness and there, obedience is not only a duty, it is an object and a reason for recognition and birth." What hypocritical villainy in this start!

The initiator then asks the applicant for a name-numerous questions, among which are the following:

2° "Have you carefully considered that you hate-

436 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Unknown commitments?

6° "If you were to discover in order something bad or unfair to do, Which side would you take?

3° "Do you want to and can you watch Ze of our order, just like yours?

11° "Do you give more to our order or Society: the right to life and death?

12° "Are you willing to give at all times "Casion gives preference to members of our order" "over all other men?"

20° "Do you commit to absolute obedience— Read without reservation? And do you know the power of this commitment? |

22° "Do you want, in the event that we need to— "care, working to spread order, "to assist him with your advice, your money and of "Your resources?"

The recipient must answer affirmatively
Answer all these questions in writing and sign them. The re-
Answers to questions #6 and #20 must be accompanied by a clause meaning with regard to the meaning that: "Things commanded by order" cease to be unjust as soon as they become a means of achieving happiness and attaining the goal

j, eee; p Per

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 437

general; the end justifies the means." After these explanations The novice takes the oath in these terms:

..... € I vow eternal silence, fidelity and inviolable obedience to all superiors and statutes of the order. In what is the object of this same order, I fully renounce my own views and in my own judgment.

"I pledge to look after the interests of the order." like mine, as long as I am a member.

"Good." | |

"If ever, through imprudence, passion, or mis-
"By chance, I act against the laws, or against good of the most serene order, I submit to all that it
"He will see fit to order my punishment."

"I promise again to help the order, of my better and more consciously, of my advice and actions without regard for my personal interest, as also to see my friends and my enemies in those of order and to follow the conduct towards them that the order will have laid out for me. I am also dis-
I was ready to work with all my strength and all my means for propagation and growth of order.

"In these promises, I renounce all restrictions-secret tion and I undertake to fulfill them all, following

438 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

before the true meaning that the words nt and according to the one that society attaches to it by prescribing me-writing this oath!

2° Oath of the last degree of the Martinist lodges.

This oath was taken after a terrible ordeal preceded by a severe fast. The initiate remained twenty-four hours in silence in a huge
A gloomily decorated room, an invisible character possible made the oath formula heard that
The initiate had to repeat: |

... "I break the carnal ties that may
to remain attached to my father, mother, brothers, sisters,
husbands, parents, friends, mistresses, kings, chiefs, benefactors, to any man whatsoever to whom I have
"Promised faith, obedience, gratitude, or service."
"I swear to reveal to the new leader that I re-
I know, everything I have seen, done, read, heard, learned or guessed, and even to search and spy
which would not be visible to me.

"I swear to honor the agua tofana as a
a safe, quick and necessary way to purge the earth

t Weishaupt, the True Illuminati, general statutes, no. 11 and 12. Initiat., p. 51 et seq., Écrits ariginauæ, t. II, sect. 15.

has

|

– BA

J

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 439

they are trying to debase the truth or to tear it from our hands."

No sooner had this oath been uttered than the
The same voice announced to the initiate that, from that moment on,
He is free from all the sins he has committed up to that point.
to the fatherland and the laws. "Flee," she added, "the temptation to reveal what you have heard;
for thunder is no swifter than a knife
that will reach you, wherever you are."

Here are some formulas for the services elements of modern Freemasonry. In the French rite—
These oaths for each grade were remarked denied, its form has been greatly softened; but Does the underlying principle remain the same as in other rites?

1. Apprentice's Oath. Before being admitted to
to take the first oath to Freemasonry, the pos-Tulant had to endure several trials and hear several speeches by the Venerable Master of the lodge who well and duly warned in these terms:

"Think carefully about the approach you are taking—
Yours. You are going to face terrible trials.....

I will inform you of the conditions under which

p. 19. – The Veil Lifted, p. 75 et seq. – Barruel, Memoirs, Vol. IV. – Knight of the Phoenix, p. 265,

2 V. le P, Deschamps, t. I^o”, p. 149, note, and p. 409–418.

440 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

if you are admitted among us, if however you emerge victorious from the trials that you what remains to be done: the first duty you are required to perform.
You will be required to remain silent.
absolute knowledge of the secrets of Freemasonry...
Your third duty will be to comply
to the general statutes of Freemasonry,
"to the particular laws of the lodge, and to execute"
"everything that will be prescribed to you in the name of the majority–
"the dignity of this respectable assembly."

"The company you want to be in"
"Admitted may require you to pay for
"She will do it until the last drop of your blood..."

"Sir, any layman who is received
"A mason ceases to belong to himself; he no longer belongs to himself."
"but it belongs to a widespread order"
"Across the entire surface of the globe."

Finally, the applicant takes the following oath:

"I swear, in the name of the supreme architect of all worlds, never to reveal the secrets, the signs, touching, words, documents
trines and the customs of Freemasons and of gar–
Then, eternal silence.

"I promise and swear to God that I will never

1 See all the Mac.* manuals and Dictionary, of Religions, at Freemason word.

FREEMASONS AND JUICS. AM

betray nothing, neither by the pen, nor by signs, nor by neither words, nor gestures; never to do anything about it to write, but not to lithograph, engrave, or print, never to publish what was entrusted to me until

I commit myself and submit to the following penalty if I break my word: Gwon burns my lips
with a red-hot iron, cut off my hand, let them
They tear out my tongue, they slit my throat, that my corpse be hung in a box during the work of admitting a new brother, for to be the stain of my infidelity and the terror of others; that it then be burned and that the Ashes to the winds, so that nothing remains a trace of the memory of my betrayal.'

This oath formula is in use, said the abbot.
Gyr, in England, in Scotland, in Germany and ex
France in the lodges which follow the Scottish Rite*.

This oath is the same for the rank of compagnon.

In other rites, it is sometimes shorter,

sometimes longer, but always the same for .
the bottom.

1 V. all the manuals and Eckert, Freemasonry, summer., t Iv, p. 35.
3 Ibid.

25.

442 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Tt

Since the Rituals of the Grand Orient of France's oaths were modified in 1856.
The initiation into the symbolic degrees thus concludes.
in the French rite:

"I consent, if I become perjured, to having the throat cut, entrails and heart torn out, the
My body was burned, reduced to ashes, my ashes were scattered.
to the wind, and may my memory be in execration at "All the masons."

Lately, we have made disappear

knows a positive Christianity; and instead of swearing
On the holy Gospels, one swears on the statutes.
generals of the order, and on the sword, symbol of honor. It's another mask than Franc-

Freemasonry has rejected it nowadays because it doesn't need it anymore.

2. Oath of the elected official. The first degree of the Red or occult Freemasonry, that is the one of e/w, called the school of vengeance in the eco- rite
I know. This rank is divided into three: the chosen one of the nine,
The elected representative from Pérignan and the elected representative from the fifteen.
The French rite has brought them together and made them into one:
the elected official.

1 Bernard-Acarry senior, Freemasonry of the Grand Orient of France, p. 15.

(en mm e E PES om) A EEE g0 o

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 443

Here is the oath that is required:

"I promise, on my word as an honest man and before this august assembly, at the feet of the most high power of Freemasonry, never reveal to no man who has not done what I have
In fact, the secrets that are passed on and give the title sublime, by a chosen master. I promise to fill it with scrupulously fulfilling my obligations at the risk of my blood, in whatever encounter it may be, of sacrifice to the spirits of Adonhiram the perjurers who could reveal some of our secrets to laypeople. I will keep my promises, or else
the most dreadful death be the expiation of my perjury. After my eyes have been deprived of the light by the red-hot iron, that my body may become the vulture's prey, may my memory be in execcreation to the widow's children throughout the earth."

3. The oath of the elected representative of the fifteen is conceived in these terms:

"I, N.*., undertake not to declare, nor con-proud where I was received, nor who attended my reception
tion, nor to receive anyone who might be, unless that I have not received express authorization to do so. In case
Out of indiscretion, I consent to having my body opened, the 1 V, the manuals. Valuable collection of Freemasonry, etc.

AA FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

severed head, so that it would be represented at the Rest-
Who received me?

4. The Scottish oath. In the French rite
this grade is yet another summary of several others
of Scottish Rite Christianity.

The Notebooks of the Grand Orient of France have We modified and softened the form of the oath. We don-not the formula for the apogee of the grade, according to the Scottish rite, that is to say, of the Scottish master or Superintendent of Tabernacles. It is not necessary forget that this rite is united with the Grand Orient of Paris and practiced in France, and that moreover the Masonry is one.

The "Most Powerful" who presides over the High Lodge
said to the recipient: "My brother, although you have passed through all the previous ranks, however-
but you haven't quite reached perfection...
We need a different kind of commitment than all those that you took. They happened in 7'obs-security; this must take place in complete freedom; »
Then the recipient pronounces his wish:

"On all the freedom that I profess in all the five natural senses, on the existence of my reason and of my mind, which I declare to be nomentally subjugated, on the intelligence that sustains me

1 Ibid., Secret Societies, Volume 1*, p. 133,

=

HAS

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. AAB

holds, guides me, and enlightens me; yes, I pro-
I swear and vow to keep this inviolably
all the secrets, signs and mysteries that have been revealed to me things revealed so far, and things that will be revealed to me in the future, in the first five grades of the par-masonry facts and of perfect Freemasonry, to-which I am initiated into, approving at a high and intellectual level.
gentle voice and without fear, now that my
My sight is clear and my mind untroubled, that I I have no regrets about having committed myself, although in the darkness of our lodges, declaring it from the heart, and holding them inviolable; allowing, if I reveals that my body suffers all the pains and rigors that engage me: that they open the veins of the temples and throat, and exposed naked

: on the highest pyramid, I am exposed to suffering

To fry, on this hemisphere, the whims of the winds,

the heat of the sun and the coolness of the nights; that my blood flows slowly from my veins, until the extinction of the spirit that animates substance, the bodily matter; and that to increase further the sufferings of body and mind, I am

; forced to take pro-food every day
. portioned and sufficient to prolong and preserve-
towards a ravenous and cruel hunger, having nothing there

Too harsh for a perjurer. May the laws

(/

446 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

May Freemasonry be my guides to it to guarantee and that the great Architect of the universe me
"Be helpful! Ament."

What fanaticism and what stupidity!

5° Oath of the Knight of the East or of the Sword.
This rank is also called Knight of the Eagle and Freemason knight.

He is the sixth of the French rite, the fifteenth of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, the seventeenth of the primitive Scottish Rite, and the forty-first of Misraïm. He is therefore involved in all the rites practiced.
in France and the most widespread in Europe:

"Yes, I promise, under the same commitments"
that I contracted in the various grades of Freemasonry, never to reveal the secret of knight of the sword or free mason, to no member of a lower or lay rank, under the
the risk of remaining in the harshest captivity:
that my chains may never be broken; that my body exposed to the mercy of ferocious beasts;
that my senses be deprived of smell and hearing;
May lightning reduce me to dust to serve

1 Valuable Collection of Freemasonry, etc., Phila- edition
Delphie, 1787, volume II, p. 51 et seq., and Avignon edition, 1820, Volume II, p. 80 et seq. – Secret Societies, etc., Volume 1,
p. 148 et seq.

2 Valuable collection, etc. – Villaume's Manual, etc., etc.
– Secret Societies, tome 1^{re}, p. 475 et seq.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 447

—

"An example to all the indiscreet. So be it?!"

6. The Rosicrucian Oath. This degree is the |
The last of the French rite. It is found in all the other rites.

Here is the formula of the Rosicrucian oath as follows:
The Cahiers du Grand Orient de France provide it:

"I promise, on my word of honor, on the same obligations that I undertook in the preceding ranks teeth, never revealing the secrets of horse-

brother of lower rank, nor to any profane person, except the pain of being forever deprived of speech, of being perpetually in darkness; like a stream Blood flows constantly from my body; I suffer
the harshest anguish of the soul; that the thorns more pungent ones serve as my bedside table; than gall and Vinegar serves as my drink; may the torture
The cross finally ends my fate, if ever I
I will violate the laws that will be prescribed to me.
I also promise never to reveal the location nor by whom I was received. May the great Architect of "May the universe help me!"

The Oath of the Great Scotsman of Saint Andrew of Scotland.

1 Quarto Notebooks of the Grand Orient of France: The Regulator
Rose-Croix Knights, p. 67. – Secret Societies
Volume I, p. 413.

448 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

This degree is the twenty-ninth of the Scottish Rite
It is an old and accepted practice in France. It is found also in the primitive Scottish Rite and of Misraim:

"I, N..., solemnly promise and swear and freely to God, creator of the world, opposite from you, masters in this high Scottish lodge, and in the presence of the Scottish brothers, to preserve the secrets were hidden in the most rigorous manner which I am now getting to, as well as my opinion-personal association on their account; I swear and pro-
I made sure never to reveal the slightest thing about it to no one, not even the master of the entire order, from that I will not see him recognized in a high place:
Scottish lodge, or that my leaders of this lodge do not They wouldn't have recognized it as such. I promises to remain loyal to the order and its statutes, to publish nothing of it, neither in writing, nor by sign, nor by image, without having been authorized by my superiors-laughing, and without having any further guarantee against the betrayal; never to speak of it, unless that don't be with a sincere and discreet brother, and after I have taken every precaution; I pro-dishes more than ever entering another

Thank this permission to remain so faithful
the order, which I will never reveal, nor its secrets,

has

|
|

|
2E

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 449

neither the symbols, nor the customs, and that I do not
I will never use them to the advantage of others.
If I am unfaithful, it is my duty, if I harm
never knowingly following orders, I want everyone
the evils to which I have devoted myself fall upon Me."

These evils to which he previously devoted himself,
the great Scotsman, are the same as in the pre-
the first oath he took, the apprentice's oath.
That is why we do not repeat them verbatim.
ement. These are things like having your lips burned with a Red Jer, the severed hand, the torn-off die, the throat slit, etc.

8th Oath of the Grand Elect, but the Coal-Italian nerie: |

"I, a free citizen of Ausonia (the word varies)"
(depending on the country), gathered under the same government and the same popular laws to which I dedicate myself to establish, even if it costs me all my blood, I swear, in the presence of the grand master of the universe and the great chosen one, good cousin, to employ all the moments of my life spent making the triumph principles of liberty, equality, hatred of tyranny

1 General Manual of Freemasonry, etc., p. 215 et seq. – The Freemasons, etc., p. 389 et seq. – Secret Societies, etc.
Volume I, p. 189 et seq.

denies, which are the soul of all secret actions and public figures of the respectable Carbonara... I pro-puts an end to spreading the love of equality in all the souls over which it will be possible for me to exert that some ascendant. I promise, if it is not it is possible to restore the regime of freedom without
To fight, to do it until death, I consent.
if I have the misfortune to become perjured to my sisters
ments, to be immolated by my good cousins the elected officials in the most painful way.
I dedicate myself to being crucified within a vendita, from a cave, or from a chamber of han-Naked, crowned with thorns. I consent to nplus to that my open belly while I was alive, that May my heart and my entrails be torn out and berúinjured, may my limbs be cut off and scattered, and My body, denied burial!

9 Oath of the initiate in the Carbonari seasons.

"In the name of the Republic, I swear hatred"
eternal to all kings, to all aristocracies, to all oppressors of humanity. I swear to-absolute devotion to the people, brotherhood to all men, except the aristocrats. I swear to punish the

1. Constitution and organization of the Carbonari, by Saint Edme. – Secret Societies, Volume I, p. 415.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 451

traitors: I promise to give my life, to my-
to the scaffold, if this sacrifice is necessary for
to bring about the reign of popular sovereignty and of equality. May I be punished with the death of cowards, that I may be pierced by this dagger, if I violate my oath! » |

10th Oath of the perfect mistress, in the Women's Freemasonry:

"I swear, I promise to faithfully keep in my heart the secrets of the Freemasons and of the Freemasonry; I commit to it under penalty of being nator*.

We'll stop here. Longer quotes.

would be useless. It is absolutely certain that all the masons, both men and women, from all the rites and of all ranks swear never to reveal, no more to their FF.-. and to their SS.:. of the secrets beyond the profane, beyond the realm of the Freemasonry, and they utter against them—even the most appalling imprecations if they The various branches are failing to uphold these oaths.

1 The Franks-Magon, p. 452.

2 V. Correspondence from Rome, no. 181, February 1862, which quotes La veru Buona Novella from Florence. – The Franks-Ma-lessons, p. 382. – Secret Societies, Volume II, p. 95.

459 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

of Freemasonry, organized into secret societies, make them swear similar oaths, at least As for the substance, to all their initiates.

From now on, the reader must be sufficiently enlightened on the nature of the Masonic association-naught. Obviously a society that imposes on its members the obligation to repeat until thirteen times, or at least up to seven times, such abominable oaths, he wants to hide and to do anything other than acts of charity session or philosophy dissertations. Which of itself is good and pure, that which is innocent or harmless-Defensible, not afraid of the light. There is no need and there's no point in hiding it from the eyes of others by the sacrilegious commitments of so many and so execrable wishes. We point out new-calf that the formulas of these commitments and of These imprecations belong to Masonic rites. niques pratiques à leur présent en France, in the rest of Europe and in America.

Reading these oaths inspires more than one A sad thought. A few scoundrels gather. The first Illuminati of Bavaria were three. To satisfy their passion of pride and hatred, Driven by ambition, lust, and avarice, they conceive

|

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 4353

rale, society. They want to become numerous to
They are powerful, and they succeed! Their resources are simple: they surround themselves with mystery, they pi-When curiosity is piqued, they use grand words. Then they dare to propose to grown men that they become bound to them, to alienate their will and their freedom by terrible oaths, and they find men who consent to be seduced, dominated, moral-to lie and physically garrote, without knowing what to What are they committing to?! Weishaupt was absolutely right.
to be amused by human credulity and foolishness Maines!

And these same men, slaves and prisoners,
They claim to be superior to others! They look-they considered it beneath them to accept the revelation Christian tradition, to submit to the teachings ments and to the leadership of the Church which exposes to big day for advertising and reason, its doctrines and his commandments! As soon as they begin-tempt outside of the faith and conduct of the E-Catholic Church, men, in the nineteenth century, just as in the eighteenth, did not become-soon they will be nothing more than a herd of fools and of brutes. Blindness and diabolical vengeance, Abandonment and mockery of God!

1 Original writings, II. Letter from Weishaupt to Zwach.

454 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

He. THE SECRETS OF FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry has secrets; it admits it.
The oaths we have just read attest
the existence of these secrets that are sworn to in a certain way

What are these things so hidden that the Freemasonry only communicates with its members through
So many precautions?

In his circular, the Duke of Brunswick will...
to learn it: "A single chain encompasses the whole
a network that is now so extensive, encompassing all ranks secrets and of all the systems in the universe. All meet at the central point of all science; there is only one order. Its goal is its first secret, its existence and its means,
his second.

This is true today as it was in 1794.
The great secrets of Freemasonry consist of Therefore: 1° in its existence and organization;
2° in its means of action, and 3° in its purpose final.

Freemasonry has existed for a long time can no longer be kept secret, any more than its organization, which we will finish unveiling

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 455

in the next section. We will then talk of its means of action, and then of its goal, which is well, still his first one now, that is to say his main secret. After that, the reader will have
There is nothing more to learn about Masonic secrets.
He will know much more than three-quarters of it.
and beyond, Freemasons of all ranks.

Therefore, this paragraph will not be discussed... the secrets of Freemasonry; we want only to show how much this society is mo-
than its initiates, and that all Freemasons,
Ultimately, they are nothing but a gathering of fools.
The sect makes them take a multitude of oaths.
and oaths, to keep, without betraying him, a se-
believe that she never delivers to them.

Because it is certain that the number of Freemasons who know the true secret of the order are extremely limited.

1. Ordinary masons know nothing of the secret true, |

In the Ritual of Initiation of a Great Eco-
From Saint-André, we read: "Our F.:. ne for-
"only one community; all are ini-
"They were privy to the same secrets." This is absolutely False. This is one of the many lies of Ma-bullshit.

456 456. FRANGSMAGONS AND JUIFS. – AND JEWS.

The official actions and statements of the sect
They deny this assertion.

If the secrets were the same for everyone
members of the Masonic order, why these de-
Why such diverse and numerous initiation rites?
What about these oaths never to reveal secrets?
degrees, not only to the uninitiated, but also to-core to the masons of the lower ranks? The ma-Therefore, not all cons have the same secrets to keep-der?

The supreme directors of Freemasonry have always had an inflexible rule in the past as in the present, to keep the initiate in complete ignorance of what is happening above
from him:

Weishaupt said in his secret instructions
to his superior followers:

"In every city of any size,
the secret chapters (the back rooms) will establish Masonic lodges of the three ordinary degrees.
They will receive men in these lodges from good morals, enjoying the esteem of public republic, and of easy fortune. These men Freemasons must be sought out and received.
even though they shouldn't be useful to "Tluminism for our exterior work."

=

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 457

In another instruction, the founder of The Enlightenment gives us the reason for this measure

"Leave me here (in the lower ranks) sle brutes, rude people, fools... He is thisduring a kind of foolishness, to whom it is not necessary not to say it, because we can gain some advantage-their stupidity. Without having any wit, they have.
at least some money. They are good people.
These are the people, and we need a lot of them. They do number and fill the coffers. So get on with it!
at work; these gentlemen have to bite.
to the hook. But let's be careful not to tell them our secrets. These kinds of people must always to be convinced that the rank they have is the last!. "

The rule is the same in our century. We li-sounds, in the instruction addressed to the companion of The Grand Lodge of the Three Globes: "The Freemason novice must never forget that almost every
The symbol of order has a dual meaning,
One moral, the other mystical... We don't give to the apprentice of insinuations, never an explanation

1 Original writings, third instruction of the knight illuminated or Scottish, Nos. 1, 9, 12, 13, and first letters to Ajax and to Cato.

s

26

458 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

complete cation, because the smallest point does not could "be fully explained and understood"
without grasping the whole picture.

And in this other passage of the instruction addressed to the journeyman raised to the rank of master:
"No known rank teaches or reveals the "Truth; only he thins the veil."

Thus the known ranks, the ranks of the Ma-
External stupidity teaches nothing to the follower:
He was made a mason, but not initiated! The master received, the Ritual says, "the complement of the Ma-external and symbolic, yes, but he doesn't know

the first word of the secrets of true Freemasonry, of occult Freemasonry.

The Jewish carbonaro Piccolo-Tigre looks great
this situation of the mason in relation to secrets:

"To find oneself a member of a lodge, to feel..."
"called upon to keep a secret that is not confided in you"
"Never, for some natures, is a delight."
"And an ambition."

% Kings, princes, great lords are part of Freemasonry; they must

1 Ritual of the Mother Lodge of the Three Globes. Leipzig, Lauffer,
1825. – The Freemasons, p. 385.

Ritual of the Master Mason degree, p. 34. – The Freemasons,
p. 74.

has

FBANCS-MASONS AND JEWS. 459

know the secrets better than the mere brothers
Masons? » [They know no more than they do, Ce
Masonic authorities are saying this:

The enlightened Masonic chiefs, in their circu-
The situation that followed the Wilhelmsbad congress, ex-
The following take precedence:

"We lured the princes into the boxes, and a
A large multitude of eight followed these ghosts. Undoubtedly, the princes (the Duke of Brunswick and others) who convened the convent of Wilhelmsbad were Animated by good intentions... But a very small
A number of masons were willing to accept their law. They were not, moreover, capable of give a clear and satisfactory explanation of Masonic hieroglyphs that they did not know
Not themselves!

F.:. Venturini (under the pseudonym Jeder) said the same woman in her History of the Freemasonry (p. 149):

"The entry of sovereigns into the order is to a very good omen, although they cannot contribute to the construction of the Masonic temple. What—that we must endure the spectacle of the brilliant badges attached to their buttonholes, they are very valuable to the order, either because of their

1 The Freemasons, etc., p. 421.

460 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

wealth, either because of their immense influence. However free they may seem, the secret societies are still too dependent dantes of the provisions of the higher class; they can only develop in sunlight "Sunshine, in the middle of a cloudless sky."

"Where the prince sulks, there is ill grace" wanting to rise too high; while one can sail at full sails, as soon as a favorable breeze arises at the court. May our august guests always be exempted from working by the sweat of their brows, and continue to remain silent and inactive like the Martin's doll. Their presence produces quite a lot happy effects on those especially to whom it It already costs a lot to do something u— Tile in the shadows and the silence. Where they disappear, The building is threatened like a beehive without a queen.

The Italian Carbonarism had the same ideas about princes and great lords:

"High-end sales," said Piccolo-Tigre, "desire that, under one pretext or another, one might introduce in Masonic lodges the most princes and of the rich that we can. The princes of houses sovereign and who do not have legitimate hope to be kings by the grace of God, they all want to be so by the grace of a revolution... He did not es a PRES

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 461

There is no shortage in Italy and elsewhere of those who aspire symbolic trowels. Others are disinherited and Outlaws. Flatter all these popularity-hungry people;

seize them for Freemasonry: the high
After the sale, she'll see what she can do with it.
tile to the cause of progress. A prince who did not waiting for the kingdom is a blessing in disguise.
us. There are many in that situation. Do some Freemasons. The lodge will lead them to the Car-Bonarism. A day will come when high sales Perhaps he will deign to affiliate them. In the meantime, they will serve as glue for fools and schemers,
to the city dwellers and the needy. These poor princes These will suit our purposes, believing we are not working than theirs... Once a man, a prince Above all, it will have begun to be corrupted, be convinced that he will hardly stop on the slope.

Mazzini, in turn, wrote: "In the great country, it is through the people that we must go to the regeneration; in ours, it is through the princes; it
We absolutely have to get them involved...
A great lord can be held back by in-material interests, but we can take it from the vanity; let him have the leading role as long as he wants to-

1 Secret Papers, letter from 1822.
26.

462 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

I will walk with you. There are few who want to.
to go all the way. The essential thing is that the term of The great revolution is unknown to them. Let us not allow
"Never see that the first step to take is f."

F.:. L. Blanc, in his History of the Revolution
The solution is also formal for the past, and shows the practical conclusion of the entry of the princes and of Lords in Freemasonry:

"Thanks to the institution's skillful mechanism, the Freemasonry found its place among the princes and the Nobles? Fewer enemies than protectors. JI more and sovereigns, to Frederick the Great, of Take the trowel and put on your apron. To-What, no? The existence of high ranks being carefully stolen, they only knew of the Freemasonry: what could be shown of it held in lower ranks,

where the core of the doctrine is only perceived in confusion
sowing through allegory, and where many do not they saw it as an opportunity for entertainment, that joyous banquets... than a comedy of equality.
But in these matters, comedy touches on the

1 Mazzini Manifesto. 1846, V. War and Revolution from Italy in 1848 and 1849, by Count Edouard Lubinski, p. 44 2 During the eighteenth century.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 463

drama; and it happened, by a just and remarkable | dispensation of Providence, what greater pride- -
, these despisers of the people were led to coto be named after them, to blindly serve their influence latent businesses directed against themselves" (Vol. II, pp. 82 and 83).
As contempt and irony pierce through the Words from these Carbonari and Freemasons! What
In this case, they create great lords and revelers.
Rains! Such writings should be disgusting, to never, princes, whoever they may be, of
to give their name to Freemasonry, and their inspire, in turn, such contempt and hatred for this disastrous institution, which they employ now all their influence and all their power-to destroy it. But unfortunately, the kings
"and the powerful always make a lamentable illusion: they imagine they hold and dominate France Masonry upon entering. It is they, at the con-
'traire, who are dominated, held, and duped. The Ma-Stupidity uses them as instruments; and that's all the results achieved by the great lords and the princes. Events have proven it a hundredfold.
times, because of the plans and schemes of the hidden leaders Freemasonry and secret societies are not not things that are in the air and that one can disdain.

464 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Not to mention the last century, contemporary history-
poraine is there to show that these men were born;
The splendors have put and continue to put into practice these that they write. Louis-Philippe, king "by the matters of order; Louis-Napoleon, "prince outlaw, » became a carbonaro, member of the high sale, senior mason, and, by this way, em-Father of the French, carried out one of the principal plans / principals of Freemasonry; both believed to maintain it and direct it to their own benefit; they were harshly disillusioned: when the sect no longer had

She had nothing to gain from them, she "threw them both away" down." Such was the situation of Victor-Em-manual during his life; such is that of Humbert.
of Alfonso XII and others: members of lodges and kings from among the lodges, they are nothing but instruments of the lodges, and will be sent back as servants by them, when they can no longer to be useful to them. Ht nunc, reges, intelligite! Do-«
You Freemasons and protectors of Freemasonry!
3. But the visible leaders of Freemasonry, its external authorities, the Grand Orients, the su-first councils, the supreme powers, the Grand masters of the order, know without a doubt doubt at least something about the real and

er

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 465

—

the principal secrets of Freemasonry which they directt gent? Apparently not.

5 It is Brother Ragon who tells us this:

"Freemasonry, which is an opposing light"

: to the darkness of ignorance to stop the disastrous effects, if it had been more studied, would have constantly and without hindrance makes his followers enjoy

:, your good deeds that it bestows. But IGNORANCE

OF ITS PRINCIPAL LEADERS caused all the tribes-
"These accusations still weigh heavily on him."

Another author, highly accredited in the Ma-

_ connerie wrote, this no less clear statement
, and even less respectful:
: "As for the solstice festivals, what we
'We said for the Grand Orient, it applies very
: a good thing to the supreme council; for neither of them
- a know neither the origin, nor the purpose, nor the sipin
. «fication*.

These are the highest Masonic principles,
outright, explicitly, and publicly taxed
of ignorance, on one of the most important points of Freemasonry, on the meaning and purpose of their obligatory holidays! And what's better,

2 Masonic Orthodoxy, p. 4.

2 F.°. Rebold, History of the three great togas of francs
.nagçons, p. 489 note,

466 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

that is because neither the Grand Orient, nor the supreme conseil, did not dare to protest against such a weak assertion |;
flattering. It was too true.

Therefore, Mr. de Saint-Albin has perfectly-in turn, it is reasonable to assert that "these names
pompous of the Grand Orient, of the supreme council, etc., are nothing but pompous lies invented
designed to inspire a false sense of security in society
profane, and to deceive the Freemasons themselves-same. The Freemasons, for the greatest In number, they are all similar to the uninitiated by their ignorance of Masonic matters. The su-my councils and the Grand Orientes are composed of "These Freemasons are [expletive]!"

But there are the great masters, "the great masters of the entire order." These, it seems,
They must know everything.

They don't know much more than the others,
That is to say, nothing or almost nothing. They are always
The Freemasons themselves assure us of this.
We just heard the oath of Great Scotsman of Saint Andrew:

"I swear and promise to reveal (se(crets) never give the slightest thing to anyone, not

1 The Freemasons, p. 424. |

nn To =

THE

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 167

aa RRRŮ- MMO

I wouldn't see him recognized in a high-ranking eco- lodge.
_“seize.” The master of all order is the grand master.

The high-ranking Freemasons want to make it clear to their higher initiates that this title of great

i]

The master's role is only to impress the uninitiated and

"to the grand master himself."

That is why Freemasonry does not hesitate to

“to put at his head, or to accept from the hand of . 4 `

governments, any people for grand master. They know nothing and we don't

t' . ,

They learn nothing about the important things of lor-

k

'dre:

"Prince Murat," the newspaper said in 1852

the Freemason, the new grand master of 'the Masonic order (of January 9, 1852), pew expé-

'remented again in the occult dogmas of this

, a charitable and relief institution, arrives there fran-

| " chement with the improvement projects that we must
"hope and with the intelligent appreciation of the

'a noble and great task that has been entrusted to him!'
Prince Murat's successor was the Magnan.

z

He knew no more about the order than his : predecessor.

:

1 Issue of February-March 1852, p. 107.

468 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

re mr ner nr e aa

"He told me, laughing," recounts the grand master.
of the Scottish Rite, which he didn't know by the first word Masonic matters, which he had resisted more of one month at the emperor's will, that he §

of Freemasonry, and that in the evening i/ would be installed
grand matire'. »

Therefore, it is not even among the authorities external and official ones that we find the full - knowledge of important secrets of the order.
High Freemasonry will give to its grand masters very, to their officers and their councils, of ranks, titles and countless jewels;
but she will not give them the real and final Initiation. True initiates know this well, and if they
They were always cautious; they wouldn't say so.
and they would not have allowed the F.-L. Blanc and a others speak so clearly in their writings.
But the glory of having duped so many people, and of such illustrious dupes, it was too sweet for them to
They were able to keep their secret*.

4 To know the custodians of the true se-

1. Reply (from F.*. Viennet, Grand Commander, Grand Master-(of the Scottish Rite) to the circular of His Excellency the Marshal Magnan, Grand Master of the Grand Orient of France. The Freemasons, p. 423.

2 The Freemasons, p. 425.

7

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 469

-

crets of Freemasonry, to arrive at those who have received full initiation into what she wants and the
to achieve the goal she is pursuing, it is necessary to penetrate the ar-île- . But let us not believe that the mem-that all members of occult Freemasonry are equal
He was well aware of Masonic matters, and that They all possess all the secrets.
We would be mistaken. It's a very small number.
of brothers, only a few, who know everything.

The multiplicity of high ranks is proof
It's obvious that secrets are only given to initiates.
that successively and in small portions.

The Freemasons are warned in the lodges that
The order only reveals its secrets little by little, even in the higher degrees. The words of the Ritual are formal in this regard.

In the Ritual of the Great Scotsman of Saint Andrew
As already mentioned, the recipient is told: "By this
"A thick wall rises between us and the "laymen, and even among several of us.

"...You must firmly believe that what What you have learned up to this day is nothing in "comparison of the secrets that will be certain to you-
"The revelations were made in the wake."

And yet the rank of Grand Scotsman is the twenty-ninth of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite.

21

470 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

And what was revealed to him, after his twenty-nine initiations-tions and his twenty-nine oaths, is nothing in comparison of what he still has to ap-to take, and that he will be informed, if, all-times, adds the Ritual, "you are chosen and if you Don't make yourself unworthy of it.

Even though high Freemasonry confers her initiate the ranks which she calls the rank of the highest architect, the epitome of perfection, of the ultimate in Freemasonry, it does not
So he doesn't tell her everything and doesn't always open up.
entirely his. The authorized writers, the real ones.
Those in the know clearly agree: "There is such a mason, says Brother Draeske, who will not succeed never to know our secret, not even by the lodges notwithstanding all its ranks: it is only one profane, he said, sitting to the east of the Temple, and were he
'wearing the insignia of Grand Master'.

F.:. Marwitz is no less explicit
"At the top of the order," he said, "are the perverse men who covet only wealth, domination and power, and for whom all the
The means are good as long as they serve to achieve the
But further down are those who imagine they have

1. Speech delivered at the Bremen Lodge. 1849. V. Revelation of a Rosicrucian, p. 39.

mo At 99 minutes ES

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 414

reached the highest rank, while they won't even treading the first step of the Temple which theirs is unknown. First, there are the enthusiasts. who want to spread the reign of reason, costs that it costs; then come the narrow-minded, who contrive to contribute their scholarships to the work common. Each of these categories believes in benevolence—that it is the keystone of the whole order; a venerable member of the ornate society would not be a little surprised to learn that above him are the enthusiastic; and the latter would accuse you of imposture, if you were to claim that they are not themselves—"Same as the plaything of schemers!"

These words are particularly worthy of being noticed.

For the present, as for the past, the F.—. of Brunswick told the truth on the point which concerns us in his circular of 1794: "Your Teachers should have told you... just as our fathers did" "We had learned that the secrets of the lasso—" "Citation cannot be known except by a few" "MASTERS; for what would become of secrets which "Would they be known by too many people?"

From all these testimonies we therefore have the

1 Revelation of a Rosicrucian, p. 40.

472 FREEMASONS AND JEWS:.

right to draw conclusions with several writers—

following sections:

"While a comparatively small number sanctuary inaccessible to all others, thousands of brothers, fascinated by descriptions of obs-Cures and deceptive practices are merely instruments blind people, which are used to destroy, either di-directly, or indirectly, to collect large sums of money, to find protection in their influence, or to hide behind their name, finally, to act on third parties including

The position can be advantageously exploited.
for the benefit of the sect" (The Protestant Eckert, Za Frane-Magonnerie, t. I, p. 11 and 12).

a The number of dupes among the initiates is at almost incalculable... The ignorance to which is condemned the crowd of masons surpasses all that one can imagine; the only thing one tries to make the narrow-minded class understand Enthusiastic people are enthusiastic because there are social reforms.
The thing to do is for the brothers to shake everything up.
religious prejudice (Riv. d'un Trose-croix, p. 39)
and 47). – "There are a lot of dupes in the lodges" (Mandate of Mgr Deschamps, archev.
(from Mechelen, January 1874).

+ Ny n, – Ee ng ne. _ =

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 413

Before we finish, we add another
a conclusion that escapes our pen.

All these testimonies from fanatics, from carbonnari, masons, Protestants, showed us 1a Freemasonry in a rather unflattering light. It now gives us the impression of a rogue who, for
to put on a show, shouts louder than the others:
"Thief!" he exclaimed, pointing at his neighbor.
Doesn't she claim, this liar, that she doesn't do-
She won't say, hypocrite, against the Catholic Church-lique, regarding quests, collections, and fundraising descriptions, casual fees, Saint Peter's penny, etc...! What cries against his supposed love of Money: it's the religion of money, it doesn't want Money is all she needs; you can get everything from her with money.
etc...! Hey! But, the "sacrosanct Freemasonry," the "pure and true light" does not disdain
She wants money too! She wants it, and lots of it!
She's asking for it, and in quantity.

milk churns, a whole flock of brothers who have no other merit in her eyes, and they receive nothing from her the "true light," which is what they need to open their purses for him and let him draw from it with his bare hands. And these are the TT.-. CC.:. and TT.:. RR.-. brothers who ap-
They take that. We don't go into the lodges.

="

` L ES

474 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Isn't "royal art" truly the art of to deceive his neighbor, to extract money from him without him know where they go, and mock him by-above the market? We're not lying, are we?
We are speaking from the perspective of the Freemasons themselves.
If the Catholic Church asks for money, it
She does so without deceiving; she appeals to charity.
and to the generosity of his children, for charitable works public, for obvious needs that they may-wind control. She then does not fail to re-
Thank you sincerely to those who donate to him.

II]. THE REAL AND DIRECTING AUTHORITY IN THE FREEMASONRY.

An extremely interesting question to revisit.
The solution now is this: where does the self-supreme and truly ruling rite in the Freemasonry?

I. She cannot be in the Grand Orients, supreme councils or supreme powers, nor in the grand masters of Freemasonry extéboth formal and official, since, as we have just Neither of them knows how to see him.
secrets of true Freemasonry, of Freemasonry occult. It is essential to know both.

SE AS, , and a TT, | ncn, S. - ~ y

the principal secrets of Freemasonry, that is to say "its goal" and "its means of action," in order to be able to to guide and direct it. Also, in reality, all its authorities, and in particular the grand masters who seem to be at the pinnacle of power, are not point the truly governing authorities.

The Duke of Brunswick, Grand Master of all order, one of the first to realize it was once.

"From the very beginning of the French Revolution, a Ominous unrest manifested itself beyond of the Rhine. The governments understood the whole The gravity of the danger. But they could not strike the sectarians, being themselves affiliated. They had appeal to the Duke of Brunswick. The Duke addressed a manifest to those of whom he was the leader, who had its aim is the closure of lodges subject to its obedience. This illustrious narrow-minded man... had taken seriously his role as grand master. Also his astonishment He knew no bounds when he realized that ~ the flock of which he believed himself to be the shepherd consisted exclusively of wolves. He found nothing better to explain the metamorphosis which had just taken place before his eyes, what a lot of going-to fight the intervention of Illuminism in affairs of his order. Yes, no doubt, the Illuminati had they inspired their spirit to the eclectic Freemasons, but without the Duke of Brunswick's knowledge: which proves that this high-ranking figure was a stranger to the government. the sect's member, although he was decorated with the title of a grand master (Revelations of a Rosicrucian, p. 51).

476 | FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Mr. de Saint-Albin cites similar facts and asserts that "the authority of the grand masters is not that it's a lure, and they are the first ones to be fooled... that the masons constituted in dignity, decorated with nominal authority, are powerless to direct the lodges, and docile to the impulse they receive of them... »

"...We can no longer," he adds, "allow ourselves to France, of the Grand Orient of Belgium, of the Grand Eastern Italy, etc. Freemasonry is a and universal. A single direction must con- to achieve this great goal... that the Grand Orients They hardly know. If the Grand Orients allow themselves to be led docilely towards this goal in- known... they won't see the lodges revolt against them. But if they were to take at Serious about their comedic authority, the boxes their would soon learn... that they are not established to command, that they are established to obey the unknown will which manifests itself through the lodges.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 417

= meene

.

And if the Grand Orients were still resisting, they would make them disappear, as they do- know how to disappear here in France, a few years, a great master who thought he was everything- powerful !. "

Thus, in all these external authorities, he did not

You have to see that these are just showy authorities. The big shots

Masters, the Grand Orients, the supreme councils and the supreme powers, etc., are sem-masks of chiefs and authorities, which They hide the leaders and the true authority. They have of real action than as executive power and administrative structure of Freemasonry. These are the the first cogs in this infernal machine; they They do not function on their own: they obey to the hand holding the crank.

Everything demonstrates that this supreme authority and True leadership rests on the heads of a few only people, who remain and must always remain absolutely unknown to the universe versatility of Freemasons of all rites and of all the ranks. This is a fundamental principle of The Masonic order. The writings of the Freemason-

nothing will provide us with further proof of this affirmation.

1 The Freemasons, pp. 379 and 380 and 363 and 364.
27.

478 FRAN(S)-MAGONS AND JEWS.

ae a ay ne ns de

First, let us recall, by summarizing them, those which have already been mentioned:

The Cologne Charter expressly states that Freemasonry is governed by a leader unique and universal, "known to very few brothers,
only chosen masters, visible and invisible
at the same time, which she calls the "great elected master or patriarch." It was decided, at Congress of Wilhelmsbad, in 1782, that, in the Ordinary Freemasonry, it would never be done
No mention was made of high ranks or unknown leaders.

In the conferral of the first degree of the order
The president told the unknown philosopher judges to the initiate who must be a Knight Kadosh, a Freemason
of the thirtieth degree: "Are you quite convinced, my brother, that the Masonic order professes the Scottish rite, or in the possession of the sovereign prince-the epitome of the royal art and which he alone knows best
The great secret of Freemasonry?..... We do not-we have the sublime knowledge that we teach-Let us hope that thanks to the benevolence of our leaders, illus-
"Very unknown people who govern us."

In the next and final grade of this rite, which He dominates all of Freemasonry; the initiate must pronounce a seven-point oath, the fifth of which bears
this :

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 479

een die

"You swear and promise to do, to speak and to write at any time, in any place and to
at any hour, whatever is prescribed for you by the ordres of a legitimate power, to which you swear obedience, may it be to you until... unknown scent and that she can still see for a long time '. "

One of the most important and most active members
tifs of militant Carbonarism wrote in 1835 to a another carbonara:

'We form an association of brothers on all points of the globe; we have wishes and common interests... We all tend & the liberation of humanity; we want to break every kind of yoke, and there is one that we doesn't see, that one can barely feel, and that weighs on us. Where does he come from? Where is he? Nobody knows.
no one knows, or at least no one says so.

"The association is secret, even from us, the veterans of secret societies. It is demanded bysometimes things happen to us that are sometimes... to make the hair stand on end... I won't-
"Do not call for my obedience, etc."

- 1 Masonic Orthodoxy, p. 173 et seq.
2. Letter from Melegari of London to Doctor Breidenstein.
Crétineau-Joly, the Roman Church, etc., vol. II, p. 124.

480 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The French Carbonari was run by the
in the same way. "The duties of the charcoal burner are to have a rifle and fifty cartridges, to be ready to dedicate himself, to blindly obey orders of unknown leaders" (F.-L. Blanc, Hist. of ten years, p. 98). |

The famous and high-ranking Freemason Henry Misley, who,
in his long career as a cult leader, had known the most hidden secrets of Freemasonry, wrote to Father Deschamps in 1855: "I I know the world a little, and I know that, in everything
this great future that is being prepared, there is only four or five holding the cards; one more pent! ».

Among these "four or five" who lead the
in the world, there must necessarily be one who presides, and whose vote is decisive in the event of sharing, commanding the will of others. By Consequently, based on this contemporary testimony and irrefutable, we have proof that, today-today, as in the sixteenth century, the Freemason-nerie, with all its branches, is headed by "a patriarch, » « sole and universal leader, » « vi-both visible and invisible at the same time," known to a few

2 V.le P. Deschamps, Secret Societies, vol. III, p. 503, note.

\

has

?

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 481

elected masters, in very small FOR his helpers and his advisors.

This supreme and real authority of France Universal Freemasonry is absolute throughout the strength of the term.

Freemasonry has always demanded of all its members complete obedience to the superiors ri-, and ultimately to the latter su-an unknown superior who holds the entire order in his Let's gather the testimonies cited here and there.
in this study.

We read that the English Templar lodges-its establishments in the eighteenth century in Germany demanded blind obedience from their followers.
The general statutes of Illuminism demand-also said to all the initiates "The sacrifice of their freedom, not over all things, but absolute freedom.
ly on everything that could be a daring means-giver to the sect's goal. They added this re-boldly hypocritical inflection: What about that
"Obedience was not only a duty,

"sance!" because the superiors of the order con-better than anyone else, his interests and its goal.

We repeat that the Enlightenment has penetrated from

A82 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

his spirit the Templar Freemasonry and made it the Modern Freemasonry, which imposes on the brothers the same submission as in the previous century.

In the reception of the apprentice, the Venerable does not
He doesn't fail to tell him: "Sir, all pro-
"A fan who becomes a Freemason ceases to be a-
"to hold; it no longer belongs to him; but it belongs to
"an order that is spread across the entire surface of the
"globe."

In one of the instructions: the third of-
to see (from fr.. mac.) is... "to execute all this
This is prescribed, in the name of the majority of this respectable assembly" (on behalf of the lodge).
Another speech warned the apprentice that the so-society, of which he wishes to become a member, will require maybe he'll pour his money out for her until the very end not a single drop of his blood.

We just saw that, for the
the highest rite of the Scottish Mag.:, on exi-
the initiate's oath to obey the power superior, although it was unknown to him.
indeed, one of the duties imposed on the charcoal burner
The French were expected to blindly obey the orders of unknown leaders.

When Italian Freemasonry was established its unity, after Cavour's death in 1861,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 483

at the important congress on December 26th
On January 1, 1862, it was well established, according to the principles... constant principles of Freemasonry, which each macon would be bound to absolute obedience; that They would all remain silent, not only on what would be said or done in the lodges, but lodge members. And as Freemasonry likes

Many people wear masks, when they are useful to them.

It was recommended to use only with a extreme reserve, in public speeches, of ex-Masonic pressures, and he was especially de-split to appear with the insignia of the Mason-nonsense at a brother's funeral. So the sect still needed these precautions in Italy t. |

This prescription of obedience and submission-absolute sion is placed with the greatest care under

The eyes of the Freemasons, as interpreted by authorized interpreters of the order. Brother Ragon, in particular, of-commands obedience in explicit terms: "Let one

"Obey the leader... May man in his summer
"He knows how to work, obey, and respond."

This maxim, he adds in a footnote, reminds us

1 V, Neut, Freemasonry, vol. II, p. 306 et seq., and the P. Deschamps, vol. II, p. 554.

484 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

= `

that of the adopted Freemason: "to work, to obey"
and to remain silent, recommended to the sisters! »

The initiation rituals recall and prescribe continuously either in formal terms, or in symbols, complete devotion and obedience entirely devoted to the order and its leaders: thus, to quote
For example, in the rank of Grand Scotsman one places
a hide on the recipient's cow; one of the si-
The grade's symbol is that of a severed belly; the sacrilege-Abraham's figure serves as an allegory: clear symbols and energetic in their devotion and submission

than to the sacrifice of his own life and the lives of others.

And the wretches who bind themselves by oaths

Such appalling things, things that must be kept secret that they do not yet know, which promise a such absolute obedience to commands that they ignore, who make such a complete sacrifice of their vo-long and their freedom to completely unknown people have the audacity to rise up against the vows of our religious orders, against fanaticism of the Jesuit, against the respect and submission that demands the Catholic Church. Before pronouncing their vows, religious men and women of all

1 Ragon, Cours, etc., p. 373, and P. Deschamps, t. Ier, p. 39u.

_ TE, | ne ara

= Ry, EE, es RG EEE,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 485

~ sort of know perfectly well what they are committing to,

}

"xe

1
=

to what extent they commit themselves and to whom they submit,

- within a strictly defined limit, their obedience-

their freedom and liberty; and all of us, devoted sons of the Church, we know in advance, and the uni-

towards us, the person, or at least the

in the name of our supreme leader and our other leaders,

– and anything else they might order from us.

J

Are the bricklayers entitled to say the same?

Which of them, or of us, are fana–

Ticks and slaves?

Let us conclude with Mr. de Saint-Albin:

"Freemasonry is an immense army"
where the jobs are diverse, but where all have ceased

'to belong to oneself in order to belong only to the | same cause they serve under the leadership of : same leader... The distance separating the Mason-> symbolic or external Freemasonry

High ranks do not preclude the existence of...
They have close ties, because "Freemasonry is a, » bonds of slaves to masters, chain iron that is easier to shake than break..... »

"Registered here or there (in the Franc-Mag.-. or (in its branches), man also ceased

; to belong to himself; it belongs to the ar–

486, FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

He belongs to the war. He has no Hatred, he knows of no enemies... Eh!

to be exercised, or a desire to be satisfied. The recruits of Freemasonry belong to their unknown leader, they belong to the so-secret societies, they belong to the war against Christian society... »

To that unknown leader who hides in the shadows... to this mysterious and terrible leader... all the Freemasons of all rites and all ranks are linked, without even knowing his name, by an oath of blind obedience... »

"The Freemason is a slave who doesn't know the name, and who we must never see the face of his master."

A high-ranking Freemason, well-versed in maconical, the revealing Rosicrucian, already mentioned several- Several times, confirms and summarizes these assessments:

To believe without proof, to obey blindly, to compromising if necessary, by making oneself the insepassive ment of the mysterious power that the directs, such is the humiliating role that the peat maconical is condemned to play*.

- 1 The Freemasons, pp. 380, 92, 429, 181.
- 2 Revelation of a Rosicrucian, p. 6.

|

aM

i

4: ai

—

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 487

On this question of "real and direct authority" "Giant" in Freemasonry, a point of

"nationality belong to 'these strangers' who
* possess this formidable power, these "qua-itre or cing » which are the first engines and the : directors of affairs, not only European-
Not unique, but universal?

Were they English when Lord Palmerston seemed to hold all the strings of politics? Didn't he-

Were they not Italians in Mazzini's time?

and of Cavour, or rather of the French, when

Napoleon III believed himself to be the arbiter of Europe? No

Are they not Germans now that the prince

Bismarck's actions made all states tremble with the Afraid of its cannons? All these pen- characters

: know how to "hold the cards," as Mises says, and

They were in reality merely more sophisticated instruments

; or less brilliant in the hands of "unknowns"

who made them move like brilliant ma-

- rionettes, but which have not been and are not English,

Neither French, nor Italians, nor Germans.

These harmful men belong to the race of Abraham, they are Jewish. They are the principal of the Jewish nation, the most intelligent and the most rich, who from century to century, since the dispersal

488 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Zion, were the leaders and princes of Judah and watched over his destiny.

To support this claim, we have General reasons, testimonies, and facts.

IV. THE JEWS, LEADERS AND DIRECTORS OF THE FREEMASONRY.

I. That the leadership of Freemasonry and its branches either in the hands of the Jew, a priori, This proposal is very plausible. Because the the Jewish nation has formed itself over centuries, | a huge secret society. She had in her – within all the necessary numbers of skilled, active men, persistent and discreet in training managers stronger than any kind of company occult. Its dispersion and its situation in the middle other peoples inevitably led him to give himself up | this organization. A providential action, í proclaimed miraculous by the Synagogue as Í by the Church, did not allow Jews to become mer- to deal with the nations among which they lived, but it did not prevent them from doing to weigh upon them the full weight of an unreconciled hatred- (liable and of immeasurable contempt. It took them 7

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. ABD

therefore, in order to provide for their defense and their interests, to the preservation of their faith and their hopes, to form a compact society 'and perfectly disciplined under the strict law of secrecy. In fact, for eighteen centuries, the Jews have always maintained among themselves, on the one hand from one world to another, of religious relations, business and nationality. Power and extent- due almost universal to their trade, the activity- "the speed and discretion of their agents, gave 'to the nation's leaders safe and name- i breux to correspond with each other to at any distance, to consult and to- 'gir with a perfect ensemble on all points -of the world at once. | | "So then," said Mr. Gougenot des Mousseaux, 'from among the peoples who abhorred him, Israel, – groaning at the apparent weakness caused by – its dispersion covered the entire face of the globe : from a family of brothers, of a sacred affiliation, "each member of which is a servant of every other *member, drew its strength from the common trunk.' 'With this organization, "born in a way 'of itself,' Israel traversed the centuries, under the

with a watchful and astute eye every incident likely to serve their instincts for profit and domination, and "any event likely to occur in the long run, the in-"The tiresome waiting of their race*."

The attention of these leaders was necessarily and singularly excited by the great comm-
tions caused by Protestantism, and which shakes- |
Christian society in the sixteenth century, and especially by the practical consequences that arise from it-
flowed from a political, social and religious point of view
These results manifested themselves with more of brilliance and strength at the beginning of the tenth

Eighth. Their age-old hatred of Christ. And the 490 to AND JEWS.

direction of his superiors, who never stopped spying
2m

his Church , and undoubtedly also the inspiration of cursed swaddling clothes, their father, must have suggested to Jewish leaders to take advantage of this new situation
new and favorable in the direction of their appetites and of their hopes. It was then that, coming out of its immobility for so many centuries and its life ex-:
clusively and rigorously thalmudic, |
the most restless and intelligent part of Judah, at the instigation of its princes, began to act upon Christian peoples through the means of 1 V. the Jew, etc., p. 338.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 491

. occult societies, either falling into those that exist-

were already there and by gradually taking possession of it, either by creating new ones.

On the other hand, it cannot be denied that, in
In fact, the Jews, from time immemorial and more or less, had a hand in all the societies of the oc-cults. Because, according to the unanimous testimonies of by authors, both Freemasons and Catholics, whom we have cited

, at the origins of Freemasonry, all the Gnostic, Manichean, Templar sects and all the other secret societies of the Middle Ages and of the last century, were related to the Jewish Kabbalah. They practiced it, and consequently-that they had as members and as doctors Jewish Kabbalists. That this action was pen-long-lasting, local, and very res-

Thirty, we agree; but only one
It would suffice to explain how the Jews,
at a favorable time, were able to penetrate easily and in large numbers in all societies.

existing cults, seize them, unite them into one beam and become their sole directors.
We have outlined the indications above.
historical facts suggest that the Jews
became active members in Freemasonry

Templar order towards the second half of the eighteenth century

492 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

century. It is understandable that in such matters it is It is impossible to present precise dates and to report, using irrefutable evidence, the pre-
The first action of the Jew against the Christian nations through secret societies. But one can to state, without fear of error, which eighteenth
The century was the era of the first attempts at Jews in this sense. This century prepared and witnessed the birth their power over Freemasonry and over the other occult associations; the nineteenth has led this power to its zenith.

general, but from another point of view,
We will arrive at the same conclusion.

It suffices to lend to contemporary events
the most ordinary attention to be struck by the universality and unity of the persecution that suffered at the hands of the Catholic Church.

It is under attack throughout the entire universe; there is no country is an exception; it is persecuted in a very large number of countries; and Everywhere, attack and persecution follow.
same method, strike at the same points, and employ similar means.

Bishop Martin also exclaimed with equal fervor
Elocution, but truth:

(

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 493

"In the face of this persecution of a uni-precedented versatility, of the simultaneity of its actions, the similarity of the means it employs,
we are inevitably led to conclude the existence-
tenancy of a given direction, of a set plan-ble, a strong organization that executes, a
A fixed goal towards which everything tends. Yes, it exists.
this organization with its goal, its plan, and the hidden direction to which it submits; society compact despite its dispersal across the globe;
a company mixed up with all companies without being subject to
of none; a company of a power above
all power, except that of God; society terrible, which is for religious society, as for civil societies, for the civilization of world, not just a danger, but the
the most formidable of dangers; society so many times Anathematized, and a thousand times deserving of it. Confession-the one who doesn't see it, and woe to us because of that many who could and should have seen, or did not They didn't see it, or they saw it too late. The generic name that this execrable sect has borrowed is on all the lips: Freemasonry; the name she holds
"Of its nature and its author, it is destruction!"

1 Pastoral letter from Bishop Martin of Natchitoches,

494 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

But who gives this society this "strong"
organization that "executes" the "plan" everywhere
"As a whole?" Who makes it "compact"
despite its spread across the globe?

It is obvious that interests, desires,
the passions and ideas of these hundreds of peoples,
those who inhabit both hemispheres are not identical. Moreover, they are governed by authorities and different dynasties that have neither neither the same trends, nor the same ambitions. If this immense occult society was composed than individuals belonging to these various countries,
the unity, method, and strength of its action at-
would have been promptly and for a long time compromised, disrupted and diminished by the availability
divergent situations of these numerous nations.
This society, or rather this army, to remain-
to understand what she is and to act accordingly, must
to have managers recruited from outside these nations, habitat and can act everywhere and having ideas and a goal of their own. It is through these frameworks that she is maintained in its strong and persevering unity.
However, only the Jews offer these conditions. They are therefore the officers of the immense army of Macon-nothing; they hold it and direct it. It will be said:
Satan's influence produces this unity of action.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 495

Without a doubt, the spirit of darkness is the first engine and the first leader; but to act on the _ men, to gather and form into a single ar-
the system, organized as it is today, all the elements of evil that exist in this world,
heretics, impious, ambitious, libertines, declassesame seeds of all kinds and from all countries, he needs instruments.

These instruments, Satan can only find them
among the peoples who belong to it: the idol-three, the Muslims and the Jews. Now the two priests-
The first ones lack an essential condition, they do not

The whole world, like the Jews. Until the time marked, the Jews will be the nation and the instruction-Satan's favorite thing. Since their dei-cide, they are his property, more or less the same The title that humanity after Adam's sin: the The crime of the Jews was like a second original sin. g'inel for this unfortunate race t. From On that day, they were, as has been said twice Our Lord in the Apocalypse, and in particular for the time period in question, the synagogue of Satan, "synagoga Satanæ," the Church of the Devil. (Apoc., c. 1, 9, and c. n, 9).

1 Sanguis ejus super nos and super filios nostros!

496 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

IT. Individual testimonies abound in
In support of our thesis: we are not alone in our opinion.

1° We find a first trace of the action
Jews on Freemasonry in his books
authentic and sacred.

First, there is the ancient, terrible form and
"entirely Jewish in its oath by which the initi-
"I ask, in case he betrays some of them"
"signs and mysteries of order, which we Jews
"Tear out his tongue, let his entrails be burned,
"Let them be reduced to ashes!" We have quoted in full this oath of the apprentice mason.

Next, dialogue is part of the initiation ceremonies into the Rosicrucian rank and which can only come from the Jews: "Very wise," he said
The first warden, here is a worthy knight
from the East who presents himself to the sovereign chapter to obtain the favor of being admitted to the sublime Rosicrucian rank.

The very wise one: Worthy knight, who are you?

The recipient: I was born to noble parents of the tribe of Judah.

The very wise one: What country are you in?

_ 1 Goschler's encyclopedic dictionary, vol. IX, art. Freemasonry, p. 139,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 497

The recipient: Judea.

The very wise one: What art do you profess!

The recipient: Freemasonry.

And a little further on, this second dialogue:

Q. Where are you from? A. From Judea. Q. By what route? Have you passed through? A. By Nazareth. D. Who are you led? R. Raphael. D. What tribe are you from? You? A. From the tribe of Judah.

Let us also remember that the sacred author of Freemasonry, Brother Ragon, names the Mis-rite Raim, a Jewish rite, because, he said, the Jews They dominate there. Now, Brother Clavel, a Masonic writer—that considerable, too, he has already told us that "the leaders of the Misraïm rite claimed to privilege of directing indiscriminately all the branches of Freemasonry, including Misraïm, according They were the common ancestor.

2° The secret papers of the Italian high-level sale The link provides us with a second indication very clear of the presence and action of the Jew in secret societies and Freemasonry.

Mr. Crétineau-Joly specifically points out the member of the high street, nicknamed Piccolo-Tiger: "This Jew," he said, "whose activity is infatigable, and who never stops running around the world for to stir up enemies at Calvary, plays, at this time—that of 1822, a role in Carbonarism. He is sometimes in Paris, sometimes in London, occasionally in Vienna, often in Berlin. Everywhere he leaves behind Traces of his passage, everywhere he affiliates himself with the societies on which impiety can rely. In the eyes governments and the police, it's a margold and silver candle; one of these bankers cos-mopolites, living only by business and not occupied-exclusively from its trade. Seen from Closely examined in light of his correspondence, this man will be one of the most skilled agents of The prepared destruction. It's the invisible link.

98.

498 FRANKS—VAGONS AND JEWS.

bringing together in the same community of storylines
all the secondary corruptions that work to the overthrow of the Church.'

But this Jew is not the only one in the Carbonarism, the papers of the high sale show us
the Jew Jacobi, the Prussian Jews Klauss and Op-Penheim, central sales managers, and others eggs from Siberia, Portugal and Hungary, which are in active correspondence with Piccolo-Tigre and Nubius, and which procure for the supreme sale the funds necessary for its businesses °.

1 The Roman Church facing the Revolution, vol. II, p. 108.

2 Ibid., pp. 114 and 115. – This Oppenheim is probably

RS in SR RES

M, ee, , ~ mans US ~pa

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 499

3. The other documents we have cited in the course of this study we have shown plus the German Jews: Marx, Lassalle, Outine and the French Jew Jules Simon, founders or active members of International and of the Sociallism; then the French Jews Cahen and Crémieux, founders of the Universal Israelite Alliance; we we noted the presence of Jews in the League of education.

More recent testimonies still make us to know some Jewish individuals acting as leaders, or as zealous followers, in the Freemasonry and its branches. It is a French Jew, Lévy, former Communard of 1871 who, in Rome, in 1876, spoke and acted more in revoanother French Jew, Gustave Dalsace, who, member of the G.'s O.' of France in 1877, "glorifies the Jewish name by the way in which it directs the work of Freemasonry®. He is a German Jew, Simon Deutsch, that one of the count's reports d'Arnim, the Prussian ambassador in Paris, reports the same one that the Prussian newspaper tells us about later Gasette de la Croix, or at least from the same family.

1 Universe, May 11, 1876.

2 Universe, April 9, 1878. – Speech by the Chief Rabbi of France.

500 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

as having been, since the time of the empire, a agent intermediary between the German press and the French demagogic press, and at the same time, like a completely devoted financial backer of the party | radical. "In Paris," said the ambassador, "he was..."

"some of the most active members of the International, "municipal councillor and financial alter ego" "The finance delegates." The report adds that, expelled from France by the police at the fall of the Commune, he returned shortly afterwards, thanks at the intervention of MP Laurier, a close friend From the high-ranking Freemason Gambetta!

I am convinced that my pen would have to trace an endless series of names of Frankish Jews–Freemasons, internationalists, Communards, socialists–yours, etc., if I had more extensive relationships, or more documents at hand.

Nihilism could not escape action Jewish. Even though one of its first founders, Herten, if he were not an Israelite, the Jews would not be... They would not be found in the sect: they are its soul and the arm. The Jews are extremely numerous in the Russian Empire. "Russia," said L. Veuillot, contains the largest lake of Jews on _ 1 Report by Mr. d'Arnim on the French radical press and German. 1872. Univers, December 13, 1873.

mms

"The earth." From that point on, they dabbled in Nihilism.
– it is not surprising that this branch of the Ma-

Stupidity should make the Tsar's government tremble.

Lately, a German Jew, named Deutsch, which has nothing in common, that the race, with the one we just mentioned, was the leader of the entire nihilist movement in Russia...

* He had organized an extraordinary amount of activity,
. almost by himself, six communes and nineteen villages
> lages, in the Kiew government, in a vast

a secret society called the "secret cohort."
The conspirators' goal was to massacre and plunder
on the orders and instructions of their leader.
Deutsch was killed in February of this year by the Russian police in a house in Saint Petersburg town, where the official newspaper of the co-
central nihilistic mite *?.

The perpetrators of the abominable crimes
For some years now in Russia, they have been for the most Jewish nihilists. The famous Hartmann, mastermind and director of the Moscow attack,
is Jewish; the student Mladetzki, who shot a a pistol shot at General Loris-Melikoff, is

1 Universe, November 28, 1878.

2 Universe, July 18, 1879. – Correspondence from Saint-Pétershourg. – Same journal, February 22 and 26 and April 4, 1880.

®

is Jewish, etc.!

Also, "We are beginning to believe," we read in a correspondence from Krakow, which CSS nihilists do not are merely instruments in the hands of a richer and more enlightened party, which tends all sim- "This is in addition to a political revolution."

"This richer and more enlightened party," the day-: Russians know him today and the They name it. "Jewishness," says the New World from Saint Petersburg, works in a way that- destructive from above through its plutocracy, and by down below by its revolutionary propaganda... The - Jews play a leading role in our revolution. witness the Hartmanns, Deutsch, Mladetzki, Gol- Denberg and others.

In light of these facts, General Loris-Melikoff, who received full powers from the emperor to ex- | to draw Nihilism, cited before him the ancients |

from the Jewish community of Saint Petersburg, members of the Alliance Israélite Universelle. The The general asked them for an explanation of the pre-

1 Universe, March 5, April 4 and August 18, 1880. Letters from Saint- Petersburg. Information. |

2 Universe, March 24, 1850. Letters from Poland and Russia.

3 Universe, May 3, 1880, quoted from Novoje Wremja (New World) World). |

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 503

the presence of so many Jews among the nihilists. The an-
* The ciens found no other reasons to give that the lack of religious education among young people
'Modern Israelite'. This explanation is very satisfactory
The general was a little bit. Some time later, all the "=. Foreigners of the Jewish faith received the order to leave Saint Petersburg within six hours? This measure, accompanied by a few...
Others, no less energetic, would have brought, pa-
'Rait, a certain calm in the nihilistic agitation.
"i? Let the Tsar and his general not rely on it too much and 4! Let them not forget that they are dealing with Jews.

complaints from a Protestant Freemason in Berlin devoted to his religion and his king, William, HE, today Emperor of Germany. In these _ pages the author denounces, as the most dangerous the imminent threat to the throne and religion, "the power- r "sance that the Jews were able to acquire by means of &E "of Freemasonry, a power which would have w "has reached its zenith today." aši "There exists (in Germany)," he continues, "a kt secret society with Masonic forms which is subjected to unknown leaders. The members of p 3 Universe, April 4, 1880. Letters from Saint Petersburg. of 2 Universes, May 4, 1880.

504 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

sa A a ae ty
'This association is mostly made up of Israelites |
Their ranks and systems have no rites | and Christian symbols that are merely for form, i and thus serve all the better to cover their action... "

"This is by no means a matter of ridiculous calumnies" culs... No; and criminals no longer stay in the shadow; they occur, appear as if they '
were our brothers, and boast of the protection, 7
"of the very alliance of the German princes..."

"Lately the Jews have been ex.
enclosed by a certain number of lodges; but many-
and they are universally accepted in all.
The lodges of the world. In Berlin, the Jews are =

J

came, since the death of the pious King Frederick William Laume IV, ase, sneak into the boxes through the doors from behind. To do this, they got themselves admitted elsewhere, and they were then granted entry here. Mainholding that not a single lodge is inaccessible to them
It is possible that other lodges exist, composed exclusively of ( Jewish population, in which non-Jews have no
No access. In London, where is it located, as one might expect?
knows, the heart of the revolution, under the great May.
In Palmerston, there are two Jewish lodges, which do not the one where all the threads of all the elements come together;

has

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 505

revolutionaries who are brooding in the Christian lodges
LUCNNES... » | 1

"In Rome, another lodge, entirely composed of Jews, where all the threads of the plots converge revolutionaries plotted in Christian lodgesnes, is the supreme tribunal of the Revolution.
From there the other lodges are directed as if by secret leaders, so that most of the revolutions Christian leaders are nothing but puppets blind people set in motion by Jews, at The means of mystery! In Leipzig, on the occasion of the fair which brings to this city a part of the high-ranking Jewish and Christian merchants of Europe
the entire secret Jewish lodge is each time permanente, and no Christian mason is ever received there; that's it.
which makes more than one of us open our eyes...
In the Jewish lodges of Hamburg and Frankfurt
Only emissaries have access... Deign

'May the Almighty soften the trials that are melting on the powerful as a result of their carelessness, and to make them understand what the work requires of Freemasonry to revolutionize and republic-

"To canize the people in the interest of Judaism!"

These words can do without comment-

1 Historical and political pages of Munich, article ree produced in the world on November 5, 1862.

silences. The source from which they emanate leaves no room for doubt. no doubt about their veracity and their impartiality. |

9' A few years after these complaints from the F.'.-M.*. of Berlin, a friend of Sir Gougenot of Mousseaux, a Protestant, a statesman in the service of the great Germanic power, he wrote to him December:

"For the present time, I believe the Jews very assets that undermine the foundations of our society and to prepare for revolutions. They belong to a A wonderfully gifted breed, which produces geniuses in all fields and in all trends; I mean original men of high intelligence and great power action session... »

"Since the revolutionary resurgence of In 1848, I came into contact with a Jew who, out of vanity, betrayed the secret of the societies secret activities with which he had become involved, and which led me to... greened eight or ten days in advance of all the revolutions that were about to erupt on a point which-conquest of Europe. I owe him the unshakeable conviction that all these major movements of oppressed peoples, etc., etc., are combined by a half a dozen individuals giving their orders to the secret societies of all of Europe!

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 907

The ground is completely mined beneath our feet, and the Jews
"Do they provide a large contingent to these miners?"

6. These lodges, composed solely of Jews, about which the Protestant Freemason from Prussia spoke to us, They don't only exist in Europe; there are others: established also in America, where, as we have seen Higher up, the Masonic order is very extensive. We read in the Archives israélites (vol. XX, pp. 885-86, 1866) the following:

"There has been frequent discussion about the order" Israelite of the Beni-Berith, that is, of the Sons of the Alliance, which was created in the United States. Like

And since it is very little known, it seems useful to us.
to analyze, according to the American sheets, the Last message from the Grand Master, MBF Peixolto: "The Order of the Beni-Berith sent to Jewish victims of cholera in the East, near five thousand dollars (25,000 francs). The great
The master visits the lodges as often as possible.
affiliated. This year he visited those of eleven vilthe considerable ones. He opened conferences there and

1 This testimony must be added to those we have data given above regarding the number of genuine and real directors
of Freemasonry.

2 Cited in The Jew, etc., pp. 368 and 569.

508 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

same me me ee + ee

a ne ù M me ae a delivered speeches to instruct them on their duties as sons of the Covenant, to strengthen-proud in them of the feeling and love of objects superiors pursued by the order, namely: the advance-moral and intellectual foundation of the Israeli family and the most perfect union between its members."

There is no reason to doubt that the Jewish brothers of the Beni-Berith order take care of "objects superiors whom he pursues" in the manner and in the same views as the Jewish brothers of the Euro- lodges pagans about which their brother complains so bitterly too naive, the Prussian Protestant Fr.'.-Mac.'.

Let's not forget the fundamental principle of order.
Masonic: "Freemasonry is one and universal"
saddle.

7° In 1870 the newspaper Ze Monde provided a further proof of our thesis. One of his collaborators-Camille's mother, Ms. Rateurs, wrote to him from Bologna:

"I believe it is my strict duty to bring a new testimony to the truth that he claims letter inserted in the issue of Le Monde of March 23.

"I am currently on a tour in

i V. the Jew, pp. 363 and 369. – The English word covenant means First alliance.

RS, me, M

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 509

Italy, which I visited fifteen years ago, and I come to meet there, a few weeks ago, one of my former acquaintances. This man, I I knew at the time I was actively involved in the affairs of the Masonic order and occupying an elitist position born in a lodge in northern Italy. I come from To see him again as I had known him, not sharing not my Catholic beliefs, but having faith in the divinity of Jesus Christ and in the holy books created, differing from me in this essential point that I I believe in the Pope's infallibility, while he rejects it. to Peter's successors, to claim it for himself, reading and interpreting the Bible and the Gospel as he saw fit, and even giving it contradictory meanings, without ever suspecting that he could be wrong.

"I asked this man where he stood with his Masonic order and here is his response:

"I have left my lodge and the order permanently,"
"because I have become deeply convinced that We were merely the instrument of the Jews who...
they were pushing for the total destruction of Christia-
"nism. You will see the Masonic order strive-
"to one day rebuild Jerusalem to make
"To lie about the prediction of Jesus Christ. That's it."
"that the crowd of followers, who don't see much in it –

n10 FREEMASONS AND JEWS,

"This thing is threatened by the Jews who control everything."

I believe I must withhold this man's name for reasons of... considerations that everyone will understand. It is pos-It's possible that he might one day decide to publish the reasons of his departure from the order; and in that case he will say

Perhaps more on this sad subject. What I then guarantee in the meantime, that's the eractitude of this as I mentioned above. Yours sincerely, etc.

Following this letter, Le Monde draws this Conclusion: "This testimony, combined with so many others"
very, would therefore allow & think that the great an anti-Christian conspiracy that envelops us is led by the old enemies of Christ and by the descendants of those who put it to dead. What's so surprising about that? And isn't it
It is perfectly natural that war against Christ should be...
whether it is led by those who bear the res-responsibility for his blood once shed, and who are the most interested in the destruction of his artwork ! ? "

8. Finally, let us conclude these overly long extracts by the testimony of two highly competent men on the subject at hand, the first, Mr. Cré-Tineau-Joly, who was able to study the secret documents
1 Ze Monde, April 2, 1870.

|
|

f

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 511

ne aa ee

Masonic societies, Carbonarism in
In particular, the court of Rome had put 4 sa disposition, and the second, Mr. the Knight Gougenot des Mousseaux, who, to demonstrate the thesis - that we support, wrote a book, The Jew, etc., from which we have borrowed extensively.

In his work, the Roman Catholic Church in the Face of

and their relations with secret societies, ex-premium thus:

"History will not find it difficult to surprise"
to draw the hand and the gold of certain Jews, Germans or Italians, inciting revolts and facilitating all a career with anarchic passions. It's a re-vanche of nineteen centuries that the deicides com-
They plot against Calvary. These eternal outcasts
They infiltrated the secret societies.
They were supplied during times of scarcity; they have incessantly provided their leaders with subsidies to satisfy their thirst for mate- pleasures rielles... Through patience and generosity,
They locked up the secret societies. in the circle of Popilius. Once they arrived there, they applied to them-how the old policy followed in Japan against Christians, and do not allow them to leave this circle that after having seen their apprentices of tene-

42 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

to trample underfoot the cross that redeemed the world... They have at their disposal a people of ins-its flying ses to conquer all the crimes that one
"Can commit such a cowardly act!"

For his part, Mr. des Mousseaux brings to our evidence of the weight of his personal claims and reiterated, undoubtedly based on the revelations-specific details he received from a franca bricklayer, Jewish by birth, with whom he became found in relation'. |

"Those who claim," he said in 1869, "that the universal and supreme, but secret, council of the Freemasonry, composed of nine members, must hold in reserve, for the representatives of the nation Jewish, a minimum of five seats, because so as the Masonic constitution dictates, we affirm-what the simple laws of common sense have declared it must be*.

In 1872, in the newspaper Ze Monde, he told us-sure again that "Zes juifs must, without their knowledge
even most of the high-ranking officials of the gold to form, in majority, the real and supreme council

and 334.

2 The Jew, etc., p. 342. See also Le Monde, March 22, 1870.
Letter from Mr. des Mousseaux.

3 The Jew, p. 539.

a me re. mm ce ~

aa Were ee | meet

= aer AEE. 3 om - - -

am

an igh |
- ER

'FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 913

of Freemasonry." And furthermore, "despite the heresies and schisms that tear apart the heart of occultism itself, this powerful and mysterious- The Church extends its terrible and sovereign jurisdiction Dictionary on the entire world of secret societies. And, a crucial revelation! The sovereign council which - the ruling body, the conclave of her cardinals which composed of nine individuals, to which are attached through the most secret links all the great con- the seals of order, is not legitimate and in accordance with the E great Masonic constitution only on the condition it is essential to reserve at least five seats for brothers of Jewish nationality.

He adds in a footnote: "A mason of the most initiated- tiés, but converted, recently published de Genève, in a third letter, that he possessed and was preparing to reveal the great secret of Freemasonry- nerie, its constitution and its Jewish government- that, but that a book by the Knight of Mousseaux, the Jew and the Judaization of Christian peoples, which had just fallen into his lap, he revealed, and the dispensed with revealing this secret, which until then had been kept secret. 'known!' | |

According to all these testimonies, the action and the do-

1 Monde, May 10 and 11, 1872. Miscellany: About the flag.
29;

DIA FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The Jew's influence on France and societies
The secrets are therefore indisputable.

ITT. The facts come in third place to give a absolute certainty to our thesis by corroborating the various testimonies that we have just reported.

Two sets of events occurred in the nineteenth sixth century, which can only be explained by the domination of Jews in secret societies.

Firstly, it is undeniable that the Freemasonry in our century inspires and directs all policy, and that major events-contemporary aspects related to it are the result of his action.

First, let's see: what are the ideas and the political plans that she has long had naked designed and matured.

Towards the beginning of this century, a secret society dependent on lodges, named after Tugendbund, transforms "under the high di-Masonic assembly" in German association which soon absorbed the first. The purpose of this association, according to the authentic report on the secret societies of Germany, by Manns-

Dorf, one of the members of the high lodges, was from to dethrone all the German princes, except of the King of Prussia, to award him the cou-

Comes. he

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. D45

imperial crown of Germany, and to give to The state has a democratic constitution. If one Mannsdorf believes (p. 133), after having repressed the France within its former borders, we wanted
"To equip Germany with a social republic." That is from the Saxon Protestant Eckert that we hold this Information!

On May 12, 1849, the newspaper Ze (Globe, or-Freemasonry in England and journal
from his grand master, the famous Lord Palmerston,
published an article where we find the same
ideas:

"It is to be feared that the events of the year-
born the previous year (1848) were only the first scene of a drama with far-reaching consequences and less peaceful... »

"The plan he (Palmerston) has formed is that of a new configuration of Europe, the erection of a vigorous German kingdom, which can to be a dividing wall between France and the Russia, the creation of a Polish-Ma- kingdom gryare, intended to complete the work against the giant from the North, finally a kingdom of Upper Italy, dependent on the House of Savoy ©. »

1 Read Freemasonry, t. II, p. 162, 172.
Freemasonry, report by Eckert. 1854.

316 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

In 1832, Mazzini stated in the statutes of the Young Italy: ... "The Pope will enter the path reforms born of necessity; the King of Piedmont,
through the idea of the crown of Italy.

"Article 1. The company is established for the indispensable destruction of all governments sections of the peninsula and to form a single State encompassing all of Italy, under the republican regime.

"Article IT. Having recognized the horrible" evils of absolute power and those greater in-
at the heart of constitutional monarchies, we de-
we will work to found a united and independent republic

This same Mazzini addressed, in 1851, to the committee

Central Revolutionary London, a report in which he reviewed the situation of various European countries, from the point of view of interests The roots of the revolution. He lays out his ideas and his plans. He hopes in the revolutionaries of France; he notes "progress" in Spain and in Portugal. "He mainly counts," he said, "27 counts with certainty on the enlightened government who is based in Turin." Getting to the point where he spoke of the Al-Lemagne, Mazzini expresses himself in these terms: "A an eloquent voice spoke, regarding Austria, A word that says it all. You know this word:

|
|
|
|
:
|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 917

Austria must be destroyed!....» «We cannot be quite active in London, Paris, and even, if we can, in Berlin, create obstacles to the Au-cheating... "I have strong reasons to believe..." "I have strong reasons to believe that the skillful efforts of those who, unwittingly, serve our interests from this point of view, obtain- They had some successes in Berlin. The delenda is Austria is the first and last word of this action against this power.... »

"Prussia must be seized by incitement- tion of his military honor and his susceptibili- ty; Austria must be seized by exciting and by pushing the different ones against each other "national rents of which it is composed!"

But contemporary history is full of the exe- cutting these ideas and plans of France- Masonry.

In 1848, the Young Italy program...

Rome and in almost all the states of Europe.
But the people were not yet ready.
The hasty success was short-lived. The plan is repeated in another form, and ten years later we

1 Report inserted in the Journal des Débats of May 16, 1851 and reproduced in a few quotes in Le Monde on June 28

DAR FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

let's see the Carbonaro Napoleon III wearing the pre- +

first blows to Austria and prepare for unification of Italy under this "enlightened government established at Turin, » on which Mazzini was counting «with certaintytitude. » The work was completed in 1870 by a another Carbonaro, Victor Emmanuel, and almost at
At the same time, the plan of the Masonic association-
German nique and Fr.*.-M.. Palmerston s-Austria, struck a second time, also complied.
once in Sadowa in 1866, cannot prevent the u-unity of Germany under the supreme leadership of Prussia. The imperial crown is placed at Pa-laughter on the forehead of his king.

The assassination attempts on the person of Emperor William and on that of his successor of Victor Emmanuel, in the year 1878, prove that the Masonic sect wants to achieve the accumcomplete implementation of its program, and constitute the republic in Germany and Italy.

As for Austria, its history spans more than twenty years, apart from the two world wars with France and with Prussia, can be summarized in the internal difficulties and difficulties that he had caused and still cause him his various nationalities
nurturities by their rivalries and their demands.

Moreover, in all these revolutions and changes

|
|
|
|
|

political movements so numerous in our century, we see the Freemasons preparing the agitation and movement and enjoy the success.

`By the admission of F.-.-Mac.°. Louis Blanc in his Ten years ago, it was the Freemasons who, through betrayal and lies, they have repaid to the Restoration government in 1830, and placed the Freemason Louis-Philippe on the constitutional throne which they proclaim the best-

the source of republics t.

And, according to their custom, all these FF.-. are not lacking

No sharing of power and lucrative jobs?

The 1848 revolution, which was European, has the same cause. Freemasonry prepared it and brought to a successful conclusion with the help of secret societies, her daughters. This time she proclaims the republic, and all members of the provisional government are Freemasons. In the rest of Europe

They are also Freemasons and Carbonari who overthrow monarchical governments,
proclaim the republic and take up residence in the government.
see ê. The coup d'état of 1852 led to the empire

1 The Freemasons, by Saint-Albin, p. 359, and the Societies Secrets, by Father Deschamps, vol. III, appendix. – See also above p. 276 and 277.

3 Ibidem.

3 Saint-Albin, p. 362, and P. Deschamps, t. II, p. 252 et seq.

520 _FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"a cherished infant of the lodges," a carbonaro which fulfills one of the dearest designs of the Freemasonry and Italian sales, the destruction of the papal principality. Then, when, abandoned like his uncle before him, Napo-Leo III fell before the arms of Prussia, this are still Freemasons who, in September

France is rising up amidst catastrophes that they have brought about and are aggravating. In 1871, egad-driven by its intrigues, the most monarchical Assembly the fool we've seen so far is easily fooled by a Freemason, Brother Thiers, and entrusts him the destinies of the nation. Its actions and those other Freemasons, more or less well-known, put-France is attempting a third time to become a republic. and deliver her bound hand and foot to the Freemasons Stupidity and internationalism. At this hour, at seen and known to all, the French government is in the hands of the Freemasons (September 1880)!

All these events, as well as their causes, are indisputable. In this brief historical summary-risk we only dealt with the

1 V. Universe, April 19, 2, 3, June 13, 1879, April 25 and June 6 1880, summer, etc.

|
|
|
|
|
|
LL

ir,

Ay

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. o 521

France in particular. That we do the same work-valid for the other European powers and For America, the action will be recognized everywhere triumphant of Freemasonry and its branches, and we must conclude that, since the at the beginning of the century, this detestable association-tion has, politically and socially, led the two worlds t. -

But another order of facts, no less certain occurs in our time at the same time as the masters in Europe and the rest of the world.

This proposal is clearly for anyone who has followed closely and attentively the movement of political, social, and commercial things commercial and industrial for about sixty years.

My statement alone would not suffice on this point; There's no doubt about it. Let's listen to the authorized roles of my witnesses: I list them at the date on which they were uttered.

In 1844, Mr. Disraeli, a Jew by origin, the first the English minister, wrote this well-markable: s

"Following struggles repeated a thousand times... the

1 V. the three volumes of P. Deschamps.

is eit PR A FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

swims that do not count those who do not vote |
What's happening behind the scenes... |

"As I speak to you, musical Europe- '
The whole hold, that's us! Is it in any capital city, a troupe of virtuosos,
a theatre, an orchestra, where the en-
children of the Jew under the false names they adopt they come to escape the vile hatred of which your
Our descendants will soon be ashamed of us Have you overwhelmed them? You would hardly name a single coman eminent composer, hardly a learned musician, a ravishing throat, an angelic voice that no one desires
One of our tribes! The list would be too long.
to unfold it... Will it be enough to name the three great creative geniuses before whom au-Today every nation bows down: Rossini, Meyer-beer, Mendelssohn. And I doubt that in your country...
The muscadins of Paris and the dandies of London soup- i know, when they swoon to the melodious accents of Pasta or Grisi, which their hom-mages fall at the feet of the enchantresses of Is-

Raël T.

1 Coningsby, p. 148 et seq. Paris, 1844, octavo. In this book at Mr. Disraeli set out to highlight the value of the Jew in every respect. – Mr. Disraeli, who became Lord Beaconsfield, has was formerly Prime Minister of England. He was replaced this year by Mr. Gladstone, who is, like his predecessors Deceaseds, an instrument of the Jews.

Ly

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 525

–
–

°# There's no need to dwell at length on the strength of This page is for our thesis. In 1844, the minis– the most important territories of the largest countries # Europe was run by Jews! The great 7 German revolution, that is to say the unity of Germany <+ imperial lemagne which was accomplished in 1870, se + was being prepared as early as 1844 under the influence of the Jews! It is a .: the Prime Minister of England who confirms this to us = expressly. We will not accept that he should > Learn more about this topic.

This quote alone would suffice; the others,
"No less interesting, will shed further light"
1. more vivid. | |

A strongly anti-Catholic writer, Mr. Toussenel,
He published, in 1847, a book entitled: Zes Juifs, rois
: of the time, precisely to make people touch
x finger this sovereign power that the Jew exercises in Our century on two worlds. One should mention
The entire work. We will take two passages alone–
: ment, among many others, one general,
The other one is looking more specifically at our country.
"Workers who become exhausted and die" struggling across three-quarters of the area of globe, work to enrich a few thousand
. of lazy nabobs from Judah, Amsterdam and London. (Preface, pv.)

326 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"The king may well appoint to the functions of–"
The clerk and judge have positions whose holders

a thousand francs; but for high-ranking and well-creative figures of France, even those of the magistrature, are at the appointment of the Jews. It is The Jew which distributes general revenues to its stakes servants and dismisses the receivers general who the genent. The Jew, exclusive possessor of the ad-Ministry of Transport throughout the kingdom will soon have more employees on its own than FE-tat...

"I challenge the king and the House to make a treaty customs alliance, a cotton treaty, a coal treaty, iron that the Jews don't want! Anzin has did not want the union of Belgium with France, and this meeting did not take place... Before the The law would have granted the railways to the Jews, all The traveler could move freely on the main road. road, on the king's pavement. Since every lane communication routes, railways, canals, rivers are No one can pass by the Jew without paying him tribute... Who holds the banking monopoly and that of transport, the two arms of commerce? The Jew. Who has the monopoly on gold and mercury. The Jew. Who will soon have a monopoly on the

eme, p oo ER TE TEE i, SEES ____

—

; . FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 3237

Coal, salt, and tobacco? The Jew. Who has the Monopoly on advertising? The Saint-Simonian, valet of the Jew... If air could be seized and sold, there would be a Jew to seize it and buy it ter'... »

Another writer, this one of Israelite descent, brought to light, in the same year, a completely new thought similar in different terms, in a work Title: The Jews.

"The Jews fill, in proportion, and thanks to their persistence, more jobs than the others

Three Catholic and Protestant communions. Their disastrous influence is felt especially in the matters that weigh most heavily on the country's wealth: there is no business in the west where Jews do not have their large share, no public borrowing that they do not monopolize, no disasters that they have not foreseen. They are well-equipped but do not benefit from it. Therefore, they are in a bad position. Having come to complain, as they always do, those who have all the favors and who do all the Benefits? » – |

From another point of view and in relation to AI-Lemagne in particular, the evidence showed, in 1849, the following assertions on the lips of the first

1 Toussenel, The Jews, Kings of the Era, vol. 1, pp. 10-19, 20, summer,
2 Cerfberr of Medelsheim, the Jews, p. 9. Paris, 1847.

528 F es RU ES ET JUIFS.

Minister of Austria. Prince Metternich has said: Austrian policy was established over forty years and he was fully aware of the affairs of the whole of Europe.

"There are elements within the German Empire revolutionaries who have not yet served, and who are formidable; the Jewish element, for example; it is, I believe, harmless in your country. In Germany, It's completely different: the Jews occupy the first role and are revolutionaries: of the first order. They have writers, philosophers, poets, speakers, publicists, bankers, and on the head and in the heart all the weight of the old Disgrace! They will have a terrible day for Germany, probably followed by a tomorrow "Dreadful for them?!"

In 1861, we find an almost exactly the same in the Encyclopedic Dictionary German, translated by Father J. Goschler, a Jew from... origin. |

"In Germany, it says in the article on Jews. following the secularization of property and ecclesiastical principalities, financial difficulties creditors of the nobility and of loans contracted

Mr. Louis Veuillot.

Words quoted in the newspaper L'Univers on June 26, 1859.
V.eUnirers des le et 17 octobre 1879, lettres de Berlin.

|

>

bi

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 329

En RSS pe orca ne en a

with the governments, the Jews of the nineteenth Century have become a power before which
The greatest statesmen bow down, and who,
From time to time, it even reached the thrones. This influence, acquired by force of circumstance, by the efforts of the school of philosophical publicists who,
Since the middle of the eighteenth century, they have used all levers to overthrow the reli- |
Christian society and the Christian community have made emancipation the cipation of the Jews, that is to say, the equality of the civil and political rights of Jews and Christians, a truly vital question of European policy
"Pean". » |

Also Father Ratisbonne, who was Jewish by birth, Could he have written, in 1868, these words which look-tooth, no longer just Germany and Europe
rope, but both hemispheres:

"Naturally skilled, ingenious, and possess-
FROM THE INSTINCT OF DOMINATION, the Jews have gradually invaded all the avenues that con-
they lead to wealth, dignity, and power.
Their spirit gradually infiltrated civilization.
modern sation. They control the stock market, the press, theatre, literature, administration, the major communication routes on land and on

990 FRANUS-MACONS AND JEWS.

sea; and by the ascendancy of their fortune and their genius, THEY HOLD TIGHT, at the hour he is, as in a network, ALL OF CHRISTIAN SOCIETY- HERE! D

Since that date, things have not changed. and the publicists of the present day continue to to recognize and point out this power of the Jew constantly increasing at all latitudes.

The Austrian correspondent of the newspaper /e Monde contained, in 1874, on this same subject, the following assessment:

"We are forced to recognize that this people (the Jewish people) have a rare intelligence in all matters of commerce or trade. It He sucks, so to speak, all the money out of the empire... He He makes it flourish in a thousand ways. He knows how to put very skillfully putting his hand in all the inter-shots, but he also puts an undeniable sa- see... Industrious, active and persevering, he enriched himself- He almost always shits, sometimes becomes a millionaire. never ventures into his operas haphazardly tions; and if a financial Arach strikes him in one of its members, the all-powerful synagogue do not abandon the victim in this misfortune. can rightly say that, among the Jewish emi-

1 Juire Question, p. Q. Paris, 1868.

Du. # + re, mm RE
| | | M

ready
¥

i CL

has

— m

the massive influx of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, the
The monarchy might be ruined for fifty years. In politics, Israel does not govern the state.
That's true, but it gives it a certain direction.
For his spirit is everywhere, invisible like his powerful, but very influential, because he holds in his hands all the liberal press and the fortune of country. Its dominance cannot be explained otherwise.
nation, nor the disastrous complacency of certain statesmen for the Jews, or even for foreigners

these aberrations of the public mind, perverted by the Israeli newspapers. Let Austria therefore take part.

guards as well as Hungary! The empire...

Judaize imperceptibly through the deplorable fact of its dechristianization. In a quarter of a century

perhaps, if liberal or constitutional centralism
tional still flourishes on both sides of the Leitha.
and that a political regeneration has not destroyed
this sham system of government, a new
The kingdom of the Jews will exist on the Danube, and the
The Catholic Habsburg monarchy will not be "More than just a vast temple of Pharisees!"

The Universe, on July 1, 1875, contained an ar-
article from which we quote this passage:

1 Special correspondence from Le Monde. Vienna, October 19
1874. World, October 24, 1874.

"After noting that, out of 642 bankers Prussians, there are 550 Jews and 92 Christians, the Gazette de la Croix explains why we like it to characterize financial and economic policy _ German policy of Jewishness. But let's leave it at that Speaking to the Gazette de la Croix: "If politics financial and economic of the German empire gives the impression of a policy of Jewishness (Juden politik), that is to say, of a policy and legislation Inspired by Jews, that's because its author Mr. de Bleichroeder is nothing more than an intellectual. that a Jew, and that the Christian minority of the bank is forced to follow the policy of the ma- dignity. Moreover, it is a proven fact that our po- financial litigation is exclusively directed and inspired by our fellow citizens of the Mo- faith Saique. Add to this that our fellow citizens of race Semitic and Mosaic faiths have emerged equipped with the intellectual direction of the legislature- tion in our representative bodies. Messrs. Lasker, Bamberger and Oppenheim, the true leaders of the the so-called national-liberal majority of the Reichstag and of the Prussian Diet, they are other than Jews.

Le Monde, of November 19, 1875, gives this excerpt from an unnamed German newspaper:

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 533

"A Jewish writer, Gutzkow, said, some time ago two years, in the Allgemeine Zeitung of Augsburg, that the Jews were the true founders of German Cempire; and it was the Jews who gave- They set the tone in the press, in diplomacy, in politics.

This Jew spoke in exactly the same way in 1873 to that of Disraeli in 18-44.

The same newspaper, Le Monde, puts before its eyes from its readers the complaints that are voiced, in 1876, against the encroaching power of the Jews, the Railway Gazette, a very German newspaper liberal and somewhat socialist.

The French newspaper precedes its extracts and his analysis of the German article of reflections iron "speaks against the invasion of the Jews in With full knowledge of the facts. There are many Jews.

fewer in France than in Germany; on sees them less, and the progress of their domination
do not strike the eye so much; whereas, in Al-Lemagne, in Austria and in some parts of
In the East, the word "invasion" is not an exaggeration.
to express both their number and their audacity
and their soon irresistible power." We quote

Now, the Berlin newspaper: 30.

534 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"...A Jew's greed (for wealth) is ten times larger than that of a Christian... The complaints from Christians who are being robbed by the Jews is universal... We have driven out the Je-sequels because we wanted to remain German,
and we keep the Jews who reduce us to the begging... The entire press is a pro-Jewish privacy... They even own the newspapers official and unofficial sources. Press agents, that the imperial chancery makes available to our ambassadors abroad are almost exclusively Jewish. First in Paris, Bamberger, and since Lindauer. Since the Jew Abel is-
The Times correspondents, who had come to Berlin, densities, which were marked by an extravagant harbored enmity against Prince Bismarck.
They receive their color at the chancery. Thanks to their dominance in the press, the Jews dismiss any hostile measure against them... The Jewish question has become a matter of life or death.

As for France, what they were saying with so much In truth, Messrs. Toussenel and Cerfbeer, there is a thirty-ten years, is at least as true at the time here.

Two publicists, who live and write in

1 Monde, April 5, 1876.

anit

Messrs. Veuillot and Sarcey, diametrically opposed to each other, agreed in 1875 that the Jews were true—the “kings of the time*.” And, two years ago, In 1878, a distinguished economist proved the same something in these terms:

"The sovereign master, the sovereign lord"

: de lor must therefore become the sovereign of the earth;

And who will be this sovereign if not the Israelite?
Doesn't he already have almost a monopoly on Banks, railways, and commerce? No Doesn't he thus have a multitude of places available?
many of which are paid magnificently
How? Thanks to his gold, doesn't he give a instruction of a higher order than his children °;
And, in this way, is he not on the verge of making them
occupy the leading positions in the arts, the letters

Hey, science and public service? Also,

In our country, what are they, at the Sorbonne, at the College?
From France, the eminent professors? From the Israelis?
lites; in the theatre, the authors in vogue? of the Is-Raelians; among the philosophers and publicists,
Those who are most renowned? Of the Israelites. [I]
It is not even famous musicians who, the most often, they don't have the same origin... »

1 V. Universe of May 21, 1875.

2 V. Universe of November 26, 1879.

336 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"Let's approach power from another angle current count of the sons of Jacob. They are in the number of... about sixty thousand in France, and do not constitute ultimately, that six-hundredth part of the population-tion. Well, instead of just composing the six-one hundredth part of the members of the Court of Cassation

The legislative body, of the Institute, as of all the learned bodies, their number in these high positions is eighty to one hundred times more considerable than their numerical situation compared to The Catholic one should not include it... »

"So many functions, so many honors, so many contributions, what privileges there are, therefore, in our century, the property of Israel'.

1 History of the political economy of ancient peoples, by Du Mesnil-Marigny, 3rd edition, t. II, p. 277, 278 and 279. Paris, 1878.
– What Mr. Duménil says here in general, a thousand particular facts The liars demonstrate this. Let us cite just one among these thousand. Mr. Tousseaux asserted in 1847 (vol. II, p. 6 et seq.), and M. des Mousseaux repeated after him, in 1869 (The Jew, p. 364 et seq.), that During the reign of Louis-Philippe, the Journal des Débats was the owned by very wealthy Jews (the Rothschilds) and formed in the State, a power whose influence carried a great deal of weight weight on business and government direction since. things have not changed, for under all the regimes which Following this, many editors of the Jewish newspaper enjoyed the favors of power. Now that Freemasonry, instructed– The Jewish community holds all the authority, the staff of the Debates has entered almost entirely into the highest political positions ques (V. Univers, April 23 and May 28, 1880). The Jews support–

|

vt eee

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 337

Finally, what Mr. Disraeli observed with his own eyes, in 1844, thirty-six years ago, namely, that the the most important ministries of the principal governments of Europe were in the hands Jews, Mr. Gougenot des Mousseaux told us– sure for the time being, present on the authority of an ou– German vrage. It was printed, he tells us, in 1872, in Stuttgart, a book "which shows us the power leaders EVERYWHERE occupied by

Jews, whose Jewish origin is most familiar to us

* often unknown. » Kt he adds: «We there–

unsurprisingly, the extreme care that bonuses

Jews again, eager to follow and seize the power

see, have taken, from the very beginning of our revolutions, of to gain the favor of the princes of the "Orléans branch."

Without extensive research, and without the help of the book
German, my readers have already remembered: Ze

> Jewish Crémieux, who twice gave himself the su–

veraine authority in France, by becoming a member

nent and nurture their creatures. – Let us note, remembering especially 1870 and 1871, those plutocrats of the Jewish community, what Whatever our revolutions, and even our invasions, may not lose
They never get anything and always find something to gain: consequences of the protection with which the great Masonic leaders cover their brothers of the same race.

1 Monde, May 10 and 11, 1872. Miscellany. Regarding the flag,
– This brochure is entitled: Judaism in France.

ee ee ee eT a provisional government of 1848 and member of the Government of National Defence in 1870;
the Jewish Jules Simon, Swiss, or rather Schwitz, of Swiss, deputy, senator, minister, etc.; the Jews
Naquet and Lisbonne, of the Chamber of Deputies, Bé-Darrides, high magistrate, Hendlé, Cohn, Schnerb, prefects, etc., etc.; Ze Jude Castelar, of the Republic Spanish; the half-Jewish Gambetta, who im-presented to the French in 1870 as a dictator
First and commander-in-chief, and who, a second time, has been governing us effectively for three years without a title and without liability, etc. '

HAS

|

Messrs. Gambetta and Castelar, "the two main representatives of French radicalism and Spanish republicanism," are of Jewish origin (V. Monde, October 2, 1873).

The brochure "Judaism in France" confirms this assertion as far as Mr. Gambetta is concerned. She recounts this:

"At the beginning of this century, at the height of the famous system-continental territory that deprived Europe of colonial products, a certain Gamberlé, a German Jew, born in Augsburg, in-He sold a surplus of coffee. Gamberlé went to Genoa, where, Thanks to his invention, he did quite well in business. Some Some time later, having married, he changed, at the urging of his woman, the baroque name of Gamberlé into that of Gambetta, no Less baroque, but much more Italian. This Gambetta-Gamberlé is the grandfather of the French politician of the same name." (Quoted by L'Univers, September 29, 1878.) It is known that the son of this German Genoese Jew who came to France and settled grocer in Cahors, where he married a Miss Massabie, from a French Catholic family. The president of the Chamber The MP is therefore the grandson of a Jew.

We read in the Courrier de la Vienne, 13 scientific 1878:

|

1 The Examiner, an English newspaper, explicitly states that |

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 539

Of all these testimonies, which came from different From these perspectives, absolute certainty arises from this fact. that the Jews inspire and direct everything in the two worlds, especially in Europe: politics, finance, commerce, industry, economics, philosophy philosophy, science and the arts; that they are in a word "the

UK. Kings of the time.

But, on the other hand, we have just...
: to defeat Freemasonry in a moment zz inspires and directs everything, she too, in the world
"entirely and mainly in Europe."

The direction and the power truly belong to the management and the power

a» sance? We are therefore in the presence of this di- Lemma: or it was Freemasonry that seized the Jew

THE

=

and who uses it and pushes it forward; or else,

“...it was the Jew who seized control of Freemasonry and who made it into a stepping stone and an instrument

use of his designs.

No one will hesitate to speak out in favor of this second alternative. Because it is undeniable that the

"Mr. Jules Simon is marrying off his eldest son, Doctor Gustave"
i?

T° Simon, with the daughter of an Jewish banker, Miss Sour-

Say. Through this marriage, Mr. Gustave Simon enters the upper class

The Jewish society: he becomes the brother-in-law of Messrs. Raphael and Va“lentin, by Mr. Cohn, son of the rabbi of that name, currently prefect” _ of Loir-et-Cher. (See all newspapers from December 1878.)

at

ot) FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

<-

The Jew is the master of gold: he possesses the greatest part of the wealth of both hemispheres. Now par-everything and always, and especially in our time, that which has the power of gold also holds in:

A Jew who, through his gold as much as through his genius, seized supreme power in Freemasonry secret societies. He was therefore the one who inspired them.
and who rules them sovereignly.

In conclusion, let us refer to the ar-
Article IV of the great Masonic charter of 16%.
to this "patriarch" or "grand elected master,
invisible and unknown leader of all Freemasonry

1 "The era that is beginning has undeniably endowed gold with the sus-reality, of omnipotence. Isn't gold today the arse-
The weapon of peace and war? Isn't it this metal that gives expansion to ideas, which puts at the feet of its posses over all the forces of the world? In the centuries that preceded
The great French revolution, gold undoubtedly had an extreme power, – but he found a rivalry in the aristocracy of the era, which was often right about it; – but public opinion
the politics of the time, much more moral than it is today was doing justice to its holders, when the source to which ik
They had drawn it and it was impure. How times have changed! Lt

–has almost attained the status of a deity; everywhere he commands, pr

We love everything about it; and what Euripides said about it was never more True: O dear gold!... with what love you inflame mortals!...
the whole earth, the seas, the god of war who subdues you.
They follow and obey you*. The sovereign master, the sovereign
The lord of gold must therefore become the sovereign of the earth.
(History of the economy of ancient peoples, by Du Mesil:)
Marigny, 3^e ed., t. H, p. 275–277.

* Euripides, tragedy Bellerophon.

D RNCS Ey CE E E SRE, Ne

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 541

nerie, and to those supreme elected masters who "have in their power the regime of Masonic society;"
"Let us remember those unknown leaders" of whom he is question at the convent of Wilhelmsbad; "these illus-
"very unknown people who govern," to whom promises obedience the initiate to the rank of philosopher- judge known; "a half-dozen individuals who don-

` give their orders to the secret societies of Europe

entire; » this supreme council of Freemasonry composed of nine members of which "five at less must be Jewish;" finally these "four or five" who hold the cards and lead the world, and let's say: These characters are Jews t.

` 1 For some years now, in Germany, a powerful reaction-
The health sector has organized itself against the Jews. This manifests itself in the... moment in the form of a petition whose author is unknown and which is being signed from all sides. This petition "characterizes the danger with which Judaism threatens German society, not only-element from an economic point of view, but also in relation to civilization and religion." It calls for "that it be carried remedy to this deleterious influence in every respect by the legislation, by suppressing Jewish immigration into the country.

Furthermore, strict control of Jewish operations is being demanded.
matters in the stock market, banking and newspaper industries,
the prohibition of Jews entering most professions ions, etc." (V. Univers, May 13 and August 22, 1880. Letters from banks of the Rhine.) "This petition, which is a slap in the face
Bismarck, adds the newspaper correspondent, will not pass Maybe not.

That's quite plausible. Bismarck is one of his great friends and a instruments of choice for the Jews. There would only be one 31

542 F UE aa AND JEWS.

SIXTH SECTION. - MEANS OF ACTION OF THE FRANCO-
MASONRY.

The means of action of Freemasonry

evils: 1° lying and hypocrisy; 2° violence ences of all kinds; 3° teaching and the dissemination of error and corruption in all its forms
the forms and in all ways.

1. Lies and Backs

Freemasonry has always taught and practiced these heinous vices.

The most common and most frequent prescription
Greetings from the fathers of Freemasonry to their followers
It was this: to lie and to conceal.

No one is unaware of the favorite maxims of eighteenth-century philosophers, all initiates

a means of "remedying this deleterious influence" of the Jews,
It would mean subjugating them and their secret societies everywhere.
to the graduated methods of smothering that they are currently applying to turn to the Catholic Church. But the evil is so great that no no human power exists today that can even... think. Divine Providence, sooner or later, will deliver Christendom.
to contain this scourge, at least for a time, by more violent and faster: we will see this later in this work,

f

|
|

|

NE Uh

'FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 343

the most advanced and fervent Freemasons—
nonsense.

Brother Voltaire wrote to Brother Thiriot and to all a vice that only occurs when it does harm: it's a very great virtue when it does good; therefore be more virtuous than ever. I] must lie like a devil, not timidly, not for a Time, but boldly and always... Lie. "Lie, my friends" (General Correspondence, vol. IT, Jettre 36).

Father Diderot said: "Lying is so not essentially reprehensible in itself and by its very nature, it would become a virtue if it could—"would be useful" (Social System, part 1, ch. 2).

"It is natural to treat the truth as the virtue, said Brother Laméthrie in turn, these are beings who are only worth as much as they are useful to those who own them.

And F.—. Bazot, nowadays secretary of the Grand Orient de France, assures us without hesitation that the The lights of these Freemason-philosophers added the greater splendor in the Masonic light! They have certainly not added to this day a love shining bright for the truth.

The founder of Illuminism, Weishaupt, did not

544 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

yields on this subject to his colleagues in Macon-eighteenth century nonsense.

In his secret instructions, in his letters, in venal statutes, in reform statutes—He formally teaches the rules and abridged versions of the order. that dissimulation, hypocrisy, espionage and Lying is a duty for the enlightened one.

"You will regard it as a constant principle" among us that frankness is only a virtue to—near superiors... Apply yourself to art to counterfeit you, to hide you, to mask you—quer, by observing others to penetrate into their interior {statutes of the order, no. 20, etc.).

In his fourth letter to Cato (nom de guerre) (from one of the main zealots), "I want," he said, I want to make followers of spies, one of them others and everyone else.

It goes so far as to indicate to initiates the best a way to spy successfully. Then he adds:
"This espionage, a constant and assiduous duty of The illuminated lout will have two advantages: one general for the order and superiors, and the other for the adept. Each month he will make two readings of his observations; he will transmit them all to his superiors; and the order will be instructed by this which are, in every city or town,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. – D45

the men from whom they must hope for protection or fear public opinion. He will know all the means to "To win for some or to eliminate others!"

The patriarch of the Illuminati had therefore chosen as an essential means of action for his order espionage, hypocrisy, and lies.

The founder of one of the rites of Freemasonry, Misraïm, Cagliostro, had done the same.

Also in his History of the French Revolution The historian and Freemason Louis Blanc, while pretending that the first had pursued "the triumph of the "pne of truth" and that the second had served the "cause of the Revolution," one cannot help but... to blame them both severely, this one, because that he had associated this holy cause "with countless lies," and that one, because he had he put "a ruse among his chances of success, and hypocrisy, slander, and lies many of its main resources.

The righteous indignation of this moral mason The list has forgotten two things here, the first is

1. Original writings. Reform of the statutes, art. 9, 13, etc. See Secret Societies, vol. I, pp. 360 and 361. – It is through these dishonest methods are used to ensure the success of an election. any. They are part, without a doubt, of those many means by which so much success is achieved nowadays in this genre. Our French-Macrons are indeed the true sons of the illuminated.

that the Misraim rite is one of the important rites of present-day Freemasonry, adopted by the Grand Orient of France, and preserving this that there was something main in the ways of doing of Cagliostro, and the second that Illuminism has penetrated, imbued with his spirit and trained in his actions—sows the seeds of the entire Freemasonry.

Nineteenth-century Freemasonry does not differ point in his teachings of Freemasonry of eighteenth.

Drawing conclusions from these maxims of the fathers of Freemasonry, one of the most influential Freemasons of our century, the apostate Talleyrand, put in axiom that speech was not given to man than to disguise his thoughts.

In its secret instructions, the high-sales Italian surpasses or at least equals Voltaire and Weishaupt: |

"The priests are confident, show them soup-cunning and treacherous. The multitude had everything time an extreme propensity towards the opposite truths; deceive-/a. She likes to be deceived. (The Ancona correspondent at the high-level auction).....

"There's little that can be done with old cardinals and prelates whose character is well defined—

|
|
|
|
|
|
|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 54 RPM

"We must draw on our stores of popularity" or unpopularity, the weapons that will render useless or ridiculous the power in their hands. One word that we invent skillfully and that we have the art of spreading—dre in certain honest families chosen for that from there he would go down to the cafes, and from the cafes

man. If a prelate arrives from Rome to exercise
some public function deep in the provinces...
Surround him with every trap you can.
tender beneath his feet; create for him one of those reputa-
actions that frighten small children and old women women; portray him as cruel and bloodthirsty; tell his story
a few traces of cruelty that could be etched in memory easily in the people's memory. When the Foreign newspapers will collect these accounts through us.
which they will in turn embellish (inevitably by respect for the truth), show or, rather, make to show by some respectable fool these sheets in which the names and excesses are recorded Arranged characters. Like France
And England and Italy will never lack these pens that know how to carve themselves from lies useful for a good cause..... »

"Crush the enemy, whoever he may be; crush the powerful through slander or calumny;

48 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ea -ee ee m

But above all, crush it in the egg. It's a game-
It is she whom one must go to; it is she whom one must seduce.
she whom we must train without her getting involved
No doubt, under the banner of secret societies. For to advance with measured but sure steps along this path
In this perilous situation, two things are absolutely necessary.
necessity. You must appear simple like doves, but you will be careful like the serpent. Your fathers, your children, your Women themselves must always ignore the
The secret you carry within you, and, if you
it was pleasing, to better deceive the inquisitorial eye, going to confession often, you are, like right, authorized to maintain absolute silence on these things...

"To make it (the cause) bear fruit at the threshold of each family, to grant you the right to asylum at domestic household, you must present yourself with all the appearances of a serious and moral man.
Once... you have gained their trust... few Little by little you bring your disciples to the degree of cooking wanted. When... this everyday work will have will appreciate the wisdom of the advice we Let's take the initiative!

1 Secret Papers of Italian High Sales: Instruction

rr Sen ee a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 549

Thus, says Father Deschamps, "from one end to The other aspect of the Masonic league is dissimulation.
and lying, hypocrisy, and slander are on the agenda t. »

And these teachings did not remain just a letter.
dead.

We know the sacrilegious hypocrisies of Vol-to be silent. Italian Carbonarism required, in certain-
In certain cases, his followers imitate them.

A Carbonaro wrote this to another initiate, in 1835: "Things are demanded of us which, whatever-Sometimes, they are enough to make your hair stand on end.
head. Would you believe that I am being summoned from Rome that two of our own, well known for their hatred of fanaticism, were forced, by order of the supreme leader, to kneel and to commune
To deny it at last Easter? I'm not reasoning.
my obedience, but I confess that I would like
It is important to know where such ca- will lead us
"Pucinades*."

Anyone who studies Freemasonry even a little stupidity, quickly convinces herself that she is the

of the supreme sale dated 1819. – The Roman Catholic Church in face of the Revolution, t. 1I, p. 75 et seq.

1 Secret Societies, etc., vol. 1°, p. 364.

2 Secret Papers, etc. Letter from Malegari written from London to Doctor Breidenstein. – V. The Roman Church, etc., vol. II,
p. 124.

31.

"550 Se aa AND JEWS.

organized lies and hypocrisy passed on to | the state of institution.

Freemasonry lies perpetually to its
to followers and to the uninitiated.

First, we catch her red-handed in | lies, even in his sacred books, in his rituals.

During the ceremony for admission to the rank of apprentice, the Venerable who presides over it reads at the newvel initiated this solemn affirmation: "We
"We do not admit women into our mysteries." (Ritual of the Apprentice, p. 56). And yet those who composed this ritual, the one who revised it with the approval of the entire order, the illustrious F.:. Ragon, and all the venerable members who preside
The ceremonies, they know very well that the Women's Freemasonry exists and is part of the Freemasonry, and more than once, in the Perhaps even the same lodge where they receive the apprentice, í
They all "helped their sisters in their work. » . |

What is hidden from the first-degree initiate by A lie will be revealed to the companion. To;
On the day of his reception, the Venerable* will inform him that he | is now "five years old," and that "this age makes him able to visit the adoption lodges for ladies

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 5514

where everything is counted by fives" (Ritual of the Greek of companion, p. 31). But when the companion passes master, he will be deceived again by a new lie, written twice in the ritual, and twice repeated during the ceremony. "The rank
"Which will occupy us," said the Venerable to his companion.
who presents himself to be received as a master, is called
"Rightly so, the crowning achievement of Freemasonry."

"It is the complement of Freemasonry" (Ritual of the master's degree, pp. 6 and 27). Now, at the time where he utters these words, the Venerable* is not unaware the existence of the high degrees he received in total—perhaps, and which are the object of covetousness of all the master masons.

In the rituals of the higher degrees, ceg
The lies are repeated almost at every step.
When he receives some new rank, one announce to the recipient. that he has finally "arrived" to the highest rank of architect, at the pinnacle of Freemasonry. And yet the Wise One, or T.: Respectable, etc., who presides and receives the initiate knows perfectly well that he is still above many other grades.

Moreover, in Masonic rites and their various degrees, says Father Deschamps, who has them all thoroughly studied, "the contradictions, the ambiguities, the allegories and their explanations clash with every step!

552 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

This is so obvious that one of the most before masons, the F.: Delaunay, is forced to even to admit it:

"From all these rites, it follows that the conceptions—the most monstrous tales, the most absurd, the most opposed to the truth of V'his-Loire, the most extravagant systems, have been generally advanced, trained and employed the most often to dazzle the novice, and make him suspect great mysteries, to put to contributing to the weak man by giving him hope wonderful results, or for some other such a dishonorable motive, and rarely, one might say never, to bring forth a useful truth, to to disseminate an important discovery... Except the first three grades, everything else is just A pipe dream, an extravagance, futility, a lie?

This testimony, wrested from us by the force of truth,

2 Tiler of the thirty-third degree of Scottish Rite Freemasonry, by the F.-, Delaunay, pp. 254 and 255; "book accepted by the Grand "Orient de France, sold at the hotel concierge's." (P. Deschamps, 7b., p. 365, note). See Freemasonry of the Grand Orient of France, Bernard Acary, pp. 30 and 31.

m lying. ONE), RENE RD. ee eee mn oe

=

ra

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 553

is very valuable. Here is a most learned mason. on matters within his domain, forced to admit that Freemasonry has established and maintains systems and official rites to deceive initiates, to to tap into the purse strings of fools and

extract as much money as possible from them through charlatanism

Calculated tanism. This mason is obviously a resolute opponent of the high ranks and of the Ma- superior stupidity. He harshly condemns them; but he is no less obliged to recognize that they exist and they have never produced anything Okay. Which is absolutely true. But the exception he makes in favor of the Freemason woman- Symbolic order is entirely unfounded. For we we have just seen that Masonic dissimulation He also reigns in the first three grades; and he You only need to read about its rituals to find the ex- distractions, chimeras, futility, falsehoods historical facts and the lies attributed to them higher ranks.

We have previously observed through the te- unsuspecting testimonies from the Freemasons themselves same as, for its members, the princes and the sovereigns, whether they were dignitaries or simple

For initiates, Freemasonry was a hypocrisy and a perpetual deception, just as much in its di-

and FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

direction than in the initiation to its secrets and its aim.

Through all these official lies, Freemasonry stupidity has proposed to hold its followers

as long as possible in suspense, hoping-these and waiting, in order to better control them and to to deceive them more completely. In fact, we know itvons, almost all of the masons are not all

Their lives are nothing but fools.

With regard to non-members, Freemasonry maintains the same attitude. She presents the Freemason-laughter of the first three grades as the only true Freemasonry, as such a strange institution-manages to be more political than religious and is devoted to the principal-primarily to the practice of charity.
from time to time, to deflect accusations too well-founded and rising up on all sides, the Grand Orients and Supreme Councils put on the date of the statutes and declarations of principles
pes, where these same af- are solemnly repeated firmations. Nevertheless, in these recent pieces, as in the old official writings, the half-
Words and subtext say more than what is assumed.
The Masonic authorities would not want that.
All these factums resemble the Co- charter

logne: these are masks and new hypo-.

ee: cf. Matias atte ~- i eee, ms A EE. mc geen, ooo,

~

jn
#

crises. We cannot allow ourselves to be taken in by them. Dr. Because we have learned perfectly well that the Mag.:. of the symbolic lodges is only the vestibule and the veil of true Freemasonry, that of the back rooms, and that this one, thus hidden, would continually cuts into politics and never stops to work towards the overthrow of religion.

As for charity, the statutes and rules—the tenets of the Masonic order clearly indicate that "the order The Freemasons' purpose is the exercise of... charity; authoritative writers say also in all its tones that Freemasonry is a philanthropic institution in which the masons help and rescue each other like brothers. But these are just phrases. hypocrites addressing the uninitiated. During For a long time, and even today, many have were misled by these false assertions manage and view Freemasonry as a genuine charitable and relief society mutuels. However, the works of charity Masonic connections hardly appear. Among them...

The brothers know how to tell the truth.

In a famous circular (October 10, 1861), the Freemason of Persigny, then Minister of

t
. the interior, said of Freemasonry that it had not ceased "to maintain his reputation" of charity" and to accomplish "with zeal his charitable mission. » One of the great dignified Brother A. Genevay, of the Scottish Rite, thirty-third degree, member of the supreme council seil, rejected the assessments of the overly benevolent minister: "Our fathers, there are for many centuries, they gathered under ancient rules.

506 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

to seek the true light... Your Excellency, I am I'm sure, won't reproach us for to pursue such a plan; but ultimately there is a long way From there to a charitable society. Charity is the consequence of our doctrines, and not the goal of our meetings. That's a difference I'd like to point out.
"Minister, to your attention!"

The Grand Master of Freemasonry (French)
Caise, at that time, Prince Lucien Murat, also speaks in the same vein: "Societies of charitable organizations are numerous; the statutes of cha-
One of them is different... Freemasonry, all by performing acts of charity, requires of its members of greater merit, more serious guarantees; because a mason is not only

1 Letter of October 29, 1860. – V. Masonic documents.
p- 318, published by F. Francois Favre.

ee A) U a — i ee aaa toa RER. many ee, mn "+

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 557

And

member of his lodge, or even of Freemasonry
all of France; but it belongs to 4 the – large family and has as brothers all the masons of
the universe! » |

In a speech delivered in a lodge in 1867,
a bricklayer was saying to the applause of everyone
the assembly: "Freemasonry is the school of truth-a truly civilized civilization... Hille cannot let himself lower to the rank of a simple mutual aid society tuels*. »

In turn, F.-. Louis Redon affirmed that even that "charity is not the goal, but only one of the Characters, and one of the least essential-
"lies, of Freemasonry*."

All these masons were just repeating the doctrines of illustrious predecessors, oracles of gold-Dr. .

indigent Freemason:

"The beggar mason is constantly at your house,
on your heels, in your lodges; it is an evil genius-doing something that obsesses you everywhere and at all times.

1 Masonic documents, pp. 304 and 305.

2? Speech delivered in the lodge of Hippo by Brother Hac-quarter, civil engineer, and reported by Le Monde maçonnique, Feb. 1867, pp. 604 and 605.

3 Masonic World, April 1867, p. 729.

558 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Nothing can protect you from his importunity, and His insolence knows neither limits nor obstacles.
He is there when you get up, when you go about your business, at your meal, upon your departure. His parchment is the arch-Death sentence for your humanity. Better would to meet his hand armed with a dagger; you you could at least oppose courage to the sword assassin. Armed only with his title of Freemason, He tells you, "I am a mason, give me money; for I follow your brother, and your law commands you to do charity. Give, or I will publish everywhere that You are a wicked and evil brother. Give, masons, but prepare yourselves to give without respite-
"Because the ambush is constant!"

The canonical writer of the order, Brother Ragon,
is even less gentle for affiliates of the outlets with misery. In his sacred book in the eyes of "All of Freemasonry," he said:

"Let us remember above all, my brothers, that the Freemasonry did not constitute a body of individuals.
living at each other's expense. These mendevout, who join forces to cause misery, dare-Would they confess their purpose in doing this?
receive? They boldly come to im-to lay bare their distress and the weight of their vices without

1 Revelations of a Rosicrucian, pp. 37 and 38.

~.

see NE.

pe em mm mise me

+ ee, eee, eee yaa

SR. RS | a -" moe se, 1

And

x ars,

-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 559

to have been useful to the order through no talent, by no virtue. This hideous leprosy of the Maconne-laughter in France demonstrates culpable negligence lodges, especially those in Paris.

The true theoretical and practical spirit of the Freemasonry regarding the practice of charity is perfectly summarized, in the form of a precept, in these words of a mason:

"Never present in order anything but men-

those who can present you with a hand and not

"You hand it to me?"

These explanations, these complaints and these recommendations

Masonic donations are further proof that the dignitary masons, even the thirty-three-sixth degrees, know almost nothing about the purpose of order and do not enter into anything. in its direction.

they engage in secret activities, especially within the lodges French receptions for men without fortune,
because they need hands for their plans political. These docile arms, ready to do anything, are found mainly among the destitute.
told them that Freemasonry is "an institution

1 Philosophical Course, etc., p. 368.

2 Letter from F.-. Beurnouville to F.:. Roëttiers de Montaleau.
Revelation of a Rosicrucian, p. 38.

560 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ee = ee

philanthropic, progressive, whose members
live as brothers, below the level of a gentle equality
"The Freemason is a citizen of the unity..." That "the Freemason is a citizen of the unity towards, that there is no place where he does not encounter-three brothers, eager to welcome him, without that he needs to be recommended to them by another-
"Only by its title, etc." They are warming up their imagination through the seductive perspectives of socialism that is made to shine in their eyes for a next future. We thus win in the cause of men whom nothing will stop, who will carry out everything what will be ordered of them. But until we uses their arms and they receive their share in Social liquidation, these men have nothing to do with it.
to live; they need help: hence begging
Masonic. But the victims of these troublemakers
The petitioners are not the leaders of the sect.
These, remaining unknown to almost all-_ the masonry, escape both at once and the inconveniences and dangers of their undertakings.
It's yet another deception, and a double one at that: the di-
The gendarmes and the wealthy masons suffer, whatgrumbling about the obligation to help subsist
the beggar masons, while waiting for these evil-happy ones go to risk their freedom or their lives at 1 Picturesque History of Freemasonry, Clavel, p. 1.

|
|

profit, whether from ambition or any other step-sion of these ignored leaders.

It would be impossible to list in detail the lies, deceptions and hypocrisies of the Masonic society. To summarize. The Masonnery, in his writings, speeches, and actions,
which we can call official, affects to have participated particularly in esteem and honor virtue and morality, to exalt patriotism and to encourage love of country, respect for power and
the authorities, to whom she generously offers toasts,
the cheers and the songs, with the variations dictated by circumstances, to be the champion of all religious and political freedoms and social, and to take charge, always and Everywhere, the defense of its initiates. It takes good care, in the country where it does not dominate, to do displays its motto, "liberty, equality, fraternity," and to loudly demand it for herself and for her members benefit from and apply. But it is absolutely certain that, from behind, when she didn't have Nothing to fear, Freemasonry gives to its members
Your teachings are destructive of all virtue.
of all morals, of all nationalities, of all authority, of any religion, of any freedom, of every society, and that, in fact, history just-

502 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

numerous and monstrous acts are attributed to him.
trueux, in accordance with his secret doctrines and who should return it, if the truth were to come out day, the execration of humankind. The work
The evidence from RP Deschamps is abundant.

Didn't we see her, not even ten years ago?
years, launching one of its companies on French society
army corps, the Internationale, make a noise-

common cause with her, when her triumph- ;
Phe seemed assured, then, when defeat is $:
(

L

Inevitably, a break with the defeated Commune, and in a backdated and pre-prepared plate
at every event, treat the Communards as "Criminals," foreign to Freemasonry!?

1 V, Univers of June 12, 1871, and a series of articles entitled:
Freemasonry and the Commune, by the same author,
Mr. Al. de Saint-Albin, in Univers of September 1877.

It's incredible how the Freemasons' maneuvers...
Things resemble each other in all eras: further proof of the unity of its supreme leadership, the hypocrisy of its leaders, and also the imbecility of its members. In 1831, the Carbonari Extremists in Italy attempted a movement that was not approved
Nubius and who failed, as he had predicted (see above, |
p. 370). There were a great number of exiles, Now, the following year |
vante, writing to Vindex, director of central sales at Cas- { Tellamare, Nubius acknowledges that this expedition, which he had, blamed, it had nevertheless had an advantageous side, that of throwing # in exile "a crowd of idiotic fanatics who complicit us-
"They promised." He adds: "But before a few months have passed, we..."
We will use them. We will profit from the true tears of their families' and the presumed pains of exile for fabric-

. to demand a popular weapon of amnesty. We will always ask-collar

=

b

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 563

Hypocrisy and lies did not deceive then than those who wished to be. Today the Mag.', triumphant, recalled her children from exile and she tries to make them understand that they were abandoned only with great sorrow and out of necessity. For the sake of the sublime cause, of the sacrosanct cause of the Revolution, i? must always and above all to save Freemasonry'.

days of amnesty, and we will be very happy not to obtain it as late as possible, but we will always continue to demand amnesty aloud." (See Secret Papers. Quote.) from Civiltà cattolica, December 18, 1875. – World, December 28 (1875.) The great Jewish leaders had secretly urged & this movement of 1831; they thought they could take advantage, according to their views, of failure as well as success. Nubius, a secondary leader, did not come. He didn't grasp it at first. Later, he understood, or learned, the designs. secrets from his superiors: strive for success, or get rid of him. shaving off troublesome limbs for the moment, and having under the ` a more powerful motive for unrest. The Commune, & qua- Fifty years later, he reproduced the same tactic.

1A recent Masonic document clearly proves three things: 1° That Freemasonry and the Republic are one and the same; 2 that the International and the League of Education are two products of Freemasonry; 3° that the articles the statutes and constitutions of Freemasonry, as well as the The official statements of the Freemasons are odious lies and hypocritical masks, when they assure that Freemasonry connerie is solely a charitable organization, not never concerning themselves with politics or religion.

"General Assembly of the Gr.*. Or... of France for the year
"5879. Report published by the Paris Union Chain,
"Journal of Universal Freemasonry, October issue"
"1879.

"Meeting of September 8, morning: Brother Ernest Rousselle"
"proposes that the Gr." Or.'. join the subscriptions formed "In favor of those granted amnesty. After various explanations, it remains

564 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

At the same time, to us laypeople, Catholics and conservatives, her shortsighted enemies, she is about to prove once again, in bail- giving by decrees and by unjust laws

"established that Gr.*. Or.-. had previously paid his offering"
"fraternal to the subscription for the amnestied; which "will not stop the Cons.*. of the Order from joining the new-
"New subscriptions. Moreover, the LL.*. and the M.°. have all "The ability for them to subscribe; which has already happened."
"Meeting of September 10th... The F.*. of Saint-Jean (president)"
"of the Bar Council) announces that the Bar Council
"allocates 500 francs for the subscription to those granted amnesty. (Applau-

« from the F.:. Francolin, Or... of Gr.-. Gold.*. (municipal candidate "in the 19th arrondissement):

"Your votes for the victims of the Chatenois fire and for the
"Those granted amnesty have proven that we are all driven by the same spirit, and that...'
"if we always have a vanguard and a rear-
"Guard, we are all one army, united."
"by the same sentiments, the doctrines, the sufferings"
"past. Your hands have opened 3 times for the exiles,

R

The first ones, at the cost of their lives, shouted: Long live the Republic!
... For a long time, Freemasonry had been breathing in its temple the air of justice and liberty. But it is the pre-
"For the first time in many years, she was able to hold her
"seated in the midst of a secular world that was almost free and pres-
"that is just, in the face of this beloved image of a living republic.
"(For the session of the 10th, the statue of the Republic had been "placed in the lodge, to the east, at the unanimous request of "the assembly.")

"Long called for by our wishes, this image, which an agreement
"unanimous spontaneously introduced among us, had its

RRA

"His advent, and who will remain his guide and defender..."
"Freemasonry will become the essential director of education"
"Secular and republican cation, and everywhere there is an en-
"Fant, wherever there is a school, you will find the hand of the

|
|

whose cry of return is: Long live France! and which formerly =

\
q:
"place in the middle of our Masonic republic. which has PREPARY."

all religious freedom, which is indeed the most hypocrite, the most deceitful and the most deceitful of All associations!

"Freemason, so that the celebrated word may become a truth:"

'Freemasonry and education are one and the same thing,'
"and always, facing the Black International, which wants the "Darkness and submission, one will find, vigilant and devoted,
"[Blue International of the sons of Hiram, who want the light,
"Justice, liberty!" (Quoted by the Frenchman and reproduced)
(by [Universe of October 16, 1879.])

1 No one is unaware of the hypo- statements and distinctions criteria by which the high-ranking Freemason Gambetta, and all his daily-
Those who followed him have asserted that his famous formula "the clerical-
"Ism, that's the enemy" was not aimed at Catholicism. In the Lodges, Freemasonry... feel like a family and often drop the mask.
the mouth of the orator of the L.. North Star, Gold... of Lille, F.. Courdavaux, professor at the Faculty of Letters in Douai,
She clearly stated her position on this point. The speaker it began in this way: "I am going to address before you, my
"Fr.-., a question I would not dare to address in any other "Place;.....before you, I can say everything. The subject I am going to "treating is the very essence of all the questions on the agenda of the "day. The distinction between Catholicism and clericalism"
"is purely official, subtle, for the needs of the tri"bune; but, here, in the lodge, LET US SAY IT LOUDLY FOR THE V-
"RITE, CATHOLICISM AND CLERICALISM ARE ONE;
"And, in conclusion, let us add: ONE CANNOT BE BOTH"
"CATHOLIC AND REPUBLICAN; IT'S IMPOSSIBLE." (The Chain)
d'union, journal of Universal Freemasonry, July 1880, and the (Letter from Vienna, August 14 and 29, 1880.) Nothing can be said clearer and also truer. Since, according to the document
From the previous note, Republican, it's the same thing as A Freemason, a Catholic cannot be any more than one than the other: it's impossible. - In a speech at a fair, Another high-ranking Freemason, the deputy Paul Bert, has just into promote a new formula of the same ilk, to summarize without doubt the course of action that the government intended to take with regard to the clergy. He said: "Peace to the priests and war to the monks." (Speech delivered at the Coulanges agricultural fair)

The same judgment is made about the Maconnerie and other secret societies, its branches, by all the writers who have studied them. The comparison used by one of them is therefore perfectly accurate: "winding serpents," he said, Speaking of the Carbonari, they slipped into the middle of the world, in order to poison the last of the beliefs and to exploit for their own benefit all the tears. » And elsewhere: « Carbonarism marked It was a place where steps were measured in its winding paths. Like that serpent, of which Tertullian speaks, "47 se "hid as much as he could, he tightened his grip on "himself, through a thousand detours, his malicious prudence—"Cious. J] withdrew to the deep places. He "feared nothing so much as appearing. When he "showed its head, hid its tail; it did not re—"never fully molted, but it developed" by tortuous folds; beast ever enemy of "Day and light."

Remarkably, Freemasonry itself

has

on-Yonne. — Univers, August 20, 1880.) It is just as hypo- wrote that Gambetta's phrase. The exact translation of this In French, Macon says: after the monks' tour, will come the The priests' tour. — Every true Freemason, every Mason of high destinies must have been cast in the mold of the mendream and hypocrisy.

1 The Roman Catholic Church in the Face of the Revolution, vol. II, p. 80 and 95. |

b mo mm A — — A

Avene 7

te p:
3 i to be ae i Peat

Mee

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 567

We do not shy away from this comparison.
we have already heard from the head of supreme sales of Carbonarism to employ the words of Our-Lord, and, by a false and sacri-light, to make it the rule of conduct for initiates in their works of seduction and deception: be Cautious as snakes.

The same idea is found in the ritual of the high Masonic rank of unknown philosopher-judge.
read in the explanation of the alphabet for this grade:
"The square, letter Q, quadriformis, means: take-
"to draw all figures, to employ all means"

"To succeed... The oblique line S, snake, animal-"

"a soft, flexible material that bends and folds under the turf,
"which in the sun changes color like the cameo-
"Leon. He outwits the shepherd who is chasing him, he..."
"He gets up, darts forward, and disappears under the foliage.
a This is how philosopher-judges should be "UNKNOWN*."

The Albigensians, one of the sources of Freemasonry,
are compared to the snake in almost the same way
terms by Saint Bernard. This saint said that "These sectarians would hide under the grass to
"To bite and more reliably transmit their venom."

1 Masonic Orthodoxy: Ritual of the Order of Judges phi-Unknown philosophers. Alphabet of the grade.

568 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Furthermore, Freemasonry cannot
to have a greater horror of snakes than his ancestors.
The good goddess Cybele, with a serpent beneath her feet,
presided over the secret mysteries of the pagans; the sect
The onostic of the ophites worshipped the serpent; the ba-
The Templars' phomets carried snakes on their quickly in current Masonic emblems.

It shows a snake encircling a globe, a serpent embracing a thau, a three-headed serpent.
And in the middle of the seal of the order, rite of Misraim,
There is a snake biting its own tail.

The first of all the deceitful, the father of the mendacious and the doctor of hypocrisy, to perpetrate
His first deception on earth took the form of a snake.

2. Violence of all kinds.

That one of the main means of action of the Freemasonry, that is, violence in all its forms forms, as his books clearly prove sacred and official documents, and what of countless facts establish with no less of brilliance.

I. From the day of his first initiation, the adept

'FRANCO-MASONS AND JEWS.': 569

ee

must understand that he belongs to a society of
He was told he had a violent and bloodthirsty character. He was clearly-ment: "If you intend to deceive us..."

"Don't expect to succeed... The certainty that "We would have found your perfidy fatal to you, and you would have to give up ever seeing the "Daylight." After several trials and During the ceremonies, he is made to swear an oath, that he will have to repeat at least in terms of meaning to all the other ranks, by which he devotes himself to torture

the most dreadful, if he breaks his word; and pen-

During this time, the Freemason brother, master of ceremonies-

The lodge denies him holding the point of a compass on the left breast, and around it all the others

The brothers are standing with their swords drawn.

When, after this oath, the ban-

water that covered his eyes, the apprentice mason

he sees all those naked swords pointed at his chest,

And he hears all the brothers cry out: God

"Fear nothing, my brother, from the swords that
"are turned towards you. They are not threatening"
"only for perjurers. If you are faithful to the "Franc-Mag.^o. ... these swords will always be "ready to defend you; but if, on the contrary,

– "You would never betray her, no place in the 52.

~

570 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"Earth would not offer you shelter against these weapons"
"Avenging*."

These words reproduce the same threat as in—after his oath, the initiate was extended to the last degree of the Freemasonry of Saint-Martin,
In the eighteenth century: "Flee the temptation of reveal what you have heard; for the thunder
is no quicker than the knife that attacks you will hold you somewhere you are.

In most high ranks, the ceremonial—
The initiation rituals are a true school of as—assassination.

Reception of an elected official. This rank is subdivided into several degrees in the Scottish and Egyptian rites Here. The French rite has united them into one, which is the fourth degree and the first of the grades superiors.

The box is decorated with a black drapery, strewn with... a sea of red tears. In the middle is an altar red, bordered in black, on which is painted a dagger throwing nine black flames in ma—1st of rays. All members of the lodge wear the white apron edged in black, in the middle

1 Ritual of the apprentice mason. See Dict. of Religions, ed.
Migne, art. Freemasons.

From LM
NET
aN Ie

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 571

depicted is a dagger, spewing flames
red, ray-shaped; they wear them across the body
a black cord from the bottom of which hangs a small weight gnard, with a gold handle and a silver blade. All They have a dagger in their hand. Next to the altar is placed a painting depicting three heads, positioned,
each one, on a stake, and another, in transparent, representing an arm holding a dagger,
with this word written: Vengeance.

In the Scottish Rite, the three heads are rem-placed by three skeletons. The aspirant is led in a dark room that serves as a cave. He has a blindfold over his eyes and hands covered in bloodied gloves. The lending serlying, right knee on the ground, while the Venerable of the lodge places his dagger on him front, and that the close brother puts a naked sword on him, and that the intimate brother on his back. After the oath and a few moments silence, on an order given to him, the reci-
The assistant removes his headband, takes the ua lamp that illuminates this sort of den and, of The other, a dagger he finds next to the lamp, then he rushes to the back of the chamber or cavern
to strike a character who appears.
It's a mannequin, prepared in advance, whose
His neck is surrounded by blood-filled intestines;

_ 372 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

cuts off her head, grabs her by the hair and must bring it, all bloody, into the lodge. Then the Venerable... congratulates him on his firmness and courage;
He receives him as elected master, passing the ribbon over him around his neck and handing him a dagger.
The words for the rank and password are: Vékar, nékam, which mean vengeance. The signs of this rank
are: the first: to draw his dagger and raise it closed hand to the forehead; the second: to perform the simulation—the pain of striking the brother in the heart with the dagger by saying: Vékam; the response is to wear the right hand to the heart. During the meal that follows the ceremony and which is called "the table box," the Freemason brothers engage in various maneuvers which all evoke ideas of revenge and murder. They must, on several occasions, seize all the necessary resources. their daggers seemed to plunge him into their glasses, saying: Vékam; then lift it, carry it forward as if to strike and repeat: V—Ham! Nekam! |

Reception of a tall Scotsman from Saint-André. This is the twenty-ninth degree of the Scottish Rite. The lodge is draped in red. The Venerable: and the brothers are dressed in red robes and wear a scarlet scarf to which are attached

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 573

They hung a set square and a dagger. The F.—. Ter—

Ribe holds a flaming sword in his hand, all the

The brothers also have swords in their hands. In the lodge, one placed a chopping block and an axe in front of the Venerable.

'a table covered with a red carpet, which means, The Ritual says, blood and fire. The word of the grade is néhamah, superlative of the word nékam and which means to say perfect revenge or supreme revenge.

Reception of a Knight Kadosh. This rank,

which is the quintessence of the Masonic spirit,

said Father Deschamps, is found in all the rites under different names and to varying degrees.

sixty-fifth of the Misraïm rite. It is included under the name of é/w in the French rite.

+

The fourth apartment, that is to say the lodge – where the actual reception takes place, is tense in red. It shows an eagle holding in its talons a dagger and a flag on which is written: conquer or die, and a three-headed serpent whose The first one wears a crown, the second one a 'tiara and the third a sword. A dagger at The white handle and black blade are handed to the recipient.

'Official interpreter Ragon claims vipini

Thus, this last symbol: "The snake designates the D74 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

—

bad principle; its three heads are the emblem abuses or harm, which has crept into the three upper classes of society. The head of the serpent who wears a crown indicates the sovereigns; she who wears a tiara or a key indicates the popes; she who carries a sword, the army." The Knight Kadosh, he adds, must to ensure the repression of these abuses. The dagger means, according to the same interpreter, that the great chosen knights Kadosh must continue absolutely work to fight and destroy through moral means, prejudices, Cignorancidity and superstition, represented by these three heads.

The three sacred passwords to enter the council of the Kadosh, all three begin in this grade by the word nekam, vengeance. And The sign of rank consists of grasping the dagger that the Kadosh wears on the scarf, to raise it

at shoulder height as if to strike

gneur!

In the ritual published by F.-. Ragon, the ceremonies of receiving a Kadosh are greatly softened and their significance diminished, as much as possible, through explanations of the in-

=

|

t

I
r

L

CN fu th

n
(
r
e
j

\

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. | 575

year

These corrections are the result of the 'Masonic prudence; but this modified ritual'
My point is the true ritual of the Knight Kadosh.
"A Belgian journal from 1828, cited by Eckert," helps us get to know him better:
"When the Knight Kadosh pronounced his : oath, they put the dagger in his hand and they x places a crucifix at his feet, then the Very

If it's a superstition, break it. If he doesn't, in order to
To give nothing away, we applaud, and the Very Grand addressed him on his piety. He x receives without revealing the big secrets. But if he crushes the crucifix, so they bring it closer to
: the altar, where there are three representations, three cada-
"Ves, if one can obtain them. Full bladders"
There is blood at the spot where he is being yelled at to hit.
"[He carries out the order and the blood splatters on him, and grabbing the severed heads by the hair, he : cries: Vekam, revenge is done! Then the n Te . G.-. speaks to him thus: "By your constancy and 'Your loyalty, you have earned the right to learn Zes se"crets of the true masons. These three men that you
They have just struck: superstition, the king, and the "Pope. These three idols of the people are nothing but..."
: tyrants in the eyes of the wise. It is in the name of the a -E- = = "o -ml T = ee Wee

576 Freemasons and Jews.

superstition that the king and the pope commit all
"The most imaginable crimes!"

An even more competent authority would tell us-will reveal the fraud of F.-. Ragon. Around 1857, the F.-. Laffon de Ladébat published, in the Nouvelle-Orléans, the ancient and true Ritual of the Maçonnerie. For the reception of the Knight Kadosh, he
In the lodge there are three heads, one surmounted by a tiara, the other crowned with laurel, the third wears a royal crown. The Venerable* tells the candidat Kadosch: "Until now you have not seen in al Freemasonry is nothing but emblems. One must see it.
Now, let's talk about the realities. Are you determined to tread the path?
feet the prejudices to which you have been enslaved and to obey without reservation everything that is prescribed to you "For the happiness of humanity?" The candidate promises and takes the oath. The Venerable then says to him:
Rise and imitate me. Then, seizing a dagger,
He strikes her head, which is surmounted by a tiara, saying:
Hate the imposture! Death to crime! The candidate stabs him, too, in the head, repeating the same 1 words. They then prostrate themselves one after the other 1 before the laurel-crowned head, and the Venerable... said: Eternal glory to the martyr of virtue!

1 Belgian Conservator, vol. XIX, pp. 258-259.— Eckert, the Franc-Masonry, vol. I", p. 333.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 911

Let his suffering serve as a lesson to us! Let us unite!
to crush tyranny and imposture! They re-they raise and arrive in front of the third head which carries a royal crown; the Venerable: the striking of his dagger, saying: Hatred to tyranny! Death to Crime! The candidate imitates him again and repeats his words f.

Brother Ragon himself provides us with proof.
that its new, revised and corrected ritual does not reproduce Produced by the true Masonic ritual of the Kadosh:
"We had thought," he said, "that we could reproduce here
"rituals practiced before 89; but the role that
"The jewel played a part in preventing us from doing so."

But the Kadosh's jewel is the dagger, and the
the role it plays in the ceremonies of true rituals,
This is the revenge we just witnessed. Ragon
He also acknowledges that in the eighteenth century "a Knight Kadosh was an executor of the order,
and that "we find, in very old manuscripts-` has written by English Masonry, that the Kadosch
"He is called Killer, assassin 3."

We will recall here that the English Masonic is the mother of all the lodges in the world, and that

1. Ritual of the Fy. Laffon de Ladébat. See the Freemasons,
p. 176 et seq.

2 New ritual of the Kadosh, p. 2.

3 Ibidem., p. 7.

The ritual of F.-. Laffon is not a book "from before" 89, » but from 1857.

What is even more odious: the order exercises and prepares women themselves for this role of violence and bloodshed.

In the reception of the perfect mistress, pre- the first high degree of women's Freemasonry, the Venerable*, who presides, after having him sworn the ser- He lies, and says to her: "My dear... a task arduous, but sublime, is now imposed upon you. Your first obligation will be to embitter the the people against kings and against priests; at cafes, theaters, parties, work in this sacrosanct intention. I have nothing left. that I have a secret to reveal to you and we will talk about it at in a low voice, for the time has not yet come to manifesting it to the secular world. Monarchical authority- the chic that we pretend to be so fond of must a day will fall under our blows, and that day is not distant. Meanwhile, we stroke her to arri- ver, without hindrance, to the final complement of our sacred mission, gut is the annihilation of all monarchy*.

The Tiler of Scottish Rite Freemasonry (who is probably

1 La Vera buona Novella of Florence. Correspondence of Rome, No. 181, February 1, 1862.

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. ' B79

(F. Ragon) bears this (p. 218): "In the chosen one, The recipient, a new Judith, must, armed with a dagger, bring a head to the altar, in appa- recently separated from her body.

In the higher rank of sublime sovereign Scottish, according to the Manual, or Tiler of all the rites of Brother Willaume, the most complete, ensure Ragon, the sister in question, represents Judith. The sign of this rank consists of raising the hand left side of the head, to grasp it by the hair, and of the right hand makes a mock cut-off of its throat.

at the bottom of a Scottish cord, moiré scarlet, worn diagonally from right to left.

These female ranks obviously relate to that of the elected official and to its various degrees in the Mac. of men.

It must be admitted that these few passages from Masonic rituals, these ceremonies and these discourse, these signs and these jewels, have absolutely-absolutely no connection with "the practice of the ien-" "I am skilled in the arts and in all virtues," with "the happiness of humanity and its pro- emancipation aggressive and peaceful t, » occupation wniue and alone

1 Declaration of principles of the general Masonic convention of the rite Scottish in Lausanne in 1875. V. Monde, October 2, 1875.

580¢ FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the goal of Freemasonry, according to all the cons-
The statutes and declarations of the masons. – The conclusion that one cannot avoid drawing from it summarized in these words from the author of The Veil Lifted:
"If we wanted to train assassins, how would we go about it-"
"We'll do it another way to accustom them to the horrors"
"of death, and to make them stifle the remorse of a
"Conscience that might be alarmed?"

Freemasonry does not regard as... simple ceremonies without consequences, that's what she practice in her dressing rooms. She has always taken and still takes the awful oaths seriously and the bloody rites of his initiations. The play
The following is evidence of this for the eighteenth century. It's a circular, sent in June or July 1788 by the regulatory committee of the Grand Orient of Paris to all the Venerable Masters* of the lodges of his obedience. Abbot Barruel, who quotes her, knew her personally-several of those who received it at that era:

"As soon as you receive the enclosed package"
You will acknowledge receipt of this. You will attach the oath to execute faithfully and punctually all orders that come to you under the same form, without you having to worry about knowing which hand they leave, nor how they arrive at you wind. If you refuse this oath, or if you If you miss, you will be considered to have violated

the one you did upon entering the order brothers. Remember the aqua tofana. Sou-
Do you come from the daggers that await the traffickers?
very f. »

Despite the correction of French rituals by Ragon, Freemasonry has not softened.
in the nineteenth century. The rituals of other rites have not been changed. The speeches and the teachings the sounds she makes in her dressing rooms and Outside the lodges, this does not prove that she has given up.
to employ violence as a means of action.
Just a few quotes:

In a lodge in Prussian Saxony, in 1845,
An orator said: "If humanity is to progress-to serve, according to the will of the grand master, it is necessary that

1 The regulatory committee that shipped for all of France
this abominable piece, was then composed of Condorcet, Mirahandsome the eldest, Sieyès, Brissot, Cara, the Duke of La Rochefoucauld, Clavière, Pelletier de Saint-Fargeau, Valadi, La Fayette and what-ques a itres. (V. Barruel, Mémoires, etc., t. II, p. 337, 343 and 344, and vol. IV, p. 206.) – Father Deschamps follows this circumc-
The culmination of these very accurate reflections is: "So many events, that of victories, of annexations, of conquests, of revolutions tions explained by these oaths! » (Vol. I, p. 420.) Let us add:
and also, by these execrable means of action employed by the Masonry.

582 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the old scaffolding collapses, even though even all the world's powers strive-would save them from ruin. It is through the violence that they are then overturned. That if this destruction is a crime in the eyes of human law.
Maine, it is nonetheless in accordance with the law
eternal (?!), which alone has strength for humanity.

F... orator, that's Freemasonry.

Another lodge, in Belgium, was listening to a brother
The mason stated in his speech: "We have the right and the duty to address the issue nun from the convents, to attack her head-on, from dissect it, and the whole country will have to _ eventually bring about justice, even if he had to employ the strength to cure oneself of this leprosy*.

Here is one of the speeches of Garibaldi, the great honorary master of all Masonic lodges
from Italy:

"If Italy does not have the place it should occupy in the world, it owes it to the black race*; let's go so in Rome to flush out this brood of vipers; he

1 F.. Heimbürger in the Sondherausen lodge, V. the Secret Societies, etc., t. It, p. 392 and 393.

2. Outline of the works for the great national Solestiale festival.
1854.

8 The Catholic clergy.

-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 583

It needs a wash, a strong detergent, it needs erase this black race, more deadly than choleramorbus. Every man, every woman, who feels the weight of shame that weighs on the queen of the world, must run from the nail to the knife, from the knife to cannon. Any weapon in the hand of a Roman s-He would turn to kill a tyrant or a henchman. However, rap-
Peel yourself that the closer the decisive work approaches, the more One must take precautions to hide the project. In the middle of the night and in the silence and the
"It's a mystery; let everyone make sure their iron is ready!"

The Freemason girls look like entirely to their mother at this point.

At the seventh degree of Italian Carbonarism, sovereign prince, patriarch, the initiates "swear
the ruin of all religion and all government

They were told that "all means for
"The execution of their projects is permitted: the death-
"Treatment, poison, false oaths, everything is in their hands."
" arrangement *. "

The secret and ongoing investigation of the sale supreme (1821) gave this warning to its

1. Garibaldi to the Romans. See Secret Societies, vol. III.
pp. 385 and 386.
Jean Witt, Secret Memories, p. 21.

|

584 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

followers: "You know that the slightest revelation,
"that the smallest clue escaped the court of "Penance, or elsewhere, can lead to great-
"calamities, and that this is his death warrant"
"that thus signs the voluntary or invo-
"Lontaire."

The reformer of the Italian Carbonari,
Mazzini has not changed his methods of operation.
Here are some articles from the organization of the Young Italy: |

Article 30. "Those who do not obey the orders from the secret society or which would reveal them
The mysteries will be stabbed without mercy.
The same punishment for traitors.

Article 31. "The secret tribunal shall pronounce the sentence and will designate one or two affiliates for its Immediate execution.

Article 32. "Anyone who refuses to execute the judgment will be deemed perjured, and, as such, issued on the-field. "

Article 33. a If the guilty party escapes, he will pursued relentlessly, everywhere, and he will have to

to be struck by an invisible hand, even if he were on the |

in his mother's womb or in the tabernacle of Christ.
Article 34. "Each secret tribunal shall be competent not only to judge the cut-

oc

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 585

pable, but to put to death any per-
"It sounds like he will have struck it with anathema."

Article 39. "The officers shall carry a dagger"
of ancient design, the non-commissioned officers and soldiers will have rifles and bayonets, plus a dagger of one foot long, attached to the belt and on which they will take the oath.

What an abominable program! Isn't it a
A true code of assassins!

The International transcends this violence.

In its third congress since its founding,
that of Brussels, its speakers made themselves heard
these cries of blood and death:

"No tolerance... The day we will be Masters, we must use our strength to found the Republic. If it is necessary to guillotine, we will not back down... If the pro-
The priesthood resisted the revolution; it was necessary to use decrees.
of the people to annihilate property. If the bourgeoisie Resist, we must kill the bourgeoisie... I blame the capitalist, aristocratic, banking bourgeoisie,
The one who makes the laws and our misery. That one must perish. » ys

Another exclaimed: "I am a worker and it is at the name of the workers whose names I am asking to speak. We have

1 The Franks-Magon, etc., pp. 454 and 455.
33.

886 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

overcome the obstacles. If a hundred thousand heads obstruct "Tack, let them fall. Yes!"

At the following congress in Bern, one of the members
He concluded his speech thus: "My conclusion is that we must put an end to everything that exists, to everyone,
with this bourgeoisie that has nothing in its head, nothing in the heart and which can no longer stand, and it was only on their smoking ruins that...
The republic will die, not in their blood, there is It's been a long time since they've had it in their veins.
but it is in their accumulated refuse that we
"We will plant the flag of the social revolution."

Everywhere the International holds the same linepledge.

Nihilism, a branch of the International in Orient, the Russian peasants told his followers:
"There is only one thing left for us to do, which is..."
To strangle our masters like dogs! No neighborhood! They all have to go.
We must burn their cities down! Our country must Be purified by fire! What good are these cities?

1st Congress of Brussels (1868). Speeches by the Internationalists Brismée and Pellerin. See the newspapers of the time and the Societies.
secrets, etc., vol. III, p. 295.

2nd Congress of Bern. Speech by the internationalist Jaclard.
See Secret Societies, etc., vol. 1, p. 258,

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 387

They only serve to create servitude... » .

For its part, the Western International, vain-
The head of the Parisian army said to his soldiers: "The struggle
The shooting is over; but the fire... remains. Let all the castles, let all the monuments buildings collapse in the flames, and our children enemies learn from this that we are the true sons of the Jacques and of the men who, in '94, avenged their defeats and their miseries by in-setting the provinces ablaze. Fire is terror.

To us, then, belongs the fire that will avenge our brothers and help to complement our work.'

One might think that, on both sides, these are the cries of rage from a few lunatics alone—reduced to impotence. No, it's the documentation. the sect's trine, in accordance with the principles of the

Freemasonry, its mother, a doctrine whose conse—

The consequences were deduced in cold blood.

In a trial of nihilists, judged and condemned born in 1871 by the Russian courts, a piece appeared in the file, bearing this title: Znséruciion for the revolutionaries on the reports of the as—association with the people. It reads: "The revolution—

1 Fribourg. L'Internationale, p. 184. Paris-Journal. Gazette from the South, April 2, 1871.

588 _ FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The only thing that can save the people will be the one that will uproot all social order and destroy all the traditions of the order and castes of Russia. Therefore, the association's goal is not to obtain the granting of a favorable social organization able to the people. The organization will emerge without au—no doubt about the movement and life of the people. But that's a matter for future generations; the nô—tre is a terrible, complete, multi—destruction plain, merciless. ... Let us therefore meet at world of brigands, to the true and only revolutionaries tionaries in Russia. To make that world a invincible power by destroying everything, that's no—our organization, our conspiracy, our ta—chief. "

In London, on July 13, 1871, the central committee—tral, after the defeat of the Commune, langait la The following circular was addressed to all committees of The Internationale: "Considering that they have slaughtered without pity and put to death without grace or mercy, they—chandeliers, leaders of the French socialist movement which, fortunately, are already being replaced by others

The cause of the proletariat demands it, we order
all our members from all countries to stoke the fire

1 V, the Universe, August 15, 1871, and the World, August 17, 1871.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 589

of hatred and revenge that we have ignited against religion, authority, the rich and the bourgeois. We are taking this opportunity to to tell you that appeasement is neither in the hearts, in our minds, and that our ideas
Social skills are becoming more appreciated every day.
by the proletariat of the whole world. Soon we will resort to violent explosions and ter-ribles that will be responsible for running the system.
existing social order, by demolishing it, if necessary with an axe and the rifle, everything that is standing today in civil and religious order.

But, you will say, since the amnesty, the Interna-Hasn't the national system entered into force, at least in France?
in a path of "appeasement?" The congress or-book held in Paris last July gives the answer to this question.

The doctrines and programs of the communes
Nards and other internationalists performed there very similar to the doctrines and programs of the past. Bakunin's theories have been exposed-strong and sustained, and perhaps more pronounced than at any other congress. It is always the rea thorough and comprehensive understanding of current society;

1 Monde, July 28, 1871. See also the newspapers La Liberté, la Gazette du Languedoc, etc.

590 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

and to achieve this result the means advocated and accepted by almost all the delegates, a
It was, as before, Ja violence. One of the members clearly rejected the use of force, and pro-
He tested against this idea by withdrawing. His way
His protest and the public's reaction were strongly condemned.
by the vast majority of the meeting. Another,

He wanted reasoning to be used first.
 He was alone in his opinion. "Force is a necessity,"
 one of the delegates exclaimed, to applause repeated from the audience. Several speakers did They launched scathing attacks against the bourgeoisie.
 were the most listened to and acclaimed. The bourgeoisie exploited the proletariat, which is a real es-Slavery. The workers gained nothing from the great Revolution. The bourgeoisie replaced the nobility. Universal suffrage was an immense a deception from which only the bourgeoisie benefited. What is-
 What does the proletariat have today? Nothing. What does it owe?
 To be? Everything. The proletarians must replace the bourgeois. The future revolution must come before a whole social revolution. » Z} the pro-
 The Létaire employs the same tactics against the bourgeoisie.
 the means that it employed against the nobility.
 "Only force can impose collectivism"

0 cm y Fo Rn w

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 594

which is the reign of justice." – In the reso-resolutions that were voted on in accordance with these resolutions
 During the course, the congress formulated, among other things, the de-~ following statement: IV. "While using the
 "By legal means, the proletariat will not be able to achieve to his emancipation through peaceful means, AND
 .€ SOCIAL REVOLUTION BY FORCE remains the
 "The only possible definitive solution t."
 TI. It was impossible for such teachings to "These efforts do not bear fruit. Facts"
 Countless upheavals, revolutions, pillaging
 'ages and killings among the people, thefts, attacks and
 . specific assassinations of all kinds, demon-
 "those doctrines and initiations of the Ma-_stupidity did not remain a dead letter.
 "We cannot go into all the details;
 'A quick summary is sufficient for our purpose.
 ~ Today it is observed and beyond doubt that The great French Revolution and its upheavals
 'which were the continuation of this among European nations-
 "are not the result of the Masonic conspiracy of the "Eighteenth century. The overthrow of antiquity"

1 4 V, the Universe from July 22nd until the first days of August, and especially issues no. 23 and 27 of July and 1 of August 1880, 'Speeches by Messrs. Deynaud, Hardouin, Hervé and Paularet.' For a summary of Bakunin's doctrines, see above. pages 297 et seq., at page 310,

has
THE

#4

Ph

ae

e7

592 FREEMASONS AND JEWS. r

$

French monarchy, the establishment of the Republic_ blique, the substitution of the territorial division e

administrative of Freemasonry to the old provinces of France, the massacres and the incentives dies, the reign of terror, foreign wars]
res and the civil war, all these upheavals, violent and all these crimes were planned and perpetrated influenced by Freemasonry. Father Deschamps provides irrefutable evidence in its work that we have frequently cited 1. Lesf Freemason writers themselves agree on this and boast of it*? The same work (the Socié-secret information and the company) establishes on evidence that the advent of the consulate and the Corsican empire Freemason Bonaparte, his military successes and his conquests were brought about by support, and sou-:
Wind through betrayal, Freemasons of France |
and of Europe. "The Masonic order considered

"Emperor Napoleon as an instrument"

"intended to overthrow all European nationalities"

1 Eee ER D 4

1 On the active and principal role of Masonic lodges in | the destruction of all kinds perpetrated by the Revolution
from 1789, one must also read the posthumous work of ML Reve- |
lière, member of the Chamber of Deputies under Louis XVIII and Charles X, titled: The Ruins of the French Monarchy.
Philosophical and critical course on modern history. 3 vols.
Paris.

3 V. in particular Louis Blanc and Ragon.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. | 593

"European; after this gigantic excavation, he hoped-
"would make it easier to carry out his plan of a re-
"universal public." The high-ranking Freemason and car-Bonaro of all ranks, Jean Witt, did the same statement.

In the nineteenth century, "the comedy of fifteen years, » the revolution of 1830, that of 1848, are This is yet another work of Freemasonry. It is through she, that the Carbonaro Louis-Napoleon, arrives at the presidency, then to the empire, by violating all the rights and all laws, and by flooding with blood
Paris and France. Instruments of the lodges, Victor-Emmanuel, aided by Napoleon III, plunders the Italian princes and the Pope. The internal conflicts... laughers from Spain and Portugal are also the result of Masonic action, to which no
Even the New World had not escaped. From 1822, everywhere and without transition, they established themselves there violently of republics. "The republic fe"deral and popular, say the Mexican notables-"Cains, already proclaimed in December 1822, in a military riot in Vera-Cruz, was the source of all our ills, the cause of our ruin...
The establishment of divided Masonic lodges in the Scottish Rite and the York Rite, these clubs, tené-
"Breux, decided THROUGH THEIR CONSPIRACIES,

AAAA

594 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"BY POISON, BY DAGGER, the fate of the country
"and the lives of citizens."

It was Freemasonry that brought about the unity of Germany, and which, in payment for its assistance, has obtained and maintains the persecution of the Kulturkampf.
It was she who, in France, abandoned the nephew

as she had abandoned her uncle, did so in 1870.

a revolution in the face of the enemy and proclaimed the Third Republic. It's in collusion with she, and according to her principles, that the International,
His daughter massacred the hostages and set fire to Paris.

Read in Father Deschamps' work lex-plication with supporting testimonies for all these events, and you will be convinced of the action
violent than for almost a century Freemasonry
stupidity exerts on the world*.

I would certainly have too much to do if I undertook to recount, even in summary, all the attacks of Freemasonry against property. That's It's enough to simply recall the looting of property in general.
ecclesiastical and secular practices constantly

1 Report made by order of the Assembly of Notables of Mexico and inserted in the Moniteur français of September 15, 1863.

2 V, Secret Societies and Society, vol. I*, ch. 111. The So-secret societies and civil and political authority, §§ 7 and 8, vol. II, Chapter VI. Secret Societies and the Fatherland or Nationality,

8§ 4, 5, 6 and 7, and the Appendix at the beginning of volume III.
T. I, ch. vus. Secret Societies and the Papacy, §§ 3, 4 and 5.

I fe, a) SE TE, y RES ERE ps.) 'ne

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 595

THE
born

"a 6t on a large scale by the Freemasons of every country in all the revolutions of the eighteenth-thirtieth and nineteenth centuries; then legal theft

i.e., of all Church property by means of ~ @'inique and sacrilegious decrees, work of governor-

- Masonic elements.

As for crimes against individuals, they are `innumerable.

Let us first mention the main assassinations.
= committed or attempted by Freemasons against : their brothers.

<- In the eighteenth century, the knight of Zescure, A Freemason of the Martinist rite, he was poisoned. , by the agua tofana, as soon as he had manifested the intention- | tion to leave the sect. We know that all the free- i: Freemasons of the Revolution, Girondins and Jacobins, 8 were successively sent to the scaffold, some _ the others.

In the nineteenth century, Vast and Stromayer, two of the first founders of modern lodges

J i ._ dela Jeune Lurope en Allemagne, perrent par ordre | To the heads of society. Similarly, the Swiss Lessing,

; from Zurich, was assassinated in Munich; Kotzebue was > daggers by Ch. L. Sand; the fr.-. mag.-. count

Rossi was killed by a knife.

- "emissary of Italian sales. The carbonaro re-esr

macaw

1

Italian fugitive A'miliani, already struck down once times, despite the condemnation of his assassin by The French courts, he was put to death in 1823 in Rodez, in broad daylight, with a stab wound in the chest, by a second assassin of Maz- |

Freemason from Rochester, being about to publish a book to reveal the secret of the Freemasonry, is thrown into Lake Ontario and drowned by order of the grand master of his lodge. Around (1846, the famous Vubius, from the high Italian sale-
lienne, is poisoned, like so many others, by |

|

596 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Din A

agua tofana. Mr. Prévost-Paradol, Freemason, ambassador to America under the Second Empire, died in the same way. In 1874, Brother Zudo-Vico Frappoli, one of the most prominent Freemasons of Florence, grand master in 1865, disappears completely. He's been killed. They say he's locked up in a mental institution. deTurin, to the great astonishment of his friends who had not- They had never suspected his madness. A thousand different noises circulate: they cease as if by magic on an order from the Grand Orient of Rome which prescribes to remain silent about the former grand master and to put his no one in complete oblivion. In Russia, in the an-Born in 1879 and 1880, the nihilists stabbed three of their own, Tcherkassky, Scharkow, and Polosow, con-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 097 ©

damned by their leaders for the crime of treason. The Freemason kings are not immune to violence. sect's laws. Louis-Philippe suffered seventeen or eighteen ten-

. assassination attempts by his F.-. and few

loyal subjects. One of the members of the supreme The sale of Italy, Napoleon VI, was nearly crushed by the explosion of Orsini's bomb, his colleague in Carbonarism... |

No one has forgotten the repeated attacks. in the year 1878, and against Emperor Wilhelm, by the socialists Haedel and Nobiling, and against the King of Spain by Fr.-.-M.:. Moncasi, and against the high mason king of Italy, Humbert I", by the in-Transnationalist Passanente. At the end of 1879 Alfonso XII was once again the subject of a ten-attempted assassination by another affiliate of lodges, Gonzales Otero. For fourteen years the tsar. Alexander is the focus of the rage of nihilists who, in order to kill him, employ increasingly violent and terrifying means tables. In daring cupboards they have an-declared that, without fearing any repression, they would start again until perfect success was achieved. Pres-that every day, during these last three years-sides in Russia t.

The Freemasons did not strike with less
The men who were their adversaries were filled with rage.

1. Tsar Alexander has been a Freemason since 1874 (see more (top, page 342). Before belonging to Freemasonry The emperor survived two assassination attempts: on April 16, 1866, from the nihilistic student Karakosoff, and on June 16, 1867, in Paris, in the Bois de Boulogne, from the Polish nihilist Berezowsky. The title of Freemason did not protect 3 for long the Tsar against the attacks of his new and T.°. CC.-. FF...

In the space of two years, from May 1878 to April In 1880, there were nine assassination attempts against the sovereigns, including four-attacks directed against Emperor Alexander, all perpetrated by followers of Freemasonry or secret societies. We have just listed five: two against William I* of Germany, on May 11 and June 2, 1878; two against Alfonso XII of Spain, on October 25, 1878 and December 30, 1879; one against Humbert I of Italy, November 17, 1878. The other four against the Tsar followed in this order: on April 15, 1879, at Saint Petersburg, by Solawief; December 1, 1879, by Hartmann: a dynamite mine explodes under one of the lines iron ore near Moscow; on February 17, 1880, a similar mine exploded beneath the dining room of the Winter Palace in Saint-Petersburg; in April 1880, an attempted poisoning in the same city.

All these sovereigns are Freemasons, except perhaps the king. of Spain; and furthermore, in the absence of direct evidence, it is It is quite reasonable to think that, if he were not affiliated with Freemasonry, He would not have been placed on the throne by the Spanish liberals.

rent,

The Mag.°. shows little mercy to its royal members. Napoleon ill William, it seems, survived seven assassination attempts. counts five, and Alexander, so far, six. By an effect of divine justice, the enemies and persecutors of the Church Catholics have always ended up destroying each other.

3

598 R aa ERAN MACON cect ET JUIFS.
Once born, newspapers had to record the stories.
terrible fires that they start everywhere

Freemasons and Jews. 599 ©

declared, or which they regarded as obstacles
keys to their doctrines and projects.

Joseph II, Emperor of Germany, for a long time protector of Freemasons, enlightened too late on their sinister designs, ended his reign by a premature death, as soon as he had shown his resolution to close the lodges in its states. It is It seems highly likely he perished from poison. Zeopold LT, his brother and successor, died of the same in a way, on March 1, 1792, poisoned by cooks Italian leaders of the sect. Fifteen days later, his Gustave I, an ally against the French Revolution,
King of Sweden, was assassinated with a dagger
by the orders of the Freemason Count Ankarstrom. The unpublished official documents, published in Germany in 1878 and analyzed by the newspaper |
The Universe, put this fact beyond doubt.

The death of King Louis XVI of France had was resolved, at the same time as that of Gus-
Table III, in the general assembly of the lodges Masonic meeting held in Frankfurt in 1785, as This is proven by the unsuspecting testimonies that gives the same sheet. This second regicide was executed by the French Convention, which was not something other than a Freemasons' convention.

Later, the Duke of Berry was assassinated by

Louvel, instrument of the lodges; Ferdinand JJ, king of Naples, is struck by the carbonaro Agesilaus Milan; the great Swiss Catholic Joseph Leu falls under the blows of other Carbonari. The director-head of the Modena police, the police prefect of Naples, the legate of Ravenna, the generals of Latour, Auerswald, Lemberg, Lignowski, and Many others, less well-known, are condemned. to death in Italian sales and stabbed by their emissaries. Emperor Nicholas of Russia He too succumbed to the effects of the poison. conical.

On September 18, 1860, in Castelfidardo, at the moment where he charged at the head of his column against the Piedmontese, General Pimodan is wounded at killed by a bullet fired by one of his soldiers. At point-blank range, a rifle shot him in the back. This A soldier, a Carbonaro named Biambilla, had enlisted in the Papal army on the orders of his superior masons with the mission to kill the general. This fact is affirmed by the Freemason Carletti, secretary to Grand Master Cavour.

In America, in the year 1875, the president of the Republic of Ecuador, Garcia Moreno, tomb pierced by the dagger of a Freemason. The assassin, to whom their life is offered if he wishes revealing the names of his associates, he replies: "My life _of little value; if you spared it, my comrades-Rades, for their part, would not spare him. I prefer "To be shot rather than combed."

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 604

The energetic men that the Emperor of Russia takes action to defend itself against the at-The nihilists' own scaffolding has fallen. first under the blows of these formidable sectaires. General Mesentzoff was stabbed in broad daylight day, in the middle of a street in Saint Petersburg, on the 16th August 1879. On February 24 of the following year, the Prince Krapotkin was killed in the evening by a gunshot. revolver in the streets of Kharkow, of which he was the governor; and on March 3, 1880, in Saint Petersburg-In the town, General Loris-Melikoff barely escaped

Finally, a fact that, in June of the year 1879, caused the most painful [event] throughout Europe. The death of the Prince Imperial caused great emotion among the

1. See for all these assassination cases: 10. the works on contemporary history; 2° in particular, Father Deschamps, Secret Societies, vol. I, pp. 394, 395, 396, 418, 419, 420 and 485, and vol. II, pages 351 and 372. – Crétineau-Joly, l'Eglise ro-Maine, etc., vol. II, passim; 3° see also the newspapers: Ro-Sier de Marie, June 24, 1871. – Monde, December 15, 1874 and October 8, 1875 – Univers, December 13, 1875, January 17 and 29, August 13-14, 15 and 23, 1878; March 4, 11 and 29, April 19, July 18, December 4, 5 and 6, 1879; February 19 to 27, March 5, April 4 and 17, May 5 and June 22, 1880.

34

602 FREEMASONS AND JIFS.

Zulus at the tip of Africa, raises a terrible, but not rash, suspicion in the mind from anyone familiar with Freemasonry.... No Could it not be by the orders of his superiors? leaders that Napoleon III's son was allegedly exposed and abandoned on the excursion where he perished so miserably?... The Freemasons are named breux in England and in the English army. The Prince of Wales, the heir presumptive to the crown Ronne is their grand master. Now, nothing is more simpler than addressing generals and officers ciers belonging to the sect a recommendation in the style of David's letter to Joab: Send—to the danger, and "abandon him, so that, struck down, "He perishes" (II Reg., 11, 15). With a young a man known to be ardent, reckless, and eager to make a name for oneself, success more or less promptness was almost certain. The details don-Born from this sad event, the letters of several English officers, as published in newspapers, are far from making this supposition implausible t.

Not only the French Republic, but European Freemasonry had the greatest interest in making this young prince disappear. Raised by a deeply religious mother, he was

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 603

sincerely attached to religion and the Church Catholics. The few intimate lines written by Documents published after his death proved that he did not had not wanted to join Freemasonry, and that he was a determined opponent of secret societies. Powerful reasons why Masonic leaders, who were certainly aware of these provisions of the prince, would have been in great haste to get rid of him As soon as possible. Because one thing is very certain, that is, the son of Napoleon III would have replaced the Republic when, at a not-too- distant deadline "Gnée, all the French will be tired of it. The high Freemasons are not incapable of anticipating these reversals. which France is accustomed to. However, it is much more in the interests and according to the practice already in the past of their hypocritical and cunning sect to hold in re- Served and all ready for this psychological moment. man who, whether Orléans or Bonaparte, appeared to him with heart and mind. With him they will be able to, without interruption and with no less audacity and . of activity, to pursue and perfect their projects con- between the Church and Christian society.

Captain Carrey, having returned to England, has was found not guilty. We are not surprised; and this decision changes our suspicion into The judgment was well-founded. The murderer Passanente was pardoned.

o

604 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

through the influence of the lodges of which he was the emissary. If Carrey did not belong to Freemasonry, and If he hadn't been one of his instruments, he wouldn't have no point was acquitted; the indignation would have been vindicated. general tion. Impunity provides and ensures the order and the devotions he needs.

It is not for me to advise the august ones

and the Count of Paris, nor those who surround them;
But I cannot help but exclaim: Let all They challenge each other and let them stand guard! The Maconnerie is capable of all packages.

This grim list of the deeds and actions of the so-
Masonic society is long; it does not contain Yet, these were the most salient of his crimes.
sufficiently highlight the violent customs slow and bloodthirsty actions of this association, and demonstrate at the same time, contrary to the deniers interested gations of F.-. Ragon and the attenuationstions of its Ritual, than in Freemasonry
There are still, now as before '89, some Knights Kadosh, executors of the order.

I am not unaware that, faced with these crushing accusations-
In the health crisis, Freemasons are outraged, some by Hypocrites, the others in good faith, and protest that they are slandered. But the protests, if

|

fel

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 605

However numerous and energetic they may be, they cannot be would erase the facts, nor destroy the principles and the doctrines that produced them. On the one hand, it is certain that the teachings and initiations,
at least in the higher ranks, they preach the legi-timidity and the necessity of revenge and violence resistance against kings, popes and the entire social order Christian community. The brothers of the Macç.* external they exclaim: We are incapable of committing of such attacks; we have never been told anything about-neither signed nor commanded in the same way. We agree.
willingly; for we know that this Mac.°. symbolique is only "a storage place," "a a kind of stud farm, » « the novitiate, » « the antechamber rather poorly informed" secret societies, where one studies men, where followers are chosen deemed capable of rising higher. Especially there are the dupes whom the superior masons mock that between them and that they treat. on equal footing with uninitiated by "Buzets and Harriers." The upper of these masons of the first three degrees, whatever that might frighten them too much. The order of Stabbing or poisoning is only done by The elect, to the Kadosh and other high degrees.

1 Revelations of a Rosicrucian, p. 92 et seq.

oe
odt.

606 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

SS

Masonic exterior, let us not cease to repeat it, is a kind of screen behind which the Macon-Jewish order operates safely. This is maintained by- above all to keep that one, and she puts it on, as much as safely as possible, protected from any harm. From there the denials and disavowals. But, on the other hand On the other hand, one thing is fully proven by the constitutions of official and external Freemasonry earlier and the repeated assertions of the major authors approved conical structures, that is, "Freemasonry "It is one." There are not two Freemasons. The Freemasons of the back lodges and of all Secret societies all have the same supreme leaders. whether known or unknown, that Freemasonry symbolic. All members of this society are therefore In solidarity and responsibility, the fools and the dupes who refuse to see, just like the scoundrels who conspire and act behind their backs. Therefore, no one can repel like exa- handled this assertion from the newspaper Je Monde which summarizes our thesis: "The history of all the asgo-companies that do not operate in the open form for only half a century (it would have (had to say for a century) dreadful old labyrinth- a litany of crimes. The fanatics, the Freemasons cons, the Carbonari and their numerous sects or ramifications have soaked directly into all the revolutions that have bloodied Europe.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 607

This could very well be the truth of the future.

A high-ranking mason, converted and repentant so much, wrote the newspaper /'Univers on October 30 1872, the following:

"You will never know me personally—
lying, but you will understand that, seriously Brought to God by circumstances, I find a satisfaction in correcting the enormous mistakes of my past and my long absence from our holy

Mother Church. For this mother whom I see so late

the holy beauty whose ineffable I finally taste love, I would like to discover myself and brave the stylus of my chain companions. But some—sights of blood, and also the hope of doing something well, they hold me back and force me to live among these companions, to attend their meetings and to
to hold the rank which they say is very high, of which they have saddled me with...."

"However, it now happens that among
We Freemasons, many of whom otherwise find themselves completely, at least in some way
My state of mind. Many, even those in high rank.

1 Monde, November 16 and 17, 1874. f

which they promised to overthrow the monarchy

chie and the Catholic Church, would one day demand the em-plot of the Commune's wild means, and applied—would have to surpass the International. They had convinced that the sect would continue to provide them opportunities to advance in politics, in the

has

ne se ee es a, FREEMASONS AND JEWS.
ee ee ee ere had not suspected that the sect at |
=

diplomacy, in fortune. But they realize | with terror that politics, diplomacy and the Trolière. Accustomed to wearing gloved hands and clean clothes, they will experience horror at the thinking only of certain contacts and dangers of antisocial radicalism. But God brings good of evil, and Freemasonry, as we have known, powerful, formidable due to its far-reaching influence. immense, stretching from the heights of power to the artisan's shops, this Freemasonry will disappear. It will be replaced by associations- tions of brutes and impious men, WHO WILL PASS OVER THE THE BODY OF SOCIETY WILL INVOLVE HORRIBLE WOUNDS ON HIM They will be wounded and will drown in the blood they will have. "They poured out their own blood!"

This curious letter highlights, once again, plus the truth of what we have so often

1 Universe, November 4, 1872.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 609

affirmed: 1° that the Freemasons of the highest degrees raised know almost nothing about things true Freemasonry, which they completely ignore where they are ultimately led; 2° how great has been the illusion of the ruling classes of our Christian society, when they entered Freemasonry, believing that this sect is content- would try to help them fulfill their ambitions or their appetites without demanding anything more of them than the overthrow of the monarchy and the Catholic Church lique; 3° what iron bonds chain the Franks- masons, and what sad slaves and what poor They are all fools. May the members be too many of the intelligent classes that had the misfortune of taking the oath & Freemasonry and of to place themselves under its yoke, to acknowledge their criminality mistake! May they finally understand that they do not are but the wretched instruments and servants of the Jew!

To accomplish his goals, the Jew prepares itself, and will not hesitate, to crush them under the shock from his other slave, "the oil rabble." Let shame and anger seize them then. heart, and that they revolt en masse against their Infamous tyrant! That day, if it comes, will be the day of re- doubtful for the Jew predicted by Metternich.

Before concluding this article, we will say a word from the aqua tofana mentioned above repeatedly.

The pharmacy knows of a poison which it calls aqua tofana, whose composition is attributed to a famous Italian poisoner named Tofana, who, because of her crimes, was strangled in 1730. The poison is extremely subtle and leaves no trace. trace '. That of the Freemasons, which they call also aqua tofana, or tophana, with a slight changing spellings is much more dangerous-rosy and far more formidable. This toxin, in the composition of which would apparently include opium and blister beetles, is also clear that the clearest water and has no taste. He attacked-that the noble parts of the body and, depending on the dose When absorbed, it produces various effects, including death. instantaneous, or death at more or less frequent intervals less distant; it produces a disease of languor, or idiocy, or even without No colic, no pain, and no particular symptoms. It leads to a state of weakness and consumption. such that science is powerless and death inevitable-table. It is said that he was a Freemason, a pharmacist.

1 In the eighteenth century, it was called: "Aqua di Tufania, Toufanie water.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 644

In Naples, who is said to have invented this poison, probably-
| by perfecting the already known aqua tofana.

He would have worked only for the sect and probably according to the orders of its leaders; also the composition of this infernal toxin, which is only manufactured in Naples remained their secret. This same pharmacist also found the antidote, and by this he rendered a terrible service to secret societies. This discovery allows their henchmen to pay the deadly liquid to others and to drink it with them without fear, since they are sure to annihilate them for suspicion, while their unfortunate victims will suffer the terrible effects. A certain The quantity of this dreadful poison is given by the leaders to the executors of the order who conceal it themselves magnanimously and easily; for the volume necess- The number of people who can kill is very small. They carry it. tent in the bezel of a ring'.

It is appropriate to draw a parallel here with what pre- The following article from the newspaper Liberté is presented:

"It is not without reason that Parisel (doctor- (chemist from Paris and member of the Commune) not- knows how to prepare inventions more or less hellish than the Commune. He had, between other combinations, ordered from the workshops of It carries about a hundred tiny vehicles. before screwing itself into the bezel of a ring and killing their man at the touch of a finger. It's a a kind of hollow ball or rubber bead which may contain four drops of prussic acid. Two extremely delicate pipes are adapted tees at each end. One is cut so that being able to screw onto the ring, the other one, the one that is external, is shaped like a feather's beak, so that being able to puncture the skin under which he injects The liquid is also affected. We know that all it takes is one A drop of prussic acid to kill a man. This piece of jewelry was probably reserved for women of the Commune. Although he was not informed of his destiny- To the precise nation, Mr. Charrière postponed his execution under various pretexts until the moment of delivery "Its sound was becoming useless" (quoted by Le Monde semi-quo- (Tidien of June 27, 1871).

1 V, Secret Societies, etc., t. It", p. 417, note, and the Rosebush From Marie, June 24, 1871,

612 – FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The jewelry, daggers or rings, including the Freemasonry protects its followers, who are terri- Beautiful jewelry!

TS Anne a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 613

ITI. The dissemination of the most monstrous errors and of the most hideous corruption, third means action of Freemasonry.

1° We cannot be accused of slander Freemasonry; for to know its belief and its morals, we asked our information and our evidence to support his official writings, that is to say, to its rituals and its vocabulary, to symbols of its lodges and at its ceremonies
initiations, finally to interpretations and explanations

` tions given by its most authoritative writers

and in particular by its sacred author, F.-. Ragon.

A careful study of all these sources reveals to us—shows that Freemasonry recognizes and—teaches two principles of all things, "the Light—
"Mary and Darkness," "Hormuz and Ahriman" of Persia; that these two principles, by unifying form "the great Whole, Pan, also called Zsis"
by the ancients, who is the universal God whose es—Sense is "Fire," "uncreated Fire," "matter first and eternal, » « inexhaustible source of life, » « universal seed of all beings » which return and renew themselves ceaselessly within him.
Such is the God of Freemasonry. And like all 35

614 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

all beings derive from this source and are—universal beginning, God, for them, is also the Nature; and because the most visible organ of This God, Fire-Nature, is the star that illuminates
Our world, God, is still the Sun for them.
This is what Freemasonry means by ex—pressure that she has long placed at the top of her

Architect of the universe.

We will be astonished by such absurdities, and we will be at least try to cast doubt on our claims. Let us then go to the trouble of resorting to the documents Masonic ments; and after having suffered the mess and the jumble of absurd hypotheses, of ridiculous revelations laughter, indecent explanations, contradictions continuous assertions, in manifest opposition With common sense and with history, we will recognize the Our summary is perfectly accurate. But, if we prefers an easier and more pleasant path will lead to the same result; it will be the reading of the first chapter of Father Deschamps' work, in which is analyzed completely and clearly- the entire Masonic doctrine t.

Thus, this doctrine includes in its teachings

1 V, Secret Societies, etc., vol. I', ch. 1°. – Ibid. Des- instruction of all religions.

|
|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 6415

Fundamental elements: 1° emanation, one of the foundations of Gnosticism, the uncreated fire being the source eternal and the raw material from which all come beings; 2° Dualism, the foundation of the mani-Shaeism; 3° Sabaism or the cult of fire, of the sun, light, spirits, stars; 4° the Pantheism, and the most abject of all, subjugated pantheism-Realist, since everything is God, God being fire. raw material of everything that exists.

These revolting beliefs are taught from a young age the first degrees, in symbolic Freemasonry lique, and they emerge, not from our own interpretations, but those of Masonic authors the most famous, of the Freemasons Ragon, Clavel, Willaume and Tessier, masters at all levels, consi- declared and proclaimed as the first doctors of order.

They are once again asserting themselves in the upper echelons to bind in the Scottish and Rosicrucian grades of French rite and in the 26th, 28th and 29th degrees of Scottish Rite.

Speaking of the 23° and 24 degrees of the same Scottish Rite, Brother Ragon cites Brother Vassal who expresses himself thus: "These last two degrees nen-
"Therefore, Sabaism, or the cult of fire,

616 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"of the sun, of light, of stars, images"
"sacred of all our lodges" (Philosophical Course (plate, p.351 and following).

We have no shortage of authentic interpreters. to point out to us that these doctrines are those mysteries of pagan antiquity, practiced in the sanctuaries of India, Babylon, Egypt, of Greece and Rome, and whose "Masonic order-
"Nice drift."

In the degrees of Rose-Croix and Grand Sco- the sanctuary of Saint Andrew, the divinity of Jesus Christ is denied formally. It is taught that it is not that a man, that a Jew crucified for his crimes. It could not have been otherwise; it is the conse- natural consequence of the principles laid down.

The same pantheistic doctrine of the Fire God or sun is also found in Italian Carbonarism link; but there it is enveloped in forms, in free and Christian invocations which were masks needed in a country that is completely im- steeped in Catholicism *

The reformer Mazzini admitted the same pan- theism as the Freemasons and the Carbonari, his predecessors. He had a way of ex- pose slightly different and a little more nuanced-

1 V, Secret Societies, etc., vol. Ie, p. 218.

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 617

geuse; but the substance is quite the same. Let one

"God," he said, "exists because we exist."
a is in our consciousness, in the consciousness of "Humanity, in the universe that surrounds us."
"You adore him, even without naming him, and all
"the times you feel your life, or the life of
` to the people around you. Atheism,
"it is the more or less declared separation of "God, of his work, of the earth. Humanity is "the living Word of God... God is incarnate successively-
"movement in humanity."

God is therefore the universe, humanity, each and every one of
for us; it's always the God-Nature; and atheism, According to Mazzini, it would consist of believing in a God personal, distinct from his works! Until then we had always thought the opposite.

These pantheistic beliefs in a universal God,
Fire, Light, Sun, explain the prediction to us.
election of Freemasonry and all its branches
For red: red is the color of their God, fire. This color, as we have seen, is special to the higher ranks which are called
"Red Masonry;" the tapestries, the carpets, the

1. The duties of man. Quoted by Edouard Lubiencki:
Wars and Revolutions in Italy in 1848 and 1849, p. 38.

618 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The decorations in their lodges are red. At the reception of a large Scotsman from Saint-André, the pre-
The president said to the recipient: "Remember that the color of the fire is that of the Scottish high brothers;
Without it we are nothing; for everything is founded
"On love and blood." Hence the red flag French republicans and the red shirt of Garibaldi's soldiers.

Further proof that we summarize exactly-
The fundamental point of Masonic doctrines is that they are displayed in the same direction, and almost in the same terms by renowned writers of our days belonging to Freemasonry, by its lodge speakers and through its journals.

a The God of conscience is at the same time a God

true and real, both substance and cause, always |

substance and always cause, not being substance that as a cause, that is to say, being an ab- cause solue, one and many, eternity and time, space
and number, essence and life, indivisibility and totality, principle, end and middle, at the summit of being and at its humblest degree, infinite and finite, that is to say at once God, nature, humanity; indeed, if God
It is not enough, it is nothing. Its eminent character being an absolute creative force that cannot not not to act, it follows, not that creation is

HAS
y'

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 619

possible, but necessary; it follows that,
God creating creation ceaselessly and indefinitely, creation is inexhaustible and constantly maintained... It There's more: God creates with himself, therefore he creates with all the characteristics that we have recognized in him-naked and which necessarily pass into the creations

tures. » | |

Therefore, we must logically conclude that everything that exists is the substance of God, is God himself.
It is still the Great All, the God-Nature.

But the one who speaks in this extravagant way is "a great master of the University and of teaching"
State government in France, director during long years at the École Normale Supérieure which trained all the teachers in high schools and colleges, faculties and chairs of philosophy," the F.-.
Victor Cousin, a high-ranking Freemason, and "echo faithful to all Freemasonries and all the en-
state education in Europe'.

The language of another star at the University is Less diluted and more abrupt:

"Sun worship is the only reasonable form of worship."
and scientific; the sun is the particular god of

This is F.: Renan, a high-ranking Magonni dignitary-

1 Philosophical Fragments, 3rd ed. Preface, p. 76,

RS ee BE. A

620 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

that, Grand Chancellor of the Grand Orient of France, who wrote in the Revue des Deux Mondes this pagan and gross absurdity 1.

A Freemason orator from the Liège lodge held in 1854 this speech to the applause of the Freemasons... assembled: - |

"I would say that the name of God is an empty word." meaningless, if it does not designate the universal cause and the active power that organizes beings, being, The principle of everything... Nature's dominion over everything What is born, grows, and dies here below is too marked so that we can be mistaken. Everything proves it. Therefore, it is not outside of nature that we We must seek divinity. When we want to... "To have an idea, let's say that NATURE IS GOD..." "If, free from prejudice, we want to consider our soul, or the driving force that acts within us,

1 Revue des Deux Mondes, October 15, 1863.

- A few years ago, before I fully knew the Freemasonry, I had met several men from the little-ple, farm laborers, who assured me they did not recognize to be born of a god other than the Sun. Astonished to find in the midst Catholic France, after centuries of Christian preaching, what I then regarded as old remnants of paganism, I asked one of them where he got such an absurd belief: "It was my master," he replied, "who taught me that there is no had no other god than the sun, and the Virgin Mary It was the moon (N.). The master of these poor ignorant people was a bourgeois Freemason who preached the doctrine around him-the trine of his lodge. Freemasons are leading us back to idolatry.

~

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. ` 621

we will remain convinced that she is part of our body, that it is nothing but the body itself considered in relation to some of the functions or faculties whose nature has made him susceptible tible. »

...‡ Man... alone of all creatures has been gifted with the intelligence to discover the perfection of works of nature... This intelligence makes him capable of enjoying a more lasting and more eminent compared to that of other animals. Is it possible? It is impossible to doubt that this intelligence was given to him. granted to indulge entirely in pleasures which it has in common with animals?... »

"Finally, my dearest Brothers..., this law, these dog-My, these principles are your principles, your dogmas. your law; it is to their propagation that you have pledged your faith by becoming part of the Artroyal. The happiness of all imposes upon you the sacred obligation to combat the scourge of the human species, the superstition, to substitute for it the sublime code of the morality and nature.'

1 The Freemason, etc., by Eckert, vol. 1, p. 217: "The tra-conductor, Abbé Gyr, after having quoted the entire speech of which we We extracted these passages, and he says in a note that he possesses the manuscript, adds: It is sometimes attributed to ignorance or to the prevention the serious accusations that are being made against the Freemasonry. This discourse dispels all illusions. The ora-the author, who will thank us for not naming him, accumulates there 35.

622 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

It would be easy to multiply the quotes from this kind. Masonic documents echo these principles.

ture: his religion, his morals, says the Revue ma-Conic of Paris. We are not talking about priests, nor of worship; between nature and man the chain
is continuous and immediate; and there is no need privileged interpreters. Words from Diew and reli-Gion, he was so misled; they were given a special meaning so far outside and beyond above those with whom they should not have
that a perfect synonymy, that their admission
"In the Masonic language, it was a huge mistake."

Yes, that's true; it was a mistake of hypocrisy and of imposture. Today the mask no longer appears
It is no longer necessary, so we reject it.

Another newspaper reported in 1870:

"Freemasonry teaches us that there is no
that only one religion, a true one and therefore

all the horrors against the Catholic religion and the clergy.
For him, everything is limited to physical sensations; there is neither soul, nor God: God is nature, and morality is still the physical laws common to animals and the physical world (Secret Societies, etc., vol. I:r, p. 281).

– This doctrine and this morality are not particular,
As we can see, at the Liège masonry workshop, they are the official teaching.
and general of Freemasonry.

1 Masonic Review of Paris, September 1835, p. 1 et seq.

| FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 623

> only one natural one, the cult of humanity. For, this eye

mystery, this abstraction which, erected into a system, has God, who served to form all religions, is not at all...
three things that the ENTIRETY of all our instincts higher; to which, detaching from ourselves this that which we had of the noblest, we gave a body, a distinct existence. This God is not but mistaken, of humanity, which has stripped itself for the sake of a chimera. Let us give back to man this which belongs to him, and the worship which we have at-

"The credit given to the work should be attributed to its author,"

Therefore, God is man, is the hu-Manity is nature.

From these doctrines to formal and declared atheism,
It's a very short distance. The Freemasons.
have crossed.

In the lodge of the German Freemasons-Americans from Leipzig, June 28, 1866, the F...
Charles de Gagern made the following statement:

"I am firmly convinced that time will arrive and must arrive where atheism will be the prevailing opinion general of all humanity, and where this last-will consider deism as a phase
past, just like the deist Freemasons

1 Masonic World, January 1870, p. 539.

|

624 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

are above religious divisions. It is not necessary not just place ourselves above the differences rents, religions, but above all belief
"Some god, any god."

These impious words are quoted by a newspaper clandestine lodges that the pro- pastor was writing-testing F.-. Zille (Freimaurer-zeitung, no. 15)
Dec. 1866). |

He added: "Atheists are titans."
who smash and demolish the sky... and shout at world....: only fools, the ignorant, and the weak
In spirit, they speak, and still dream of a God and of immortality. Brother Charles de Gagern strives to keep Freemasonry free from
'Out of dogma and all ecclesiastical law. It is necessary

"strong" (same number). This brother of Gagern was in 1848 one of the presidents of the Congress of Frankfurt.

Also in April 1867, the Masonic world... learned that "the group of lodges which, in at-referring to the decision of the general assembly, believe they must remove from the top of their boards

is

the formula A to the Gl.:. of . G.*. A... doe. l'U.:., va growing larger every day." In July and August 1869, at the congress of French lodges of the East, held at Metz, which was attended by representatives of a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 625

—

A considerable number of lodges were voted on unanimously.

mité the suppression in the Masonic constitution—only principles "Existence of God and immortality" "the soul's identity," replaced by this single principle, human solidarity. This vote was cast on the conclusions of the first speaker at the congress, the F.—. Macé, high-ranking Freemason, senior academic and head of the League of Education, and was sent to all the lodges of France, with an invitation to join them
reri. |

Finally in 1876 the Freemasonic Congress an—
The French minister gave the expected answer. There
It was decided, by 100 votes to 65, that "there was
The first article of the constitution should be revised.
Masonic tion relating to philosophical dogmas questions and containing a statement in favor of Great Architect of the Universe, and to put this article agrees with another article of the constitution which enshrines absolute freedom of conscience.' Therefore, Freemasonry does not believe no longer at the Gr.—. Ar.*. of the Un.:. and sup—prime of all its plates its antique and fa—Meuse formula.

1st Congress of Eastern Lodges. Report of the proceedings of the first session held in Metz on July 29, 30, 31 and August 1 1869. Metz, Mayer printing house, 1870.

3 Universe, September 19, 1876.

626 FRANUS – MASONS AND JEWS.

Masonic masks are falling more and more Furthermore, nearly forty years ago it was rejected
another,

"In the past," said Ragon, "oaths were sworn
"Thus: (in initiations) I swear and promise on

"the holy Gospels and on this sword of honor."
"Nowadays, we have replaced the general statutes"
"Referring to the Gospels or the Bible; we did well,
"because it was a contradiction and an impropriety"
"to the Masonic symbol which has no point
"of analogy between modern cults; but we
"said: I swear and promise on the general statutes"
"Order and on this sword, symbol of honor!"

What respect, indeed, could the Bible or the Gospel to men who are no longer Christian
And what about those who don't believe in God?

The last daughter of Freemasonry, the In-international, had not waited so long to
to demonstrate the doctrines she had received from her mother.
From its very first congresses, it showed openness-
He lies about his ideas of impiety and irreligion. Following of the Brussels and Berne congresses appeared on International Alliance for the Development of the socialist democracy, bearing at the head of the signatures
the names of Becker, Bakunin and, later,

1 Philosophical Course. Sacred Edition, p. 118, note. 1842.

>_>

ol Me

|

i FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 627

"Albert Richard, the three leaders of the International-
'pale in Germany, Switzerland and France, ap-proven shortly afterwards by the London General Council (July 1869.) Article 1 is worded as follows:

"The Alliance declares itself atheist; it wants to abolish it-tion of cults, the substitution of science for the faith and human justice to divine justice 1. »

since then "the European socialist movement has been turning everywhere to atheism*.

The Bishop of Liège therefore characterized very Freemasonry, precisely, regarding the point
From a religious point of view, saying that it "is the meeting,
"the complement of all the errors that have occurred"
"He leaped out and deceived men: like this"
"Minister of the Prince of Darkness who summarizes"
"in him all kinds of malignancy, it is a "Legion of errors." (Mandate of Bishop de Montpellier, Bishop of Liège, September 9, 1871.)

+ ee to

2. It does not require great mental attention.
to understand what morality must necessarily to break free from the dogmas of Freemasonry.

Moreover, in our time, Freemasons do not

$ /

r 1 Fribourg. International Association, p. 131.

2 Universe, July 10, 1878. – The Socialist Movement, by G. de La Tour.

628 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

they are almost no longer embarrassed to expose themselves to the world their morality in all its nakedness. But in the a time when the truths of faith and reason existed!
less diminished than today among men, Freemasonry had to counterfeit and... to hide in this respect as in so many others. She
He spoke at every moment of morality and virtue.
She had formulated, for the laypeople, a law mo-'
a list in twelve articles recommending the practice

some of his official writings, in his constitutions
she rejects the statements and declarations of principles:
the accusation of immorality; she claims that her morale is "the purest, the holiest morality"
which "is based on the first of all virtues, humanity". But following the example of the ancient Gnostics, Freemasonry does not give to these words
the meaning that gender has always attributed to them
human. These moral precepts, these declarations Morality and humanity are all masks.
like his former professions of faith in Christ-Tianism and the Great Architect of the Universe.
Masonic writings, to which we refer-Let us see again, it follows that morality as such 4

1 Declaration of principles of the Freemasonry of the Scottish Rite.
At the convent in Lausanne, 1875. - V. Monde, October 3, 1875.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 629

. Freemasonry, as understood, consists of the laws of the "nature, that is to say, in the totality of needs, of

PL
has
.
4

This

'instincts and passions of material man.

Every man has the absolute and inalienable right-capable of legality and complete freedom in the sand

... satisfaction of his needs and passions, laws of 3 wt

we

to continue the acquisition and to obtain the maintenance of nature. Therefore, he also has the right to this equality and this freedom by all means

. possible. This is perfectly logical, from the outset

|r.

#

+

:

gt

4

i

f

that we admit that nature is God, that everything is God.

These are the fundamental principles of morality
which Freemasonry recognizes and develops to his followers in his successive initiations. Such is the meaning she gives to this word: "the moral," to which she now adds the qualification fictional "independent," that is to say, morality
independent of any law other than nature.
Even for her, "virtue" is the act and the habit-study of satisfying his needs and passions, according to equality and, above all, complete freedom.
This virtue also received its special adjective: a
The mason named it "secular virtue 1."

The immediate and inevitable consequence of this

1 M. Ferry, V. Univers, July 23, 1879.

ee MT

The moral of the story is that there are no longer any vices, nor virtues, nor morality in the sense that these expressions have always had for faith, reason, and humankind. He re-

It is particularly important to note that all forms of immo- Reality and immodesty are legitimate and can be legitimately satisfied, because they will always needs or instincts or steps- principles of nature.

Freemasonry accepts all these consequences and puts them into practice. She applauds in her lodges of speeches like that of the Freemason of Liège. She does not hesitate to display her emblems there. my obscene things, for which she gives no explanations less disgusting. Thus, Clavel tells us, Zes two columns, each topped with a grenade open entrance, which are featured in all the workshops ma-_çonniques, designate "the two general phallusesof light and darkness, of life and Death, good and evil! Za rose and the crosses, which make up the name and the jewel of one of the higher degrees, the last of the French rite, and which decorate the lodges in the chapters of this grade, are thus explained by Ragon: "The.

"The rose is the emblem of woman, like the cross"

"that of virility or of the sun, and their ass-

1 Clavel, Picturesque History, p. 75.

at be.

|

The Indian gam is an abominable idol made of
at the meeting of the generative organs of man
...and of the woman. What symbols and what a jewel!
This short explanation says a lot about the
. the morality of the sect! We were quite right to say `that one of France's most closely guarded secrets
'Freemasonry, that was its immorality. It is according to the : logic and experience that impiety and lust
_ go hand in hand and together. Besides, the same Ragon tells us that, in terms of purity, the _, Franc-Magonnerie only knows physical cleanlinesssique, and that there is no other defilement for man
. that material filth (Philosophy Course)
(see p. 391). For Freemasons, chastity,
It is virtue that governs us "in the pleasures of _ love, » and absolute chastity is condemned by
. the FF.-. and by the SS.-., because it is "con-
"to be the wish of nature and ceases to be a virtue social. » l
It is therefore not surprising that marriage
and the family should be nothing to Freemasonry.
It teaches the legitimacy and necessity of 1 Ragon, Philosophical Course, p. 307.

2 Ragon, Complete Manual of Udoption Masonry,
pp. 22 and 23.

632 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

divorce. In the ceremony called recognition-marital ceremony, the two Masonic spouses hear the Venerable and the First Warden holding this dialogue: "What do you think of the indissolub-
"The legality of marriage? A. That it is contrary to the "laws of nature and reason; to the laws of the "nature, because social conventions have
"often united beings that nature had separated"
"by antipathies that only reveal themselves
"in marriage; to the laws of reason, because
"that indissolubility makes a law of love and

"claims to enslave the most capricious and the most

"Involuntary feelings. What must it be?"

"The solution? A. Divorce. It's part of our customs!"

"until it is incorporated into our laws and until it

Therefore, we should not be surprised that the Freemasonry imposed on France the law of divorce during the great Revolution and that, mainly, Naquet, the Jew and Freemason, continued with such insistence the restoration of this immoral law.

Among its most powerful means of action—

Freemasonry has always put the re—

1 In your Masonic customs!

3 Complete manual, etc. Marital recognition, ibid.

eV .

i

k
q

berg

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 633

The weakening of family ties and the corruption of customs. |

We read in the secret papers of the high Italian sale, these instructions are truly infernal—neles:

"The dream of secret societies will be fulfilled by
"The simplest reason is that it is based "On the passions of man... Let us draw up all
"our batteries; let's flatter all the passions, the
"Both the worst and the most generous."

"The main thing is to isolate the man from his family,"
to make him lose his morals. He is quite dis—caused by the tendency of his character to shun care housework, chasing after easy pleasures and Coffee, the idleness of the spectacle. Æ'nirainez-le, Get it out of him... Discreetly teach him to...

to numb his daily tasks. By this routine,
after separating him from his wife and children,
after showing him how tiresome all are through homework, you will instill in him the desire for a another existence... When you have insinuated into a few souls disgusted by family and the

1. Secret Papers. Standing Instructions from the High Sales
For advanced initiates. 1819. The Roman Catholic Church opposite the Revolution, vol. II, p. 79.

634 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

religion (one almost always follows from the other), drop certain provocative words will question the desire to be affiliated with the most visible lodge sine f. s

"Catholicism is no more afraid of a stylus"
much sharper than the monarchy; but these two bases social order can crumble under corruption tion: let us therefore never tire of corrupting...
Let us not create martyrs, but popular-Let us spread vice among the multitudes. Let them breathe it in.
rent through the five senses, that they drink it, that they They're getting fed up with it... Make vicious hearts and you
You won't have any more Catholic zealots... It's corruption On a large scale, as we have undertaken, corruption of the people by the clergy and of the clergy by us, the corruption that should lead us to put one day
The Church at the tomb. I recently heard a our friends laugh in a philosophical way at our projects and tell ourselves: "To bring down the Catholic-

licism, we must begin by removing the "woman." The word is true in one sense; but since we cannot eliminate women,
Let us corrupt her with the Church. Corruptio optimi pessima... The best dagger for striking the...

1 Ibid. Letter from the Jew Piccolo-Tigre to the sales agents Piedmontese, January 18, 1822.- Ibidem, t. II, p. 104 and 105.

= -

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 635

E le eee

The church at its heart is corruption. So it is at work.

"Until the end!"

+ This corruption of women, Freemasonry

Ya, a company through its adoptive lodges. The limits

: this study does not allow me to enter

_ in detail, and I refer again to Father Deschamps' book? We'll see what ? is the immorality of ceremonies, rites and passwords, by means of which the masons

, open to the applicant what they call the

. gateway to virtue. Masonic virtue will still be . better understood, and we will know perfectly the

'moral value of virtuous women, ancient and _ news, from Freemasonry.

We cannot study the facts, consequences of these moral doctrines, which

They belong to history. It will suffice to recall

| "Mysterious amusements" and depravities

practiced in the eighteenth century in lodges

'Templars of France and Germany, and of con-

-© stater that it would be very difficult to meet at

'nineteenth century a freethinking Freemason

_ who is not at the same time a free spirit. g _ÿ 1 Secret Papers. Letter from Vendice to Nubius. The Church

: romaine, etc., t. II, p. 128 and 129.

` 23 Secret Societies, etc., Book II, Chapter 1v. Secret Societies and the family.

636 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Another passion that they dedicate and exalt |

the speeches given at graduation ceremonies
 It is evident that the Freemason must
 to regard as the sole possessor of light,
 of truth and science; that he alone is man holy, superior, restored to natural dignity and – primitive of humanity. The Freemasons have
 This is something they have in common with the Gnostics, their forefathers, g that they think they are far above everyone else
 men. A sect journal summarizes this sentiment;
 in these terms: "Freemasonry possesses the |
 the most eminent science, in which all the Scientific studies are aggregated and coordinated.
 The Brothers who, through investigation and research attain the Masonic innocence of a ma-none in accordance with the essence of our order, are.
 worthy of being called the gods of the earth." The.
 Luther, the founder of Protestantism, had said N
 "All Christians are priests;" one of the{ founders of French Illuminism, Saint-Mar- – Tin, asserted that "all men are wis; » Freemasonry completes this progress- _
 The union of pride: All Freemasons are.

+

1st Masonic Manual for Freemasons, July 1850
 p. 216.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 637

Gods! It really is the "Sicut dii eritis" of to Satan.

f We are forced to stop. It would be
 It would take too long to explain all the consequences that > stem from the moral principles of France-Freemasonry, and how in particular they conduct to the ruin of all property and all society.
 And on this point too, the sect was logical; it has formed associations which, without veil or symbol-in broad daylight, these consequences, demonstrate the legitimacy and the necessity-site of the total destruction of the property and of
 * Current social order. They pursue it with all their might.
 ` in a complete manner.

The first of these companies is the Interna-

the unique one, because it absorbed or rallied all socialist and communist sects of all kinds

"To and from every country. |

4 3° Now these impious and disgraceful dogmas, these principles

immoral, subversive methods, devoid of all virtue and all

Morally, Freemasonry has been propagating them since

; over one hundred and fifty years of activity,

3 with perseverance, with real skill

1 diabolical.

Speech is the instrument of this infernal

36

Ut mr aan – ES

638 – FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

propaganda, words printed in books and the newspapers, words spoken in meetings Masonic, in political assemblies and in the professorial chairs. This word resounded, 'not in just one country, and to the ears of a only people, but throughout the world, at least in the world of modern civilization, in Europe and the Americas.

Everyone knows that in the eighteenth century, and especially in the years preceding the great The French Revolution, all of Europe, and France in particular, were as if flooded by the impious and obscene publications of philosophers Freemasons, despite the prohibitions and the se-truths of the laws of that era. Under the impetus of the great Masonic conspiracy, books and libels, of all kinds and formats, pene-would be everywhere. This propaganda, interrupted-

It was under the Empire, and resumed with greater force.

during the Restoration. Freedom of the press, trées, transformed it into a deluge of works saturated with obscenities and blasphemies. Since then, facilitated by new means; library- | :

public and railway matters, offices and reading rooms, cheap bookstore, speed eo de -

+7

-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 639

and ease of transport, the pro- Masonic book prement said, displaying for all to see the doctrines and the morality of the sect; the heretical book of the protest-Tantism "which is half of Freemasonry-rie', » and one of its auxiliary corps, lends its active and powerful competition, the scientific book, philosophical, historical, political book, the literary book of all kinds, popular book of all tones and all degrees, composed for mostly by Freemason writers, or inspired, paid for and propagated by Freemasonry Jewish, extend across the entire world and the neck- they are coming from their lying, immoral pages and impious.

But more than any book, the journal, from From 1789 to the present day, it has sown its seeds far and wide. from heaven and to every corner of the earth, error and Corruption. No need to explain, and even less to to demonstrate what is happening before our eyes. The sheet daily, not counting the other weekly- daily and monthly, is published in the cities by thousands of copies and distributed to all corners of intersections. It penetrates into the less- dres villages; it is read in the smallest hamlets. Nine-tenths of these nameless sheetsbrables teach doctrines to varying degrees.

subversive of religion and morality. A little With few exceptions, journalism in America
as in Europe, it is in the hands of the Jews who inspire and bribe him. Now the Jew is the master of Freemasonry, who is his humble slave. Leo XIII also said recently: "A once in possession of liberty, or, to better to say, of the unbridled license, of publishing everything one wants, the supporters of pernicious innovations are eager to spread an infinite number of newspapers, intended to attack openly or to call into question the principles of truth and just, to fight the Church through slander, to ex-to incite hatred against her, and to instill in the
The most pernicious doctrines. They have indeed including indeed the ease and advantages that offered them, for the fulfillment of their desires-breasts, the publication of daily sheets which would subtly insinuate the poison of error |

in minds, and would corrupt hearts by flattering the senses and exciting depraved appetites-
And the result so perfectly met their expectations,
that we wouldn't be far from the truth,
by stating that the daily press is one of the main causes of the deluge of evils that we

i

PR)

F Lou it #

år p

nm. —

L 7 oem?

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 641

pr nn en

floods and the miserable state to which the company f.

But Jewish Freemasonry, in order to spread its poisons, does not rely solely on the printed word.

She first has at her disposal the word of her venerable and of its speakers in its meetings ordinary and extraordinary meetings of the shads, sales, chapters, conventions, con-sandstone, councils of a hundred kinds. We have reveals the considerable number of lodges of: Freemasons, sales of Carbonarism and sections of the International. What work Repeated error!

She still uses political language. parliaments, of whatever form and of whatever name whether they be Estates General, National Assemblies-legislative, convention, chambers or senates,

They provide him with the opportunity to spread his ideas.

She does not disdain less important assemblies. weight-bearing bodies, clubs, election meetings, banquets politics, etc., etc. She seizes every opportunity to carry his word far and wide and to the greatest name bre. History has transmitted his speeches to us in – the revolutionary assemblies and meetings of 1 Address to journalists, February 22, 1879. V. Le Messenger From the heart of Jesus, September 1877.

_ 36.

642 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the end of the last century which were nothing but con-

Freemason winds. Freemasonry has vomited then, in complete freedom, what was in her soul of impiety, lust, and savage hatred. We we read what she said during "the comedy of fifteen years, » during the reign of the Magi king, in the republican period of 1848, on all thea-political figures of the old and new worlds; She varied and modified her language, but the impression-always oozed with its saliva and venom. Today-Today we hear him holding forth in the three or four European parliaments where it holds sway. That is the repetition of abominable blasphemies, of heinous lies, gross insults, cowardly calumnies and tyrannical instincts of the first French revolution. There is no less, Until this hour, only the smell of blood.

And this horrible statement has been and still is as in the past, transported by the printing press and steam to millions of men who had not not heard. It is read and accepted, repeated and understood. commented on by millions of mouths that transform-lying, without realizing it, the circle and the living room, the cafe and cabaret, in branches of the lodges.

Freemasonry exposes and develops its monstrous doctrines in the professorial chairs

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 643

: grumbles, and when she's in charge, she doesn't want to

"To suffer from a professorship other than his own."

It is Freemasonry, which, aided by the pro-Testamentism and Jansenism, its habitual auxiliaries tuels, driven out of Europe and forced to seek refuge in Russia the famous Society of Jesus, so capable-

`ble and so deserving in terms of teaching. It is

She is the one who still persecutes her today. It's

| it was through her that Jansenism was introduced into Austria-

It was she who, during our great Revolution,
destroys all education in France.

It has long reigned in the universities

_ Protestant women of England and Germany whose teachers and students are almost all frank-masons. In Germany, the Jews, his masters, possess-holding the most important professorships in universities.

Thanks to gold and Jewish influence, the Freemason-nerie bribed and sponsored all the ideas and the anti-philosophical, anti-Christian and anti-social events that have occurred in our time in the sciences and literature, and she was able to present and to make German false and cumbersome science acceptable

'as the source and model of all true

| science, as the universal regulator of all human reason.

644 ' FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

It is Freemasonry which, through its instrument...
"The Freemason emperor Napoleon I" instituted the
the French University, with its monopoly on *"
teaching, this enormous war machine | raised against the Church*. The fruits of impiety and of immorality that came out of high schools, colleges, etc.
have the ages and university schools been such? that {° Outraged public conscience finally tore down + bi
to the monopoly an impar- |"
made with the law of 1850. But the Catholic Church, |"
similar to those vigorous plants that develop |'
They grow and flourish with so little that they are given."
of air and sun, formed by the grace of this law |

a Catholic and French generation, if name- . l
so brimming and energetic that Freemasonry trembled in it.
ble for herself and for her works. It is for- X
She wanted to seize power at all costs.
And as soon as the divisions among the conservatives, between- ' /4
outfits and augmented by the sad skills of the a Liberal Catholics allowed him to become i mistress of the government, her first concern |
Before anything else, the priority is to eliminate all lh

ay

IV. Secret Societies, etc., vol. III, ch. vir. The Societies of secrets and teaching.

2 V. the work of MA de Badts de Cugnac, the Poison-® {a social outcome of university education. V. Uni A |

around June 30, 1879. ik

THE:

1

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 647

freedom of education for Catholics and to establish himself as the sole doctor of the French nation ©

vçaise.

t

s
J
t

The application of this plan is not particularly linked to France. The sect wants to have the mono-a hub for education in all its forms and at all its degrees throughout the entire universe. The com-

... political alliances in America are committed to

F

this question; and we see in Europe the Ma-Stupidity at work, simultaneously in France,

. magne.

has

One curious observation to make: these are

Men of the word by profession, the lawyers

T.

cats, who, among the Freemasons, arrive the most numerous in high-ranking government positions. At ten-eighth century, a multitude of members of the parliaments and a number of lawyers entered "The Templar lodges. The current lodges in ren-+ ferment a very large number. These are, for the most of them, lawyers without a case, belonging to the last category of the order, which, burning with desire; life of speaking and appearing, enter into this end

\

"* in the lodges of which they become the Brothers... ora-

i

authors and who are thereby driven to the first places. Let's remember the names

646 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

of our rulers of 1848, 1870 and 1871 to 1880! ! |

SEVENTH AND FINAL SECTION. – FINAL GOAL OF THE | FREEMASONRY.

I. It is undeniable that Freemasonry has a goal towards which she strives by all means of action, and that this goal is part of its secrets. The Duke of Brunswick, an enlightened man and a Freemason, told us He said it in the last century: "There is only one gold-Dre (Masonic). Its goal is its first secret," "Its existence and its resources, its second."

The existence, organization, and direction of Judaism questions and means of action of the Freemason Nothing is a secret to us anymore. But his goal, which is his primary one, that is to say his The main secret, the most important of all, is not yet well known and fully understood everyone.

1 Paris-Journal published, and L'Univers of September 6, 1872 has reproduces an article entitled: All lawyers, our masters! which justifies part of our assertion. In 1879, under a different title-Fervent and somewhat barbaric, the Avocatocracy, the Marseillaise makes The same statistic applies to our current leaders. These two newspapers forgot to add that almost all of our lawyers, gou-governing and administering from 1870-71 to 1880, are Freemasons.

== = Yo >

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. = 647

To clearly reveal this main secret, that is the subject of this article.

The ultimate goal of Freemasonry is threefold. She wants, first and foremost, the total destruction of the Catholic religion and absolute annihilation of the Christian idea in the world. That is the goal, So to speak, negative. The positive goal is then to bring the Jewish nation back to Palestine and to establish to establish his undisputed dominion over the entire earth Thus, the dechristianization of peoples, a return Jews in Jerusalem, universal sovereignty of this nation, that is the ultimate goal towards which it is con-led to Freemasonry.

The first part of this goal appears today –

more clearly than ever.

From then on, the Jews dominated and ruled the Freemasonry, we can @ a priori understand.

without difficulty their age-old hatred of Christ must push them to use the powerful weapon of Secret societies to satisfy her. This hatred. will demand to strike first and foremost at the Church and religion Catholic communities, which are the most widespread achievement made up of the thought of Jesus Christ, and, after them, the dissident societies that have retained more or less of his spirit and doctrines. The Jew has always in the heart, ready to escape, the cry

–F IMr

" – y

~ ee ae ee eS

648 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

uttered by his deicide ancestors: Tolle hunc! Remove from the world all idea and all memory of Christ is a thought and a project perfectly in line with marriage with the character and grudges of the Jew.

Freemasonry, moreover, has admitted this first part of his goal.

The founder of the Egyptian rite, Cagliostro, the revolutionary Mirabeau, enlightened and freemason with the highest grades, English and high Macon John Robison, Count of Haugwitz, great director of the Prussian lodges, etc., all the four men from the late eighteenth century,

and actively involved in the affairs of Freemasonry, agree that one of its goals, from that time onward,
It was the annihilation of the Catholic religion!
– We know that the Jewish element entered the Freemasonry through the door of Illuminism Bavarian and French. The halnedu Catholicism which was at the heart of all Gnostic sects, Manichean, Albigensian, Templar and Cabal–

1 V. Cagliostro's confessions before the Roman Inquisition, in Bernard Picard, Religious Customs and Ceremonies of All
The Peoples, 1807 edition, vol. IX, p. 392. – Memoir of Mirabeautiful to Louis XVI, read and quoted by Bertrand de Molleville, a of his ministers. – History of the French Revolution. – Michaud's Dictionary, vol. IV, p. 171. – Proofs of the conspiracy, etc., preface. – Memoir to the Congress of Verona.
– Address to the States of Saxony, by Eckert.

=”

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 649

ticks, could only have been strengthened by its union with Jewish hatred.

In this century too we have the formal admission of secret societies.

Jean Witt says that at the last grade of the Carbo-Narism, the initiate swore to work towards the ruin of all religions t.

The high-level auction's instruction affirms the same thing :

“Our ultimate goal is that of Voltaire and the "French Revolution, annihilation at all costs"
"never of Catholicism and even of the Christian idea-
"yours, which remained standing on the ruins of
"Rome would be its later perpetuation."

At present, the facts are so evident that the action of the grand conspiracy
The Judaico-Masonic aspect is evident to all.
both hemispheres, following everywhere the 4 Secret Memoirs, etc., p. 22.

2 Secret Papers, etc. The Roman Catholic Church, etc. – This is cited word from Prince Napoleon Jerome, who belongs to the highest degrees of Freemasonry and Carbonarism: "We will deliver "such a battle within the Church that, if it survives, I will be forced to "Believe in its divine nature!" (Vienna Courier, May 21, 1879.) The Universe, a number of years ago, has I believe a very similar statement was made by the Jew. Arbib, editor of the Liberta of Rome.

31

650 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the assault on the Catholic Church and religion and believes she is already assured of success.

The second and third parts of the aspirations Jewish and Masonic connections seem less obvious and less proven, but they are no less real.

If we do not have any positive admissions on this point As with the other, it's a matter of caution. the role of Jewish Freemasonry. For a long time too She carefully concealed her plan to destroy the Catholic and Christian religion. Today There is no danger to fear, no obstacle to fear. There are no longer any Catholic governments–ques, nor even of Catholic nations, but only–the Catholics scattered among the nations; And they don't seem to be anything to fear. The Catholics Frank and energetic, men of manly resolve, are relatively few in number and almost everywhere powerless.

Baptized and named Catholics are however, in greater numbers in the world than Jews and Freemasons of all branches. If they were unanimous in an attack–

1 V. all Catholic newspapers: L'Univers, Le Monde, the Civiltà cattolica, etc., for about ten years and especially since 1875. See the bishops' mandates and encyclicals.

— mm)

gold

i
|

af

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 651

sincere delight and a burning love for their religion and their Church, Masonic Jewry does not. It wouldn't be a pretty game. But most people, we know that. Very well, either through indifference or through prudence. liberals, whether out of timidity or cowardice, would not dare point or would not want to defend themselves with fury. The European or Universal Catholic League is nothing to fear. We say it clearly and It is widely believed that Catholicism is to be destroyed. But to declare that one intends to seize the Holy Land, which we are working to dominate the world, that, as a Jew, one has the pretension of being the sovereign of all peoples, that would be too much language imprudent, which would not be accepted without complaint mation at present, even Freemasonry, and which, especially elsewhere, would raise objections formidable, formidable shocks and compromises | perhaps forever the ultimate success. It is Why this plan is the most hidden of secrets.

IT, but if direct demonstration is difficult,

Indirect evidence abounds.

1. We find a first indication in the testimony of Count Haugwitz, who had worked with the most ardent curiosity to know delving deeply into the secrets of Freemasonry.

After pointing out the two parties that are dis-

652 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

were then found inside the boxes, one of which wanted to preserve certain external forms of the Protestant worship that the other rejected because it was composed mainly of Jews, the count adds: "Both parties joined hands to "to achieve world domination... that was "Their goal."

Thus, barely having entered the Freemasonry, The Jews inspire in him their desire and make him accept their dream of universal domination.

'It was impossible for it to be otherwise,' because Jews are naturally "POSITIVE OF "The instinct for domination." - Fr. Ratisbonne
Whoever makes that claim knows the character of his race. Furthermore, one thing is absolutely indisputable, it is the double and tenacious hope that the Jews have so far retained the right to return in their former homeland, and to reign one day on all peoples. See the line of Jacob returned and installed in Palestine, Jerusalem splendidly rebuilt, and of this city, which became the capital universal, dictating laws to the whole world, such has been, such is still the expectation of the immense majority of Jews. This majority which forms, says the Israelite Goschler, the indestructible core of the The Jewish nation is composed of all Jews, including the Jewish people.

A mt le cmt. ER

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 653

Mudists, that is to say Jews, no less obstinate attached to the practices of the Talmud than to the scriptural prophecies on which they base their hopes on it.

For ancient times we have the testimony- the teachings of Saint Jerome, who knew the Jewish beliefs.

tion of the small stone which, detached from the mountain-
He knocks over and smashes the statue of Nebuchadnezzar.
He said: "The Jews wrongly apply this passage to their nation which, at the end of the centuries, they claim, will become very powerful, will overthrow all kingdoms of the earth and will reign eternally.

In the fifteenth century, the hope of the Jews was the same. In his commentaries, the learned rabbi Abrabanel, who was Minister of Finance in Portugal
and in Spain, under Ferdinand the Catholic, announces the reign of the Messiah, "a glorious era where the extermination of Christians and of kind" (Praeco salutis). At this same time the
The German scholar Reuchlin tells us, speaking of Jews: "They eagerly await the sound of 1 "Quod Judezi... male ad populum referunt Israel, quem in fine sæculorum volunt esse fortissimum, et omnia regna con-terrere et regnare in sternum. » (Com. in Daniele, c. III,

v. 634 |

654 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

weapons, wars, the devastation of the provinces and the ruin of kingdoms. Their hope is that of a triumph similar to that of Moses over the Cha-Nanian and which would be the prelude to a glorious return to Jerusalem, restored to its ancient splendor

These ideas are the soul of the Rab- commentaries.
biniques on the prophets. They have been tradition-naturally transmitted and instilled in minds of this nation; and thus they prepared themselves, from all time, the Israelites at this event, term šu-
"Premium of the aspirations of the Jewish race."

This expectation is the same among Jews everywhere.
the countries. In a report made in 1810 by the doctor-
In the Anglican Church, one reads, "This pastor..."
wise: |

"During my stay in the Orient I was everywhere
found the Jews filled with hope of returning to Jerusalem and to see their Messiah. But two choices preserve from the destruction of Jerusalem and Zestheir hope of one day seeing this holy city to rise from its ruins. Without a king, without a homeland, they they constantly talk about their nation; the distance-

1 Buxtorf, Jewish Synagogue, ch. 35. Maimonides in Surenheinsius. Mischna, part. 1V, p. 164, V. the Jew, etc.,
p. 466.

-y

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 655

the arrangement of time and places seems to have
They did not in any way diminish the memory of their misfortune.
speak of Palestine as a neighboring country and easily accessible... They believe that the era of their Deliverance is not far off, and they look,
revolutions that shake the universe like presa-
"Gates of freedom" (History of the Jews by Malo,
p. 523-26).

Dr. Buchanam's account is confirmed by 1879 by that of Mr. Halévy, a converted Israelite.
This traveler found in Abyssinia a race of Black Jews. [1 gives details and evidence] irrefutable facts. These Jews are still waiting-days, they too, a powerful Messiah who will rise again
the kingdom of Israel. They told Mr. Halevy that they had once waged a holy war with the aim of liberating Jerusalem, of wresting it from
to the infidels and to make it, not only the capital-tale of the Jewish people, but the capital of all bes nations, under a Jewish leader.

This proves, on the one hand, that these Jews did their exodus to Abyssinia during the time of the ruin of Jerusalem by the Romans, and, on the other hand, comwell is an old and tenacious thing among the Jews dis-Persians from all countries, the belief and expectation of their future universal domination (V. Missions)

656 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Catholics, August 1879... Universe, August 21, 1879).

A former rabbi who converted, the famous knight Drach, lets us know the feelings of the doctors of Israel in 1827 on the Messiah and his reign, in a few pages that the author of the book Ze Juif resume thus:

"The purpose of his mission will be to deliver" Scattered Israel, to free them from captivity in which forces him to groan the nations, "and to the to bring back to the Holy Land, after having defeated Gog and Magog. To the chosen people to rebuild Jerusalem and its temple; it is up to him to restore and reconsolidate "a temporal reign whose duration will be that of the world... » All nations then « will be subjected to the Jews, and the Jews will dispose of their at the discretion of the individuals who compose them and their "goods t."

These ideas and hopes have not weakened. present day in Israel.

In 1860, a Jew named Sammt addressed a long letter to the newspaper La Preussische Volksblatt of Berlin (1860, no. 229), in which he claimed that from now on the Jews should take to the place of the Christian nobility. "God, di-

1 Drach, Second letter from a converted rabbi, p. 99. Paris, 1827. See The Jew, etc., p. 471.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. = 637

He knows, he scattered the Jews throughout the whole earth, so that they may be like leaven for all the peoples, and like the chosen ones destined to reign one day 'on all men'.

The newspaper L'Union, quoted by Le Monde on August 4th 1860, provides us with further evidence in the case of a funny note addressed to him by an Israelite from Paris. This Polish Jew, who signs his name Henri Apatousky, rapshovel, starting with Mr. Crémieux, also Jewish and high mason, took, in this year 1860, line extending an urgent invitation to all its coreligious figures in France, in favor of Christians persecuted Syrians; that this intervention general the practice of French Israelites was imitated in England and could not fail to be so elsewhere. Then despite the precepts of Talmudic law, to come so generously coming to the aid of "non-Jews." He claims to be convinced of the selflessness of Mr. Crémieux and rabbis from Paris. "But, he adds, this conviction cannot lead us to fishing to penetrate the plans that other members of the Israelite cult may have and may try to make progress this way. My nation not only knows how to train bankers and

1 Monde, November 12, 1875.
31.

—

658 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

She also knows how to be diplomatic with merchants. need. She understands that the Ottoman Empire approaching its dissolution, and that it would already be in ruin if the European powers do not prolong— their rivalries tés. How much longer will it last? We don't knows. It can fall; but once the empire has fallen, one does not will no longer be able to raise it. Yet we will not be able to abandon these countries to anarchy. Perhaps the ri— Will the values of the powers continue to be exploited? to pose the question of the annexation of this or that province to European states, or even the establishment of a
A separate state with a king chosen from one of the families reigning. Wouldn't the rabbis assume that These objections would not be raised at the establishment— The creation of a Jewish kingdom with a Jewish king?...
'Now if the Jews behave so nobly towards the Christian victims, do they not could not count on recognition Christians? Besides, the restoration of a
The Israelite kingdom is by no means a new dream. This idea was never abandoned by the Jews.
Jervents. Also, for a very long time, people have been making... regular collections for maintenance in Jerusalem of a large number of Jews from all countries... who pray for the restoration of the kingdom of Israel.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 639

Another letter from a Jew, probably German.
that one, which is signed Lévy Bing and which is published In March 1864, the Archives israélites confirmed the existence among contemporary Jews of feelings comments and a hope similar to those of the Jews of Middle Ages and the early centuries of the dispersal sion. The piece is long, but it will be read with interest :

"Nancy, March 21, 1864. Sir, I am from those who think our generation will not see Not on the day of the promised major repair. And However, I wouldn't want to claim the opposite, in presence of events and transformations which we have been witnessing for the past fifteen years
years!

"You say: We don't believe this idea, –" of the Messiah and his triumphant return to Jerusalem, 4
– Neither feasible nor acceptable! ! Did you understand correctly?
Have you considered the gravity of these words? Because they constituent Za complete negation of our faith and of our mission in the world! That is certainly not not your thought; but it is fitting that an organ
the importance of the Archives cannot be considered

1 The editors of the Archives israélites, modernized Jews, are among those who turn the Messiah into a myth.
what their nation expects.

660 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

dismissed as not having full awareness of duties as well as hopes for Israel. How!
You don't believe in the final mission of the mai-
Jacob's son? Jerusalem would be a vain place for you.
Word? But that would be the immediate reversal of our worship, of OUR TRADITION, of our raiits being; and, in that case, it would be necessary immediately burning our sacred books... Our ritual, computer-Whether ordinary or extraordinary, it always speaks to us of THE MOTHERLAND; as we rise, as we go to bed,
As we sit down to eat, we invoke our God
so that he may hasten our return to Jerusalem, without DELAY AND IN OUR DAYS! So these would be...
Empty words? The dress rehearsal, univer-
So, the meaning of these words would no longer be apparent?
Would that be purely for show?

"Fortunately, that's not the case; and you
You see, dear sir, that if many of them
We have forgotten the importance of returning, God has forgotten us.
has brought forth new brothers! who understand sometimes better than ourselves THIS MIRACLE, UNIQUE in the life of the world, of a whole fool scattered for eighteen hundred years throughout the parts of the universe without merging, without

1. The followers of Freemasonry and its branches, disciples Jews.

~

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 661

mix nowhere with the populations in the middle from which he lives! And this incredible preservation, made to open the eyes of even the most blind.
would have no meaning, no value
For us and for the world?... I said it earlier Above all, the entire Jewish religion is founded on the idea national. And whether they are aware of it or not,
It is not a pulse, not a suction
sons of Israel who are not towards the homeland.
I repeat, we should have closed it down from the first one down to the very last of our books, if it were necessary to hunt.
Jerusalem of our thoughts! And these aspirations, these thoughts, these are not just an in-_ time, personal to our race, it is a uni- need Versel... If little by little personal revenges have disappeared... if... it is no longer permitted to be justice to oneself, but rather to rely on judges who are generally accepted and impartial in the dispute, isn't it natural, necessary, and Far more importantly, to see another one soon court, a supreme court seized of major cases
public disputes, complaints between nations and nations, judging in the last instance, and whose word
Do you believe? And this word is the word of God.
pronounced by his eldest sons (the Hebrews), and of-
before which all the powerful bow respectfully

662 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ee as me

born, that is to say the universality of men, our brothers, our friends, our disciples.

This language is as explicit and as clear as possible. This Jew from Nancy, in the middle of the nineteenth-sixth century, strongly believed, with good other Jews, at the coming of an all-powerful Messiah-sant, upon his triumphant return to Jerusalem. These are the aspirations of all Israel, based on its tradition tion, on his daily worship, on all the teachings interpretations of his sacred books. The Jews did not other homeland than their motherland, Palestine. The re-establishment of the Jewish nation in this homeland is not only acceptable and achievable, But perhaps next. And it's a unified need-Verse, a necessity, because then the Hebrews, God's eldest sons will be the united arbiter people. Verse and infallible of the peoples, Ze People Pope!

This indestructible hope explains the motion presented to the parliament of Pest in June 1878, by a Jewish deputy, Mr. Istoczy, in which, at on the occasion of settling Eastern affairs, he invited the Austro-Hungarian government to RETABLISH THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH IN PALESTINE?

1 Archives israélites, 1864, pp. 335-350. See The Jew, etc. pp. 467-469.

2 Tablets of a Spectator cited by [Univers of June 18, 1878,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 663

ed

So, in summary: his return to Palestine and his

. physical and moral domination over the world

the basis "of faith and worship," "of tradition and of the nationality" of the Jewish people. For him, the Homelands are merely homelands of circumstance.

...and in passing. These ideas and beliefs "have been

KE +

=

s3

TT ae

traditionally passed down and instilled in the minds of this nation" by its doctors. They are the "soul" of their teachings. "Of everything Over time, the Israelites prepared themselves for these events.

...ments, the ultimate term of their aspirations and of their prayers. They eagerly await the wars, revolutions, the ruins of kingdoms; They rejoice in it as if it were a prelude to events their deliverance and their supremacy. The return to Jerusalem and the establishment of an Israelite kingdom—The elite are the subject of a plan that the leaders of the nations are trying "to move forward," by all means means and in all circumstances that they believe they are favorable.

2. But how can we admit that, with ideas With such similar and deeply rooted hopes, the Jews pe penent point penalizing the realizations to understand the immense power they possess through the Freemasonry and other secret societies?

664 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

On the contrary, isn't it extremely likely,

THIS

that Israel's leaders have long had the |

a project has been finalized, and is already well advanced, to employ this an all-powerful and so docile force of action between their hands to the fulfillment of beliefs and:

age-old aspirations of their nation? From-

-- ai

as long as the thought of reigning in Jerusalem and of Dominating the world can only please ambition.

and pride. This invisible leader, great patriarch of Freemasonry, and the high-ranking directors of Israel, its assessors, would they be more dis-provided that other men?

It might be objected that part of Israel has he has now renounced his messianic ideas; that he has frankly embarked on the path of progress modern peoples, that he has taken our ways and our customs, that this coming of the Messiah and this dominion
The nation he proclaimed is now nothing more to him than a symbol that cannot cause any harm to its | national patriotism, and which he now understands by therein lies "the indefinite perfectibility of humanity."

We are not unaware that the Jewish nation divided today into two groups, the Jews of old type, the Jews of the Talmud and the Jews that we will call modernized; these are the

has

– aa ee eee ae

A very small number. They became indifferent.
free thinkers or religious in their own way, and they are all more or less involved in the movement commercial, industrial, political and social issues of our time.

But does this transformation of a porch-
Has Israel's actions escaped the watchful eye of its leaders?
Or perhaps it took place outside of their direction and contrary to their orders? Let's keep-
We are right to believe it. The authority of the princes of Judah has been highly respected throughout the centuries and too obeyed by all the sons of dispersion for that a small number dared to evade it when the
A large part of the nation still reveres her as much as... time has passed. This transformation is the result of the new tactics adopted and the impetus given to this Jewish section by the directors of Israel, since the eighteenth century came to give them hope for a future achievement
of their ancient hopes.

The proof is that almost all wo: inifs modernisés belong to Freemasonry or to its branches; they are its most solid frames
They are the ones who inspire and inspire. They are the ones who breathe life into it.
to Christians in the lodges, as well as to non-Christians, the ideas that are called "modern" and which are not than "Jewish" ideas. Religious tolerance,

666 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

indifferentism, liberalism, freedom of conscience, religious practices, the press, fraternity,
equality, universal suffrage, communism,
socialism, contempt and hatred of Catholicism and of all Christian ideas, the persecution of the Church and the papacy, indefinite progress, the large urban areas, free trade, the cos-mopolitism, the universal homeland, the universal republic saddle, etc., etc., all these grand words, devoid of meaning, or full of errors and dangers, which accepts so easily our thoughtless century, are only preparatory or enforcement measures for the plan Jews. Oppression first, destruction later irreconcilable hatred; the extinction of the Christian faith

Yours brings about the general corruption of morals
which makes the imposition of the servitude easier;
the humanitarian ideal and the universal homeland lead-it leads to the destruction of the idea and the love of particular homelands, and promote the establishment of the universal republic that they are in fact preparing lowering of all trade barriers and large urban areas. The republic universal, it is the whole world dominated and governed governed by a few men; and the Jews want to be those men.

oe

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 667

These modernized Israelites are nothing more than something else than the invading army of our future overlords.
They entered the land to be subdued, in the Christian countries; they already occupy all of them main positions. You think and you say that the Jew has renounced his former dream of domination
the world; but look! He rules it at this hour by its vanguard soldiers: they are par-
They have control over everything; they hold all the power.
the vital forces of the people and almost all the high-ranking government positions; they are almost ~ completely the masters everywhere. What is needed-
What else? A few more major upheavals...

ments, some appalling clashes of peoples to peoples, and the exhausted Christian nations, ab-absorbing each other, they will no longer form, in Europe as in America, only three or four colossal monarchies or republics. These

The Jews are preparing formidable revolutions and will operate them. Haven't they been doing this for almost a century?
through their instrument, Freemasonry, the arti-
without all the upheavals that have occurred in the Two hemispheres? Glory, interests, lexistence of their particular homeland, of their homeland of passing by, affects them very little; they only have one homeland, Palestine, and, to return there and realize their

With proud hope, they would do, if they could,
Jump halfway around the globe. Then the time will come.

where, prepared by commercial necessities, by .

railways, the electric telegraph and the waterways, after some major upheavals
his still, or some alliances, or others
Under favorable circumstances, this will be formed immense Jewish empire of the prophesied Antichrist for the end times. And Israel's long wait will be achieved and his efforts crowned with the most complete success.

3. And let's face it, the Jew has everything he needs in itself to achieve this result.

First, there is an extraordinary, unique existence.
in the life of humanity, miraculous, as in the Jews themselves agree, "of a people entirely dispersed for eighteen hundred years in all parts of the universe, without merging or to mix nowhere with the populations in the middle from which he lives. "This incredible preservation" implies a particular mission for this people, a A major mission. But so far it seems to have no other aim than to establish anti-Christianity
in the midst of Christian society and pre-to ward off the empire of the Antichrist. After his conversion which is foretold by the Holy Spirit, what will its

a toed

Mission? We don't have to, at the moment, search for the solution to one of the unknowns pro-
the most interesting pheticks of Scripture.

Due to its extremely flexible nature, by his activity, his perseverance, his extraordinary sagacity | dinaire, by its offline intelligence', by his very temperament, he unites within himself the signs

Science, in agreement with experience, tells us shows that the Jewish race, standing alone among all The others, an exception to a general law, is Capable of living and perpetuating itself in all climates?
She observes in this people "the phenomenon of a immunity that protects him from diseases and plagues," and she adds that "of all peoples
"Civilized, it is first in terms of vitality."
And remarkably, statistical science!
of our time recognizes with astonishment that,
in the midst of the Christian peoples where he lives and whose population remains stationary or does not increase
The Jewish population, to a moderate degree, experiences

1. Recall the testimonies cited in section V, § 3, and see The Jew, ch. X, art. 4, Intellectual Superiority of the Jewish.

2 On the non-cosmopolitanism of human races, page 392, by Dr. Boudin. – Journal of the Statistical Society of Paris, August 1860. – See The Jew, etc., p. 395.

670 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

suddenly, for no apparent reason and everywhere at times, an astonishing multiplication, a thickeninginexplicable. |

"In all the countries where we were able to
to obtain censuses of the Jewish population, _ wrote the president of the anthropological society-that from Paris, we are seeing an increase of unusual speed... Isn't that the clue?
rather than a great providential mission
Just a coincidence!?

As for the Jewish population spread throughout the five parts of the world, Dr. Boudin assessed, in 1860, to four million three hundred thousand. For Europe alone he counted three million six hundred a thousand Jews. In 1866, the newspaper 7' Univers israélite brought the total number of Jews to six million, of whom more than half for Europe. In a book published in 1878 and cited above, M. Du Mesnil-Marigny states that, "according to the information:
"information provided by the Foreign Missions, the "Israelites settled outside of Palestine"

"millions." This figure is confirmed by the Cinthe fortieth annual report of the Society for

Geography and Medical Statistics, by Dr. Boudin, vol. 11, p. 131. 1857. – See The Jew, ch. X in its entirety.

Nm:

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 671

the spread of Christianity among the Jews, Published in 1879 in Berlin. According to this document, there would have more than five million Jews living in Europe, two hundred thousand in Asia, more than four-twenty thousand in Africa, and from one to one million and half in America; total, about six million eight hundred and seventy-two thousand*. The Jew can therefore to rightfully call oneself a citizen of the universe.

1 Here is how Mr. Boudin divides the Jewish population in the world, in 1860 (On Non-cosmopolitanism, etc.):

Europe... 3,600,000

America, 43,000

Africa 450,000

Asia. . & a.' 200,000

Australia... 2,000

Total: 4,300,000

The Berlin Report has higher figures that accuse
an increase and a decrease in pupuiation, in 1879:

Europe. 9,091,825

America... 1,500,000

Asia e. e. , «+ 200,000

Africa, more than 50,000

Total: 6,371,825

towards European states in this way:

Russia. , . . . e 2,621,000

Austria 1,315,000

Germany 512,000

Türkiye 100.00

Hollande... 70,000

England... 50,000

France. , . . , . 49,000

Italy. 4 + + to » 35,000

- "£437 ES

672 FREEMASONS AND JEWS,

Note these figures of over five million of Jews living in Europe, and nearly a million and a half living in America today.
explain the activity and power of the companies
secrets in these two parts of the world.

In addition to these intrinsic means, there is the power
The irresistible allure of gold. The riches of which the nation
The number of Jewish people possessing these rights is incalculable. One of these Jews modernized, Baron de Rothschild, : died in Paris in 1868, left eight hundred million to his four sons of fortune, according to some, nearly two billion
according to others. He wasn't the only one in his family, who has representatives at least as rich in England, Austria, Germany and Russia, which everywhere makes the law with its gold governments.

But these enormous riches of the modernized Jews

Spain and Portugal.

de2a . . a' 4,000

Sweden . . . ee . 1,800

Norway : 25

Romania 274,000

Total: 5,091,825

The figure given for Romania, 274,000, is lower than the reality, as a result of recent and continuous immigration Jews from Russia and Germany in this region. It's a new population displacement.

The Berlin Report is cited and analyzed in the Universe of December 5, 1879.— History of the political economy of the ancient peoples, by Du Mesnil-Marigny. 3rd ed., vol. II, p. 268.

PS a

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 673

and launched into the movement of our century would apparently be surpassed by the fabulous treasures those placed in the hands of certain families Israelites ignored by Christians, but well known Jews. These privileged families are those of the— which, according to traditional Jewish belief Talmudists, the awaited Messiah must one day emerge. Tlen exists in several locations in Galicia and Russia. Jews surround them with a kind of cult and put at their disposition of quantities of gold and riches of all kinds that accumulate every year for centuries and of which we will never know the exact value *.

Of all the means to success, the most powerful. The Jews will therefore achieve their goals.

4. Moreover, they have already proven what they are capable, and the results they obtained and that what we have before our eyes must give them the es— for, and to us the fear, of their complete success.

To understand the skill and progress of Jewish, as well as the magnitude of the success achieved in © his plan for universal domination, it is necessary— to see the obstacles he had to overcome and the way he managed to defeat them.

It was around the eighteenth century, according to all

1 The Jew. p. 476 et seq.

probability that the Jewish leaders, after so much centuries of vain waiting, glimpsed, for the pre-first time, as soon as they will be feasible, and the emancipation of their race and their universal domination.

However, insurmountable obstacles pa-were rising up before them, they needed to a-edge to overturn the Christian edifice from top to bottom, based on centuries-old foundations throughout the old world. In this gigantic work presented itself to destroy on the front line the eatholism with its strong papal institutions temporal, hierarchical, and religious orders, and the considerable influence that added to its spiritual and divine power, its great riches and its territorial possessions. The social order, the Customs and traditions were everywhere based on the Christianity and were deeply imbued with it of its doctrines. The Christian edifice was supported, here, by numerous Catholic and fervent peoples winds, governed by frankly dynasties Catholics themselves; elsewhere, by nations heretics, but, like their princes, sincerely attached to the Christian religion. Besides, the two civilized worlds, Europe and America... risk, were divided into a multitude of states of 4

has

> -

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. - 675

all grandeur, jealous of their autonomy and guaranteed by the notions of justice and law people whom the Church had spread and incul-established for centuries. Catholic governments-religious groups, like the Protestants, were content

'to be linked together by the community of essential services, and both sides watch-paid close attention to the integrity of their foreheads third parties. All these things, as well as powerful fortresses, barely touched by the action subversive of Protestant principles, they arose seemingly unshakeable in the face of vows and projects of Israel.

His attack plan was admirably conceived and no less admirably executed. It was a A work of infernal genius. First, seize control of all the enemy forces of Catholic societylique, to unite them and launch them against her, such was the first point of the battle plan. We must recon-it was born that the part, on this side, presented itself as beautiful for the leaders of Israel. We have already indicated to numerous and formidable duels had affited the Catholic Church, at the beginning of this eighteenth century. However, these isolated enemies could not have harmed him much, precisely

676 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

because of their isolation. The masterstroke was for having united them and especially for having found the
A way to unite them. That way was the secret society.

There have always been secret societies in the pagan and Christian world. Since the preaching of 'the Gospel, the remnants of dissident sects, gnos-ticks, Manicheans, Albigensians and their many derived, have traced, more or less hidden and more or less impure, their subterranean furrow in the low-foundations of Christianity. In almost all of them, the
The Jew had his entrance, and often held the upper hand.
through the cabal they generally practiced and in which the Jew has always been master and doctor. But these shadowy associations had not no hold on the intelligent classes and directors giants who were not part of it and the con-were barely born. From then on, however influential it may have been Being Jewish, he could have no influence on the course of events.
public affairs and society as a whole. It had existed since the fourteenth century a secret society with an aristocratic appearance, which does not contained within its ranks men who appeared belonging to the upper classes and who, by the same token, stood at a great distance from all the 'other occult associations. It was the Franc-

L Daai

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 677

ee

eighteenth century fashion and craze in the upper classes had turned to the secret societies. The Templar lodges multiplied were bending everywhere, in England, in France, in Germany. The Jew had never been able to enter it: an article of their constitution imposed on the followers The profession of Christianity. The crucial point. For him, it was therefore: either find a way to to infiltrate Templar Freemasonry, or for- sea for the ruling classes an association a secret society from which Jews were not excluded. In the second half of the century, the Jew had ER, one of them and the other point.

The Jew Paschalis established a so- secret society based on the cabal and in which Jews could naturally be admitted. His principal disciple, Saint Martin, who appeared was attached to a distinguished family from Amboise in the weapons and who initially pursued this career, enveloped and concealed the core of his doctrines all Jewish under a nebulous philosophy that the Freemasons extremely benefited from phi- philosophers already members, either of the Templar lodges of England, or those of France. The reputation-

The presentation of the new rite became considerable. In name- -

Numerous Martinist lodges were founded and the lodges 38.

678 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The Templars hastened to join them. The Jews thus entered fully into societies secrets of the French upper classes. It is to be re- to point out that never in France have we made any difficulties worship to receive Jews into Freemasonry; the The reason for this is undoubtedly in the original origin of French Enlightenment; while in Germany, even at the beginning of the nineteenth century, he There were still differences of opinion and controversies. among Freemasons on this subject.

However, in Germany too, it had opened up to the Jews a wide-open gateway into the Freemasonry. Weishaupt founded the Illumination. Bavarianism and established the principle of admissibility Men of every religion and faith. The Israelites entered in large numbers, and in a short time had penetrated, by means of the illuminated lodges, in most German Templar lodges. Here again, the Jews were now able to exercise a direct action on the upper classes and mixed with general affairs.

At that time all the secret societies aris- Tocratic principles were not under the control of the Jew, but he was beginning to be part of it, and almost immediately They felt the effects of his influence: he pushed them to unification in order to achieve unity of action which is in his character and habits. We Let us recall here that the first idea of the great Wilhelmsbad convention or congress had emerged from Martinist lodges, Jewish by origin and always open to the Israelites. In this congress It mattered little to the Jew that it was a Masonic rite dominated over another and that the general management societies to be unified were entrusted to the temporary system To fold, Maitinist, or enlightened one. The big issue For him, it was about bringing together in a single bundle, not only these sections of the aristocracy of secret societies, but also all the others associations of different levels' that were proliferating in the world and in which he had an in- long-standing influence.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 679

The success was complete. Under the direction of followers of Saint-Martin and Weischaupt, some accepted and established the unity of all companies secrets of the world and actually constituted the Franc-Modern masonry.

The Jews quickly realized the power-
the use of the instrument they had just formed.
Less than ten years later, they were witnessing a
an unprecedented revolution in the annals of nations.
All of Europe was shaken. In France, it

680 – FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

did, on a small stage, like a great repetition of the terrible drama that will unfold in The universe in the time of the Antichrist. Religion, laws, customs, morals, monarchy, institutions, administration Administration, provinces, properties, everything was overturned from top to bottom. In its place stood the cult,
the administration, the territorial divisions, the ins-
the institutions and practices of Masonic lodges.
France was in the hands of the Freemasons.

This result, so quick and so astonishing, was indeed made to encourage the Jews. Also during the first half of the nineteenth century, did they not nothing neglected in order to become absolute masters of a such an instrument of destruction and for the perfect-to function. By their gold and their superior intelligence, they quickly became the sole owners
and were able to shape the masonry material as they pleased.
nic. The events that have happened and will passing before our eyes allows us to guess quite easily their way of doing things.

First of all, they wanted to ensure, by the masking as much as possible, the peaceful development of their grand projects. Freemasonry was by-divided into two seemingly unrelated groups.
In the first, called Symbolic Freemasonry, they gave it an outwardly harmless appearance

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 681

and a bit grotesque. This group was supposed to stay secret society, while discreetly seeking to
to show up according to the circumstances and to attract proselytizers. The Jews succeeded in gaining recognition

Since then she is no longer, strictly speaking secret society, but it became, as they
They say, "a closed society with a secret."
They worked to bring everything back into this group
what exists in the world of hostile elements to religion and the Catholic Church, the idea and the Christian institutions. Under their impetus this Freemasonry incorporated itself as much as it could Protestants, Jansenists, heretics and rebels against the Church of all kinds and the unbelievers of every kind. She called to herself the ambitious people who want to achieve honors and | power, the downgraded and the dried fruits of all careers that seek a social position, the pleasure-seeking men and revelers, eager for enjoyment material goods, merchants and in-industrialists who wish to succeed in business, the lit-tectors and scholars envious of making a fame. She did not disdain the weaker sex:

She lures the woman and takes the child.
She promises everyone the object of their desires, and thanks to

682 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

the influence and the gold of the Jew, she gives it to them, to less so to some extent, and under certain conditions tions which at first seem quite easy and few serious, but which, at some point, pre-
They feel inflexible and formidable.

Jews tend to include in this group,
not only dupes and fools, but a number and taxable material, but above all intellectual men people and important figures from each nation, for the
to have at hand. And to them there is nothing that they do not promise and that they do not give. More As events unfold, the more this plan of the Jewish Freemasonry appears evident. At this time and under the current regime, where there is no longer any fear of
to discover, it is easy to see that men politicians who want to succeed, that the men of enjoyment which they desire to satisfy themselves fully, that men of finance, commerce, industry and large companies seeking to succeed, or are either Freemasons, or must become involved

1. We read in Decentralization: "It would appear that in "certain large state administrations, they provoke the

"employees of all ranks to enter into Freemasonry.

"They are indirectly assured that this is a way to facilitate
"their advancement and to obtain influential protections"

"To achieve significant results." Z'Uniters, who
He quotes these words, adding: "The fact is at least plausible,

HD

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 683

External Freemasonry that the top leaders of Israel
"they study men, they turn them, they guess" their inclinations and tendencies, take hold of their will, their intelligence, and their freedom and have them at their disposal." And when they are ripe, they lead towards the secret society, that is to say towards Higher Freemasonry. And when they need to act on the mind of a completely foreign man ger, or even hostile to Freemasonry, the Jews have no shortage of "insinuating brothers"
fully trained in Weishaupt processes and capable, through cunning and hypocrisy, of achieving the stated goal.

The second Masonic group includes the high-ranking officials who meet in the rear-lodges. That is the true Freemasonry. That is the
that the Jews admit the prepared men and secure organizations they infiltrate, if they haven't already
At their core, their hatred of Catholicism and of all

...Christian belief. They imbue them with ideas

"Modern," in line with their designs. They are responsible for propagating them, defending them, and execute them. To these they reveal successive-

"And Masonic ties alone can explain the success-

"site of certain characters ill-suited to the high situation"
"that they occupy" (Univers, October 10, 1879).

684 " FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ly, by putting them through the rites and the various degrees of initiation, a part of their plan and their purpose. The high lodges, composed only Jews, they are the only ones, there shouldn't be any. no doubt, who know all the thoughts of | masters of Israel.

In this second group, based on an indication by- the order of the senior leaders, conceive and expand These projects, destructive to all religion, are being undermined. of the papacy, of authority, of morality, of the family, of all religious teachings, of the homeland, property, society, to which Freemasonry works with such rage in our century. Then, after approval The top-down approach was given to the plans and projects made- After careful discussion, a watchword is transmitted to the symbolic lodges which, through their thousand voices, ideas from the press, gauge public opinion, prepare it, shape it, and make it possible, or easier, the execution of the agreed plan.

It is through these high lodges, and sometimes, according to the occurrence, by the outer lodges, that e- They establish secret societies, militant members and violent Freemasons. There she gathers and enlists the arms it needs to to carry out physical destruction. These companies:

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 685

Carbonarism, Internationalism, Nihilism, or others seem to have their own lives and directions and separate from Freemasonry. But in fact they are secretly conducted by Jews from the high lodges who have every opportunity to deny them, and the com-

_ to fight if necessary, if they succumb in their companies.

Jewish Freemasonry is therefore like a species of a living organism of gigantic proportions which embraces and encloses Christian society with a from one end of the world to the other. This organization is constituted in a marvelous unity since all the upper and lower lodges depend-tooth of the national center called Grand Orient, and that all the Grand Orients, in obligatory relations together, they are attached to a center supreme, the Orient of Orients, by a link of de-absolute pendulum. This center is the high and a unique lodge that brings together the top leaders and the main figures of Israel, and who leads, as a driving force sovereign, Freemasonry and occult societies of all degrees, and of all forms. This immense network, of which each link is a man, maintains his formidable unity by the pressure of a terrible discipline, supported on mandatory secrecy and on multi-oaths

39

686 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

tied up, by fear of violent repression of the dagger and poison, and finally by the irresistible of Judaic gold.

However, in this countless army he produces well, from time to time, both at the top and in bottom, divisions, rifts, schisms.

But the Jew is not troubled by it. In the Freemasonry, he no longer adheres to orthodoxy. than to the schism, and he leaves below his power-sance, without worrying about it, his many slaves discuss and divide amongst themselves. For him the Freemasonry is first and foremost an instrument of destruction. He is also able to destroy by a schism only by an orthodox rite, by such a man of a peaceful character and moderate gait that by another audacious and violent one. He uses the - men of all kinds. He raises them, he makes them-pours, according to the circumstances. It produces it and it the others in all the states of the world.

All Masonic rites, whatever they may be,
all forms of secret societies, united or divided, all members of both sides, Whatever their ideas, their rivals may be their ties, their particular ambitions, he pushes them
according to its plans towards the same objective: destruction-

Y

D

NT CS Fe sal A

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 687

_ me/mrs

total tion of the Christian idea and society.

All paths and all means are open to him
Good. The more people divide and clash
The more nations weaken and suffocate among themselves, the more they suffocate.
They feel, become disorganized and disintegrate, the more it
There are upheavals in societies, of upheaval-
The more disasters and catastrophes there are, the more the Jew rejoices.
and finds that his work is progressing. We have his confessions: he strives to overthrow and destroy in order to to raise his dominion over the ruins. If he believes it profitable to his designs, he will not hesitate to launch below, the Freemasonry of the proletariat against the Bourgeois Freemasonry, the International against the wealthy FF.*. of the higher degrees, and in turn High-ranking masons against the Commune.
And if he then needs the re- for his projects to reconcile the warring brothers, he will present his - hands full of gold, positions and honors, for

to soothe anger, heal wounds, and reunite

under the same flag, victors and vanquished.
As for these major political questions of dynasties, rivalries of powers, which passionately-They divide and separate men nowadays, they are of very secondary importance to Israel. It does not hold more to the monarchy than to the republic, to this

688 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

this power than that one, to this dynasty rather than to any other. He only has a preference for the men and the things that further his plans and lead to his goal. But he will ruthlessly repel will fight tooth and nail, by all means forces at his disposal, such dynasty, such institution-tion, such a class of society, such an influence political or governmental figure princely, and even such a humble individual,

who, rejecting modern ideas and positioning themselves as - an opponent of the Revolution, would thereby form

even an obstacle or delay to its accomplishment
[The meaning of] his wishes.

A centralization was inconceivable.
more powerful and a stronger situation than that of Jewish Freemasonry. The organization of the Roman Empire was neither more learned, nor more solid.

And yet Israel did not simply possess

To seize this considerable occult power. He has wanted to be able to act openly at in the midst of the Christian nations. From the beginning of the century, Freemasonry is in turmoil and making demands everywhere
the emancipation of the Jew. The European governments-Europeans are being strongly urged to do
A Jew, a citizen like any other, and to overturn

his ar

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 689

the necessary barriers, established by experience

society as well as individuals.

So now the Jews are almost everywhere
They are citizens of the countries they live in. They all have them.
the rights and all the privileges, And singular thinglière! of dangerous beings whom we distrusted, of outcasts, once rejected and marked with a sign
so that they would be less harmful, the Jews modernized, they became so in the nineteenth century
the most supported, most influential men and the most powerful. They belong to three communities which, in different capacities, help them and They protect them. Like their customs, they have modernizednized their names which they adapted* according to the language of their temporary homeland, and thus Their Israelite origin is generally ignored.
Their gold, their intelligence, their moral qualities,
Their skill in all things enables them to achieve
in the front rows and participate more than anyone else
to the protection and privileges due to citizens eminent. On the other hand, they are incorporated into this all-powerful Masonic association, which recognizes in them its best leaders, its followers

1 See L'Univers of December 4, 1879: The German Jewish nobility order,

690 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

'the most active and dedicated, and who, for this cause alone, without perhaps yet knowing that they are of the race of his masters, provides them assistance and favors of all kinds. Finally, by While modernizing, they have never ceased to be part of
from the great family of Jacob's sons, who re-_ always knows for its own, and which has always been,
and is today, more than ever, so attentive and so eager to defend and support everywhere her
members.

We can now appreciate the genius of Jewish and the influence it exerts on Christian society has held for half a century.

The consequences of this action and the results
aches and pains provide even better, alas! the measure of this genius and the power of the instrument he employment. The Jews managed to operate a large of their projects.

Indeed, if, like them, we do not consider the things that, from a human point of view, we must recognize that, strictly speaking, the order The Christian social model of the past is completely de-built and that the Catholic Church is strongly shaken.

In every country, except for Austria, the Church

mat "he

AER:

style

A

mire'.

| mest

nt ql

oral

、

g

mi it

devel:

Bridge At

Ent it?

tet

Es

F

k

Catholic, stripped of its landholdings
and her wealth, is reduced to the state of beggary
She no longer owns anything, and for her life
the most essential piece of equipment it depends on governments, or those who are Freemasons, where although Freemasonry dominates.

The temporal papacy is overthrown: the pope has only one palace left, which is a prison and which He can be thrown out tomorrow. The clergy's action on public affairs is nil; on the masses
as with the ruling classes, it is also Furthermore, it has been annihilated. It is chased from everywhere: we don't
He doesn't even have free disposal and use of it peaceful in its everyday dwellings, the house of his God, his sacristy and his rectory. The en-teaching at all its levels, in almost all the states, despite Catholic resistance, is taken from the Church and placed in the hands of the worst enemies of religion. Also the Christian faith is undermined among Catholics as well as among the heretics. It is replaced by doubt, by in-
The difference is a vague deism, even atheism.
in the upper classes, and by a material-
crude and brutalism among the common man.
Aü place of trust and respect that attracted formerly upon him his sacred character, the priest

692 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

eeeeeeame de e ee ER RE = ce on today one does not see in the eyes as in the hearts filled with distrust, contempt, and hatred.' The

The rights of people no longer exist. Might prevails over law.
Nothing now guarantees a weak people against a strong and ambitious people. Large urban areas These misconceptions were formed more by hypocrisy, the lies and betrayal, only through triumph of victorious armies. Moral disorder is united-versel. We return to customs and traditions.
my pagan women. Authority at all its levels is

1 This hatred was instilled by the Jew, who maintains it himself-

She makes a point of taking advantage of every opportunity; she knows how to...
to create, if necessary, in order to destroy the authority and influence of – priest, to make him despicable and odious. To have him massacred Created by Catholic hands, it is the triumph of its poli-Infernal tick. Prussia seemed to be drawing closer to Rome.
This rapprochement will only be superficial. Then in the An inevitable war, fueled by republican divisions and follies.
will bring French priests between France and Germany will again be accused, as in 1870, by the entire press and through all Masonic voices, to be wholeheartedly with the Prussians, to send them money, to bring them here for destroy the Republic, and put Henry V on the throne.
This time, in this accusation, the priests will be joined nobles and the bourgeoisie. Hence terrible popular hatreds and Massacres. There will be many hostages.

The Church Fathers who dealt with the end of the world,
Saint Hippolytus, among others, characterizes the era that precedes it.
yields in several striking ways, and in particular because of this one:

The people will then "harbor a deep hatred against The ministers will be at the altar. Each will live according to their whims, without law and without respect for authority." Saint Hippolytus, 3rd century key: Of consumption mundi and of Antichristo. V. Letters of a hermit, by JE de Camille, p. 120.

| tans l
sale

India

* FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 693

despised; family ties are broken. The Property is threatened everywhere. The lowering of character is general. We no longer have any esteem than for wealth; efforts are only made for the
to acquire and enjoy unlimited satisfactions material resources they provide. Nations are in decadence and day by day form in the servitude. In place of these old relationships of religion and faith brought them closer together, he between peoples there exist only the interests of the common good.
merceetdelindustriedéveloppesetexagéréschaque year after year. These interests, along with the railways and waterways, are concentrated in increasingly in the hands of Jews and Frenchmen

short term perhaps, the unity of the world and its enslavement, the constant goal of Israel's efforts. Such is the work of Jewish Freemasonry. The ruins are incalculable. Freemasonry has therefore was quite rightly named by several Destruction and revolution. How can we not recognize—to be born that she is the instrument of the Jew, since the the destruction it caused is precisely those that have been desired and awaited for centuries

All of Israel?

The Jew must be proud of his work and believe in himself
39. |

694 FRANKSAGONS AND JEWS. °

very close and present to dominate the world. Also He cannot hide his joy. Already in 1867, the Jew and Master mason Crémieux, president of the Alliance? universal asraelite, exclaimed: "As already all has changed for us, in such a short time... Yes... I am proud of the Jews... Because when I was As children they counted for nothing, and as As their age came, I saw them full of zeal, full of courage, hardworking... I saw them conquer—to laugh in all careers at a high position; I heard their names echoing in the midst of the The most beautiful names that the country is proud of. Courage! Redouble your efforts: when you have so quickly and so well Having conquered the present, how beautiful the future is! What should so to speak, Mr. Crémieux in 1879, now that France and almost all of Europe are governed by Jewish Freemasonry?

The "non-Jews" cannot help themselves; they also, to see that the future is bright for the Jew; But certainly, if God doesn't intervene, many less beautiful for the Christian.

A writer of merit, a devout Catholic, the noted in 1869 with fear and sadness?

1 Archives israélites, p. 13, 1867. Speech by Mr. Crémieux at the general assembly of the Alliance Israélite Universelle.
3 The Jew, etc., ch. xu, par. 2.

Ten years later, the aforementioned economist, based solely on economic facts and statistics, in turn affirms it in these terms quite remarkable:

"the imminent elevation of Israel to the pinnacle of The magnitudes therefore seem certain, since in this At the moment, nothing seems capable of dispelling it. Thus, at less than a major change in the order and the the movement of societies, we will see it before little, however extraordinary such a thing may seem By a twist of fate, to govern nations, after having applied all their wealth, and, consequently, multiply without measure by chasing "from the front "to him" (Exodus 23:30) the inhabitants of all the land, as he did for the Canaanites and for the natives of the Gessen nome. Certainly, one will complain against this premonition of the substitution tion of the Israelites to the present-day races of the various parts of the globe, and we cannot disagree That this prediction might be very bold. But history is there to teach us that in every country the indigenous populations are gradually being replaced created by the tribe who, settled on their territory following treaties or successful military campaigns, their is undeniably superior in wealth, in industry, in productive capacities of all kinds..."

696 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

has

"However, if, according to our predictions, the threads of Jacob, taking advantage of their superiority in all this which brings prosperity and longevity to this world, manage to outlive all other races as we know the attachment, the spirit of fra- the eternity that unites them, no one will dispute that It is through them that we will see this era come to fruition. so desired by humanity, this wish of all philosophers lanthropes, this aspiration of all the great hearts, we mean universal brotherhood saddle... No doubt our conjectures refer to an era too distant (?) for the gene-

Today, based on the facts we have presented, You'd have to be blind to question the
"A SUPERB FUTURE that is reserved for the Israelites."

We have no doubt about the brotherhood of the Jews.
some for each other and for those who are their slaves. But we know hatred all too well.
of the Talmudic Jew and the Freemason Jew for all Christians in general, and for Catholics-ques in particular. It is therefore extermination or the mass apostasy of Christian nations and

1 History of the political economy of ancient peoples, vol. II, pp. 283 and 285, by M. Du Mesnil-Marigny. Paris, 1878, at Plon, 3rd edition.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 697

to ome

WE) Catholics that Mr. Du Mesnil would announce to us tote} for a future he considers distant . And yet
To arrive at this conclusion, didn't he take care em, than economic and statistical data which k# were returning on their own as part of her work.
nx; Let us add to this the terrible power of action that or
We have just explained to you what is called Freemasonry...
23 sp and we will have to conclude, like him, that a "su-
"mk; perbe future is reserved for the Israelites," but that 72 This future, perhaps the next one, will be very sad for Catholics and Christians.
"| HI. Based on his reasoning
x &i the general data above, the reader
re | can easily, if he pleases, realize
mt of all the major political movements
a contemporary in the past and for the future.
The reason for the universal war declared at f if the Church and the furious attacks that the re-Yes! Religion, primarily in Catholic countries, pr! is already fully explained. The deicidal hatred of the Jew ad: : is enough to account for it; and it was one of his.
my satanic political trait is to overthrow the w € i temporal papacy through the cooperation of two nations Catholics, France and Italy.
will tll The situation where France is reduced and that
"| that we prepare for him are also easily understood.

In the future, the Jews do not want to leave standing neither a Catholic government, nor even a single Catholic nation, because, firstly, the peoples sincerely attached to Catholicism do not ordinarily submit easily to the yoke of the foreign enemy of their religion. They are a serious impediment to universal domination of a single individual or a single race. There are They possess a supernatural spring that cannot be broken than by annihilating them: it is easier and more sure to weaken them and reduce them to impotence- . by corrupting them and killing them in their midst _ faith. Secondly, no nation frankly Catholics will only suffer if the Jews resume the Palestine and settle there. France, being the the most consistent and most Catholic nation strong, forms the most considerable obstacle to The Jew's dual aim: world domination and... recovery of Judea; for, left to itself and to its original and traditional tendencies, the France will certainly always oppose pro- The destruction of the holy land by the Jew. Therefore, it is necessary that more than others it is de-Catholicized, de-Christianized, so that her children would no longer have No concern for holy places. It is necessary that in no way in a way that it can be a rallying point and

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 699

Alliance for other Catholic peoples, by Consequently, it must be exhausted and complete- utterly crushed by the ruin of all its strength vital, from its agriculture, from its industry, from its commerce, its finances, its armies, by : continuous internal divisions, by the com- petitions for power and dynasty, and by the . civil and religious wars, finally through dismemberment Sbrement and sharing. The republic on the one hand {and the German-Prussian Empire on the other are the two instruments with which the Jew works skillfully and successively to this great des- - instruction.

'In the Machiavellian thinking of Israel, this State _Prussian was prepared and shaped over a long period

not only France, but all the others
Catholic peoples of Europe, and to constitute-[kill a vast empire that will encompass everything]
The West, from north to south. It is one of those
.| large urban areas that need to be formed.
This heretical and Masonic power cannot
...to serve the interests of the Jew in every way. The other .) Large urban area, that's Russia. There, the Jew
| ent "a policy full of mysteries,"
| "before which Europe pales" and that "the

100 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

"Britain's eyes can barely penetrate."
Russia is first and foremost the battering ram with which the Jew demolished Turkey, in order to one day take at amidst the rubble, the piece he covets.
But Russia is an absolute government ruled by a family with a religious tradition and a policy directly opposed to aspirations Jewish. This dynasty is Christian; it wants to dominate the entire East and unite the different Greek communes under his spiritual authority.
Therefore, she cannot tolerate Jerusalem and the Palestine becomes the home and property Jews. That is why, or this dynasty tom-bera, or else this traditional policy will have to to be abandoned. The Jew acts as long as he can in this double meaning in European Russia by the secret societies and primarily by the savage | nihilism. Already ideas for modification in the political regimes are emerging, the word "govern-"
The constitutional amendment has been issued. We are fighting in breaches the imperial autocracy. The Jews do not think
Not to destroy Russia: they need it.
Existence is part of their plans. But it will be necessary that the Romanows, if they want to stay on the throne, change their policies and traditions religious. They will set aside orthodoxy and

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 701

their claim to the schismatic papacy, or else, Russia will transition from absolutism to a constitution-nalism under another family. That's the process usual and known in our part of Jewish Freemasonry.
It will be presented as the only possible answer

remedy for the ills of the state, the most frustrating obstacle gic to the furies of Nihilism. This will be the council of the Freemason and the Jew, who will have taken care to the advance of aggravating the ills, of blowing the aspir-rations, to foment and bribe the furies and the revolts. Russia will then be promptly in his hand and will no longer oppose his plans.
said that the heir presumptive of all the Russias
is not far removed from modern ideas t.

1 We read in the Letters from Poland and Russia, published by L'Univers, December 18, 1879:

"Here's what they're saying about the internal reorganization plans"
of Russia, which the unofficial newspaper speaks of in veiled terms.
of Vienna (the Fremdenblatt). The Tsar, morally broken by the cruel disappointments of his reign, gave carte blanche to his heir to implement this constitution that he envisioned with his advisors to save Russia. This constitution grants Russia a parliament with two chambers, a lower house founded on universal suffrage and a chamber High council or council of boyars appointed by the Tsar, etc." A [Univers] editor's note adds: "According to the latest-new information provided by the telegraph, the draft constitutiontion would now be rejected by the Tsar." However, in the proproclamation, displayed on the very day of the emperor's return Alexander in Saint Petersburg by the nihilist committee,

702 FREEMASONS AND JEWS:

As for Austria, it must be dismembered and devoured by Germany. Her turn will come later that of France. For the moment, a policy Masonic influence is gently pushing it towards the East lured by the prospect of a few Turkish corpses.
task of thus disengaging her from what is happening:
likewise, as was done in the times of the dismemberment- |
Poland's actions. While awaiting the major developments blows, Jews and Freemasons de-Catholicize it and minet it as long as they can. They circumvent the situation as much as possible.
possibly his imperial prince*; a Frankish prince-mason, or friend of Freemasonry, do not torment himself-tera guerre de ce que que peut devenir la Palestine.

England has long been the instrument of Jewish preference. At present it has two wrongs in their eyes: she can no longer be beautiful-
This will serve them well in their plans, and in its

A time will come when the two eastern colossi,
Russia and the British Indian Empire, are ren=

finds this passage significant: "We will not leave Alexander II
"In peace, we will only forgive him his offenses in the
"in cases where, recognizing the terrible calamities it inflicts on "Russia, the unjust and criminal oppression it creates, it would transfer its authority to a freely elected assembly
"by universal suffrage, and taking its instructions from the body
"electoral" (same issue of L'Univers).
1 V, Universe of May 30 and December 7, 1879.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 703

Four will counter. At that time the Jew will seek to do
A double blow. He will take revenge on the aristocrat England, in the process of converting to Rome, and will, once again, be the rod that will punish ancient prevarications. The revolutionary elements accused mules within the English nation and who have never caused an explosion because of Jewish Freemasonry
did not want to exploit them, worked at this moment in all directions, will burst forth in a ma-
A formidable empire. The Indian Empire, of course.
abandoned to his fate by the burning metropolis,
will quickly fall victim to Russia. The Jew will have achieved a second success: an urban area
of a larger number of peoples under the same government government. Then he will be very close to domination universal. Director of the government, of the ad-ministry and all the main jobs in the two immense empires of the Prussian West and of the Russian East, what difficulty will he have in...
to merge into one another as a result of, for example, a war,
is it an alliance? And what impossibility does this present?
that one of the members of his Messianic family-ques, perhaps for a long time the supreme patriarch of Freemasonry, be raised upon the throne of this almost universal kingdom with Rome, or Jerusalem, as a capital? What time will it take?

704 FREEMASONS, AND JEWS.

would conquer the heart of Asia and subjugate it
union of the two Americas, divided, revolutionized and partly dominated from now on by the or from Rome the great American colony will be no more difficult than ordering today

From today, from London to the Indian empire. The world then there will be only one monarch. The Jews will see in him their glorious Messiah. He will call them all back.
in Palestine, if they were not already gathered there in body of nation. It will be the Antichrist.

If God lets the things of our time go well of the train they are on, who could deny that this Is this not the likely and perhaps imminent future?
And even if the Lord were to intervene to give his Church this time of rest that we hope, this period of calm, of triumph-
'moral phematization and preparation for the supreme competitions'
bats, who will argue that Israel's plans, a momentarily interrupted and delayed, will not resumed with more fervor and success and does not arrive-
What will be the point of this final success?

For we know from the Holy Scriptures that the
A great anti-Christian empire must one day be re-formed under the influence of the prince of darkness.

But in Freemasonry there is not only-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 705

human action, the genius of a people, superior
Furthermore, there is the actual action of Satan.

IV. We have reasoned so far without taking into account account only of the purely natural order. If mainholding we examine the question at a point of higher view, and if we are looking for the element
the supernatural element it contains, we will understand much better, and Freemasonry itself, and the power that the Jews exercise in it and by
she, and will be able to practice in the future.

It is undeniable, we have just...
To convince, that Jewish Freemasonry possesses very energetic natural means of influence and very numerous; but it would not have an action
and such irresistible and universal successes
if she were not assisted by a superior force

to its own, by a supernatural force.

A very particular satanic influence is spreading today in the world. Every Catholic who studies contemporary events thoughtfully is forced to agree. This action of Satan is concentrated in Freemasonry and operates through She. The most authoritative testimonies and the facts Some demonstrate this.

Many Catholic writers call the Freemasonry, the Revolution, the Revolution

706 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

universal*. This designation is perfectly That's right. Freemasonry accepts it and claims—that all anti-religious works are his own and antisocial aspects of the great revolution and of

1. "What exactly is Freemasonry? What are Her works? Some today call her the Revolution—tion and they are not wrong. For it was she who made the great entire revolution. Ninety-three emerged from its principles, if not from its very core, like eighty-nine; she demolished the altars, overturned the churches, like the royalty and the bastilles; she imprisoned, banished, guillotined the honest people, as she denied God and persecuted his ministers.

"In 1848, at the third revolution, she rushed from par—all in pompous delegations, hailing the new power as his representative, as his son, and crying out to all the tones that the grand words of liberty, equality, and fraternity that was displayed on all the walls came from her, that they were her own motto to herself, that she had given it and the don—"is reborn to France" (Circular of the Bishop From Laval to his clergy, regarding secret societies. October 10 1865).

— "The modern error... calls itself Revolution. In—focused on the organization she gave to her followers, she is divided into two main classes, each of which comprises a secret society and a public party. The first class is composed of... the Freemasons' position from above, from which emanates outwards the liberal party. The second class is made up of the Freemasons. The stupidity of the lower classes, to which the International is united. These two Freemasonry is organized on the same plan and proceeds tooth in the same way (Pastoral Letter of Bishop de Mont-Pellier, Bishop of Liège, September 9, 1871).

This, I repeat, is the universal Revolution, which knows no of borders, which conspires against the powers that tolerate it or who protect it, who conspire against the powers that re-
"push" (The Free Thinkers, p. Saint-Albin, 1868, p: 86 and 87). See the book by Father Gautrelet: Freemasonry and the Revolution.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 107

following. (See F.-. Louis Blanc and the authors)
mac.*. already cited.)

Or de Maistre said: "The French Revolution is satanic. After him, with an authority that superior and by generalizing his thought, the great Pope Pius IX also affirms that "the Revolution is inspired by Satan himself;" and more express- still believes that "Freemasonry is the "worthy daughter of Satan" who is "the true father" of this sect*. » These words would suffice.

4 "The French Revolution is satanic: if the counter-
"Evolution is not divine, it is nothing" (Letter to the Marquis de Clermont, September 1815). – "The French Revolution is sata-
It is flawed in its principle; it cannot be truly finished, killed, exterminated only by the opposite principle that it will be necessary alone- to untie; that's all a man can do; then he will act on its own" (Letter to His Eminence the Archbishop of Ragusa, December 1815. – Letters and pamphlets, 3rd ed., vol. 1 p. 381).

3. "The Revolution is inspired by Satan himself. His
The goal is to destroy the edifice of Christianity from top to bottom. and to rebuild the social order of paganism upon its ruins."
(Pius IX, Encyclopedia of December 8, 1849). – "For a long time already, and almost from the very beginning of the Masonic sect, the Holy-Siège, who clearly saw through the deception, washed condemned and subjected to repeated excommunications, he had accurately predicted all the harm it was to cause to religion and Civil society, indeed this worthy daughter of Satan, making of man as a god, and establishing each one as supreme judge by his conduct, he thereby rejects all divine authority and human, and consequently breaks the bond that constitutes all so- society. The Church's warnings were useless, and beautiful- even among those who should have stifled this monster were not afraid to favor him, although now none

Masonic testimonies will confirm this truth in a more evident way.

It is certain that the Jews have been, especially since their dispersal, of distinguished cabalists, that is to say-
to say that they have preserved with particular care and practiced the doctrines of the Kabbalah, not of the legitimate and sacred cabal', not of the harmless cabal that simply combines letters and numbers, but the doctrines of Za
black or magical cabal, which is nothing else than the very essence of idolatry. This cabal is religion and the direct worship of fallen spirits, demons. She teaches ways to possess them.
in direct contact with them, to make them favorable and to obtain help and favor from them. His
Its origins go back to Ham, perhaps to Cain.
The first siege was Chaldea and Babylonia.
his first sanctuary, the Tower of Babel and Baby-lone. She went to the heart of the secret initiations.

Human strength is incapable of fighting against it; therefore, it is necessary... to uproot this poisonous root of the evils that afflict the nations and push into the eternal abyss the souls it banishes-
The source of life and salvation is to turn to the Almighty: only He has
He was once able to drive the true father of this sect from heaven; he alone can now make it disappear from the earth, etc... » (In short from Pius IX, to the director of the Reparative Association towards the Holy Trinity, established in France under the patronage of Saint Michel. V. Univers, April 9, 1875).
1 See Ja's note on page 600.

PR ER ns ea\

Freemasons and Jews. 709

of all the famous mysteries of antiquity
pagan sects, then Gnostic and Manichean sects and their many offspring.

The Jews have always been faithful to this in-fame of demons. Saint John Chrysostom called the Jews of his time, the "demonic" ones, including
"souls and synagogues were inhabited by demons." (Advers. Judzos. Orat. 1* and 2)

"Even today," said the famous Bishop of Vultourre, Simon Maiol, at the beginning of the seventeenth century, even today, what could be more common among the Jews, especially "in the East, that the practice of magic? » Hodie etiam apud Judzos, presertim in Oriente, quid magia frequentius? (Of Judzorum per fidia, t. UI, p.329. Moguntiz. 1615).

Nowadays, unsuspected perpetrators repeat the same claims. "The Jews," said Figuier, are all regarded as doctors of the law among the "Illuminati?" "It is certain," assures the fr. mac.°. Eliphaz Levi, whom the Jews, the most custodians faithful to the secrets of the cabal, have been almost

1 "The mystical doctrines and magical practices of the anti-
"Some of these things are preserved in part within the cabal" (Heefer, ratio(nalist, History of Chemistry, vol. I", p. 242).

2 History of the Marvelous, vol. IV, p. 162, 1860. Anti-work Catholic.

40

710 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

still in magic, the great masters of the medium age'. "

From that point on, the Jew is the true owner of the Freemasonry, we would be entitled to into conduct without any recklessness, even if we
we would have no direct proof that the cabal must be practiced among Freemasons.

But in addition to this legitimate induction, we
We know from history that the rites of the lodges mar-
The Tinists and Cagliostro before 1789 were founded on the cabal; and today Freemasonry
She admits that she still practices it. The explanations, although much softened, from F.*. Ragon on the 89th grade of the Misraïm rite, clearly demonstrate this;
We mentioned them above. And the Rosicrucians revealing, from whom we have borrowed several pages, formally states: "Freemasonry can
"to divide into three classes: Freemasonry her-
"Metics, Kabbalistic Freemasonry, and the Ma-

1 Dogmas and rites of high magic, vol. II, p. 220, 2nd ed.
Paris, 1861, by Eliphaz Lévi, pseudonym of a clergyman
an apostate who became a Freemason and Kabbalist,

The author, says Mr. Des Mousseaux, from whom we borrow
This quote and the previous one should have been added to the Middle Ages the era of the Renaissance or of Protestantism, which was entirely at both and quite naturally an era of great magicians and great heretics or great rebels (The Jew, p. 517, note.

2 P. 382 and 383.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 711

Eclectic nonsense. Each of these branches... distinguishes itself from the other by a teaching by-particular, although their goal is absolutely the even... The cabalistic Freemasons borrowed to Manes his good and bad principles, escorted each of the good and bad spirits that inhabit
the planets and exert their influence on humans
an influence consistent with their nature" (Ævée(positions of a Rosicrucian, pp. 11 and 12).

"Everything scientific and of great importance"
diose, teaches in turn the magazine: cabalist Eliphaz Levi, in the religious dreams of all illuminated Jacob Bohne, Svedenborg, Saint-Martin, is borrowed from the cabal; all the associations-Masonic lodges owe their secrets and their symbols" (Dogmas and rites, etc., vol. I", p. 95).

Kt in another work:

"Kabbalistic doctrine is the dogma of the High magic, and, veiled under the name of cabal, is indicated by all the sacred hieroglyphs of the ancients sanctuaries and rites still so little known of the Ancient and modern masonry.

"The great cabalistic association, known in Kurope, under the name of Freemasonry, appears all at a blow to the world, at the moment when the protest against the Church has just dismembered Christian unity

AAAAAA

yours" (History of Magic, 1860, p. 24 and 399).

The well-known blasphemies of the Freemasons... Renan and Proudhon, who rehabilitate and exalt Satan, confirm these testimonies*. The profession of 1 Here are the blasphemies of F.-. Proudhon that we quote with horror and trembling, but which nevertheless must be done To know, so that Freemasonry may be better understood:

"I say: the first duty of an intelligent and good man
"is to constantly banish the idea of God from one's mind and "Disconsciousness, because God, if he exists, is essentially hos-
"tiled to our nature..."

"Lying spirit, foolish God, your reign is over; seek
"Among the beasts, other victims. And now here you are, de-"Throned and broken!..."

God is satire and cowardice; God is hypocrisy and
"A lie; God is tyranny and misery; God is evil."

These blasphemies came straight from hell. The words
The following, in the same possessed voice, definitively prove it:

"Come, Satan, come, you who are slandered by priests and kings, that "I kiss you, I hold you close to my chest. It's been a long time-"
"As long as I've known you and you've known me too. Your o-
"True, O blessed one of my heart! are not always beautiful,
"neither good nor bad, but they alone give meaning to the universe and "prevent it from being absurd. You alone animate and fertilize the tra"vail, you ennoble wealth; you serve as the essence of authority, you
"Put the seal on virtue."

In turn, in a more skillful and less brutal way, the F.*, Renan, after having tried to belittle Jesus Christ, attempts to rehabilitate the Spirit of Darkness:

"Satan is, without a doubt, the one who has gained the most from the pro-
"Sandstone of enlightenment and universal civilization. The Middle Ages,
"who understood nothing about tolerance, did it with malicious pleasure."
"Milton finally understood this poor, slandered man. His century, too."
"Ours is as fruitful as any in rehabilitation of all kinds, not
"could lack reasons to excuse a revolutionary"
"unfortunate that the need for action threw him into enterprises"
"Unhappy."

The language of these two Freemasons is that of Kabbalists fervent.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 713

impious and more recent faith of a Livorno newspaper, Ateo is the very statement of our thesis. "Satan "He is our leader," the editors say, "the genius "of human restoration, the vengeful force" "Of reason." (V. Univers, August 29, 1877.)

As for the facts, it will suffice to cite those which the author of The Jew of Verona vouches for and which he describes as follows:

"Rome, as Mazzini had decided in the meeting of March 4 (1847) held in Paris with the leading figures of socialism, was to be a center hidden, then a blazing furnace of conjurations..... Already, one had descended from the Alps to one, to get to Rome, the most satellites fiercest and most skilled in Italy, Germany gne, from Switzerland and Poland, under the orders of Mazzini, of Ruffini, of Dybousky, of Zalesky, of Marz, and Weitling... The focus where Iniquity was located behind the Longara.... The the altar of Satan which stood as a rival to the temples of the Almighty; there the demon was worshipped as supreme deity; there he received incense and the prayers; there they celebrated obscene mysteries; "There, they offered him monstrous sacrifices."

. 1 To, Bresciani, the Jew of Verona, 2nd edition. Casterman, t, I*, p. 75 et seq. 1859.

40.

714 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

This account by Canon Bresciani is confirmed by that of Count Lubinski, in his history Wars and the Italian Revolution of 1848 and 1849, and which Father Deschamps abridges in these terms: "Secret societies put all

their sails billowing in the wind to complete in Rome |

even their organization. Their public meetings or clubs were held in cafes, the intimate or clandestine activities carried out by the leaders alone in certain locations individuals. Each club or venue had one.

worse, or lower below him, of in the way that the first one brought together the elite of the society, while the latter, where they were committed abominable crimes and execrable sacrileges, "IT TOUCHED THE LIMITS OF HELL."

Bresciani adds: "Within Europe, he There exists a shadowy society that animates and inspires all secret societies and their perf- projects of the*, "

1 V. Secret Societies, etc., vol. III, p. 154. The Week religious leader of Grenoble, quoted [Univers of August 30th, reports and guarantees a particularly remarkable fact of the diabolical intervention in the Fr.*.-Mag.:., of which the RP Jandel was one of the actors and the hero.

2 If we are to believe Father P. Martin, Chaldea would be Even today, a center of cabal that would radiate outwards... than in Europe. Tribes called Jesidis, or Shamanites, having a cabalistic and entirely satanic religion and cult inhabit this region; they extend into Mesopotamia,

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 715

Done through the Jews and the ca-

1 such a bale of which they are the doctors, Satan inspires and Nor does he direct the entire Freemasonry. Since Their decide, the Jews, became the instrument nt teal all special of Satan. Our Lord, even x Re, before his passion, already called them "children of the "By the devil, you are the devil on your father's side; and after his" 'Neal crime, the Pharisee and his descendants were named- "rt mes by the divine Savior in the Apocalypse to two it ul different reprises, "Synagogue of Satan, Syna- Let goga Satanæ, that is, Church of the Devil. In In this church, the devil has always been worshipped. While that he was driven from this world and stripped of his ancient honors and that one after the other the pagan nations rejected his yoke and adhered-

still secretly maintained a cult of ministers and followers, among Kabbalistic Jews and sects

I'll tell you jetties
eriin

rope, i nn |
spay

'Ia Media; Kurdistan and the Sinjar Mountains; and their population would reach "the figure of several million." This people Kabbalist would have "temples in one of the largest capitals" tales of northern Europe. » Their supreme leaders have an auto-

Semin
– ignedlet

absolute piety: they are obeyed blindly. They transmit their kB!) orders by means of subordinate leaders; "it is even probable that, through mysterious ramifications, their orders reached Ise en nent to the most remote extremities of Asia and perhaps rill" | of Europe" (Chaldea, historical sketch, etc., by pani, ranigue'

total

Father P. Martin, chaplain of Saint-Louis des Français at Rome, 1867. – See The Jew, note VI, p. 550 et seq.).

meee thinks A eh nee ie a cI

716 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

heretics who practiced Kabbalah. "This mys-
"A realm of iniquity" began with the Church, from the very beginning time of apostolic preaching, as well as we Saint Paul taught it. For centuries this tienne, in separate sections, most often unknowablenaked to each other. But now we we see Satan working successfully right before our eyes to restore the unity and catholicity of his Church. He He models his work on that of Jesus Christ. He is, according to Tertullian's words, "the counterfeiter and the

"Ape of God." "It's the organization of societies
"secret," said the Protestant and Freemason...
"Verti Haller, who gave me a glimpse of the Church"
"Catholic long before having it, not only-
"Entirely embraced, but even studied." Parosignificant assets.

All these ideas and facts, by means of whose reign Satan strives to re-establish of the past, and which we have just studied, a therefore it was very aptly called "the Revolution," that is to say, going back (volvere retro). Because He wants to go back eighteen centuries.

Nam mysterium jam operatur iniquitatis" (II ad Thessal.,
I, 7).
2 V. The Jew of Verona, p. 35 et seq.

| cr,

"132, i
isl ju!

Sea | ges
ietie A joy

wind,

nant |
with sls

1 Ex]

has

to bring us back. Pius IX solemnly did so.
affirmed in his encyclical of December 8, 1849'.

So that the Jews command and lead the Freemasonry and secret societies, its branches
ches, to arrive at the same point as the possession of Judea and to the domination of the world, and Satan of his
on the one hand, inspires and directs the Jews to rebuild by them and by the sectarians of occultism his ancient empire over all the peoples of the earth.

Such is the final and ultimate goal towards which, without Let her know, the entire Freemason walks
nonsense.

1 See above.

eea- aat ee à mu

CHAPTER THREE

CONTINUATION OF THE FIRST VISION OF THE FIRST TROM-PETTE: ITS APPLICATION TO FREEMASONRY.

My readers have had the patience to read this a very long study, albeit abridged, on Freemasonry. The documents that support it.
are irrefutable: they know it. They have given
Now, before our eyes, is the real object, in my opinion.
of the symbolic prophecy of Saint John.

Let them compare the two terms, the figure prophetic and the thing foretold, and let them judge!
I ask them to reread the exegetical explanation of this first vision with which I began (Chapter I") and to try the interpretation themselves tion before going any further in this reading. I am convinced that the abbreviated symbol of the Apoca-

a perfect reduction of this great heresy contemporary Freemasonry, and that they will fully subscribe to the interpretations and
The following explanations.
As Catholics, we are all unanimous in

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 749

to believe that Satan, the father of lies, is the author of all heresies, first indirectly by the lesser demons, his instruments, in waiting-while he comes in person to inspire the last-recent mistakes and lead the final battles against the Church.

For many years the four angels cursed ones, mentioned in verses 14 and 15, have not had no harmful effect except within the limits of the countries watered by the Euphrates. They were chained there.
without being able to act beyond that. They had their slaves among Muslim peoples and in the former heretics; and there especially they maintained chosen loyalists among the followers of the cabal magic. Divine power would not allow that they could spread their particular malice beyond these regions in an effective and general. But they were ready for the hewre, the day, the mows and the year, that is to say, for this very precise moment when, through a multiple combination of favorable circumstances, would find itself pre-paved the way for their future successes among the people Christians and among Catholics.

The eighteenth century arrives. In its early
In years the appointed times are fulfilled.
Four main circumstances, arising from errors

720 Freemasons and Jews.

Protestant, Gallican, Jansenist and philosophicalphiques, disposed minds and hearts to all the revolts, all the absurdities, all excesses.

At that precise moment, the cup of justice
The divine is full: it overflows, The sixth age begins. The four demons of the Euphrates are the whole earth. Their first action focused on these secret societies, on which they had already a special power because of their origins and their initiation into the Kabbalistic mysteries. The pagans and religious leaders of the East and of Chaldea. more important in terms of the number and quality of its members was then the Freemasonry temple. It was she whom these spirits of darkness, like the particular instrument with which, thanks to the support of the Protestants, of the Gallicans, Jansenists, and philosophers, they were going to act in a terribly effective way on both hemispheres. That's why we let us see, at the beginning of the eighteenth century, Templar Freemasonry takes developments surprising things, receiving considerable forces, to join all the secret societies, old and new, and form this power

— m7.

N SRE DR. Gin SSS a D, o- SSE gl

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 721

,

occult, formidable to the Church, that history so general in the latter half of the eighteenth century.

If we historically search for the origin first of this new power hostile to God, we are always forced to go to Chaldea and to the Euphrates countries to find its point of departure, as demonstrated by the previous-

tooth chapter. We need to go back to the four cursed angels, up to the Jewish cabalistic and diabolical, to know its supreme direction; because Freemasonry is satanic in its principle as well as in its actions; We have proven it, and the Apocalypse had already shown it to us.

Now that we know the current number of members of Freemasonry and its branches, twenty to thirty million and perhaps more, the figure apocalyptic of two hundred million does not us will seem even more inexplicable. There would be nothing e-amazing & what, since the beginnings of eighteenth century until the end of the nineteenth sixth and probably beyond, the grand total members of Freemasonry and societies The secret sums amounted to a round two hundred. millions of followers. The Apocalypse would teach us

| 41

722 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

thus the exact number of victims of this heresy.

But since the Holy Spirit has not revealed this in-such precise dication that for this heresy alone, It is possible that there is some other mystery. In our time the Catholic Church counts approximately around two hundred million faithful. That's the figure the highest it has reached so far Wouldn't the Holy Spirit have wanted to teach us that heresy, which began and reigned in the sixth age, would she too one day reunite, in the seventh age Is it possible to believe an equal number of supporters? And Wouldn't this provide us with some preliminary data? curious about how the major projects will be implemented End-times prophecies? Two hundred million of freemasons on earth, two hundred million

devotees of Satan among men, show very possible and will make the United Empire very easy versel of the Antichrist.

The Lamb's intervention in this vision (verse 13) gave us a glimpse of this new heresy would give rise to empires and governments extremely hostile to the Church. Then the appearance of the symbol, in the sense already demonstrated and determined, the rider and the horse, one and The other, clad in breastplates, came to us to learn that this heresy would be in itself

ene nn ae

FREEMASONS AND JEWS, 723

constituted in the form of government, which would have supporters in all civilized countries read from Europe, Asia and America, and that, through a series of supreme leaders, it would rule from one end of the world to the other; that she would act everywhere like an army, and an army of cavalry, with its generals, its officers, its battle plan, instructions, unity and speed action. However, in the previous study, we has been proven that the Fr.*.-Mac.-. is constituted in the form of a powerful and centrist government tralisateut, entirely independent of the government-external nement of each nation, possessing all the administrative mechanisms employed at- Today, modern states; that the Great The Easts are linked to each other by their dependence from a superior East, supreme power from which The entire Freemasonry depends on it, which thus forms an immense empire in the world and almost universal. This supreme power has been exercised by secretive leaders who succeeded one another From the eighteenth century to the present day: Under their impetus and by their orders, the Mason-nerie has seized control of the government-tale in many countries; it has worked and works still now like a vast army, receiving the order everywhere and executing the prescribed attack plan against the Church and against Christian society. Contemporary events... showed and explained to us what the past century without fully understanding it.

724 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Nothing is as striking as the details of the symbol. compared with the real object.

These monstrous, lion-headed animals, at horse's body and snakes' tail, reproduced It displays all the salient and distinctive features of France. Freemasonry in general, of each lodge in particular-

Freemasonry is, in fact, composed of the gathering of different kinds of men into one only moral body. It is first and foremost a quantity of ambitious men so well represented by their heads of a lion. These men want to achieve honors and to power. Freemasonry uses it to the fulfillment of some of his plans. They are put forward by the supreme leaders. They have a certain appearance: through them Freemasonry stupidity shows itself in its least displeasing light-advantageous. Secondly, we see in the sect of men symbolized by the body of horse, men whom the chief masons call themselves "narrow-minded, simpletons, buzzards," incapable,

e E Se À SR rr

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 725

"quibus non est intellectus," good only for to increase numbers, provide resources and procure of consideration for the order through their wealth and Their social position. They are the dupes, the herd countless in Freemasonry. Finally, this horrible tails of snakes raising their heads and who bite, depicted in a wonderfully-these men are simply "pernicious and harmful" who form the tail end of Freemasonry, this tail that we know so well and which so often embarrasses ambitious lion-headed people. They call themselves Carbonari, Internationalists, Communards, socialists, nihilists, "who do harm" in murdering, stealing, pillaging, burning, and who the whole of society, the Church and France-The masonry itself was completely destroyed.

When Freemasonry wants to be seen and To show off, she first presents her lion's head: the FF.: presidents, ministers, senators, deputies-chiefs, prefects, councilors of all kinds, etc., all the crowd of ambitious people, sated or ready to feed, my-a rather good-looking figure: seen from a distance, the lion has a few majestic graces. Without too much repugnance, she then brings her horse's body; but most of the time she would want to hide her snake tails, whose heads would gladly be cut off

726 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

if she could. But the Jewish horseman and his successors-- their sisters keep the three hideous ones firmly united pieces of their horrible mount. Sitting on I horse, they lead the lion's head by the bridle and the bit, and with the snakes of the tail 'they
They "harm" when they want and how they want.
for the accomplishment of their secret designs.
And just as a horse can only feel its rider and would not be able to see his face when he carries on his back, likewise the Freemasons of all species, from the head, the body and the tail, feel their supreme leader well through obedience-- absolute certainty that oaths impose upon them,
But they don't see it and they will never know it.

Each lodge forms a Freemasonry in miniature.

The symbol must therefore be able to apply equally-- mentaces groups maconniques. Eten effetilrepre-- also sense their composition. The lion's head symbolizes Bolise, this ambitious bourgeois, for himself or for the
his own, in order to place a son or a nephew, or to become mayor, councillor or member of parliament, is done affiliate with an abortion. The horse is this wise man stupid and vain people are brought into the lodge.
less for his person than for his fortune.
It was of Jui that Weishaupt said: "He is a
"You bunch of idiots, you mustn't tell them."

C. Ee 0 a
S aa

Freemasons and Jews. 797

"because we can derive some advantage from their
"Folly, without having wit, they at least have
"coins,... they are numerous and fill the "Cash register," And Piccolo-Tiger: "This vanity of the the urban dweller and the bourgeois to become subservient to France
"Freemasonry has something so banal and so

"Before human stupidity." The serpent tail Pentagon represents the more advanced Freemasons, belonging to the back rooms. These are the initiates.
which Nubius speaks of, which must be "always"
ready to love, to be unknown, and to be counted
"For nothing." Perverse and hypocritical men, who do not put themselves forward like the head of lion, but who, in silence, like the gerpents that stare and fascinate their prey, observe and study in the symbolic lodge each of seg

members, turn them over and over, guess

their inclinations and tendencies, and direct towards the secret society those whom they deem mature and

L 2

worthy*. » The venerable master of the lodge is the ca-

valiant who leads this mount.
This prolific JR still depicts the frank-

1 Secret Papers, letter from Nubius to Volpe. See the Roman Church.
Maine, etc., t II, p. 113.
2 Letter from Piccolo-Tigre, ibidem, p. 105.

728. FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

So E, ea

Freemasonry in particular, from a moral standpoint. We we hasten to say that there is however honor-there are exceptions. But, generally speaking, the French-Freemason of all degrees and all branches,
this heretic of the sixth age, reproduced exactly,
in his moral character, the principal vices symbolized by the beast with a lion's head, body of _ horse and snake tail. He is swollen with pride;
It cannot be otherwise, since the Mason-

Freemasons are above all other men
my, that they are the gods of the earth. His submissivesion to its known and unknown leaders is blind, servile, passive, like that of a horse that obeys to the brake and the spur. He is a liar, a slandererdeceitful and hypocritical, especially towards the Church,
like the ancient serpent, its true
master; and like the serpent in the emblems Gnostic and Masonic is also the symbol of impurity, most of the time the Freemason
is just a real rascal.

Finally, the apocalyptic symbol has put under the
In the eyes of Christians, long before all the _ means of action that have been used, and that are being used even today this abominable heresy of Freemasonry. | Í

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 729

We learned that she was essentially violent, which she used to achieve her ends violence of all kinds, that she was absolutely imperative lument and demanded of its followers a servile and unquestioning obedience: the mason has there was only one thing to do: receive the password and to carry out the instruction; that she practiced the men-dreams and hypocrisy in all their forms,
and finally, that she taught all kinds of errors,
dogmatic, social and moral.

But by recalling the explanation already given of these monstrous animals, we see that the
The lion, an angry and terrible animal, symbolizes violence.
and domination; that the horse is an emblem of servility and passive submission; that the ser. pent figure lies and hypocrisy, and for last and most characteristic trait, of the bou-
One of these beasts emerged from the fire, the smoke and of sulfur, which are the expressive symbol of the er-dogmatic, social, and moral rebel. We we are convinced that no heresy has had "the power of the mouth, that is to say, of speech, like Freemasonry, and none of them taught omitted the error in such a radical and universal way saddle. We know that today it tends to with all her strength, and she will arrive everywhere, God willing.

does not stop him from seizing the monopoly on teaching movement. She wants the world to no longer hear no other word than his own and through his doctrines all future generations should be trained in his image.

Let us also note that Freemasons are the worshippers of fire, which is the God of the Freemason-nonsense, and that the figure of the serpent often recurs in the practices and emblems of their ancestors very, and finds itself as a symbolic object in their boxes.

These awful beasts killed "the third part of men. It is, alas, all too true that, Among Catholic peoples, Freemasonry caused the supernatural death of a very great many men, by taking away their faith. Our fathers They saw it in the eighteenth century; we have seen it and we see it in this century, many men my, without being affiliated in any way with the Freemasonry, have lost faith and all pra-religious tic, as a result of the errors it-pand in all classes of society, by means of speech, and especially of speech im-Award-winning, bad books and newspapers.

We still know these "other men" who "were not killed" by the Freemason laughter, and who have no faith. They are very numerous. also in the sixth age.

First the idolaters; in the nineteenth century, There are men who, outside of Freemasonry- they worship demons; they are the spiritists. J] There are especially countless populations- still pagan in central Asia, in India, China, Japan, in America, in Africa that, in the islands of Oceania, and among which our missionaries, despite all their zeal and their perseverance, dedication and zeal, have achieved little success to date.

And among the non-idolaters, how many Jews, of Muslims, heretics, and bad Catholics guess'abandonent, during this sixth period, without remorse or repentance, "to the murders, to poisonings, fornication, theft, » to all crimes! Crime statistics are one of the sadly convincing proofs of this.

cantes.

It is therefore an indisputable truth that, in the tenth-eighth century and especially in the nineteenth century, The Catholic Church is surrounded by enemies of all kinds. sides. They are inside as well as outside of Catholic society, which is under furious attack in almost every region of the earth.

732 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Finally, all our inductions are confirmed by current events.

In our time, humanity finds itself in a state unknown to past centuries. Through relations commercial, by electricity and steam, the The most distant peoples are linked to each other others. The inhabitant of Europe and America, and now also, recently, Japanese and the Chinese people can, every morning, by means of the journal, reviewing the entire globe and knowing, a few days or a few weeks in advance, the contemporary history of all countries of the globe.

Thus, the Church, thanks to persecution, is More Catholic and better known than ever.

Physical afflictions accompanied as always the new heresy. The horrors of the

The great French Revolution belongs to him directly. She fueled and encouraged the wars. of the Republic and the First Empire. A statistic- The German centenarian published the toll in terms of human losses. my, not counting material losses. According to my in Europe during the wars of 1792 to 1815

was five million five hundred thirty dollars (5,530,000). Which gives for the twenty-three years-born on average two hundred and forty thousand

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 733

| four hundred and thirty-four per year (240,434). (See de World, July 28, 1866).

Since that time, as heresy
the plagues are increasing in number and influence physical phenomena are multiplying and spreading across the world entire.

"The various wars that have afflicted Europe"
"from the year 1815 until 1864 caused the | "death of two million seven hundred and sixty-two

| "One thousand men (2,762,000). This figure does not include
"I don't understand the deaths caused by epidemics."
"resulting from the war" (same statistician).

This scholar does not speak of the wars that took place place in America during this interval, among which-
It is important to note the American Civil War and that of Mexico. Since 1864, Europe has undergone the war between Prussia and Austria, between France and Prussia, the civil war of the Paris Commune, the war between Russia and Turkey. In America risk the republics and monarchies of the South are still clashing with each other. How many victims for sixteen years! The war really decimated both parts of the world on which Freemasonry developed the most.

We cannot say anything about the crimes committed during the sixth age against life and property

134 FREEMASONS AND JEWS,

particular. This crime statistic, moreover Furthermore, Jamable would take us too much time.

As for the other scourges, it must be acknowledged that from the middle of this century, they strike
relentlessly across all parts of the globe.

Christian nations are punished by inon-

short intervals, by terrifying fires which destroy entire cities, through deterioration ration and the increasing decrease in food supplies the most precious foodstuffs. For their part, the Infidel peoples are punished for their resistance

}–
'Professor

ela
in
years |
1st
D
ati

By

to grace, and by cyclones, by uprisings

elements of the land and sea, which cause the death of hundreds of thousands of people at a time, and on-all due to terrible famines.

Arabia, Algeria, Persia, India, China
offered a disheartening spectacle. China, so rebellious to Jesus Christ, sees his provinces decimated
one after the other. At the beginning of the year-born in 1879, twenty-three million inhabitants were dead, either from hunger or from the plague. And the fa-
The mine and the plague have not yet ceased!!

See Liturgical Week of the Diocese of Puitiers, excerpt from a letter addressed to the Union by Mr. Marle of Brest, procu-Father of the Franciscan missionaries, in Paris. – Sunday, March 9

1879.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 735

Currently (September 1880), under the direction

the detestable Masonic heresy and under the guise of...

,

p3

$
1,

Thanks to its teachings, Europe is moving forward towards civil and social wars, and towards wars of peoples and peoples, before which

-all struggles and all concussions will fail
policies of previous ages.

_ Æxsurgat Deus!

CHAPTER FOUR

SECOND VISION OF THE SIXTH TRUMPET. TRIOM:
PHE OF TRUTH. TIME OF REST FOR THE CHURCH P
BEFORE HIS FINAL BATTLES.

The visions of the first five trumpets did not contain only the single picture of the an- heresy announced, after which the prophet describes a new-
A great trial for the Church. The Holy Spirit seemed meaning to indicate that, in those times,
For external matters, God's ordinary help is sufficient.
They knew the Church was there to support the fight.

But in the sixth age, the attacks prevail. 4
in proportion to past attacks; it will therefore have;
need for very special divine assistance.
That is why the sixth trumpet includes | two visions. The second of these visions will nou y learn that God will come to the aid of his Church 0
in an extraordinary way.

The interpretation of this vision, which belongs more in the future than in the present, a serious offer: , some comparisons. However, following v always the same method, that is to say, in exa-

|

|

'FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 137

—

mining the symbols very closely and using to similar passages in the Bible for the
to explain, we hope to understand pretty much exactly what the Holy Spirit wanted prophesy.

SIXTH TRUMPET

INTERPRETATION OF THE SECOND VISION
(Revelation, chapters X and XI)

C. x, v. 1. Et vidi alium Cx, v.4. And I saw another angelum fortem descenden- strong angel, descending from heaven, tem de ccelo, amictum nube, clothed in a cloud; and a bow-and iris in capite ejus; and facies en-ciel was on his head, and his ejus erat ut sol, and pedes ejus face was like the sun, tanquam columnæ ignis; and his feet like co-

| lonnes de feu;

2. Et habebat in manu sua? And he had in his hand libellum apertum, and there followed a small open book, and he placed pedem suum dextrum super his right foot on the sea and the mare, sinistrum autem super left on the earth;
terram ; | | mo

3. And he cried out in a great voice, 3. Then he cried out in a great voice quemadmodum quum leo ru- forte', as when a lion git. And quum clamasset lo- roared. And when he had cried out, cuta sunt septem thundered seven thunders sounded
voces suas. their voices.

738 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

seven thunderous voices, their res had made their heard eco scripturus eram; and au- voix, moi j'allais écrire; mais divi vocem de cælo dicentem from heaven I heard a voice
mihi: Signa que locuta sunt telling me: Seal what has septem tonitrua, and noli ea said the seven thunders and ne scribere. ~ don't write it.

5. And the angel whom I had seen stantem super mare and super standing on the earth terram, levavit manum suam and on the sea, raised his hand
ad celum, towards heaven,

6. Et juravit per vivem 6, And swore, by Him who lives in sæcula sæculorum, quicrea- in the centuries of centuries, lives cælum et ea que in eo who created the sky and what it contains sunt, and mare etea quæ in eo tenu, and the sea and what it sunt ; quia tempus non erit contains: that there will be amplius. no more delay from now on,

1 I am translating according to the original Greek text. The translation of the Vulgate: "there will no longer be any time," is incorrect.
In the Greek text, the word translated as "tempus" is the subse tantif ypdvoç. However, this word does not have the meaning of "time"
In contrast to "eternity," it means "length of time."
and consequently "delay." Hence the true meaning is this: there is no will have more time, there will be no more delays.
That is to say; God will grant no more respite to the guilty world, he will no longer keep his Church waiting for help and triumph
the final one that he had promised him through the prophets.

The following verse, 7, proves that this is the true meaning. For, if "Tempus" was translated as "time," with this meaning.
tion that time will cease, that the world will end and eternity will begin, this verse 7 would no longer have any connection with the preamble yields; it would even contradict him. Verse 6.

would predict that time will end, and verse 7 would announce bad news.
Despite this, there will still be "days," times by Consequently, during which God will complete the fulfillment

7. Sed in diebus vocis sep- 7, But that in the days
Timi Angeli, quum cceperit of the voice of the seventh angel, tuba canere, consummabitur when he has to sound the mysterium Dei, sicut evange- trumpet, will be fulfilled on lizavit per servos suos pro- mystery of God, as he Phetas announced it through his servants

the prophets t.

oe

2a FREEMASONS AND JEWS. . 139

=

The verses are very well linked together: they offer a very coherent meaning.

clear and closely monitored: there will be no more delays, because at the time of | the seventh trumpet, on the days marked by the seventh trumpet
God will accomplish all his mysterious designs, etc...

Therefore, Father Drack rightly says: "Tempus non erit"

"amplius; these words should not be understood in the sense that the p time will cease, that is to say the world will end; but

"That the fulfillment of God's threats, the hour of his His punishments will soon follow, the time of his patience and

_"from its support have passed, as is formally stated

_"in the following verse" (Apocalypse, in hoc loco, p. 107).

The Greek text, which is the original – we must not forget that – corroborates this interpretation and shows that "she is the only one true. He bears: Ore ypôvos oux ere fatxt, By giving

| In the word xpeves meaning "time," it is necessary to translate, according to the . genius of the Greek language: wn time will be no more; for there is no

'4a no article before XP0V0r; which means nothing. It is necessary therefore taking on another meaning of this word. Now, as in
This is evidenced by the dictionaries of Henri Etienne and Planche,

| xp ov0ç means still temporis diuturnitas seu longin-

| quitas, hence, also: delay. The translation then gives meaning easy and acceptable: a delay will no longer be a length of Time will no longer be a factor: there will be no more delays or delay. The derivatives of 1p2v06 confirm this meaning.

We only cite those used in the New Testament:

Moram autem faciente sponso: xpoviGovraç dé rù vuppiou.

Matth., XXV, 9 – Moram facit À ominis meus: ypoyiterc ò xupiog louse. Matth., XXIV, 48 and Luke, x11, 45. – Quod" tardaret psein templo: éy tö xpovičewv autov éy ta Ix, Luke, 1, 21. –

at non tardabit : xai ou yowst. Ad Hæbr., x, 37.

| gadsiverv, also means "when he has to ring the bell"

mm

~

740 FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 4

8. Et audivi vocem de cælo 8, And I heard the voice which iterum loquentem mecum and from heaven spoke to me again, `
dicentem: Vade et accipeli- and said to me: Go, and take born brum apertum de manu an- open book by the hand of geli stantis super mare and su- the angel who stands on per terram. the sea and on land. has

9. Et abii ad angelum, di- 9. And I went to lange, ti" cens ei ut daret mihi librum. saying to give me the book. has Et dixit mihi: Accipe librum And he said to me: Take the book ° et devora illum, et facietama- and devour it; and he will talk to you ricari bellum tuum, sed in bitterness in the belly, nor ore tuo erit dulce tanquam but in your mouth he has

HAS

mel. sweet as honey,

10. Et accepi librum de 10. And I took the book of the manu angeli et devoravi il- hand of the angel, et je le dé"
lum: et erat in ore meo tan- vorai; et il était dans ma
quam mel dulce; et quum de- bouche doux comme du miel,
vorassem eum amaricatus est etwhen I had devoured it, mo
venter meus. ventre sensed bitterness.

11. And dixit mihi: Oportet 11. And he said to me: It is necessary that) te iterum prophetare genti- tu prophesétiziste a re-emer ...
buses and populis and linguis, and many nations, of little-|?
regibus multis. ples, tongues and kings. 'J

C. xt, v. 4. Et datus est C.x1, v. 1. Et un roseau me mihi calamus similis virgæ, and was given, like a dictum est mihi: Surge, and verge, and it was said to me: Lived metire templum Dei, et al- toi, and measure the temple of!
'tare, and adorantes in eo. God and those who worship there. !

:

trumpet" that "when he starts to sound the trumpet-
"Pette." The first translation harmonizes better with the meaning.
general of both verses 6 and 7. , |

Læ .

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. TAI

2. Atrium autem, quod est 2. As for the court which is [foris templum, ejice foras: before the temple, place it yet ne metiaris illud, quoniam côté, parce il a été aban-
"datum est gentibus, et ci- donné aux gentils: et ils fouvitatem sanctam calcabunt will lay under the feet of the holy city mensibus quadraginta duo- for forty-two months.

"bus.

3. And dabo duobus testibus 3. And I will give to my meis, and prophetabunt diebus two witnesses to prophesy thousand ducentis sexaginta, for one thousand two hundred amicti saccis..... sixty days, clothed in,
Lies Ds ere HS Hi Sie etes +7

| 14, Væ secundum abiit; and 14. The second misfortune is ecce væ tertium veniet cito. pass; here is the third | will come soon.

>

C. x, v. 1. And I saw another mighty angel. This "Angel is not a prophetic figure. It is" one of the angels that we see depicted in the permanent vision of chapters IV and V, which saint John often names the sky. The angels in the A-Apocalypse are only the ministers of the revelation and not symbolic types of man-my prophesied ones. Saint John told us at the beginning-beginning of his vision that Jesus Christ had given it to him had "signified," "mittens per angelum," "the showing him by his angel, that is to say by the inintermediary of his angels.

149 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

In visions where angels appear and act-

What qualifications are given to them, what attributes

They carry out what actions they perform; for these are,

so many symbolic details through which The Holy Spirit wants to reveal the future through the inter-the angels' placement. Now this angel is "descendant of the sky, » « strong, » « clothed in a cloud, » « a rainbow-
"sky above his head," "his face is like the sun"
and his feet like pillars of fire." Etulet's say these symbols.

I. Saint John sees the angel "descending from heaven on Earth." Obviously we don't need explanations to understand that this symbolic act
bolique announces God's intervention in favor of the Church. Divine help will be powerful and all In particular, the angel coffee is described as "strong." This
The expression is only found in three places from the Book of Revelation and in circumstances where,
According to the text, God acts or prepares to act.
in a particular way, against the works of Satan. The first time was in the vision per-fhanente: "Uh, angel is strong!" asked everyone creation if there is any creature capable of rom-to break the seals of the book and open it; the second

1 Ap., v, 2. Et vidi angelum fortem prædicantem, etc.

€
$

:
1
e

t

iS Te

—

I saw another strong angel, a second strong angel. The
| The third time is when a "strong" angel, sa-
| sizing a large millstone, throws it into the sea;
symbolic gesture that marked the total ruin of Babylon, that is to say, the city of evil 1. We we also know that the messenger angel of the great
- the mystery of the incarnation is called Gabriel, name | which means: God's strength. The action of Diana con-
i» between the enemies of the Church at a marked thoment
, of the sixth age will therefore be strong and astonishing.
He. But the angel, as its first attribute, is "clothed in a cloud. This cloud serves him as a
- clothing and veil. The face, the hands, the
- only the angel's legs and feet are to be cut out
* green. |
"In the Bible, 'the cloud' conceals divine majesty"
* in the eyes of men. God, whose garment © ost la lumiere, "amictus lumine sicut vestimento,"
| was enveloped in a cloud at Mount Sinai; he speaks of the
* within a cloud on Mount Tabor, etc. The angel, being 'clothed in a cloud, therefore represents to us an in-intervention in which the Lord will hide in
- part. This will be a clearly defined divine action,

| FRANGCS-MACONS AND FF 743
;

r fa Ap., xviii, 21. Et sustulit unus angelus fortis lapidem,-
| e Ce

744 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

but which will not deviate from the providential order.
God will act under the veil of events; the facts
will be such that we will not be able to help but re-to know the finger of God; but they will not miraculous, extraordinary events and ~ unusual, such as, for example, the mission of the two witnesses, announced in this very vision for the Seventh age.

A rainbow was over the swaddling cloth's head. The rainbow-
The rainbow is the symbol of peace and mercy.

no need to prove it. So it's a time of peace and rest which is promised to the Church.

His face was like the sun, and his feet like columns of fire. The word "column" indicates that the words "his" should be understood as meaning "his" feet, "not only the feet, but the legs and part of the thighs. Several other passages of Scripture bear the same word, "foot," with this broader meaning than its literal sense. The face of the angel and the entire lower part of His body was therefore luminous. This angel is a messenger of light; he brings to mankind the divine light, which is the light of truth. This The symbol signifies that divine intervention is taking place. will be revealed through a great outpouring of truth. Its lu-

]

my

=

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 745

od

The first [event] will be imposed on everyone; it will be irresistible.

This is the general meaning of the symbol. The means which God will use to spread and make accepted These signs of this light of truth are indicated in The vision in these two ways: firstly, through the profound meaning of the angel's attributes, and second- demented by the symbolic actions he will take.

The angel is clothed with a cloud, and he has a bow a rainbow above the head. The rainbow cannot to appear only on the clouds; therefore, in The vision of this cloud was to extend somewhat at least above the angel's head, so to give rise to the appearance of the rainbow. This the cloud obviously had only a mediocre extent due.

But the cloud is not only the symbol of a veiled divine operation; the Holy Fathers in also created the prophetic figure of the Virgin Mary! Now in the vision the cloud carries the rainbow-

1 The Holy Fathers and commentators apply to Mary what we read in the 3rd Book of Kings, chapter 18, verse 44: "Ecce nubecula parva, quasi vestigium hominis, ascendebat de mari..."
"Behold, a very small cloud appeared, as big as the step of a man, rising from the sea." On this passage, the scholar Commentator Gaspard Sanchez put it this way: "In hac nube S. Joannes, episcopus Hierosolymitanus, agnoscit Beatam Virginem; and ex nubis proprietate, quæ ascendens ex mari amaro,
nihil tamen india traxit amaritudinem, sine ulla macula ortam

49

146 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

heaven. From then on, the angel, surrounded by this attribute, signified:
fictional, a cloud carrying a rainbow, wouldn't it have not its mission to symbolically announce to Saint John, that is to say, the Church represented by the apostle, that the first divine intervention, the First aid from above will come directly to him of the Virgin Mary, that, the promised peace, she will owe it to Mary, that it is Mary who will bring it to him?
In this century, famous and undeniable appearances
The findings of the Virgin TS seem to confirm this interpretation. Never at any other time of
In the history of the Church, the Mother of God has not been so much preoccupied with her children, in an outward manner
the visible, that in this sixth age. We know-its appearance in Paris in 1830, which has earned the miraculous medal of the Virgin conceived without sin; that of La Salette, in 1846, which... it invited repentance and a change of life; that of Lourdes, in 1858, which was named the Immaculate Conception
the Conception, and who, by repeating his invitation

"esse dicit, etc." - "In this cloud, Saint John, bishop of Jerusalem, recognizes the Blessed Virgin; and according to the pro-
the privacy of the cloud which, rising from the bitter waves, carries nothing away From their bitterness, he concluded that she was born without any ta-che » (Comment in lib. I11 Reg. hoc loco, 2 ed. Migne, t:
col. 1147). - Saint Epiphanius calls Mary: "Nubes lucida," luminous cloud (Orat. de laudibus S. Mariæ. deiparæ. V. Office

ad

- my

> wm nn $ RE Bes 5

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 747

ee uen re + aae

At the penitence ceremony, she smiled upon us; that of Pontmain, in 1871, which heralded the end of our misfortunes; the appearances of Prussia, Poland and Ireland in recent years, etc.; the numerous miracles of healing and conversion that operate in these various places blessed by the presence of Mary. Furthermore, in this special inspiration that determined the Saint Pontiff Pius IX to define the dogma of the immaculate conception of the Mother of God, in this unanimous acclaim and this universal enthusiasm with which the Church welcomed this truth; in this extraordinary and unexpected movement of the crowds who are resuming their old habits of the pilgrimages, interrupted for so long, there is no- Isn't this a clear act of divine intervention? Isn't it? also divine intervention and a whole series of Powerful help from above? And at the same time Hasn't the world received an admission over time? A worthy outpouring of light and holiness? For the most men, it is true, this light and This action of God through Mary is obscured and veiled as if by a cloud, as had predicts the symbol of the Apocalypse. They don't want not to recognize them, or, rather, they are at this hour, because of the darkness spread by the error of Masonic, unable to recognize them. But the time will come when the light, as we know it, will shine.

748 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

-_— + +

will still take the vision, will inevitably make itself seen and will shine brightly in eyes today, confess-either deliberately closed or deliberately closed. For us, the faithful
As Catholics, we see and we understand.
Also, borrowing from the eloquent bishop of Geneva's graceful metaphor, we can to say that, from 1830 to the present day, the very miserable-
The Virgin Mary, under the gaze of the attentive and moved Church, a magnificent rainbow-sky, omen of triumph and peace. There are ten-Eight centuries ago, Saint John had seen above the
The head of the angel, this symbol of future mercies of the Mother of God.

These events and their dates teach us
moreover, the second vision of the sixth tromb-pette is not the strictly chronological sequence-than the first. These two visions, at a time-that which we can determine now, work in a parallel manner. It is at the moment when, in This century, the heresy of Jewish Freemasonry has... began to take its great and formidable de-developments, around 1830, which also began to to appear "the cloud bearing the rainbow," that is to say-

1. Speech by Bishop Mermillod, at the coronation celebration of Our Lady of La Salette, August 21, 1879. See Univers of August 27.

y *

= hk ie EE YP mn -

mah

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 749

to say that Marie intervenes and shows herself for the First time.

Since then, rescue efforts have always followed the progress—
The vision will prove it to us again.
The angel possesses a fourth attribute, which is entirely particular.

"And he had a small open book in his hand."

This book was open. This detail has a double meaning.
meaning, both true. In the sense own, an open book, is a book whose reading—
ture, or the composition has begun and is not
not yet completed; in a metaphorical sense,
It is a book that is not prophetic, or whose Intelligence presents no difficulty and is accessible accessible to all.

Several interpreters believe that this book is the even the one mentioned in the vision permanent, in chapters V and VI, and that the A—
"The lamb took it to open its seals. But the
The text makes too clear a distinction between these two books.
by two different words, so that we can
To confuse: The first is called: 6Atcv, leader,

1 The text does not say anywhere in whose hand the angel held the book. This detail was probably of no importance, since The Holy Spirit did not deem it appropriate to indicate it, while he has expressly distinguished the right foot and the left foot and that
The hand he raised to take his oath was his right hand.

42.

730 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

— ee

book, and the second, fr6xddorev, libellus, little book.

We believe that the Venerable Holzhauser has given the true interpretation, saying that this little book in the swaddling hand. was the pro—
Phetieth of the greatest and last of the councils, which would be held in the sixth age.' He added that this council would condemn atheism*. For this Lastly, the venerable interpreter had to receive—see some special prophetic inspiration, because

from which it can be inferred.

The angel descending from heaven, and holding in his hand a small open book, would therefore be a symbol designating

a second kind of divine help. At the sixth:

God would still assist his Church in one age another way, namely, by inspiring his vicar, the sovereign pontiff, to convene a general council despite the difficulties and concerns of this era and by making this a success bold company.

Here we have a major contemporary historical event. _poraine to serve as a point of support in this interpretation. An ecumenical council in

1. Interpretation of the Apocalypse by Barthélemy Holzhauser, translation by Canon de Wuilleret, 2nd ed. Paris, Louis Vives, vol. II, p. 6.

2 Ibid., volume Ie", page 189.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. -> 754 |

- es nee a - ae eee

2? In effect, it was convened and opened in 1869. It has

1 promulgated decrees, and the first is found

:: to be precisely the condemnation of atheism!

"This council is not finished; it is suspended; the

+ his book of decrees remains open, he awaits its continuation and its conclusion.

Holzhauser's prediction, it must be admitted,

+ is quite remarkable. Two hundred years ago

"It was humanly impossible to foresee the

the progress of atheism and its condemnation by a ecumenical council. I] It is therefore necessary that the venerable

; interpreter received regarding this great event

: a supernatural light.

The fulfillment of his prophecy is the : proof. From there, the interpretation he made of the , "little open book" receives, in our opinion, a

if great authority, if not complete certainty; for

A small book in the angel's hand would therefore be quite nice.
the symbolic prediction of the Vatican Council.
Moreover, as we have just seen, the symbol in PR is significant and applies very well to Vatican Council, which is not yet complete and of-open wall.
Certainly, one could not legitimately support-to say that Holzhauser was inspired in all his

752 FRANUS-MACONS AND JEWS.

interpretations of the Apocalypse. This is nothing-
This has been demonstrated and is highly debatable. One could even, with regard to the present point, to make a distinction-tion and to say: Holzhauser was indeed supernatural-enlightened to prophesy a high-level event of importance, a culminating event in a period of the Church, as this council seems to be the case
general who condemned atheism; but nothing clearly demonstrates that this is by virtue of the divine inspiration that he applied and adapted his prophecy about the Vatican's influence during the passage
The question of the Apocalypse. To announce that there will be in his sixth age a general council condemning

- Atheism is the act of the inspired prophet, but claiming that this prediction is contained within |

these words: "And the angel held in his hand a little
"Open book," that's the interpreter's personal idea.
prone to error, which applies pro- knowledge phetic to a passage from the Apocalypse in which The Holy Spirit may very well have put nothing into it.
similar. This reasoning has strength; we

-f *

it
i

f

e

has at least a very high probability that the divine light that illuminated him on one point also shed light on the other. Here are our reasons which address the previous difficulty.

tes to eea "TT

Tha

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 753

wee ee ee,

The Holy Spirit does not communicate light-

| prophetic statements without a motive of general interest

fire

=, ve

^^

| or individual. It is evident that this prophecy
"was not given solely for the needs spiritual matters of a few simple believers: it is of too high and too wide a scope. In

- this prediction of the council, Holzhauser was ins-

,worn for the good of the universal Church and part-particularly of the teaching church. This does not concern us
It seems undeniable. But it's not very clear.
What a great advantage the Church would have gained from this!

"if, like so many other private prophecies, it laugh

has

ms.
ur

had been created and preserved as a single, isolated text.
which constitutes its high value and all its interest,

– because it is embedded in an interpretation

e

*, of the Apocalypse, it is the precise place that it occupies

f in the work of the venerable writer. The Holy Spirit–
* Ya enlightened on the upcoming event of the council only | for what application and adaptation of this prediction

divine tion at the passage chosen by the pious interpreter
that it receives the greatest authority, the authority of a {perfect certainty. And this, with the aim of providing by this means to the Church, at such a time in its history, the most valuable insights into the book mysterious. And indeed, as a result of the accomplishment–

The interpretation of the prophecy, the interpretation of the passage

|

754 FRANCS–MACOVS AND JEWS.

ee

the wisdom in question, being recognized as obvious and certain– Taine, becomes like a bright lighthouse which lypse, but almost this entire book. Because it is-

It follows that we now possess a historical date-risk and an unassailable point of reference for the interpretation of this obscure book. We are certain that the second verse of chapter X: "And habebat (angelus) in manu sua libellum apertum, a announces a fait accompli now and which must:

to be registered for the years 1869 and following. Dela
It follows that the second vision of the sixth trom-Pette, where is this verse? Look closely at our time; that the first vision which precedes it appeared to him-also holds true, since it is understood under the sound of the same trumpet; that this sixth pro- trumpet, Phethism pervades our entire era. From then on, the great Masonic heresy that began in the eighteenth century, and which is at its peak today, is well symbolically predicted in the horrible ar-equestrian parade assembled by the four demons of the Euphrates. And as before, the Freemason-

nothing, there are no general heresies other than |

Protestantism, Abbot Lachétardie has indeed in-interpreted the vision -of the fifth trumpet, the swarm of grasshopper-scorpions, explaining it from

/

pi 0

has {el
p
N
ti

us

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 768

Protestantism and its thousands of sects. From Therefore, for the whole of the Apocalypse, we have insights that the interpreters could not have earlier, not even Holzhauser, although his

– interpretation and its fulfilled prediction we . provide. The division of the ages of the Church of–

It comes more safely and clearly. We are well.

–in the midst of the sixth age, the age of Masonic heresy–

that, age prophesied by the sixth trumpet and

The sixth epistle. Going back in time,

we find the fifth age, prophesied by

The fifth epistle, the fifth seal, and the fifth...

. the fifth trumpet, the age of Protestant heresy,

then the fourth age, the era of great power–

Ecclesiastical stance, the age also of the numerous heresies of the East and defection from unity

and in the faith of the unfortunate Greek Churches, prophesied by the fourth epistle, the fourth bucket, the fourth trumpet, etc., etc. And all These periods correspond perfectly, according to history.
history, with the divisions written by the Apocalypse;

'they are not arbitrarily cut from its text, like those given to us by several interpreters, Holzhauser himself. Finally, something extremely important, the Church learns that it is most certainly at this hour in its fore-

756 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

last period, already well advanced, and that the separation, that of the supreme battles, will soon come: væ tertium veniet cito.

III. This almost uninterrupted succession of Enlightenment and science had the most significant impact on the Church.

happy results. But at the same time, at the same time, at the same time 9

Taken by all these interventions of God, the world

did not want to receive the light; he did not convert. On the contrary, evil and the influence of The villains have grown. The power of heresy Masonic influence has increased in a frightening way. It seems that she is about to destroy the church and to dominate the entire universe. It is the immense painful pressure under which we had been left First vision. Will God be defeated? Are we—we have arrived at the time of the total triumph of the messengers? No. The rest of the second vision will to show us, in the symbolic actions of the angel, whom the Lord, after intervening according to mercy will intervene through the blows of its strength and its justice.

And the angel placed his right foot on the sea and his left foot on the ground.

LL.

{

Y

In Holy Scripture this phrase "to lay"

"foot on something" is used for si-to signify that this thing is completely submissive and

t

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 1917

tamed! This metaphor is also found in the language of all other peoples who, moreover,
through painting and sculpture, they made it a
a very clear and highly expressive symbol.

The luminous angel then places his two feet which shine with the brilliance of fire on the earth and on the sea, to show that in the sixth age he comes-will come a moment when the light of truth shines forth lera across the whole world and, for a certain Time will bring it under his control. The sea, through its upheavals and storms, . can symboliser the peoples most dominated by the he-Masonic resistance, and because of this the most revolutionary and the most restless. That's why-what the angel places his right foot on the sea, which is The strongest. He places his left foot on the ground, symbol of calmer peoples, because the Freemasonry is less powerful in their country.
Both sides will bow before the brilliance
of the truth.

What means will the Lord use to pro-
How to bring about such a wonderful change? Another
The symbolic action of the angel teaches us this.

– And he shouted in a loud voice, as when the

1 See Deuteronomy 32:29. – Joshua 10:24. – See the word Pes aa Dictionary of Sweet Philology, ed. Migne.

The lion roared; and when he had cried out, seven thunders sounded...
rent to hear their voices.

In the Old Testament, the prophets applied often use this figure of speech in the Sei-Lord: The Lord roars like a lion. Thus Jeremiah says: "Dominus de excelso rugiet, et de
"habitu suo dabit vocem suam: rugiens ru-
"giet super decorem suum": "The Lord
"will roar from heaven, and he will make his

"voice from the height of his holy dwelling; he will roar"

"like a lion against the place of his glory" (Jesus) Remia, 25, 30. See also Joel, 1, 16, etc.).

All interpreters agree to recognize that these expressions and others like them mean that God will exact a terrible revenge and to send terrible punishments upon men.
We also know that when the lion roars in the fo-
nets, all the other animals who hear it
They tremble with fear and remain silent. Amos said:
"Leo roars, quis non timebit?" The lion roars, which
"He will not be afraid?" (11, 8.) |

The symbolic act of the angel must have in the Aapocalypse has the same meaning as in the Old Testament Testament. Consequently, he announces that in the sixth

In the age the Lord will strike the enemies of the Church Horrific punishments. Upheavals.

ve

AS

events of all kinds, unforeseen by the politicians litigants and the wise men of the century, events unexpected, completely contrary to their plots and their calculations will suddenly terrify the enemies of the Church and Religion, overturn their plans from top to bottom and silence them and impotence. Then men will see clearly-in all these things the consequences of principles and practices of modern heretics questions. The truth will come out. We will strike each other.
chest; it will be understood that the Catholic Church
She alone possesses the divine wisdom to lead and to maintain peace among societies; that, without its documents Trines and its teachings, there can be neither respected authority, no possible government, nor stable order in the world, and that it is necessary-sail even to ensure peaceful possession material goods. So we will turn to her and towards his devoted sons, trembling lest he be Too late. Because what will happen will be such that we will re-will doubt the impending consequences of these misfortunes occurred as much as the misfortunes themselves.
These frightening consequences are marked by the echo that the voices of the seven thunders made to roars of the angel.

760 FREEMASONS AND JEW3,

The best interpreters say that when the A-Apocalypse speaks of thunder, voices, and lightning.
These expressions should be understood in the sense of a threat of punishment. "These voices (of the seven tons-
"The earth," said Father Drach, "announced the "misfortunes and expressed threats. This ac-
"It gains even more strength from what we read"
"in Book VI, Chapter X, of the Revelations of Saint
"Brigitte. This saint, as Cor-
"Neille Lapierre writes that having asked God
"What the seven thunders had said, he was told-
"they had made the most
"terrible against the persecutors of the Church" (Apoc., p. 106).

But the Lord will not strike until-complete truction. For this time again he scattered-will overcome the enemies of his Church, and will not destroy then entirely the city of evil whose ruin de-
The final stage will only take place later.

"And when the thunder had sounded"
their voices, I was about to write; but I heard a voice from heaven telling me: Seal the words of "Seven thunders, and don't write them down."

The order to seal the words of thunder does not does not mean that they will not comply, but

at

FREEMASONS AND JEWS: 761

that they are held in suspense and that they do not will only be accomplished later. It is in a in a similar sense to the fact that Daniel received a similar order-blable: "Tu autem, Daniel, claude sermones et "signa librum usque ad tempus statutum" (xu, 4 and 9). "But for you, Daniel, hold these
"close the walls and put the seal on the book"
until the appointed time, when they will be com-decisions will be made and will be accomplished.

I think the seven thunders correspond to the seven sections of chapters XV and XVI; and that the words they uttered were not at-very much than the announcement of these final punishments,
"septem plagas novissimas," the "last seven"
plagues, by which God will punish men of the seventh age and will begin the destruction of the city of evil, of the society of children of Satan.

The symbolic attribute that the angel carries, the bow-
in the sky, harmonizes with all this interpretation-tion: he predicts peace for the Church, and also for the world guilty. After terrible misfortunes, the punishment-
The ment will be suspended. The world, because of the E-
The church will still have days of peace and tranquility.
quality.

All these events belong to the future.

762 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

But the Holy Spirit takes care immediately

more expressively and with the utmost solemnity, that he will no longer have in front of him, as
In other eras, centuries of existence.

"And the angel I had seen standing on the sea and on the land, raised his hand towards the sky and swore by Him who lives forever and ever, who created the heavens and all that is in them, and the sea and all that it contains: THAT THERE WOULD NOT BE NO MORE DELAYS; but only in the coming days from the voice of the seventh angel, when he must ring
From the trumpet, the mystery of God will be accomplished.
as he announced through his servants the pro-pheles.

Thus this time of peace and rest is the last-
deny the delay granted by justice to mercy;
Once it's over, there will be no more delays.
for the works of divine justice; the seventh angel will have to sound the sound of this trumpet
small which will announce the final assaults of Satan, the last revolts of rebellious humanity and his recent complicity with the enemy of God,

the seventh and final age of the sinful world.

During these days, "the mystery will be consummated"

of God," that is to say, God will complete and manifest-

= +

>

has

SS mn, EE, , SE, Ey, e

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 763

hitherto little understood, designs predicted by mysterious prophecies in both Testaments. They will appear in all their glory at the end of the seventh age, through the absolute triumph of the city of good on the city of evil, destroyed forever, and in the social reign of Jesus Christ over the world the center of faithful humanity, its Catholic Church.

But before these major events of the last age, during the peacetime at the end of the sixth, What will happen? The symbolic actions taken in the vision continue to instruct us.

"And I heard the voice that spoke to me from heaven" again and said to me: Go, take the little book opened by the hand of the standing angel on the sea and on the land. And I went to the angel, telling him to give me the book.

This voice that speaks again to Saint John, it was the same one who had previously given him the order to seal the words of the seven thunders and who had commanded the sixth angel to release the four demons.

It was the voice of the Lamb that stood upon the altar.

What does it mean and what does what it means? instructed Saint John to do? It means a new inspiration from the Holy Spirit, prompting to request the resumption of the council's work. Throughout the Book of Revelation, Saint John represents the Church; we have already said so. It is in the person of his beloved apostle that No- The Lord reveals the future to the Church of all centuries for his instruction and consolation. So, after the vengeful catastrophes, after that a painful experience will have made Ja lu- first in the minds of the most prejudiced, princes, The powerful, the rich, the common people and the clergy, will demand the council as a remedy for the terrible wounds caused by _sées to the social order by the Judaico-Masonic heresy-world, the Church will address itself to its supreme authority spiritual, begging her to "give him the book."

164 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The Vatican Council will reopen its solemn sessions-
nelles. |

He will condemn all the errors that France-Jewish Freemasonry has vomited upon the world, and in
In his decrees he will tell the truth on all points in-interesting religious, social and political matters
ticks. It is to be believed, as Holzhauser says, that the council "will declare the legitimate meaning of - holy Scriptures" and that, in particular, the Apo-Calypse and the prophecies that look to the end of the

ur

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. | 765

world will be clarified by a doctri- judgment

nal.

The definitions and lessons of this last-denying the councils will form "a small book," which will be the summary of all the lights that the Church at that time will have the mission of spreading on the world.

Its happy ending, its acceptance
joyful throughout the entire Church and its followers are prophenotized by words and symbolic actions
the following.

And the angel said to me: Take the book and devour it,
and it will cause you bitterness in your stomach;
But in your mouth it will be like honey. And I
I took the book and devoured it; and it was in my
My mouth is sweet like honey, and when I want Devoured, my stomach felt bitter.

In Jeremiah and Ezekiel we find two similar symbolic acts. Jeremiah re-Ezekiel sums up his vision in one line. He tells it.
in detail and it is almost entirely similar-ble to that of the Apocalypse:

1 Jeremiah summarizes his vision in these terms: x I have found nourished, and your word has become the joy and delight of my heart" (xv, 16).

Ezekiel recounts his own story thus: "Son of man... or-43.

166 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The Lord presented him with an unrolled book, a open book, containing complaints and ma- edicts; nothing, therefore, difficult to com- take. The prophet receives the order to eat this book. He is warned that he will be filled and nourished by it. as with food. He eats it and finds Sweet to the mouth like honey. The meaning of this symbolic action is clear and understandable to First reading. God is indicating this to the prophet. two things: first, that he fills him up and gives him... to understand the spirit of his words, that is to say, of his designs against Israel and that he charge him with carrying them out secondly, to impart knowledge to his people; that this mission will be of a fa- accomplishment and not at all unpleasant for him, that per-

His sound will not be able to stop him, nor obstruct him.

Open your mouth and eat what I give you. Then I had this vision. Suddenly a hand reached out towards me, which held a rolled-up book, and she spread out before me this book which was written inside and outside. Lugubrious complaints had been written there, hymns and lamentations. Then the Lord said to me: Son of man, eat everything you find (that is to say (what I put before you). Eat this book and go talk to the Children of Israel. At the same time, open your mouth, and he told me He made him eat this book, and he said to me, "Son of man, your stomach..." will feed on this book that I give you, and your insides on will be filled. I ate this book, and it became sweet to my His mouth was like honey. And he said to me, "Son of man, go find the house of Israel, and you will announce my words to them; for it is to the house of Israel that I am sending you (Jeremiah, ch. 11, 8, 9, and chap im, 1, 2, 3, 4).

n>

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 767

This interpretation, which emerges from the text alone without any difficulty, was also presented throughout by the Holy Spirit himself.

"Eat this book, and go talk to the children of Israel. Go to the house of Israel, and you

"Tell them my words; for it is to the hand-

"I am sending you the sound of Israel"... And further on:

"The house of Israel has a bronze forehead and a

"hardened heart, but I made your face more

a firmness that their face, your forehead harder

"than their foreheads. I gave you a forehead of "stone and diamond. Do not fear them (therefore)"

"and do not be afraid of them" (111,

7, 8, 9). And indeed, the two prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel accomplished with energy, and without being stopped by no obstacle, their mission to warn messages and threats.

The symbolic vision of the Apocalypse, which reproduces the main features of Ezekiel's.

must have the same meaning. What the Lord has

He wanted to make Ezekiel understand, and he wants to do so here.

to hear at the Church, represented by Saint John. He

there are only a few additional nuances that we

Let's explain first. The Holy Spirit had said to

Old Testament prophet: Eat, come;

He said to the Church: Devour, devora, that is to say

-

\

768 FREEMASONS AND JEW3.

eats, with the greed and satisfaction of a man who is very hungry and in great need, the food- the thing I'm presenting to you.

`After the council, the ecclesiastical authority, by all levels of its hierarchy, will invite with the Christian people, who will then have more that there has never been such a great need to be educated, to

© to nurture teachings of truth and holiness |

_enclosed in its decrees. And likewise Saint John devoured, ate greedily and
- eagerness "the little book," likewise the Christendom will accept the council with enthusiasm
siasm and will hasten to immerse himself in its documents
'trines. |

- But it wasn't just for their satisfaction-
personal faction that these prophets of the Old Testaments were meant to be nourished by divine words.
They were simultaneously ordered to wear them to the people of Israel. Likewise, Saint John, that is to say-to say the Church, after having devoured the council, receives a similar order with insurance, and later
the experience, that it will also be for her an exé-Easy and enjoyable cutting.

-“And he said to me: You must prophesy of "new has many nations, peoples, of
"Languages and kings."

Freemasons and Jews. 769

The word prophetare, to prophesy, here has the
The saints assign it a double meaning.
Scriptures, to preach and to prophesy. Thus the-church, whose apostolate has never been interrupted, Ae will continue and extend it during the last part-
'tie of the sixth age especially, in the largest proportions, among all the peoples of the earth.
She will preach again (rähw, iterum) these nations that she had converted once before and until heresy separated them from her for centuries;
she will preach again with even greater fervor these
So many pagan nations that, since so long for years, they resisted her zeal; she will preach from new, as in its early days, these few-
the most disinherited, these millions of men from the center from Africa which were recently put into 'communication with our old world for the First time. From the holy and sanctifying mouth supernatural of a great number, multis, of even that which came out of the mouths of the mons'truants, horses of Masonic heresy, all kinds of errors for the death "of the third part of the men.

And this preaching will be "sweet to his mouth"
like honey," because that's how it will happen to him.

770 FREEMASONS AND JEWS: °

At p

than to the prophets of the Old Testament: say nothing.
will obstruct him. | That x

All the barriers and all the difficulties are... At least... will be raised before the Church. The leaders of the nations Church who will govern after the great catastrophes, ~the and
and the ruling classes of societies will want Lesa
that the people hear his voice and follow his guidance teachings. It will therefore carry into the world the redician
The whole pure light of the Gospel, and he prophesies the year will not only reveal the truths of life but also "Jalgré:
ture and terrible facts of the end of the world, but 'of fa
also the proximity of these major events. #8 léc

Then the words of "tion" will be fulfilled to the letter.
Our Lord: "And this gospel of the kingdom of illusion
"will be preached throughout the world, in witness- Ymptar
"Granting to all nations; and then will come tuenc
at the end" (Matthew 24:14). "while

This will be the last testimony that the Savior gave me.
will be given in the midst of the nations, so that ini:
Their apostasy is without excuse. 'nes to

But in the Book of Revelation, the Holy Spirit adds to the gene
'a detail that does not have and could not have "mp; r
to have the prophecy of Ezekiel. The angel warns you Saint John, that the eating of this book, after all that having put the sweetness of honey in his mouth, him 1m not will cause bitterness in the stomach, that is to say

FREEMASONS AND JEWS,

to describe intimate pains in the intestines.

In my opinion, this is yet another warning for Church, and a prophecy about the consequences mo-
-ales and the historical consequences of the council.
The Holy Spirit warns the Church that at the great gentleness and the lively joy caused by the |universal preaching of the truth, will succeed for
It is the bitterness of deep and intimate sorrows.
-Despite this preaching delivered with such zeal easy jump from one end of the world to the other, bad-despite the dazzling brilliance of truth and progress divine protection, the Church must not become illusions during this time of joy and peace, in [assuming that it will resume its: for centuries to come influence and its action on peoples such as (in the thousand years of his militant reign of the Middle Ages. She is warned that her preaching |tion so ardent will not cast deep ra-cines within the populations and will not form centuries of faithful followers. At the end of a
In a relatively short time, she will experience intuition-
'my pains; she will undergo trials and struggles that will be provoked within him, not from the outside,
not even heresy, but by its own
children,

772 FREEMASONS AND JEWS. |

She will be heartbroken to see the people abandon her.
to give and separate from her entirely. This si-
The meaning of "bitterness of the belly" is Jonel born of the Holy Spirit in the first verse of next chapter. For, in the vision that we...
Cupe, the symbol: "The eaten book was sweet to the "Mouth like honey" corresponds to the lyrics:
You need to preach to many people again
of nations, etc.," and is explained by them; we
We have seen proof of this in the Old Testament...
Similarly, this other symbol: "The eaten book"
"caused bitterness in the stomach" must refer to ter to verse 1* of chapter x1, which follows, and y
to find its interpretation, by virtue of the parallel-the connection that exists between these verses. Indeed, then-that, relying on the prophecy of Ezekiel, we surely we have the right to say that the manduca- `
The book's texture and its smooth mouthfeel are ex-enforced by the order to go and preach again,
we are legitimately led to believe that the second part of the symbol, the bitterness caused in the gut from the book devoured, must have also an explanation, that these two explanations follow each other as the two symbols follow each other and contains the interpretation of the second symbol.

OF

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 773

a and me QE D eet EU ee ES RE TY

We will now present this interpretation.

"And a reed was given to me, like a
"rod; and the angel (according to the Greek) said to me: Arise
"and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and those "who worship there. As for the courtyard which is in front of it."
"the temple, set it aside, and do not measure it;
for it has been abandoned to the Gentiles, and they tramplewill have the holy city at their feet for forty-two months. And I will give my two witnesses two months.
to prophesy for 1,260
"days, clad in sacks."

Here is the announcement of the four main events elements of the last age of the Church: the apostasy com-

AA RA A

1 This passage requires some topographical explanation.
I] It is necessary to remember the distribution of permanent vision
(ch. 1v, v, vi). The temple with its courtyard was placed behind the throne of God. Saint John, raised to the level of vision (ascending huc), washed entirely in front of it, the atmospheric sky-that with the sun and stars above his head, and the earth and the sea below him. When he received the order to go and take-to draw the book from the hand of the angel who was standing on the land and sea, he descended to him on land. Then after the eating of the book, the prophet receives a rod to miesu- © rer de Ja main de quelqu'un qu'il ne nome. Alors le texte Greek adds this: "And Lange had risen up, saying to me: Rise-

"P you (too) and measure the temple." That is to say, swaddle and Saint John ascended from the earth in a perpetual vision.

and that there Saint John went to perform the symbolic action on the temple exact position and details of the permanent vision, we understands with difficulty this order given to the prophet to go to me- to secure the temple of God, whereas the only temple of God, this- The one in Jerusalem had been destroyed long ago.

7174 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

completeness of the nations, the conversion of the Jews, the last-

their persecution and the miraculous help of the mission of Enoch and Elijah.

The act of measuring a place with a rod indicates that this place has limits that can be specified in a quick and easy way. One cannot to measure promptly and easily, by means of of a rod or a pole, a space of a considerable range f.

As Father Drach rightly says,

"The apostle uses expressions relating to

"to the temple and to the city of Jerusalem, but the

{The Venerable Holzhauser interpreted this symbolic act in a completely opposite meaning. He claims that Saint John received the order to measure the temple to signify the immense extent of The Church in the Sixth Age (Vol. II, p. 18). This interpretation is unacceptable, because it contradicts nature things and the meaning of words. One man alone cannot measure- to measure easily and quickly with a rod, or a measuring rod, 'as Holzhauser translates, a restricted space. The action of measuring a place with a small measure must necessarily mean It's remarkable how small this place is. In every language, when one means that a space is excessively large, is of a super- extremely large face, it is said to be immense, that is- i.e. without, measure (immensus, in privat., and mensus, measured, measurable), that it is incommensurable, that is to say that there is no no measure that can be compared to it, or with which it can be determined. - Holzhauser provides support for his Explanation: a passage from Scripture that proves the opposite: "And "Count the stars, if you can." God did not say to Abraham: com- pte; but, count, if you can. Now, he could not count. the stars, which to the human eye are countless. The angel did not say to Saint John: measure if you can; but abso- Lument: measure.

(v. 2) this must be understood as the Church of Jesus Christ and "the persecutions she will have to suffer at the end" "times" (Ap., p. 108).

The Catholic Church is therefore represented here by the temple. The act of measuring this temple with a rod indicates that the extent of the Church will be much reduced. People will probably ask what -> will have become at that time "the great number of peoples and kings" whom the Church had evangelized-read in the past. The Holy Spirit teaches us this in these terms:

"As for the courtyard in front of the temple,
"Put it aside; for it has been abandoned to

"Ah, the Gentiles." The temple therefore represents the place of

-(faithful and the courtyard represents the place of the nations.

{ But this forecourt must be set aside and, according to the -
The force of the text, thrown out. The Holy Spirit an-
He here proclaims that he will abandon the nations because of | our ingratitude and their abuse of graces and that he will reject them. The Church, under his inspiration,

`$ will be forced to push them away from her breast: Ejice fords. And the nations will trample the city underfoot holy, the city of the faithful, designated by this new a symbolic expression, for forty-

>
fee « continuation of the chapter shows that, in thought
,

776 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

—

Two months, that is to say, three and a half years. This will be the persecution of the last days. At this time-how the Lord will send help to his bride miraculous testimony from the two witnesses who, according to a tra-

They will preach for twelve hundred and sixty days,
who are also three and a half years old.

We now need to research how These events will be linked to the great council of Vatican and will be like the consequences and the continued. ` |

The war, which will begin again against the Church, which will cause him intense and profound pain and which will bring about the final apostasy, will have its point of depart and its pretext in the decrees and prescriptions
tions of this council. . |

It seems to us that the texts "ef faciet ama-
- ricari bellym tuum and quum devorasset eum
"amaricatus est venter meus," would provide this indication, if we delve further into their full meaning.

The Greek term translated as amaricari, rixpaivev,
It also means figuratively: to embitter, irritate, exasperate.
On the other hand, the word venter, ventre, also refers to figuratively in Scripture, men devoted to the pleasures of the stomach, to gluttony, to the im-

at

a | re) © To me ~ ay Ur A

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 717

purity etc.! So that these phrases, facet amaricari bellym tuum, and amaricatus venter meus, would have a second meaning which would be
This one: the acceptance and application of the decrees '
the council will irritate and exasperate men carnal and material aspects of the Church. It would happen in the world of the sixth age, after the great disasters and after the return of the diri- classes
giants towards the Church, which took place in the times of Constantine's conversion. These men carnal, mobile and insubstantial that follow always the party of the winner and the current of the prevailing opinion, will rally en masse to the Church and the external practices of religion.

But the good impression will gradually fade.

over the years. The council's prescriptions, put into practice everywhere in force by vigorous authorities and Frankly Christians will hinder evil passions. tamed by these more Catholic men exter- more than faithful in heart and conviction. They will be irritated by these obstacles, they will wall- They will keep quiet. For their part, the enemies hardened members of the Church, initially stunned and humbled to silence, like the Pharisees following the

1 Cretenses, malæ bestiæ, stomachs pigri, etc... Quorum Deus venter est, etc... Saint Paul.

7178 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

The resurrection of Lazarus will soon be noted. their heads. They will secretly reconnect again: Abominable plots. Jewish Freemasonry will reform its frameworks and resume its action terrain. These good e will disappear one after another generous faithful who, after having supported sani

weakening the persecution of heresy, had found themselves at times of punishment and upheaval: the only supports of the social and religious order. Dane The sixth epistle Our Lord made them the pro- mass that he would preserve them "from the hour of the ten:

Tak

tation that must come throughout the universe to experience

those who dwell on the earth. They will therefore die at peace during this quiet time for the Church assisted by his grace and blessings.

And when these princes, too, are dead

the abyss into which it was swallowed up, beneath their successes

Catholic sisters less solid, more friends of.

Liberalism, nothing but the truth, all these elements
bad things, compressed until now, will explode.
The seventh age will begin. These will be at the beginning complaints and recriminations of all kinds who will rise from among the Catholics. It will be said that the Church is too demanding. Protests will be made against it.
certain decrees. We will get comfortable with the troublesome prescriptions of the council. A slow-universal ment in the observation of religious laws

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 179

gious and a deplorable lapse in conduct will manifest themselves quickly. It is to these many materialistic, cowardly, and lukewarm Christians who address themselves felt the Savior's stern words at the beginning cement of the seventh epistle. The revolt will follow from near the lukewarm.

The Church will be forced to distance itself from the frequenting
the administration of its sacraments by men who demand will highly value the freedom of their passions and of their perverse inclinations: Z'jice foras. It will be a great and intimate pain for her.

Everywhere, then, Freemasonry will solicit them and will open its ranks to them, and soon to all the nations of the globe, upper classes and classes popular fans will flock to the boxes,
The city of evil will be repopulated. Freemasonry
The Jewish community will become more numerous and more powerful.

than ever. She will resume her plans with fervor.

of universal domination. We will see reproduce-to lead against the Church, but with even more of extent, with more hatred and sata- skill niques, everything that's happening today. I] there will be no longer at that time were there any elements of resistance, nor

/

180 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

entire. God will abandon them completely:

Fjice foras et ne metiaris illud. The army and the people
The forces of the Antichrist will be ready; he will not be long in coming.
forthcoming. The Church among the Gentiles will be reduced to a very small number of faithful worshippers. This – their number will increase through the conversion of Jews
which is announced at the same time in this passage:
“a Metire templum Deiet altare etadorantes in eo.”

In the permanent vision, divinity was revealed to us.
shown, seated amidst her works, in the middle of creation and redemption, of redemption prepared, reminiscent of the Temple in Jerusalem, and of the redemption accomplished, which the Lamb represents holding as if immolated on the altar. By sending Saint John measured this temple and said that the
The holy city would be trampled underfoot by the Gentiles.
The Holy Spirit wanted to indicate, it seems to me, that the converted Jewish people would then form the most a large part of the Church. It was during this time that Enoch will be sent to the aid of the faithful, dis-Persecuted among the apostate peoples, and that Elijah will preach, either, according to some, to effect the conversion sion of the Jews united as a nation, that is, according to others, after this conversion, to strengthen them
during the persecution of the Antichrist.

All these events are only announced here

N

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 7814

very briefly: their accomplishment belongs in the seventh age. The visions that follow the sound of The seventh trumpet recounts them at length,
at the same time as the last days of the world.

There can be no doubt in anyone's mind that the

a lengthy account of the mission of the two witnesses is not an anticipation. This passage extends from verse 4 à verse 13 of chapter xii. It differs entirely-the previous pages by its appearance and its All historical style. The only reading proves it with evidence that it relates to the time of the beast,

that is to say, the reign of the Antichrist.

But why this announcement of events ap-departing for the seventh age? Why especially the anticipation -of the story of the mission of Enoch and Elijah? We see two reasons for this:

The first, which looks only at the anticipatory
pation, is a motif of order and method. The Es-Saint, having judged it appropriate to announce here the
the final persecution and the arrival of the two witnesses,
It's not surprising that he's continuing the same way.
subject by immediately giving the story of their mission, its results and its end; especially since the circumstances of the narration hold all equivogue regarding its chronological placement. It is a a method that appears to have been adopted by the Holy Spirit

44

782 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

—

not to split certain major events during each other's. It seems to us that she has presided over the arrangement of almost all the visions that follow the seventh trumpet. These visions siones group together facts of the same order rather than giving the chronology followed. This is especially evident in the vision of the chaining and unleashing of Satan
(ch. xx). These two major events are separated by centuries, but as they keep each other close-the Holy Spirit did not want to be with one another to separate them, and he left it to the sagacity of the inter-ready to find their place rigorously chrononological in the series of past centuries.

The second reason is a motive for mercy.

Visions of the sixth age, Our Lord warns us usually a second time, in a way that is still more energetic and more striking than men. The end of this period will see all the seventh age, that they will be witnesses and actors in these times frightening aspects of Elijah and Enoch's mission.

Moreover, in particular he wants to convince his faithful children of that terrible time, whom he did not will not give up. The Holy Spirit is at work in this place for Catholic faithful what he did elsewhere

\

.

has
FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 783

for the powers hostile to the Church... In the visions of seals, visions of things and of the pou-seeing from the outside, he placed in anticipation at sixth seal, before the eyes of the Persian potentates—for those of the sixth age, the table of signs pre-the markers of the end of all human power. It was a way of telling them, in symbolic language: "Before long you will be arrested, tried, and condemned" "born!" Hrudimini qui judicatis terram! In i F the visions of the trumpets, visions of things and In the trials within, he placed sixth trumpet under the watchful eyes of his sixth-grade children age, in order to warn them, reassure them and to encourage, the abbreviated prediction of the latest trials, and subsequently the historical account of the rescue miraculous things he has in store for them for the moment the Church's greatest battles. He repeated to them by She clearly said: "Do not be afraid: I will overcome."

"The world again!"

The divine Savior deigned to warn the E-church in general before the last three-trumpets of the struggles and misfortunes that they predicted, it is not surprising that, in its kindly, he insisted on warning her a second time. and in a more explicit and detailed manner, before the third and final misfortune so dreaded—

|

784 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ble, so that she can prepare her children for it. Because it will be quite necessary for the men of the sixth age, who will see the triumph and who are destined— May those born to see the seventh age also be preserved. of illusion and a confidence in the future which— would be so cruelly disappointed. The change so rapid, and almost in sight, so to speak, of which they will witness in the beginnings of the sep— their twentieth age could bring about an eclipse in their faith. But elected officials must not be seduced. That's Why did God warn them with such care, and he will give them the grace to understand the warning.

On the other hand, it was during this time of peace that the small generation will need to be trained but vigorous in faith, who will not let herself lead into general apostasy, and which preserve— will bring the Church into the midst of the Gentiles. Now it will be ab— absolutely indispensable that these men, little children at present, or who will be born a little later, be warned and raised with a view to exceptional battles await them. They will have much needed, faced with the desolate spectacle of the re— universal about-face, in the face of these daily insults made to their religion and relentlessly thrown to the facing the Church through the Freemasons of that time,

under the threat of persecution through seduction and |

|

fo
And

int
li

req
ine

i |]
|

x children, This born of the sivièri
gi are dest
ient presertt
renit qu $
angent at Jire, including at ents of the xt
Jans their Jews, CE
the 01D, eti srtjssemeni.
NPS of PALS
many will not leave
jul conser
i] will be ar
103, pets
pt un pe,
| view of
[is aurot"
I'm late den
che to d'alos
ction e!

st

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 18

With their diabolical skills, they will certainly need to remember the lessons that will have been taught to them given. For this defection of the people will be a Huge scandal. We'll see in full what happened passed in Jerusalem on a small theater by rap-Port to Our Lord. The triumphant entry of the Palm Sunday brought back the ignominies of Good Friday is much more terrible for the
The faith of the weak. It was then that Elijah appeared.
and Enoch will be awaited day by day, as a victorious justification and a triumphant response phante to all words and all actions of

They will have pointed them out in the midst of the stu- peoples wrongdoers, and that they will have done justice and with a science proud and possessing a diabolical supernatural quality, the pe-
The little flock of the righteous will cry out, full of confidence.
with the prophet: "Yes, here is the Lord,
"My God, my helper; that is why I have not
"Not confused!"

The Holy Spirit has therefore made these announcements and this anticipation following the visions of the sixth age,
in order to give the teaching Church the lights required so that she can in turn warn and prepare your children.

1 Isaiah, tv, 7, 8, 9.

44.

[HAS
786 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Thus the last years of old age will be Indeed, a time of enlightenment and truth. The symbol of luminous swaddling clothes appearing at the beginning of the se-Conde's vision is perfectly justified. The Church will receive and give all the desired lights
for the present and for the future.

Currently, the interventions are completed-merciful tions symbolized by the attributions goals of the angel, the cloud bearing the rainbow and the
a small open book. We are, we believe, very close to the interventions of the justice system, figures by his symbolic acts, after which, if God preserve us, we will be able to say: Væ secundum abiit, the second misfortune has passed; there Judaic-Masonic power is broken at least for a time.

Quando hee erunt? When will all come true?
These facts? When will the intervention of the authorities come?
divine wisdom and justice which, after the punishment
Will they bring us peace and rest? We don't know-completely. On this point the Lord has not did not want to give us the most
A small hint. This time of the triumph of the truth and peace for the Church will not be very

Cito: The third misfortune will come soon.

_#

at

oe OT or

ba

CHAPTER FIVE.

Sixth Epistle: The Church Facing Freemasonry
FREEMASONRY OR THE REVOLUTION. – HIS WORKS– VRES. – HIS MERITS. – HIS REWARD AT
SIXTH AGE. |

The seven epistles do not reveal the future of the Church. from the same point of view as the seals and The trumpets. They briefly announce the highest merits and demerits members of the Church in every age, that is to say– to say what characterizes the en– in goodness and holiness seems to be from a period. Obviously we must not no point in finding the narration of the same events than in the visions of the seals and the trumpets. Nevertheless, because the struggles from the outside, like Those within are the sources of these merits of the Church, it will necessarily happen that the text of epistles will contain allusions to several of them these facts. Moreover, this concordance is one of the demonstrations of the unity of the Apocalypse, and also one of the proofs of this opinion which links the seven epistles to the rest of the book, and which we have embraced. It is therefore necessary that, while we learn– containing things specific to the Church, the epistles –show us in some way their connection and their relationship with the visions of the trumpets and corresponding seals.

788 FREEMASONS AND JEWS,

In all the epistles the name of the city, the qualifications and attributes that Our Lord given at the beginning, have a meaning symbolic aspects that must reproduce some aspects particulars of the predicted historical period. I believe to have firmly established this assertion for each one of the previous epistles in my study complete and detailed account of the Apocalypse.

The sixth one will offer us the same indications equally clear and equally consistent.

(Revelation, chapter III.)

v.7. Etangelo Philadelphia v.7. Church changing table Ecclesiæ scribe: Hæc dicit of Philadelphia write: Behold Sanctus and Verus, who describes what the Saint and the Ve-clavem David, who sees and laughs, who has the key of Da-nemo claudit, claudit and nemo vid, which opens and no one aperit. ferme, qui ferme et personne

| doesn't open.

8. Scio opera tua. Eccedi 8. I know your works. So coram te ostium apertumi, that I have placed before you a quod nemo potest claudere; open door that no one quia modicam habes virtu- cannot close; leave that you tem, et servasti verbum has little force, and that however-

t
t

naih D

tek

Fa,

aes
the ears
r liaii
smpettis

Sone'
has:

wt nn il
rae

oe 2
nes cytes s o, Jei

our ch

Kurt
}

Fiatot;

fel Ea
js: Look!
able f
if of DS
BE
personik
os, Voll |
"13 one person z what a cepe®

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 789

meum, and non negasti nomen dant you kept my word, Meum. And you didn't deny my name.

9. Ecce dabo de synagoga 9. Behold, I will produce '
Satanæ who dicunt se judæos some of the synagogue-esse, et non sunt, sed men- gue de Satan qui se disent tiuntur, Ecce faciam illos ut Jews and are not, but coming and worshiping ante pedes who lie. Behold, I them you, and know who ego dilexi will make come and prostrate to
te. your feet, and they will know that

I loved you.

10. Quoniam servasti ver- 10. Because you kept bum patientiz me, et ego la parole de ma patience, moi servabo te ab hora tentatio - also I will keep you from the hour nis, that ventura is in or- of temptation, which must come bem universum tentare ha- throughout the universe experience bitantes in terra. those who inhabit the earth.

11. Ecce venio cito; tene 11. Behold, I come well-quod habes, ut nemo accipiat early; keep what you have for coronam tuam. that no one receives ta crown.

The Church of the sixth age is called figurative-Philadelphia. "Write to the angel, that is to say
"to the bishop, or, according to the Greek, for the bishop of "Philadelphia." This means: Write to have-shooting, to instruct the teaching Church of the time

Dabo, I will produce, I will lay, Vtablial, translation of Abbot Glaire, as in verse 8: dedi, I have laid (V. Nou-(Veau Testament, p. 441, note).

790 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

whose name, the city of Philadelphia, is derived from-symbolic pelling.

Philadelphia, in Greek $\phi\iota\lambda\alpha\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\iota\alpha$, is a word that It signifies brotherly friendship, brotherhood. The sixth age would therefore be the age of brotherhood.

Never has a name been more accurate.

Throughout history, the Church has produced a
a large number of fraternal charitable works;
but it must be acknowledged that in no other
She has not presented such a large quantity of works individual and collective acts of charity towards the next. In the eighteenth century, the triumph and the hatred of modern heretics was the occasion of sublime devotions, and during the great French Revolution, and during the European wars Europeans who followed her. History will not be able to braved death to bring aid to the religious community.

honor to the faithful, and also courageous skill and devoted to so many obscure Christians who, at the peril of their lives, they hid and saved so many priests and of victims of persecution and fighting. He is perhaps not a point of France, and it is a large number of places in Europe, where tra-Valuable local editions have said and continue to say traits of the most admirable charity. He is to be re-not A,

e, rodku}
ateral:
ame ae: |
LET]
After: }

phe ets;

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 791

— ee

regret that they are not everywhere carefully
i | \ ; i collected. To compensate for the atrocities committed through Masonic heresy, the Church, in these days

Unfortunate, he wrote some very beautiful things in the book of life.

pages that will only be read at the Last Judgment.

After those bad times, he became involved in the E-Catholic Church: An astonishing flowering of "brothers" and sisters," who, at least as numerous as in
In the Middle Ages, they devoted themselves more exclusively to the works of verses of spiritual and corporal mercy. It is not at this point, in the nineteenth century, a need or a illness of mind and body that does not have "its brother children of the Church are always "brothers" among them, whatever their calling. But today, through their dedication and their inexhaustible largesse for all necessities and all means Seres from all over the world, they prove it in the way the most brilliant one that is found among them and of

at their home come the works of true fraternity.

On the other hand, a fact that had never occurred before—due to no other era, it is this counter—

the way of Catholic fraternity that Franc—

Masonry claims to establish on a large scale, in the sixth age. She placed in her de—

792 FREEMASONS and JEWS.

aims for and is enshrined in its constitutions the fraternity. All Its members call themselves "brothers and sisters." sisters." She calls herself the only true sisterhood. She preaches universal brotherhood, and she wants to realize it in the world. Satan is still the Ape of God. Freemasonry has beautiful His words; but we know his actions. In the century In the past, she commanded the brotherhood... or the death. We know how, by means of the pri-sounds of the guillotine, cannons, and gunfire. She committed assassinations and arson, and practices universal brotherhood. In this century As in the other case, actions belie the beautiful speech. Freemasons do indeed have a fraternity nity, but it is brotherhood in evil, brotherhood—eternity of hell.

Therefore, it is something worth noting that this sixth age is in reality, more so than any other time, all together for the city of good as For the city of evil, an era of brotherhood, and that precisely the Church of this age should be called bound by Our Lord the Church of Philadelphia or of brotherly friendship.

who has the key of David, who opens and no one Jerme, who closes up and nobody opens.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 793

a in ee,

These names and attributes of the divine Savior
veur are also chosen with a view to our sixth

HAS

age. |
What is the most pronounced claim of the Men of our time? Since the eighteenth century to the present day, they assert with the most: energetic stubbornness that good as The truth comes solely from man, from the only human reason. Rationalists and franks-Freemasons repeat, in a thousand forms: the reason is The only rule of truth: appetites and instincts of man are Tunic, the rule of good; it is the

the only human reason that holds the key to science,

politics, religious issues, economics
social and cultural issues; it is sufficient to open the sources of all good in this world, as in to shut the door on all evils; by virtue of the law of progress, which is the law of humanity, reason will succeed in establishing for man here below a state of happiness as perfect as possible; the Church Catholic, being the only obstacle to this progress because of the inflexibility of its principles, must, in waiting for it to disappear completely, to be inclosed in its temples and sacristies. And in
As a consequence of these doctrines, both of them, with the numerous resources available to the powerful-45 the people of the earth, strive to close themselves off from the Church

any action and any access to the things of the society company, to put it under lock and key, so to speak, in an isolation and a powerlessness from which she does not can get out.

To all these absurdities of the men of the sixth age, Jesus Christ answered in advance by the Sixth Epistle:

I am Holiness and Truth.
In essence, I am the one with sovereign power.
over all the nations that my Father has given me
As an inheritance, I succeeded to the power-the reign of David, to whom a promise was made eternal kingdom, I am the Messiah and the Redeemer! It is from me alone that men can receive and must await the truth, the holiness, the happiness they pursue in vain
by all the resources of their genius.

It is in my Church, where I reside, of which I am the leader and protector, to whom I have entrusted these treasures

1 The expression "qui habet clavem David" includes all these ideas. In Scripture, clavis, the key, is the symbol of the power and government: "habere clavem" means: To have and exercise power. Hence: "habere clavem David" means: 1° to have the power of David; 2° it is one of the characteristics names given in a spiritual sense to the Messiah. See Isaiah, 21:11. 22 and iv, 6. Compare Job, xii, 14. See Dict. de philologie sa- created at the word Clavis.

F e

that they will only obtain through her. You want, oh senior citizens, imprison my Church

Well! Here I am, I will break down all your barriers—res and that I will open before Her a door that No one will be able to close it: I will give him a life force and renown, an authority of pa role, scope and success of preaching, of—

“before which all your maneuvers and your per—
The sections will remain powerless.

Our Lord then addresses all the church collectively, and especially in the E—
teaching church, per modum unius.

"I know your works." All the epistles without exception (according to the Greek) begin with this for—mule. This one contains no reproach; Jesus—Christ only offers praise, promises, and encouragement. This is very comforting for the Holy Church and the good faithful of this sixth
age.

Our Lord indicates the reason for the merit
special of their works:

“You have little strength,” modicum habes virtutem; that is to say: you possess little power and wealth, but few human resources for
To succeed. That is the meaning of the Greek word Stive

796 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

and it is in this sense that the commentaries translators!

The Savior here foretells to his Church what it experiential in our age: it has not until now that very few external facilities for rem—to fulfill its mission; and, on the side of men and of things of society, the faithful have experienced increasingly difficult for
to bring about their salvation.

It is historically quite evident that,
from the eighteenth century to the present day,
the Church is left to its own devices, to its own and limited resources. In the last century, it had still the material situation of previous ages.

had "little strength;" for, in America, she was born amidst great local difficulties; In Europe, its actions were hampered. all at once through ill will, cowardice, or the hostility of most governments, and by a multitude of abuses that they had introduced duitset that they maintained despite her in her administration. Freemasonry dominated and inspired almost all European courts. 'The Church had its hands and feet tied. At the end of the century it was completely stripped in France and has not recovered its former state. At the con- to milk, in the following century, everywhere, goods, riches, external position, up to the temporal principality from his own authority, they are successively taken away from him; and more than ever, the powers of the day are treating her as an enemy: modicam habes virtutem.

1 See MM. Glaire and Drach, in hoc loca.

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 197

Despite this, the Church produced works pleasing to her divine spouse. There are three of them. sorts. He gives a brief summary of them in these terms :

"You kept my word; you did not deny my name; you have kept my promise of patience.

The precise and complete meaning of these The texts require explanation.

"You kept my word." The Greek verb rrpéw, translated as keep, means, according to all its strength: to ensure the safekeeping of... The words A6yo, verbum, parole, signify in themselves "teaching-education, doctrine; and as Saint John said Father Glaire often uses the phrase "Keeping the word" in order to "uphold the law," the The full meaning would be: "You have watched over the guard of my doctrine and my law. » |

And that is undoubtedly a well-deserved praise.

1 The Holy Bible New Testament, p. 441, note 10.

798 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Jæ ee ne 2 NEN CS e

by the teaching Church of the sixth age. It is not There was no era in which popes and bishops did not monitor with more care the divine deposit of truth and © holiness. The sovereign pontiffs denounced the first and on several occasions the heresy maconical; they condemned it, as well as the au-very heresies, schisms, foul writings and the criminal acts of the eighteenth century.

In the nineteenth century, these convictions were
- repeated many times, especially in the ce-famous Vatican council; and there is no era rebel rising up against faith or morality that does not was censored almost immediately-not a single piece of writing by
of some importance that escapes vigilance pastors of the Catholic Church. The definition papal infallibility has brought out, with more brilliant than in past centuries, the Zot divine of its constitution and its government.

"You did not deny my name," that is to say, you
He has affirmed my name. That name is Jesus, and ~ also: "Word of God." Jesus Christ is man-
God. Now this name of God, the true name of Christ, it especially bothers and irritates the impious sectarians of sixth age. They deny it and would like to do it disappear. For them, in the last century, Jesus-Christ was not God, he was the infamous one. Today-

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 799

— me

today, as a result of their progress in iniquity, God himself is now nothing more than an old, useless word and even harmful to man and society: there is No God. In the face of these impious absurdities, in the face of the violence they have been subjected to gine, not only has the Church not slowed down its

of God and the divinity of Jesus Christ, but she affirmed them with even more energy by the books and speeches of his pontiffs, of his priests, orators, and writers; she avenged them through his most solemn acts, by establishing for all Catholicism in the eighteenth in the 10th century the feast of the holy name of Jesus, and in condemning in the nineteenth century in the council of The Vatican, atheism, and atheists.

"You have kept my promise of patience."

"This expression," said Father Glaire, "is
"a Hebrew hyperbaton: the construction re-
"Gulière is: my word or my precept of the 'Patience, touching on patience.' The Greek word brepovh, translated as "patience," still means and better: the act of withstanding a shock, of at-
To stand firm, to resist courageously.
So that this patience, commanded and praised

1 The Holy Bible, New Testament, p. 441, note 10.

800 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ee Eai aa

a ee © eee

by the Lord is not inert patience, passive, who cowardly submits to the attack, but well
an energetic patience, which resists with courage
and without growing weary of evil, error, and sin.
Such is the attitude of the Church in the sixth age teacher, in particular with regard to the attacks of Jewish Freemasonry. The persecution of this "Synagogue of Satan," whose hostiles are predicted in detail at the sixth trumpet, is announced in this sixth epistle, by way of correlation, in the prophecy of resistance courageous of the Church.

This is one of the most striking characteristics of this period that, on the one hand, the Church, is being attacked with fury in every way and everywhere at once,

and that, on the other hand, she resists with perseverance
tireless resistance and repels with an indomitable energy table all the attacks everywhere at the same time time. In the past century, she fought vigorously through speech and writing,
as we have just said, and during the last-
Years ago, even bloodshed: in France, priests and faithful ones died bravely for God.
Nowadays, she has not stopped for a moment suffering on all sides a terrible struggle, a violent or a hypocritical persecution, admirably sup- -

4 aoe, ' . hell - he La à - a iib- aa

` FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 804

Dee 0e

scope from the summit of the pontificate to the
the humblest degree of the priesthood.

As well as an army drawn up in battle formation, by a thanks in particular to this sixth age, the Church everywhere opposes the strengthened unity of the com-command and obedience, to the infernal union
the countless phalanxes of the Freemason-
nonsense.

The reader's attention should be drawn here to several very significant concordances between the words of Jesus Christ in the epistles and the various periods to which they apply.

The first, fourth, and sixth epistles only offer praise for the courageous patience of the Church.

Our Lord said to him at his beginnings-ments, in the age of Ephesus: "I know your anger-
"You possess great patience..." You possess energetic patience.

to persecution; and in those times this pa'tienne supported the persecution stirred up against the nascent Church through the Jews, through those whom Our Lord had called them "the sons of the devil," vos a patre diabolo estis (See the Acts of the Apostles) and the Epistles). Then was taking place "this . mystery of iniquity" of which Saint Paul speaks, by the

i 45.

802 | FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

ae ee eee

me we ete ee ee ee

efforts of the deicide and hardened Jews and by the he-

- Gnostic-Jewish resies. At the following age, under the influence of these same Jews began the persecutions by Roman emperors against the E-church t. That is why Our Lord told him in the second epistle, in the Smyrna period: "You
"She is slandered by those who call themselves Jews, but "They are not, but who are the synagogue of Sa"tan." The Jews (Judæi), indeed, in this second age ceased to be the children of Abraham and of Judah according to the spirit; from the second century of
In our era, they became the true synagogue or Church of the devil. Under their influence, mysterious iniquity...

serious, whose beginnings Saint Paul had pointed out -

-said and became established. Driven out of Judea and scattered throughout the world, the Jews, sons of the Pharisees, mingled the subtleties and reveries of the Pharisaic cabal
to the concepts of Gnosticism and to the mysteries of the pagan cabal. It was around this time that was constituted the body of magical cabalism, or cult of dark spirits including Jewish diviners-'

'4 See a communication on the legal situation of Christians-hold in the Roman Empire, at the end of the 1st century, presented to the Academy of Inscriptions, in March 1879, by Mr. Ferdinand given by Nero, on the suggestions of the famous Poppaea, the damned soul of the Jews (Literary Review of the Universe, March) 1879). See also Tertullian.

,
ae ewe veel
oe "and + eg ee oh Ei Re an, at

- FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 803

aaaa ma a aa E ae ea ea ea e

In his fourth age, Our Lord praises new-
the energetic patience of the Church, novi... patientiam tuam (broucvv). That is because, in the com-
At the beginning of that era, the Church had to undergo harsh local persecutions and much suffering
Frances had to endure hardships to convert the barbarians
Arians who were enemies of the divinity of Jesus-Christ and the pagan barbarians who ignored him.

In the sixth epistle, Jesus Christ does, as in the first and fourth, the praise of the pa-energetic stance of the Church (brcucvt). Now, these pa- `

1 I] There was, among the Jews, a legitimate cabal, oral tradition sacred, until the preaching of Our Lord who made frequent deliverances there allusions. The Pharisees had already begun to alter it into several points. They corrupted her further when they realized-
They realized that she was entirely in favor of the dogmas of Christianity.
It became the rabbinic cabal, which Rabbi Judah established by written, around 190, in his collection called Mishna or Misna (Repetition for the law, second law, oral), This collection was augmented later mentioned a number of supplements, then the Gemara (commentary and supplement!) of Jerusalem and of the Gemara of Babylon. The collection of all these writings forms The Talmud. Magical Kabbalah predates the Jews. [It is the quintessence of idolatry, that is to say, the formal worship of fallen spirits, preserved in the pagan sanctuaries of the East.
The Jews knew it and had practiced it for a long time.
before the Babylonian captivity. They returned there after their dispersion. (See On the Harmony of the Church and the Synagogue, by Chevalier Drach; t. I, notice on the Talmud, p. 121 et seq., and t. II, p. xv et seq. and p. xxvi and xxvii. See also the Jew,

--

--

THE

roles also relate to persecution,
and to a persecution further fueled by the influence and the action of the Jews whom Our Lord calls Again, "the synagogue of Satan." We we have recounted and we see with our own eyes the fu-serious attacks that are being launched against the Church, in our sixth age, as well as in the first and at the second, the Jew, inspirer and leader of Freemasonry Nonsense. This veritable synagogue of the devil is arriving today almost at the peak of its power-
. sance, and it works towards the complete realization of the "mystery of iniquity" which will be the restoration of Satan's universal domination over the humankind.

Other concordances: In the first epistle,
Jesus Christ praises the Church because it has suffered for its name: "Kt sustinuisti propter nomen
meum. » Jesus Christ is God; his name is:
Son of God, Word of God. This phrase means Therefore, to say: "You have suffered to proclaim my name"
divine, my divinity, to affirm that I am God
to the outraged Jews and the mocking Gentiles.

This praise is repeated in old age, at the age of Pergamon (Iepyapog, fortress, citadel):
"Et tenes nomen meum," you keep non nom,
You uphold my divine name, my divinity. It was at ee eS 2 les +R - Ce ae!

~

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. '805

ee a

ee ee ea

the era of the Arian heresy which destroyed the di-
The image of Jesus Christ, in making him the Word, the Son of God, inferior to the Father. The Church rejected energetically addressed this error and supported the divinity:
of the Son of God, consubstantial with his Father. In At the same time, in that age it manifested itself with the brilliance of the doctrinal and guiding authority of Rome papal. On all sides, recourse was made to the pa-pauté amidst dogmatic controversies and administrative disagreements. This authority ap- - appeared more and more like the fortress spiritual aspect of religion.

However, in the sixth age the same thing also occurs again.
praise. The sixth epistle reads: "Non negasti nomen meum: "You have affirmed my divine name, my ` divinity. And this was still at a time when the di-
The birthright of Jesus Christ is vehemently denied, where the very existence of God is challenged; and
In this age as well, the definition of infall-Papal instability shows more than ever the pa-protected as the unshakeable citadel of the Church.

This expression nomen meum is only found in these three epistles.

Because of these three kinds of meritorious works,
Our Lord has made the Church of the sixth age
three promises:

806 ` FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

-e eme eae e _— ma
+

l. "Behold, I have placed before you a door or-
"A green space that no one can close."

"This expression, ostium apertum., says
 "Abbot Drach, here and elsewhere, signifies the fa"cility that God provides for his ministers of an-
 "to proclaim his word and the happy fruits of con-
 "The version with which he fertilizes it." Obviously he This passage concerns this great and final _ preaching of the Church that everything will favor in the
 the whole world, and which is also predicted for the sixth trumpet for the last years of the sixth age. One could even say that this prediction has
 . has begun to be accomplished from this moment onward in this vast and new field that the Lord comes to have recently opened up to apostolic work in the center of the African continent. This region, if long unexplored and unknown, contains approximately One hundred and fifty million idolaters*, that's good the gate that Saint Paul also speaks of: "Ostium mihi apertum est magnum et evidentens: a great
 The door is clearly open to me (|I ad Co-

1 The Holy Bible. Revelation, p. 69, n. 8. Compare: Acts, _xiv, 26. II Corinth., 11, 12. Col., 1v, 3.

3 See the newspaper Le Messager du Sarré-Cœur, August 1878:
 The new missions of Central Africa. See also U-Nivers, August 10 and December 22, 1878, and January 27, February 20 and June 19, 1879.

Freemasons and Jews. 807

— aaa aŮŮ ome M

(v. rinth., xvi, 9). The Church's envoys are already entered in large numbers through this gate which have ou-ac verte, under the providential action of God, the cu:riosity and perseverance of learned travelers.
 TE i Catholic missionaries will have, as a-; 23 apostle, to triumph over many adversaries and of + multiple difficulties. But they will succeed, the Seiw1 gneur is with them, and he said that nobody
 "They could close that door on them."
 a 2. © Here I will produce some of the > € Synagogue of Satan who call themselves Jews and do not
 They are not, but they are liars; and I will make them do not come and prostrate themselves at your feet and let them
 "So that she knows I love you."
 "We can find a first accomplishment of

This promise is reflected in individual conversions.

events that occurred in this century among the Jews:

iz and which are numerous and significant'. This is not re i point the prediction of the total conversion of the people
"I am Jewish, since Our Lord only speaks of [Some. But the complete realization of this promise will take place especially after the major ca-E of the sixth age. The synagogue of Sa-

. 1 V, Harmonies of the Church and the Synagogue, by the knight.
Edrach, Volume I, p. 26, note 33, page 224, and page 31. This ou-Ivrage was published in 1844.

"4

808 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

Tan, it's not just the Jewish nation, it's the entire Masonry, its docile instrument-
ment. | | | 4

The punishments will open many eyes. Among modernized Jews, like among the Freemasons fools of all ranks, many will convert sin-will certainly return to the Church, proclaiming his divinity, thereby recognizing > that it is God's chosen work.

Let us recall the letter from the converted Freemason, returned to the love of the Church, and the words afflicting
mist to certain leaders of secret societies. 3

There are more masons and - than one might think Jews who want to know for sure'

by the facts whether the Catholic Church is divine or no, and who are seriously attempting the experiment.
This criminal experiment will have a much more significant result.
different from what they hoped for: she rowed them- |
nera to the Church: "Ecce faciam ut veniant et ' « adore ante pedes tuos et sawant quia ego dilexi 4
"te." |

3. "I will keep you from the hour of deception which:
must come throughout the universe to test those who inhabit the earth." 7

This temptation is the seventh age which is >

SCREAM

2 2

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 809

- -n / A

SO

The Lord clearly marks this by the words which followed by: "Here I am, I am coming soon."

He assures the loyal and courageous members of the Church of the second part of the sixth age that he will spare them the terrible ordeal of the period final. As we have already said: these steps- energetic and vigilant men, these generous faithful who will have unwaveringly supported the struggles that we let us cross over and that the Lord will have preserved them. during the vengeful catastrophes, will end in peace their careers before the end of the sixth age. |

Our Lord exhorts them to persevere in their holy dispositions and in the practice of works he has just praised: lene quod habes, Keep what you have safe, so that with the You also obtained peace in your final days the eternal crown of glory; ut nemo accipiat coronam tuam.

IN SUMMARY.

The Book of Revelation thus presents the sixth age: | The sixth epistle praises the works without reservation numerous and particularly deserving of 810 _ FRANKS-MAGONS AND JEWS.

The Church in the age of fraternity. It announces, in an indirect way, a persecution of the sy-

all inner and human power, put to use
so to speak, under lock and key, violently and hypocritically
by hostile powers, the Church nevertheless re-sistera valiantly in all parts of the world at the same time, in perfect unity of the faithful and of pastors who will tirelessly ensure the conservation

tion and to the defense of the deposit of truth and of the holiness. As a reward, Our Lord promises, firstly, to open to the zeal of the Church a a vast field of action that no one will be able to close in front of her and where she will gather the most happy fruits of conversion, secondly, of bring back a number of the members of the satanic synagogue, that is to say, Jews and new heretics, so that all may see his 'love for her; thirdly, to give her peace and rest during the last few years of this sixth age, so restless and so laborious, until- .

than that.

The sixth seal threatens, in anticipation,
of total and irreparable ruin the human powers
hands, all hostile to the Church during the sixth era. Power will be taken away from the children of = wie to mm N

)

;
;

|

FREEMASONS AND JEWS. - . 811

the city of evil and will forever pass into the hands of the saints from the Most High.

The sixth trumpet depicted in a pre-
First vision of the appalling heresy whose machinations.
secret and public [issues] will do so much harm to the Church during this period. The City of God will be attacked worldwide and surrounded by enemies on all sides. The prophet makes them the ene-Meration: two hundred million new here-ticks, a considerable number of Catholics killed in their faith by their foul words, then the infidels already dead to all supernatural life, and Finally – the vicious and criminals of those times-Mentable.

A second vision announces that the Lord
He will not abandon his Church. He will intervene.
first, according to mercy, to make triumph the Truth. He will spread the light through the intermediary of Diary of the Virgin Mary, his Immaculate Mother, and through the teachings of the Church, primarily in the greatest and last of the escutcheons menics. I] will then intervene, according to the rigor justice, through events, to impose to mankind this light of truth. He will compel those most hardened by political catastrophes and social forces to recognize that the Church is the only ap-

$12 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

– ee amm ne me mn Se ee ee ee ee ST ee
=

solid well and the only true preservative of societies and governments. Punishments
However, they will be stopped and a deadline will be granted
. world. Then, by a wonderful return, this the world, addressing the Church, will ask him for his salutary lights. The Vatican Council convened will continue. Its doctrines and decrees will be act-accepted everywhere with the greatest joy. The Church will preach the truth without hindrance in the universe by-third. But as the end of the sixth age must be an age of enlightenment, which the Holy Spirit did not wants to refuse nothing to the Church before her trials

In the finals, he warns her, in this place, of what will soon to happen to him: he sums it up in a few words _ the seventh age.

The Church is warned that this time of rest will be short, that the triumph of truth will not last long. Nations will once again abuse so much graces; they will be rejected: then will begin the seventh age. The Church will be reduced to a whole a small number of faithful that will be increased by conversion of the Jews. But the Lord did not abandon him. will not give in this extreme: Elijah and Enoch will be sent to HIS aid.

May God preserve us from living in the seventh age! Blessed are those who will see the rest of the Church

FREEMASONS AND JEWS: 813

And the triumph of truth! Happier still those who will die, before the end of this peace, in The joy of the Lord!

May the Immaculate Virgin grant us all,

Dear readers, this double grace!

te me

SE, ee, eae, RE - | i Did

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PREFACE.

INTRODUCTION. – Summary of the main points of the study on the previous parts of the Book of Revelation.

I. Usefulness of works on the Apocalypse.

III. Connection and relationship of the Apocalypse with the Old Testament and the New Testament . . .

eeaeeee

IV. Division of the Apocalypse – The Seven Epistles – Their general meaning... 2... TE

V. Permanent vision.

+ . è

VI. – The Book with Seven Seals. – General Meaning of the Visions seals and trumpets...

. . . è . e è

VII. The four horses and four riders, a symbol of the Roman Empire and its emperors, in the four Early Church Ages. – Developments and Evidence.

VII. The visions of the trumpets announce the great heresies, symbolized by fire. – Developments and evidence . . ,. . .

IX. The seven periods or ages of the Church: First age: Beginnings of the Church. – Second Age: Persecutions and martyrs. – Third age: Authority of Rome Pontifical. – Doctors. – Fourth Age: Ruin and punishment of the fourth empire of Daniel, – Power of the Fifth Empire, the Catholic Church. – Reign of a thousand years. – The chaining and unleashing of Satan. – Fifth Age: First Unleashing of Satan: Protestantism. – Sixth Age: Second Outburst of Satan: Freemasonry, Pages.

36

49

816 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

CHAPTER ONE.

Sixth Church Age. – Sixth Trumpet. – Explication of the first vision: new and horrible heresy, represented by the appearance of an army of caknights and terrifying horses with lion heads and

snake tails. . . s . «© +. . 78

CHAPTER TWO.

OF FREEMASONRY.

First section.

Definition of Freemasonry. – Its condemnation
by the Church. – Sources and documents. 108

Second section. – Origin of Freemasonry.

[Fabulous Origins 138

II. Historical Origins: | a

1° Heretical origins: Gnostics, Manicheans, Albigois, Sociniens. « . +. . 'o' .- 139

2. Templar origin. | 152

– Guilt of the Templars demonstrated by documents
old and new things; 153

– Templar lineage of Freemasonry. 177

3. Summary and agreement of the various opinions on the "origins of Freemasonry 221

Third section. – Developments in Freemasonry.

,

p

Eighteenth century: Considerable progress of Freemasonry Templar order at the beginning of the eighteenth century

cle. – The philosophers Voltaire, Rousseau, Helvétius, –

Diderot, Condorcet, etc., etc., all Freemasons. – The Martinism, or French Illuminism. – Freemasonry Egyptian or Misraim; Cagliostro. – The Enlightenment Bavarianism; Adam Weishaupt. – Unification of all the secret societies at the Wilhelmsbad congress in 1782. – Presence and first action of the Jew in ~ vile.

At >

r
| | FREEMASONS AND JEWS. 817

Freemasonry. – French Revolution, work of the Girondin and Jacobin Freemasons. – The Corsican Buonaparte, a high-ranking Freemason, was brought to power, then overthrown. by the Freemasons . . . a . . . s . . . 225

II. Contemporary Period: New Tactics of the Masonry: Exterior masonry and hidden masonry, 258

1° Multiple branches of Freemasonry.

Carbonarism: Italian Carbonari; the haunt sale; Nubius; the Jew Piccolo-Tigre, etc. . . , . .

– French Carbon Factory; the Seasons Company.

– Young Europe; Marini. – Facts. . . 250

2° The International: the Jew Lassalle, the Jew Karl Marx.

– Socialism. – Nihilism. 279

3. Fenianism. – 4. The Universal Religious Alliance.

– The Society of the Secular Faith. – 5° The United Alliance-

Verselle Israelite; the Jew Crémieux; Romania and the Jews. – 6° Solidarity, – 7° The League of the En-

\

|

HAS

|

ae teaching. e . . 6 . . ew . ew 320
2° Geographic and digital scope.

1. On Freemasonry Proper; 2. On the Internal national; 3rd total of the Masonic army . , . . . 354

Fourth section. – Organization of Freemasonry.

– I. Organization of Freemasonry proper:

Freemasonry for men. – Various rites. – Mason-
external or of the first three grades. – Ma.
Hidden or backroom nonsense. – Ranks higher or higher grades, – Grade 89 of the rite
of Misraïm. – Certain existence of the high ranks.

– Lodges and workshops, Masonic subdivisions. – Thus-Masonic symbols, jewelry, emblems, language and writing
Lodge. – Lodge, the premises of the temple of Freemasonry.
Administration. – Grand Orient. . . 4. . 367

2. Women's Freemasonry, or adoption lodges. – Origine. – Rites and practices. – Immorality. © Megoanerie children, – Baptism, marriage and seduction conical. , . . 408

no

46

Sts. ~. FRANOS-MASONS AND JEWS.
ge Predition of the Masonry & organizes the society at 050 MARE. 4 ow ca let EU 2 AUX ee 16 KB RF

II. Organization of the main branches of Freemasonry
rie. – Carbonarism: Italian rites and degrees. Reform Mazzinian. French Rite. – Fenianism. – International-

SSS ee eee – —+ +

$ national Nihilism, Bte: ea ara € a SS See ee « 6

Fifth section – On some important particularities
in the organization of Freemasonry.

` I. Masonic oaths.

In the eighteenth century: oaths of the first degree of
The Freemasonry of the Illuminati; of the highest degree of the Martinist Freemasonry, *. . . , . . ,. « © + « 43

' + In the nineteenth century: oaths of the apprentice mason;
of the chosen one, of the chosen one of the fifteen, of the Scotsman, of the Knight of the East, of the Rosicrucians, of the great Scottish Rite of Saint-André, the great chosen one of the Italian Carbonari, of the initiate of the Carbonari of the seasons, of the perfect Mistress in the Freemasonry of women. – Concluded-MONS. The 6 E GEE N Sa 7 16e dreams eee

– I. The secrets of Freemasonry.

– Ignorance of ordinary Freemasons, of Freemason princes, of official leaders, senior Freemasons: – The true secrets known only to a select few initiates.
Countless dupes in Freemasonry. 453

II. Real and ruling authority in Freemasonry.

She is not among the official and ex- dignitaries laughing, neither in the Grand Orients, nor in the great masters, it is in the hands of a few unknowns nus, of the supreme patriarch and his five or six assessors, whose names the masons will never know and will never see faces – These strangers are

UNIS dice eioa ae AEE

V. The Jews, the true leaders and real directors of the Freemasonry and all secret societies, its branches. – Evidence of reason, testimony and G6: WE, crane ke CN M, See ee ek ES OS

–Sixth section. – Means of action of Freemasonry.

Lies and hypocrisy. – Supposed benevolence

– Da SE A

£

THERE

. FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

mt te mn D = 0e ne ne me mm me ee

__- - -- - - =

'of Freemasonry. – The serpent, a true symbol. and beloved emblem of Freemasonry . . , .

II. Violence of all kinds. – The violent nature of Masonic society as demonstrated by its rites and rules.

through his initiations, through his teachings, – Evidence of facts: revolutions, looting, assassinations; the Imperial prince. – Aqua tofana; the ring of the commun-
Dr. Parisel; "ow . te e "%

IH. The dissemination of the most monstrous errors and of the more hideous corruption. – Doctrines and beliefs maconical: dualism, Sabianism, atheism, etc.

– Masonic morality: principle: sacred right for all men to the satisfaction of instincts and steps-principles of nature. – PAA: impurity, pride, ie cu, to . . . TOE The E

– To spread its disastrous errors, Freemasonry possessessede, more than all past heresies, "the power of the mouth" or of speech: speech uttered in assemblies and meetings of every kind; speech im-Award-winning: the book and especially the journal. . e . 6 6 .

Seventh section. – Final goal of Freemasonry.

The threefold purpose of Freemasonry, which has been its principal secret,
– The first goal, perfectly well known today: the destruction of religion and the Catholic Church, of

Garis 36: MONS sa € + ee 0e! cae to ey ae ee ee
 – The second and third, still little known: return of the Jewish nation in Palestine and domination ab© solution of the race of Israel over the entire universe. – Preu-POS. Ju. ar to a 62 GREEN STREET.
 – Possibility, currently very visible, of this universaddle domination. – Explanation of the general policy
 pale, present and &- vonir: se sw soaa .
 – The ultimate goal of Freemasonry from a supernatural point of view.
 Freemasonry is inspired and directed by Satan; it
 f practices magical cabalism or spirit worship fallen; Jewish Freemasonry is the instrument with the-which Satan strives to reconstitute his former dominion-tion on humanity; preparation of peoples and of the worse than TAntécbtiit at w at + ee at 4 at sight 4

4

568

616

705

820 FREEMASONS AND JEWS.

CHAPTER THREE.

Application & the Fane Macomnerié of the first vision

of the sixth trumpet. '718

CHAPTER FOUR.

Second vision of the sixth trumpet. – Interventions di-vines, – 'the triumph of truth. – Time for rest
 The Church before its final battles. – First inter-Divine intervention: apparitions of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Vatican Council, etc. – Second intervention
 'of God beneath the veil of events. – Catastrophes'
 political and social issues – Punishments. – Princes and:

'consequences of the doctrines and practices of heresy con-

AND

Site - nes. poe we

temporary, will return to the Church, the only conservative:
of human powers and societies. - Peacetime i and rest; the last reprieve granted to the sinful world. - i Resumption of the Vatican Council. - Triumph of truth!
- Preaching of the Catholic religion throughout the world |
verse. - Warnings given to the Church: announcement Abridged account of the principal events of the seventh age . . 736 | Pad.

CHAPTER FIVE. WT. Tier

Sixth Epistle: The Church Facing Freemasonry v
Jewish or of the Revolution. - Her works, her merits, 0 his reward in the sixth age. 587 "4 RS Nr Are VU) died CS
P; CT.

8

CEREN T

Faris. - Imprimerie e Ch. Noblel, 43, rue Cujas. - 7886. A

è cx

ec
- tl {jo ewe". ee Ss oa cee

Digitized by Google

L

Date Due To

a Pa Ve >

4 +

one

rer te

--

CU TOUL

French

English

Full text of " Leon Kahn The Jews of Paris During the Revolution "

See other formats

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google books piz

. = or ae
ee

<https://books.google.com> [m] 7

= 1 total

Google

About this book

This is a digital copy of a work kept for generations on the shelves of a library before taken down for precaution by Google as part of a project aimed at allowing Internet users to discover the full text of the line.

As this book is relatively old, it is no longer protected by copyright law and is now in the public domain. "belonging to the public domain" means that the book in question has never been subject to copyright expiry. The requirements for a book to enter the public domain may vary from country to country. This book has so many links with the past. They are witnesses to the richness of our history, our culture and our language, too often difficult to access to the public.

Footnotes and other annotations in the margins of the text present in the original volume are preserved in the long journey taken by the work from the publishing house through the library to find its way to you.

Instructions for use

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain works and make them thus accessible to all. These books are in fact the property of everyone and we are quite happy to share them. However, it is an expensive project. Consequently and with a view to continuing the dissemination of these works, necessary measures to prevent possible abuses that third-party merchant sites could engage in are being taken, technical constraints relating to automated queries.

We also ask you to:

+ Do not use the files for commercial purposes. We have designed the Google Book Search program to be used for non-commercial purposes only.

any commercial purpose.

+ Do not make automated queries Do not send any automated queries to the Google system. If research concerning translation software, optical character recognition or any other area large quantities of text, do not hesitate to contact us. When carrying out this type of work, works and documents belonging to the public domain and would be happy to be of assistance

+ Do not remove attribution The Google watermark contained in each file is essential to inform and allow them to access more materials through the Google Book Search Program. Do not delete. In no case.

+ Stay legal Whatever use you plan to make of the files, remember that it is your responsibility to ensure compliance with the law. If a work is in the American public domain, do not assume it is in the other countries. The legal copyright term for a book varies from country to country. Works whose use is authorized and those for which it is not. Don't think that just posting on Google Book Search means that it can be used in any way around the world. The sentence to which you are subject copyright infringement can be severe.

About Google Book Search

By promoting search and access to a growing number of books available in many languages, Google helps help promote cultural diversity through Google Book Search. Indeed, the Google Book Search helps Internet users to discover the world's literary heritage, while helping authors and publishers online searches of the full text of this book at <http://books.google.com>

RAT: :

+ Po r'

"e | ' ù 14 to 14 dr

+ y- "se ai Ar AND

4 av + The £ s

fag A Pi 44 ot

{ $ A ee

f 7 NZ SE

A i 13

A e.

"hs ar,

We D s

ie ae

4 » SOM
i rite E kat P
` ® sd LL ~ k
4 x 7 eRe "Z aF
– a re wo 5

i 1
hi there –
n / A . | = EN
The =f}
LP 7 Ben L
: 3 A ' ~ S
donkey

J
T h» 7 – c
(r 7 OF a A r
The dd (sa i. + jo A a th 4 ACE E \ = T LR Pia; Pad Ch L “J d PFa: . ~ Maase +
P n It. aes i DN . call eine nn ti – f Les, b, “© LS” amm > SE te è = i this Al Pat ee – i

8

Lai

sae This da to ene sie

=
nn

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google |

$7166

THE

Jews of Paris

DURING

THE REVOLUTION

BY \Yy
J,

LEON KAHN

PARIS

PAUL OLLENDORFF, EDITOR

28 bis, RUE DE RICHELIEU, 28 bis

1899

Reproduction and translation rights reserved for all countries, including Sweden, Norway and Holland.

Daa AN Google

The Jews of Paris

DURING THE REVOLUTION

FROM THE SAME AUTHOR

History of the Jewish municipal and consistorial schools of-Paris, with a preface by Mr. Zaboc-Kaun.

Manual professions and patronage institutions.

Charitable Establishments and Cemeteries, with engravings and plans.

Mutual Aid, Philanthropic Societies" rt of pre-clairvoyance, with a preface by Mr. Isidore Lors.

0

Jews in Paris, since the 6th century with engravings: sort of edition preface by Mr. ZAnoc-Kaux.

The Jews of Paris under Louis XV.

The Jews of Paris in the 8th century, according to the Archives of the Lieu-general management of Police at the Bastille.

THE Jews of Paris

DURING

THE REVOLUTION

LEON KAHN

PARIS
PAUL OLLENDORFF, EDITOR

28 bis, RUE DE RICHELIEU, 28 bis

1898

Reproduction and translation rights reserved for all countries,
including Sweden, Norway and Holland.

For fifteen years I have spent my leisure time writing the history of the Jews of Paris. Brought by discovery interesting papers to study, in a series of monographs, developments over the last hundred years the Israeli community had brought in its works of education, patronage, charity and foresight, I later went back to the origin of the existence of Jews in Paris, and, in a quick presentation, I followed them until our days. Unpublished documents, drawn from the Library of the Arsenal, then allowed me to re-construct their history more precisely 16th century, and, as a natural consequence of this last study, I was thinking from that time of writing the history of the Jews of Paris during the Revolution. After describing the miserable and humiliating life they lingering through the centuries, witnessing their entry in the intimate life of the country whose very threshold until then was forbidden to them, to see their soul ennoble, rise in an atmosphere of tolerance and freedom, feel their hearts beat in contact with big hearts... What striking contrast! and what an attractive task!

. It is this work that I present today to the reader-tor. By chance it appears at the time when the camera the most iniquitous and violent loincloth is engaged against the Jews, and where the worst designs are attempted against the entire work of the Revolution. All she gave France something beautiful, great, generous, humanity, goodness, civilization, fraternal freedom and literary – marvelous conquests which would suffice for they alone ensure the eternal glory of a nation – everything today is questioned in views guilty, that the future will not fail to wither and that the people have already stigmatized.

VI INTRODUCTION

The Jews initially believed that he was going very quickly pass and die, the wind of hatred which blew over them. But the wind turned into a hurricane; the hurricane became storm; and the storm does not calm down. Many of us have little idea that we relive the long and cruel years that our fathers have experienced, so hard in truth, so painful, that the beneficent decrees of the Revolution could barely

But what difference still exists between this era and ours! Today's Jews are strong in their rights acquired over a century; in 1789, their ancestors, foreigners in the middle of the kingdom, had everything to do to conquer them. Recently come to a new society, they had to overcome prejudices, prejudices, contempt and hatred; they had to destroy malicious captions, nullify the accusations, lies, and, this task accomplished, to be accepted as members of the nation. But when she finally adopted them, they proved by their patriotism that they were also, true sons of France. _

"What admirable efforts they made for this purpose, what sacrifices they imposed on themselves, with what joy, what dedication, what passion, they fraternized with the people, this book will tell it. Much has been written about the Jews of the Revolution. No one yet, for those of Paris, had made history. She was, a few years ago, only interesting to write; it imposes itself, today, today that we want to tear away from the Israelites their quality of citizen and that all insults are taken back against them, all the false allegations, all the deceptions with which their fathers were burdened. By reading the pages which will follow, we will see how big the bad is, the faith of those who thus outrage them, we will see if the act of reparation that the 17th century finally saw come to fruition was not also an act of strict Justice.

INTRODUCTION VII

This work, I can say, is sincere and impartial. This is not a polemical book; it's a book of history. It will be a lesson for loyal men, maybe ; in any case, it will allow them to refute the slanderous imputations of those who, at contempt of all laws of law, equity, patriotism and reason, do not have as their goal, by wanting to tear the emancipation of the Jews, than to ruin the glorious edifice raised by the Revolution.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS OF PARIS

DURING THE REVOLUTION

EMANCIPATION

FIRST CHAPTER

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS BEFORE THE REVOLUTION

The situation of the Jews of Paris was, throughout the 18th century, painful and precarious. Troubled in exercise of their religion, in their existence, in their commerce, they had to suffer the harshest vexations from the police inspectors specially responsible for monitoring them and administer them. Subject to an exceptional regime, they depended solely on the inspector in place, his mood, the state of one's interests: barriers too fragile to defend them against arbitrariness of which all categories of citizens suffered at that time and which weighed even more heavily on Protestants and Jews. Of these agents, true arbiters of their destiny, to Ministers of State – by the usual police procedures,

i 1

9 EMANCIPATION

notes, letters or reports – were formed against them the distrust and prejudice, which ultimately resulted by rigorous Ordinances with their freedom, of their lives and their property.

They had been driven out in 1615 and since then they had almost completely disappeared from Paris. They started to return to it little by little during the Regency. During For a few years we didn't seem to be moved by it. But in 1719, the arrival of around twenty Jews, who came particularly from Metz and who had not brought a passport, awakened the attention of the police. A note was given to the Regent to demand against them the restoration of the "former uses", and, from that moment until 1750, they were the subject of a series of severe measures demanded by the lieutenant generals of police on the incitements of exempt.

police lieutenant brings with the new magistrate a new rigor, confirms an old Ordinance, recalls shovel each time, making them worse, "the old usage" or "the old rules", giving who it will belong to the authorization to put Jews in prison, not to make them hope that "whenever it seems appropriate" to drive them out of Paris and confiscate their property.

An Ordinance issued in 1750 brought it into force of law the successive orders of the lieutenant generals of police. She was rigorously executed throughout the reign of Louis XV. Investigations, arrests, confiscations, searches, nothing was neglected by the commissioners at Châtelet, lieutenants of short dress, police inspectors or exempt, for prevent Jews from staying in Paris by giving them back intolerable life. Curious thing! This Order will continue to produce its effect during the reign of Louis XVI and, in the first months of the Revolution, we still find it in vigor at its most humiliating 1.

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS 3

However, as time progresses, the spirits awaken, ideas broaden, it takes place in the soul of the nation as a mixture of sensitivity and reason which wins all ranks of society. Public consciousness moves; she realizes that religious exclusions are from another age, and the surge of liberalism is so powerful health that we lament over the undeserved fate of the Protestants. Then we turn a look of pity towards the Jews, towards these unfortunate "Asians", towards "these peoples always proscribed, wanderers and vagabonds on the globe, these peoples doomed to humiliation"... It rises like a cry of reproach against those who inflicted so much suffering on them, and very few resist the current of opinion which forms in their favor. F

Louis XVI made himself the first interpreter of sentiment general towards them by abolishing, in January 1784, the bodily tolls which, in part of France, assiduously Jews used to treat animals. We were surprised then that as barbarous a custom existed in France that it could have been there maintained throughout the ages, and people seemed to doubt that it was true. In 1791 itself, a newspaper, among others?, consensually realized that many people were still watching this opinion "as a popular error", and, to fix its readers toll rights which were paid at Château-sur-Loire”.

1. See. on the subject of the Jews in the 18th century: Léon Kahn, the Jews of Paris under Louis XV (Paris, 1892), and the Jews of Paris in the 18th century? century (Paris, 1894). |

2. La Chronique de Paris, issue of January 5, 1791.

hk EMANCIPATION

Such a movement, to which even the king did not remain indifferent, was to quickly expand. We took care of Jews, we thought of them, we introduced the population to their morals, their history, their worship', we quoted about them pleasant or moving anecdotes where they had not always the nastiest role, and the serious newspapers do not did not disdain to reproduce them.

This is the time (1785) when the Society of Arts and Sciences de Metz put out a competition for the year 1787 on the question today so well known: “Are there ways to make the more useful and happier Jews in France?? » This competition had excited many minds. Nine writers there had taken part.

Only two of the competitors showed themselves to be unfavorable. responsible to the Jews: M. Haillecourt and Dom Chais.

Mr. Haillecourt, prosecutor at the Parliament of Metz, handled the subject very disdainfully, in a page and a half. To what good to try to make the Jews useful? What's the point, happy? Useful, they will ruin artists, artisans and merchants; happy, they will strip the Messins of “a third of the owners” ties which are not in the hands of people of the Church. What to do therefore to make them happy “without harming others French ” ? It's very simple: “transport them en masse in the deserts of Guyana.

Dom Chais, Benedictine, former priest of Charleville, didn't even see the point in changing their condition. Their situation was “invaluable” for the Christian Church, because they

1. The Chronicle, No. 36, September 28, 1789.

2. See, for the details of this competition, the excellent study by Mr. Abrafollow: The Emancipation of the Jews before the Royal Society of Sciences et des Arts de Metz in 1787 and M. Ræderer (Revue des Etudes nationales, No. 1, July–September 1880, Paris).

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS 5

remained in his eyes as “the most consoling assurance of the truth of his faith.”

It should be noted that, among the priests who took part in the competition, Dom Chais was the only one to express an opinion so little in conformity with the law of charity and love that the Church professes. Between the seven other writers who presented a memorandum to the Society, it was expected indeed, in addition to Abbot Grégoire whom we will find very soon here, two abbots: Mr. Cornu-Desmarais, priest near Longwy, and the abbot of Louze.

Both studied the question from two points of view of politics and humanity, with the concern to do something well, and not as pamphleteers for whom insult makes up for reason. Both, in a different form, delivered tribute to the virtues of the Jews, recognizing that the vices attributed to this unfortunate “people” were the work of Christians, and that, free to own land and indulge in all the work, they would contribute like all the “regnicoles” to the greatness and prosperity of the country. “Let us despise them less, they will honor themselves more. » It was, meeting weird! at the same time the opinion of a king's prosecutor Santo Domingo and that of Mr. Vatiaud, perpetual secretary of the Royal Agricultural Society of Laon.

This was also the feeling of Abbot Grégoire. But with what “dignity” and what “brilliance” he exhibited in his Essay on physical, moral and political regeneration of the Jews! The Society of Metz admired the “sound and sometimes sublime” of the author, the “new views” and the “feelings deep” which were encountered almost everywhere in his work. “Instead of filling the gap that separates Jews among us, he said, we took pleasure in enlarging it; far from provide them with reasons to enlighten themselves, to improve themselves, we closed all the avenues of the temple of virtue and honour. neur. What could become of the Jew, overwhelmed by despotism, proscribed by the laws, showered with ignominies, tormented by enemies, without suffering insults... I] was despised, he had become contemptible; in his place perhaps we would have been worse. » [we must therefore make the greatest efforts to of the regeneration of the Jews. In a just and fraternal society eternal, they will become less unhappy; less unfortunate-rous, they will make themselves more useful, and the homeland will have in them excellent citizens.

6 EMANCIPATION

Two other memoirs attracted more particular attention, in 1788, with the work of Abbot Grégoire, the attention of the Royal Society of Metz: these were that of Mr. Thiéry, lawyer in Nancy, and that of Zalkind Hourwitz, a Polish Jew.

Mr. Thiéry's study was animated by "a lively and profound love of humanity." The newspapers of that time compared to this point of view the priest of Embermeénil and the lawyer in Parliament. They said of Mr. Thiéry that he was an orator of the Jews, and of Abbot Grégoire that he was their lawyer. "One announces them, the other recommends them. »

Studying their religion, their character, their morals, their prejudices, their habits, he endeavored to remove all the obstacles that their adversaries presented to their entry into French society. "Without support," he said, "without any other property than their gold, forced to stifle all the passions that exalt other men, who elevate the soul, inflame the genius, occupy the activity, they have no other goal than to enrich themselves... [they do not owe their timidity only to the fear of persecution, their superstition than to their misfortunes. » We must therefore raise their soul, ennoble their hearts, and we will only achieve this goal by granting them the same freedom enjoyed by the French.

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS 7

Zalkind Hourwitz put in his Apology for the Jews the passionate ardor, the ardor, the love of his brothers whose soul was full. 1] sought to prove, like Gregory, as Thiéry, that the Jews should not be oppressed, that they should, under the protection of the laws, enjoy all the advantages attached to the quality of citizen, and he attested that they were worthy. The "Jewish nation" has no characteristic vices who must make it rejected by other nations; vices that he is reproached for, far from being the effect of his moral ideas and religious, are on the contrary the necessary result of the oppression and degradation to which she is condemned. Virtue will replace vice when we finally allow Jews to be honest people.

The price was shared between Abbot Grégoire, Mr. Thiéry and Zalkind Hourwitz. The Royal Society was pleased to grant this award to three works "based on the same principles, based on the same facts, tending to the same purpose and by almost the same means", and who had for authors "people on whom the difference of state, of homeland and probably of religion", had not point "stopped the action of the eternal truths of nature and the reason".

In Paris, we carefully followed the various phases of this struggle. From 1786, the Mercure de France!, taking text of this competition, published a long plea in favor of Jews: "Continual artisans of our luxury," said the author, "they know how to guarantee this. Their morals are simple and religious... Beneficent among themselves, rigid observers of a law to which their misfortune attaches them even more, they help each other in all their troubles... Have we not seen in

1. No. 6 of February 11, 1786.

8 EMANCIPATION

the capital... several Jews devote to public service riches pure in their source, forcing prevention has esteem, hatred of silence and leaving a memory pected? »

However, it was not until around 1789 that Laureate Islands published their works. A number of gazettes reported on it at length. They did the same time an in-depth study of the general history of the Jews. Feeling sorry for themselves, they declared that their cause was that of humanity, and, pushed themselves by interest which was manifested towards the Jews in the Assembly national, all concluded in almost identical terms that the oppression of the Jews had been and still was so general that there was honor to be won for those nations who did not would like to be fair to them. "Nothing we authorizes, they added, to deprive them of the exercise of their natural rights; by respecting these rights in others, we we respect ourselves. »

This was also the feeling of Malesherbes when, after having restored civil status to Protestants, he sought to sought, in agreement with Louis XVI, to "make the Jews more happy in France. Roederer, who was intimately involved in details of the organization of the Metz competition, was as such ideas of this Minister some curious information.

Roederer's first confidences on this subject date back of 5 Nivôse year V?. There was then a strong question of reduce state receivables due to the reduction in

4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 187, 191, 258, of July 6 and 10 and September 15 November 1789; – the Mercure de France, n° 1, of January 2, 1790; No. 14, April 3; No. 45, of November 7; – the Chronicle of Paris, No. 3, of January 3, 1790; – the Gazette de Paris, November 11, 1789.

2. Journal de Paris, n° 95.

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS 9

| money. The former representative of the three Orders of Metz in the National Assembly had strongly opposed this project, and he had said, two days previously, in the Journal de Paris, which would only be suitable for a Sanhedrin of usurers | Jews” to make such a decision. A Jew, MJ Rodrigues son, who was later secretary of the Consistory of Paris, sharply noted this phrase “worthy of the 14th century”. It is to this protest that Roederer responded, and he did so in such a way as to satisfy the questioner: “I have always honored this unfortunate nation. She has some virtues which are hers, and her vices have been our work...”

Brought by his praise of the Jews to speak of the during Metz, he added that the idea had come from him and that the writing of the program was by Lacué. Then coming to Malesherbes' projects relating to the Jews: "...The day where the Council granted civil status to Protestants, that the laws of Louis XIV still deprived them, Louis XVI said to M. de Malesherbes, who had espoused their cause: “M. de Malesherbes, you became a Protestant; me now nah, I make you Jewish. » On this order, M. de Malesherbes gathered several people at his home, including Tar- get, Lacretelle the elder and me; and it was between the three of us that he says this order from the king which I have just reported.

“He gave us, in a long conference, an admirable analysis of Jewish legislation; she was the substance of excellence slow memories that he had gathered... What became of these memories? If there is nothing more to be done now for the fate of the Jews, is there nothing to be learned from their laws and their story to fix ours? » |

Paris, from a work which had just been published on Malesherbes, he recalled this episode in a more precise way and drew

10 EMANCIPATION

at the same time with a quick stroke of the pen the portraits of Gradis, a Jew from Bordeaux, and Cerf Berr, a Jew from Alsace, "the two most considerable individuals of their nation in France", who had taken a very important part in the conferences at Malesherbes: "I remember," he wrote, "an anecdote from which we can judge that Malesherbes, who seized knows so well the difficulty of all these matters, also knew grasp the pleasant side of it, Giradisi and C(erf)-B (err) said to each other descendants of two different tribes; consequently, their doctrine and their morals were often in opposition, G. led the life of a man of the world; CB, rigid observer-worshiper of the least rites instituted by Moses, abstained forbidden foods, did not eat with any Christian, kept dait of the least occupation on Sabbath days, summer. Malesherbes was very keen that the Jewish Islands could have dinner and dine with Christians; when he asked G.: this can it be? G. answered yes; when he asked the same question to CB, he answered no.

"One day when he was trying to argue against CB on this subject, he undertook to prove to him that the maxims of the Jew of Bordeaux were dissolute, and preached his doctrine trine as an enthusiastic rigor. He became extremely impatient-lies Malesherbes, as one might believe; the day after, I went to see him; he told me about this session and ended with these words: Leroim said that he made me Jewish, and here is CB who wants to make me a Jansenist; I don't know which one to listen to anymore."

Besides Gradis and Cerf-Berr, Malesherbes had called with him Furtado and Lopès-Dubec, from Bordeaux, Isaïe-Berr-Bing, from Nancy, and Lazard Trenelle, from Paris. Hey-we see, we want to surround ourselves with as much light as possible to successfully accomplish the mission he had accepted,

We know what the outcome was. The work remained in suspense, stopped

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS 11

ted by the political events which followed one another with lightning speed. In reality, Males' plans-herbs, the very proposals of the Jews called to take than to loosen the bonds that bound the Jews.

Their trustees had agreed to request, with the maintenance of the privileges granted to some of the "nation +, the right for all to establish themselves throughout the entire of the kingdom, to exercise all professions, to possess and cultivate land, to be admitted to the chambers of commerce, municipal charges, etc., etc., and to continue to have, as in the past, their synagogues, their rabbis, their schools, their cemeteries. The Jews, according to this, should retain a distinct place in the state.

There could be no question, we can imagine, of assimilation complete with other citizens. Besides, no one thinks gee, the Jews did not dare, Malesherbes and the king did not want to. The Church claimed that the Revolution had, by emancipating pant the Jews, took the project which she had initiated: it there is a deliberate misunderstanding here. What was granted in 1788, for the Jews it was a kind of particular social order where, with an appearance of freedom, they would have remained strangers in the nation, subject to specific police rules, incapable of offending the Church. The Revolution was broader, more generous and fairer. |

It would have been there despite everything, and given the political regime-tick under which we lived, an immense progress accomplished. If we consider that, a few years earlier, Jews from Bayonne and Bordeaux residing in Paris had failed in their attempt to keep an open haberdashery shop there and drapery, and that, by order made in Council of king on the complaint of the corps of merchants, they had to let their goods be seized!; that everywhere in France, in Nevers, in La Rochelle, in Dijon, in Bouxviller, in Thann, in Marmoutiers, in Thionville, in Sarreguemines?, the officers municipal, police judges, merchant bodies, magistrates opposed with all their strength the establishment commercial ment of the Jews: we see how much clearer it was to be the horizon for these unfortunate people who, every day, we condemned as ambulants, and who were defended absolute to remain and establish oneself.

12 EMANCIPATION

Malesherbes' projects, the good intentions of Louis XVI, the wishes of the Jewish unions... all this was carried away in the whirlwind of daily events, and no improvement was made to the civil status of the Jews,

The Estates General are convened; they get together, they proclaim themselves in the National Assembly; National Assembly, as the Estates General did, inflames the spirits; its cries for freedom and equality reverberate throughout the kingdom; she pronounces the oath of the Jeu de Paume, and the entire people trembles at these multiplied calls for freedom from all servitudes. The Jews are in anguish; they continue to be placed, as the waste of the population, under the special supervision of the police.

The humiliation is absolute. Regularly every weeks, every fifteen days at most, the commissioners Châtelet invade the housing inhabited by the Jews of Paris, at ten o'clock in the evening, at two o'clock in the morning, at

4. See. Léon Kahn, History of the Jewish Community of Paris. THE Patronage Institutions (Paris, 1885).

2. Carmoly, Revue Orientale, t. He, p. 257 et seq. (Brussels, 1842).

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS 13

daybreak, carry out searches of their homes, disrupt pour out their homes, seize suspicious objects, or hang out at Fort-l'Évêque or in some similar prison, those who are not in good standing. These "night visits and others concerning the Jews" lasted until June 30, 1789.

In the minutes of these "visits", which exist in National archives, were attached to the states, less regular-provided, it is true, but which completed them, because they mentioned the arrival of Jews in Paris, their names, their country of origin, purpose of their stay in the capital, etc. ?. These states undoubtedly were not only used for Jews. They also applied to a whole category of indicators. suspicious videos that the police had every interest in not lose sight of. But it was no less true that long-still the Jews of Paris, victims of tenacious prejudices and unjust prejudices, should, honest, laborious, virtuous or not, remain within the remit of the police pell-mell with the landlords, the vagabonds, the crooks, the public women and the empirical ones.

4. National Archives, Y, 16005.

2. National Archives, Y, 16005.

CHAPTER H

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS

However, from the early days of the meeting of the states generals, the question of their emancipation had been clearly posed, Authorized by Necker, "like all men residing on the territory of France", to hold Assemblies in each of their communities, to be elected their representatives, to compose and present their notebooks of grievances!, they had devoted themselves to it with passion, feeling so much so that the new state of things had to be compatible with health to all misery, to all suffering, benevolence ling to the humble. Everyone united their efforts to be, they too, recognized as men, and as free men, on this soil now open to freedom.

On this date, in fact, the union of the Jews among themselves was close, without any of them seeming to foresee what this movement will be movement of an entire people towards still vague aspirations.

The word freedom resounds from all sides, dully

first, then spreads through all ranks of society as it

4. Chassin, Les Élections et les Cahiers de Paris, vol. 1, p. 151. Letter by David Silveyra, trustee and general agent of the Jewish nation, Spanish and portuguese, to claim the same right in favor of his brothers of Guyana, Béarn, Provence, Paris, etc.

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 15

penetrates, shakes, shakes, with a force that soon nothing won't know how to stop. In this whirlwind of mysterious joys, of ideal hopes, the Jews are carried away like the others, without any of them seeking to fathom the future.

Who else saw the Revolution coming? The writers . vain people most listened to were of the opinion to avoid everything which could disturb public peace and produce shaking too strong in the State. The bailiwicks themselves, in rising against the abuses from which the nation was suffering, demanding wanted the institutions to be reformed, but not paid. Complaints and grievances were respectful. No one disputed that the king should not remain king, and when, in Revolution, Louis XVI showed himself so unfortunately haughty for the third estate, not a cry, not a protest was raised, and everyone bowed as the king passed.

So no serious plan for revolution, no program defined, no overall political action; aspirations individual, at least, and which had germinated especially in the soul of all those who suffered. The Jews were among those there. Their trustees, the leaders of their communities, who had waited so long for barely outlined projects of Malesherbes and who had seen them disappear so early had not must not have lost all hope of taking them back one day. Assets, considered, they followed the events, ready for the first opportunities to improve the lot of their brothers. They already had knew how to interest representatives of the nation in the states generals, writers, publicists, and among others two minds full of a generous passion', one very different on the other, it is true, but whose help should have been more

4. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 31, of August 22 and 23, 1789.

16 EMANCIPATION

so much more effective that they acted, one on the people and the other on the representatives: Mirabeau and Abbé Grégoire. Propaganda in favor of the Jews was carried out slowly, when the National Assembly, which had just discussed the discussion on the Declaration of the Rights of Man, came to deliberate, August 22, 1789. on the motion of the Count of Castellane: "No one should be disturbed for their religious opinions. » Mirabeau and Rabaut Saint-Étienne took the word. [They both rose with equal eloquence against religious intolerance, Mirabeau, the first, protested against the establishment of a dominant cult: "...Dominant! it is a tyrannical word that must be banned from our legislation, because, if you put Fy in a case, you can put it in everyone: you will have a dominant worship, a dominant philosophy, dominant systems. Nothing should dominate but justice; there is no dominant that the right of each; everything else is subject to it..." Rabaut Saint-Étienne in turn, but more energetic-ment, demanded, for Protestants and Jews, freedom religious that the Church wanted, out of privilege, for itself alone. Mirabeau had just said: "I am not coming to preach tolerance. rancid. The most unlimited freedom of religion is in my eyes a right so sacred as the word tolerance, which would like expressing it, seems to me, in a way, tyrannical itself even ?." » Rabaut Saint-Étienne. in an oratory movement resolutely the question that Mirabeau had only just asked flower at:

1. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 31.

2. Id.

3. Journal of Debates and Decrees (general states), session of August 23, 1789; Mercury of France, n° 36.

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 17

"There finally exists," he cried, "a French nation, and it is she that I appeal in favor of two million useful citizens who today demand French rights. I don't make him the injustice of thinking she could now pronounce the word of intolerance, it is banned from our language, or it will not survive like one of those barbaric and outdated words that we don't understand is no longer useful, because the idea it represents is destroyed. But, Gentlemen, it is not even tolerance that I am asking for, it is freedom. Tolerance! the support! forgiveness! the clemency! ideas that are supremely unjust towards the dissidents, as long as they will be true that the difference of religion, that the difference of opinions is not a crime! Tolerance! I ask that it be proscribed in turn, and it will be, this unjust word which does not feel that as citizens worthy of pity, as people who are forgiven, those whom chance and education have often led us to think in a way other than we... |

"I therefore ask, Gentlemen, for the French Protestants, for all non-Catholics in the Kingdom, what you are asking will be for you, freedom, equal rights; I ask them for this people torn from Asia, always wandering, always prospering, still persecuted for almost eighteen centuries; Who take our morals and our customs, if by our laws it was inborn with us, and to whom we must not reproach his moral, because it is the fruit of our own barbarity and humiliation to which we have unjustly condemned him!

"...You are too wise, Gentlemen, to practice religion as an object of self-esteem, and to replace gold intolerance-pride and domination, which, for nearly fifteen centuries, made flow torrents of blood, an intolerance of vanity. You do not you won't be surprised that there are men who think differently than you, who worship God in a different way from you, and that is done to us. Taught by long and bloody experience centuries, taught by the faults of our fathers and by their deserved misfortunes, you will no doubt say: it is time to file the fierce sword which still drips the blood of our fellow citizens, it is time to give them back rights that have been ignored for too long; it's time to break down the unfair barriers that separated them

2

18 EMANCIPATION

of us, and to make them love a homeland which proscribed them and expels them from his bosom..."

The Jews of Paris, encouraged by this brilliant demonstration--celebration of sympathy, and as if they had not expected that the vote on the motion of Mr. de Castellane, addressed, on August 26, to the States General, a request by which they: asked for "all the civil faculties" of which they saw enjoy "alongside them all the members of a society of which they . are part ". This address, to which Spanish Jews and Portuguese had remained foreigners, had been signed by the various agents of German and Avignon Jews in Paris. J. Goldschmidt, was the president, Abraham Lopes-Lagonna, vice-president; and, to give more importance to this document, the Jews of Paris had themselves represented by three "voters" and six "deputies", among whom Jacob Benjamin, Mordecai Elijah, Lazard Jacob and Trenelle-father were to play a considerable role in the campaign undertaken to obtain rights in favor of their brothers. of citizens.

German Jews? Spanish and Portuguese Jews? Who is it: that? Does this mean that, among French Jews, some are from Germany and the others from Spain or Portugal? Big mistake! The first are no more Germans than the latter are Spanish or Portuguese. Some belong to the so-called German rite, others to the rite said Portuguese. "Portuguese and German, these two adjectives reflect only two moments in the story of two rites. »

We know that, when in the 16th century the Jews had to flee of Portugal to escape the Inquisition, they had to, to be tolerated in southern France where they came to seek refuge, convert to Christianity. But this conversion was only apparent, and, although receiving the baptism, getting married in the Church, taking part in the ceremonies Catholics, they remained secretly attached to the faith of their fathers. The day they could openly exercise their cult, "they gave to their rite the name which distinguished them themselves", that of Portuguese. Their descendants are remained the Portuguese Jews.

Even before this time, there was in France only one only rite, the French rite, professed by the famous rabbis of the Middle Ages and which the rabbis "blindly" followed of Germany: "it was in French that the Jews of France, and in French also those of Germany Western". – "From the 15th century to the 16th century?" century, there had more Jews in France. The French rite, which was the same than that of Germany, easily exchanged its name against that of German, Germany and the countries of the same civilization being then the only countries which had not accepted the Spanish rite.

"The Israelites of Alsace and Lorraine – these few in number – followed the German rite, and, when they became French, the name French rite had already been lost; the Israelites of these provinces, who lacked all historical notion, kept the title of German to their rite. And this is how, when Jews from the South and Jews from the North France were brought together by circumstances, some were called Portuguese, and the others German!.

This explanation was necessary. We will find many times the qualifications of Portuguese Jews, of Jews Germans. We maintain them for the clarity of this story.

4. The Israelite Universe, 51st year, no. 17, of January 17, 1896, and no. 18, of January 24: German Rite and Portuguese Rite, by R. Israel Lévi.

20 EMANCIPATION

But we would like to remember once again that there is no in these titles only a simple designation of rite.

The Jews residing in Paris had therefore just presented their request to the States General. This request is known!. It is truly touching in its simplicity, but full energy in his wishes. It is indeed remarkable that, renounce all privileges granted to the "Jewish nation", having only one ambition, only one desire: to finally obtain the title of man. The title of man, they said, would guarantee them that of citizen, and the title of citizen would give them all city rights. To obtain them, they called on the philosophical feelings of the deputies: the Assembly had restored to man his original dignity; the Jews were assured that it did not intend to make any distinction between a man and another man.

The press published this request without accompanying it with long comments. "The memory of the Jews is well done, they only said; their claim is correct. " The first Was the obvious effort of the Jews going to fail? If they could for a moment supposing it, their fears soon dissipated. On September 4, in fact, Abbot Grégoire requested a evening session "to report complaints made by Jews domiciled in France"; and this request was granted to him.

We know with what ardor Abbé Grégoire worked to favor of the Jews; by word and by pen, from 1787 to 1791, he never stopped defending them, supporting them, encouraging them. ger, until the day when, true apostle of tolerance and freedom, he saw the triumph of the idea to which, one of the first,

1. Address presented to the National Assembly, August 26, 1789, by the Jews residing in Paris (Imprimerie de Prault, imp. du Roi, 1789).

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 21

he had dedicated his heart and his mind. The Jewish witnesses there was, it goes without saying, a deep gratitude to the one who, he said it himself!, had "come to the Constituent Assembly titulaire with the resolution to plead the cause of the Jews. The Spanish and Portuguese Jews thanked him, at least of August 1789, in a letter which was made public, "brilliant benefits" that he lavished on their brothers. " There Providence seems to have raised you up, they told him, to soften our destiny? » All the synagogues in France voted thanks to him; a large number did public prayers for him.

The gazettes, in turn, did not remain indifferent to the motion that Abbot Grégoire was to present. No one knows this motion was born. Everyone was reduced to conjectures about the goal he was pursuing. A certain indecision was manifested therefore in the press, even liberal ones. The French Courier 3 of Father Grégoire. Does he ask for civil life for Jews? But the edict of September 1787 gave it to them. Does he want that we build synagogues for them? They have them in Alsace and in Lorraine. Would he be of the opinion that we incorporate them with other citizens, that they were made accessible to all the charges, to all the dignities? Such a project would be assured definitely worthy of a deputy in the National Assembly French; but we doubt that it is that of Mr. Grégoire. We assume, however, that this moment is not very far away... » The Chronicle of Paris' also said a few months later: "We cannot hide the fact that

1. Memoirs of Grégoire, former bishop of Blois... Bib. N., La 33/65.
2. Id.
3. Le Courrier français, n° 66 of September 9, 1789.
4. La Chronique de Paris, n° 3 of January 3, 1790.

22 EMANCIPATION

is political reasons which do not allow rushing this just revolution... It is up to letters to prepare, to bring this change by degrees, because it is up to them to make the destruction of all abuses. »

Other leaves, however, and no less important, were less timid. Versailles and Paris! thought that "it was finally time to take care of the fate of the Jews"; THE Journal de Paris?, learning that they are demanding civil status, said in a word: "The success of such a request cannot hardly be doubtful in the National Assembly of 1789"; And the Gazette de Paris, then still republican, celebrated, in its November 11 issue, the emergence of "beautiful days of true philosophy" and exalted in these terms Abbot Grégoire: "A priest of the Gospel, a priest of the Roman Church, become the defender of the Jews, and carry their case before the tribunal of the National Assembly! – Who never, even in the 18th century, could have guessed that a such homage would be paid to truth, to justice, to the rights of man and by whom! » We will soon see how the leaves subservient to the nobility and the Church treated this venerable prelate, knew everything when they learned that his "motion" had with the aim of obtaining the complete assimilation of Jews into citizens of the kingdom.

However, Abbot Grégoire who, the day before, had asked a session "for the important matter of the Jews", is available

of the Assembly renewed a motion, which had often been already done, to appoint a trade committee. This proposition occupied the entire session, and the question of the Jews was not discussed. What happens then? The days pass;

1. Versailles and Paris, No. XXXIII of September 3, 1789.
2. Le Journal de Paris, no. 247, September 4, 1789.

.

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 23

silence falls; Abbot Grégoire, unable to obtain the session which had been promised to him, delivers to publicity his Motion in favor of the Jews'; his efforts seem to be come up against malicious dispositions in the Assembly or indifference, and, until September 20, it seems that no one seeks to rescue "the Jewish affair" from oblivion in which she fell.

But, on this date, a strong emotion manifested itself in the As-national appearance and in the press: extraordinary letters dinaries, coming from Alsace, announce that the province remembers rises against the Jews and that they are the victims of the fury popular ; they uttered a cry towards the National Assembly in distress and asking for protection.

So what caused this movement? Their adversaries, using the usual pretext for all cruelties committed against them, claimed that the population was bending under the weight of their wear and tear and thus sought revenge
two. Is it not more plausible to say that, as it happened in 1790, the nobility and the clergy, frightened of the pro-stone that the cause of the Jews was making in France, sought to weigh, through formidable opposition from the people, on the decisions of the Assembly? The very postponement of the dis-discussion on the fate of the Jews had it not been an encouragement gement to the worst resolutions against them?

Moreover, we always used the same good faith towards them regard. The pretext mattered little, when passions were at stake. "The same prejudices pursued the Jewish nation:
from being a persecutor to becoming a slanderer there is only one not..." Already, when it came to decreeing in favor of

4. Motion in favor of the Jews, by Mr. Grégoire, priest of Embermesnil,

2. La Gazette de Paris, November 11, 1789.

24 EMANCIPATION

the request of the Jews, we had the cowardice to print a pamphlet which accused them of having hatched a conspiracy, in the city of Avignon, to slaughter the vice-legate, the arch-veque, municipal officers and number of families'. There slander could be destroyed in time by Gorsas, author of Courier from Versailles to Paris, and the Paris Conimune had to have a poster published declaring, for the honor of "a class of citizens who make themselves useful", that the wording was

"a slanderous tissue? ".

The Jews were less happy elsewhere. Wherever a popular effervescence occurs, they are the first victims. In Livorno (1790), the people murmur against the closure of churches and suppression of brotherhoods; a insurrection breaks out; she turns against the Jews 3. On the Isle, in the Comtat, the arrival of the troops of the Pro-Republic evokes an uprising of Christians and aristocrats: the Jews, "although excellent patriots", are stripped of everything and forced to flee {. In Rome, the Neapolitans report their entry through the greatest cruelties: "The Jews, the part of the people of Rome who gained the most from the revolution, had embraced her and served her with enthusiasm. After the celebration of a Te Deum, they were delivered to the most ter-cruel revenge; a large number were slain; several were thrown into the Tiber 5." – Again in Rome, the court opposed the crest of the Republic being substituted with the arms of France on the door of the Consulate. The people carried a declared hatred of the French. On January 13,

. La Gazelte..., November 11

. Motion in favor of the Jews.

. The Universal Gazette, n° 223, of July 10.

. The Annals of the French Republic, n° 224, of August 10, 1793.

5. Le Journal de Paris, n° 98, dated 8 Nivôse year VII. – The Postillon of Calais, n° 1143. | oN =

=

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 25

Basseville, the secretary of the legation, was traveling in his car. His coachman and his servant wore the cockade national hat. Basseville is recognized, prosecuted, murdered. On the 14th, the people turned their anger against the Jews whom he accuses of loving the Revolution, and it is with great difficulty that we prevent him from setting fire to the four corners of the ghetto.

Little was needed at that time, when the overexcitement of minds throughout Europe was extreme, to understand the promise the safety of individuals. Especially where the steps-religious zions were unleashed, the Jew, everywhere in minority, everywhere weak, everywhere despised, had to suffer the backlash of revolts and agitations.

In Alsace, their situation had suddenly become serious. Already, towards the end of August, excesses had been committed against them and Parisian newspapers reported it?. But either the news had been exaggerated or attention was focused elsewhere, all this had gone unnoticed. However, it was said that more than twelve hundred Jews, after having been pillaged, had to flee from Sundgau, from Alsace and Lorraine, and take refuge in Basel, where Switzerland had extended generous hospitality.

Soon new complaints, more painful, sur-came. From all sides we report "the excesses of the inhabitants campaigns whose frenzied hatred threatens to renew the most horrible scenes of fanaticism 3". In the Upper Alsace and particularly around Huningue, we slaughtered at the Jews the roofs of their houses, we fired shots guns in their synagogues, and their throats were threatened.

1. The Revolutions, by Prudhomme, n° 187, vol. XV.

2. Le Mercure de France, No. 34, August 22, 1789. – Le Patriote français, n° 23. – Le Courrier de Versailles à Paris et de Paris à Versailles, No. 54. |

3. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 47, of September 28, 29 and 30, 1789.

26 EMANCIPATION

In vain they had demanded the protection of the troops; THE Count of Rochambeau, governor of the province of Alsace, to whom they had addressed, had sent them back to their muteger and the Jews remained without help. – Affiliate letters giants, where the situation of these unfortunate people was depicted, had been addressed to the Count of Clermont-Tonnerre, to Abbot Grégoire and several other representatives. They know-addressed the Assembly to the question, requesting that we employ all the strength to prevent the horrors that were threatened the Jews and that their persons and their goods were placed under the protection of the lot. Abbot Grégoire added that nothing was more urgent than this precaution and that, if the Assembly adopted the motion of Mr. Clermont-Tonnerre, a extraordinary courier was ready to leave for Alsace: "Happy again," he added, "if he arrived in time to pre-come the fury of the people fierce against the unfortunate Jews f". The Assembly moved by the cruelties committed against it denounced, "pressured by the powerful motives of reason, justice, humanity, which still lead in a century lights? », sided with the party of M. de Clermont-Ton-nere, and Mr. Desmeuniers, President of the National Assembly, instantly wrote a letter to this effect to the officers public in Alsace. The king was "begged" to support him all his authority.

The Assembly learned at the same time that for a long time the Jewish deputies of Metz, Trois-Evéchés, Alsace and Lorraine, "languished" waiting for a session which had been promised to them "to process and discuss their case? ".

1. Versailles and Paris, No. LX, September 30, 1789.
2. Journal of Debates and Decrees, n° 44, of September 28.
3. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° 87, October 2, 1789.

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 24

Abbot Grégoire, taking advantage of the emotion that had arisen just now, asked that this session be given to them as soon as possible _ granted.

The deputation asked to be introduced on October 14. "There were some complaints on this subject f"; but they obtained an audience. "In the evening session," says the Courier of Provence, we saw the deputies of this people at the bar spread everywhere and everywhere foreign, that all our institu-tions wither, and to whom we have the cruelty to reproach its debasement; that we hate because we do not succeed let's not convince him, and which seems even more mar-tyr of our self-esteem than it was of our cupi-said? ". It was in this session that Berr-Isaac-Berr, deputy through Lorraine, uttered the memorable words which that we mention them again. Conceived in terms brief, this speech was accompanied by memoirs where the Jews established the justice of their demands. It was pronounced with an emotion all the more poignant as the security of their brothers from Alsace was not yet assured. Like the Jews of Paris, Berr-lsaac-Berr asked for his as much "a less painful existence" than that at to which they were condemned – "an absolute reform... in the ignominious institutions" to which they were "enslaved"; then, "in the name of the Lord, author of all justice and all truth", he begged "Our lords the states general", to hear their complaints, to listen to their complaints, to take into consideration their destiny if deplorable, and exclaimed: "Let men look at us

4. Le Courrier français, n° 103, of Friday October 16, 1789.
2. No. 54, from October 14 to 15, 1789.
3. See. Halphen, Legislation concerning the Israelites (Paris, 1851).

28 EMANCIPATION

like their brothers! » Berr-[saac-Berr had spoken "the Teary-eyed ". The impression was profound on the Assembly and in the press. "Their sad and just complaints," said a gazette', have excited the most lively and ever-present interest. singing. It will be enough to read their Address to share with the National Assembly the desire it showed them to see end their misfortunes and to applaud the commitment she took to rule on their requests during this Session... » |

Abbot Grégoire demanded for the deputies the right to attend ter at this session; the clergy again made voices heard "whispers? »; but the Assembly ignored it, and the motion of the priest of Emberménil was welcomed: the Jewish deputies were admitted inside the bar. "The Assembly," wrote the Courrier de Provence (n° 54), will soon take care of their rights, and there can be no doubt that it will bring down this wall of separation, built of prejudices and errors, which since has long divided two sects whose origin is common, and who also corrupts the persecuting people, through contempt of humanity, and the persecuted people, by hatred of oppression if we ".

The honor given to them, the welcome they had received, these reflections made aloud, the immense pity that the representatives felt for so much suffering so worthy-supported, were for the Jews a great satisfaction best. The National Assembly had, moreover, just completed this marvelous work of the Declaration of the Rights of the man. What more beautiful spectacle could she give to

4. Le Point du jour, n° 109, of Friday October 16, 1709; and Annals patriotic and literary works of France, by Mercier, n° XIV, of Friday the 16th.
2. Le Courrier français, n° 103, dated 16.

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS 29

world of its humanity and its justice that, by putting agree its principles and its actions, to make free and citizens all those who only asked to submit to the laws of the Revolution?

On the contrary. The Jews of Alsace were not at the end of their "misfortunes", and it was necessary, in 1790, for the Assembly wheat intervenes again to protect them against new such atrocities. |

CHAPTER II

THE JEWS, THE ACTORS AND THE EXECUTIONER

The Jews of Paris were still, too, at the vague hopes. Their address to the National Assembly was remained without apparent effect, and they felt that they would need long efforts to overcome certain resistances that their request met there. The nobility and the clergy become are uncomfortable with the idea that the "deicide nation" can become their equal policy, and it became obvious that they would oppose with energy at his emancipation. "I] must not persevere—cut the Jews; They are our brothers." This is all that the abbot Maury believed he could grant these unfortunate people for improve their fate; this is what "philosophy" was limited to and the "justice" of the retrograde minds of the Constituent Assembly.

It was therefore necessary to gradually win over the representatives of the nation to the cause of the Jews; and, for this, without rushing anything, wait patiently for the Revolution, marching one step sure, accomplish his work. Glad if they could have gotten from the first hour the rights of the citizen, they are obliged to delay, and, at the same time, by a contradiction strange, in the press impatience broke out, making hatch insane projects. Villette, for example, complains in the Chronique de Paris' "that the Jews did not manipulate fested the greatest desire to be elevated to the rank of citizens", and he wonders if their degradation has not taken away from them until the courage to hope for a better fate: and what encouragement rages he gives them! He consents to their being granted wishes, but little by little; we would first receive them in the second-rate civilian and military jobs; ten years later later they could be admitted to the municipalities, and their entry into the National Assemblies would be adjourned until twenty years !

It is because prejudices against Jews remained alive
among some, who rehashed the inconsistent repeated arguments carefully propagated for centuries, and reborn among others in the ardent discussion that provoked ideas of emancipation. Many still allowed themselves to be surrounded by the bloody events that took place in Alsace. The enemies of the Jews confidently claimed that their emancipation would be the signal in the East of a general massacre; and sensitive souls were afraid of this dismal prediction. The atrocities that had just happened there commit were they not the obvious precursor of the truth of this dark prophecy?

The Jews of Paris, like those of the kingdom, risked therefore to see their painful process continue for a long time uncertainty, when the question that interested them so much was – brought back into discussion, by chance and in a completely unexpectedly.

The National Assembly deliberated on the conditions of election ability for civil and military jobs, and the speeches there succeeded, if not in the midst of indifference, at least in

1. La Chronique de Paris, no. 129, of December 31, 1789.

32 EMANCIPATION

a monotonous meditation, when, on December 24, 1789, Mr. Brunet de la Tuque, deputy for Nérac, proposed extending eligibility for non-Catholics'. The right side of the "Auguste Senate pricked up its ears; everyone's attention was awakened, and discussion, until then so calm, suddenly became agitated and confused. In making his motion, Mr. Brunet de la Tuque had not

All right ; but the Church immediately thought of the benefit what would the Jews get from it, and she couldn't bring herself to do that. Above all, enlightened minds, but in a tactic clumsy, wanting to link "the cause of religious opinions to that of professions," threw the actors into the debate and the executioner. The trouble, already great, was at its height when the Count of Clermont-Tonnerre, posing with courage the question, asked that no active citizen, bringing together the conditions prescribed by decrees, cannot be excluded public employment because of his profession or his worship.

Then Rewbell rose and, calling out to Count de Clermont-Tonnerre, asked him if, among the active citizens, he intended to understand the Jews. "Yes," cried the honorable member, I agree and I take pride in it?!"

An indescribable tumult arose in the Assembly. " THE patriot party was impatient to go to the vote to make justice to principles, but with ordinary procrastination preliminary questions and adjournments, we won the fatal hour which caused session 3 to be adjourned."

4. Cf., on this discussion and the events which followed, the Movement religious ment in Paris during the Revolution, by Dr. Robinet, t. I, p. 314 et seq. (Paris, 1896).

2. Le Courrier Français, n° 110, of December 22, 1789.

3. Le Patriote Francais, n° 137, of December 23, 1789.

THE JEWS, THE COMEDIANS AND THE EXECUTIONER 33

The discussion was resumed the next day. Immediately he seemed clear that the efforts of all the speakers would bring on the Jews, overwhelmed by some, valiantly defended by others. The National Assembly was divided into two camps, the patriots supporting with equal vigor Jews, come-gods and executioners; the "impartials" being cheap actors and executioners to better destroy the Jews. No one thought anymore of the Protestants.

However, the session of the 22nd passed in skirmishes. "The discussion seems likely to last for some more time", M. de Clermont-Tonnerre proposed to postpone the question at the next day's session, "two o'clock order" | The Assembly consented to this.

variously concerned about this question which "interests Ja philosophy, humanity, justice, homeland, religion? ".
It was M. de Clermont-Tonnerre who, returning to his motion two days before, was the first to develop the motives of his opinion. The discussion was one of the most passionate, most moving that have been raised in the Assembly national. Each party, understanding the importance of the debates who were starting, had taken a position: a crucial question for the Church which did not admit that "the people decide" was able to raise his head; capital also for the liberals who suffered badly from exposing themselves to failure in the questions interesting their principles and freedom.

On one side therefore, Robespierre, Barnave, Beaumets, Regnault, Pethion de Villeneuve, Clermont-Tonnerre and Mirabeau, whose powerful eloquence among some, the dia-

4. The Journal of Debates and Decrees, n° 126, of December 23, 1789.
2. Le Journal de Versailles, n° 84, of December 26.

3

34 | EMANCIPATION

4

tight lectic or ardent conviction in others, seek-try to lead the undecided and hesitant, to group them in an act of supreme justice towards the Jews; the other, Abbot Maury, Rewbell, the Bishop of Nancy, and a few others obscure representatives like Cazalès and Rastignac, speaking, discussing, intriguing in the corridors of the Assembly against the petitioners. L

Abbot Maury, Rewbell and the Bishop of Nancy were among their most stubborn adversaries. The Bishop of Nancy told tall tales. "The Jews," cried
he in his speech, invade everything, take possession of everything >, and in support of this easy assertion he reported the fears from one of his constituents: "Yes, sir, they have the art of everything to monopolize, to achieve everything, and we have no doubt that,
If you left us, there would not come to us a Jew for bishop! »

To those who wanted to make Jews active citizens, Rewbell shouted: "This will be their death sentence!" » The Assembly was indignant, and the press said: "It is truly strange another... Must the law be eternal – of prejudices or ill-founded hatred!! »

Abbot Maury was even more determined. He threw himself in the struggle with all the blind religious passion with which he was imbued with all the jealous and vindictive ardor with which the Church was possessed. He is the real leader of the fight: “Unfortunately—ew Jews! Remain forever strangers to the nation whose invoke justice! Listen to your stop; it's Abbot Maury who pronounces it?! » |

I] do not fear, in fact, to pick up all the lies,

1. Le Patriote Français, n° 138, of December 24.

¶. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° 14, of December 25.

THE JEWS, THE COMEDIANS AND THE EXECUTIONER 39

all the slanders, all the accusations of the Middle Ages, the most ridiculous nonsense, and he makes an indictment of them all the more formidable since most representatives do not know nothing about the Jews other than what legend says, and that legend still hovers mysterious and dark over these spirits fearful of the influence of the priest.

“Mr. Abbot Maury, wrote the Journal de Paris on this subject, – dwelt at great length on the reasons for the exclusion he wanted to give to the Jews; in one of those speeches where eloquence is deployed with all the more abundance as it is freer from the chains of rigorous reasoning, Mr. Abbé Maury undertook to demonstrate that the Jews cannot be good plowmen because of the Sabbath; that they cannot be good soldiers because of the Sabbath; that they cannot have any skill in the arts and crafts at because of the Sabbath and all their other festivals much more numerous than ours. |

“If all these effects really belonged to the Sabbath and on Jewish religious festivals, it must be admitted, the Sabbath would be a very terrible institution! »

But were all these accusations true? The newspaper of Paris took it upon himself to demonstrate its falsity, and he did so with such precision and talent that, despite its length, we do not hesitate to reproduce this plea which borrows deep interest in current circumstances. | to find out if, as Father Maury assures us, this people has

I have always held agriculture in contempt and horror, and I see that Gideon was threshing his own land when an angel came down from heaven to reveal to him that he was destined to deliver the people from

4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 359, of December 25, 1789.

36 EMANCIPATION

God; I see that Ruth deserved the good graces of Boaz, by gleaning his harvest; I see there that Elisha received from heaven the gift of prophecy at the moment when his hands directed one of the twelve his father's plows; I finally see that Sail, when we talk to him brings the news of the peril in which the city of Jabès in Gilead was, himself drove a pair of oxen, and that at that time Sail
was already king.

"We ask it, a people who counted among their laborers—
of victorious warriors, prophets and kings, could he disdain plowing at any time?

"Judea was undoubtedly not a fertile land; but the works of the Jews knew how to make it a fertile land, and the Scriptures, of which Father Maury and we cannot doubt, speak without ceases the superb pastures and the rich harvests of which Judea was covered.

"The Jews, whatever Father Maury says, cannot have many more parties than us: almost all those that they have we have them, and we have instituted many others again to honor this multitude of saints whose christia-nism populated the sky.

"It would be wrong to believe that days of celebration and rest do not
are not infinitely necessary, we are not only saying to the happiness of man, but to the very extent of his labors:
those who are condemned every day to excessive work,
soon stripped of all their strength, work poorly for the course of an excessively shortened life, and working poorly is work little. You have to believe it; the countryside across Europe were much fertilized by the feast days; without these relaxations granted by the mercies of religion, powerful men and rich, who had no mercy, would have brought down of fatigue the people in the middle of the furrows that they cultivated.

"It is therefore not the Jewish religion alone, it is this politics again and this philosophy based on the nature of the man who prescribes sabbath days...

"Is it true to say that the Jews have never been and will never be able to never be good soldiers?"

"It is always the books of the Hebrews that we must interrogate; gold these books teach us that, unlike almost all other nations in which only one class of citizens is

ee

THE JEWS, THE COMEDIANS AND THE EXECUTIONER 37

dedicated to war, among the Hebrews, all the tribes, even that Levites, even that of the priests, were warriors. At the time from birth a child was registered in the army of his nation at the same time as in his tribe. Was he therefore a stranger to the war, the people who gave to their God the name of God of Armies; who took possession, sword in hand, of the land which had been promised to him; who exterminated twenty peoples to seize of their place and their territory? Far from reproaching such people for not being warlike enough, I would, on the contrary, make them reproaches it for having been far too much, if all peoples had not point shared this disastrous delirium...

"Mr. Abbé Maury quoted the historian Josephus who said that, in the siege of Jerusalem, the Jews allowed the holy city to be taken for not having wanted to climb the rampart and fight one day Sabbath. —

"It is first of all extremely probable that it is from él individuals that Josephus wanted to speak of, and not of the entire nation; secondly, at this time marked for the destruction of Jerusalem and for the dispersion of the people, the Jews prey to more terrible misfortunes were still prey to the most horrible superstitions, and it is not through moments of delirium that one must judge nations, the duration of which embraces thousands of centuries. No religion, no law on earth has been able to persuade a people that he had to allow himself to be massacred rather than fail in a rite of: his worship. These are the extravagances of a few individuals, and the madness of the human spirit, which was great, could never be carried among entire nations to this excess, where the conservation of the human species would be impossible.

"Is it true to say that the Jews are, by their religion and by their habits, incapable of carrying the arts and crafts to any perfection?"

"Their religion in this respect can only influence them by prescribing too many days of rest; but often it is in the

ment of arts and crafts is always the fruit of observation. Ardent for the acquisition of fortune, intelligent for good choose the means, what would they lack to succeed, in jobs where all men succeed? Let's consult again the facts; we will see that the Jews, as soon as they had a king who loved magnificence, embellished Jerusalem with palaces and temples, ran across the ocean, mixed with the Tyrians, to pick up Vor and Pargent in Sofala; we will see them in the modern lands, to shield commerce from the spoliations of the brigands and tyrants, inventing bills of exchange, invention who gave commerce so much speed and scope; We will see them stripped a hundred times of their wealth among the peoples of Europe, to quickly revive new ones which, always despoiled by the greedy superstition of Christians, are always replaced by the tireless Jewish industry.

38 EMANCIPATION

"We have always talked a lot about their wear and tear and Mr. Abbot Maury talked about it too.

"But to whom did the Jews lend a lot of their money? HAS merchants who, by paying high interest, still found profit in paying them: in this the Jews were not generous; but even in their greed they were useful; because if a marchand can ruin himself in such loans, it is quite certain that all merchants find help and advantages there. Interest-bearing loans made to children who are still minors are the only criminals; in these there is abuse of both violence and lence of passions, the weakness of age and the lack of experience nothing; but here it is not only usury that is guilty, it's still the loan: This word of usury is one of those ghosts born in times of ignorance and which must vanish in days of light.

"We can assume that all the reproaches made by Mr. Abbot Maury to the Jews are founded; that the Jews will never be good plowmen, nor good soldiers, nor good craftsmen: it will be a very great misfortune for them; but are these for us reasons not to elevate them to the rank of citizens? What would happen if they were active citizens, and they did not want to fight nor work on the Sabbath? We wouldn't let them in in the armies; we would never raise them nor in the Assemblies of administration, nor in the Legislative Assembly; they would stay at pretty much as they are and we would have been fair to them; they would lose nothing, we would gain a lot. Mr. Abbot Maury, whose severity is not intolerance (a spirit also enlightened cannot have one), wants that, without making them citizens,

THE JEWS, THE COMEDIANS AND THE EXECUTIONER 39

say that men should not protect men;
 their protection is always too close to tyranny; the law alone must be the protector of them all, and the law itself is only a act of force when they did not contribute to it.

“There is nothing exaggerated in these principles; it's for the having abandoned or ignored that the human race, for so long for centuries, has been the slave of a few men. If the Jews like once were repelled by fanaticism, we would no longer have need to defend them; but they are men of spirit, men of talent who reject them; these are men who mix useful truths with opinions opposed to good principles cipes; it is their very eloquence that they must attack
 if we are inexorable towards them; the cause of nations is too sacred so that we can abandon it when once we have saw and felt their rights f. »

All this mattered little to Father Maury. Glories ancient traditions of the Jews, of their past greatness, of their virtues,
 – of their talents, of their fruitful activity, this defender of throne and altar did not want to leave anything remaining. But to his indictment against the Jews we had to respond and we responded said by favorable arguments drawn from the purity of their worship, the morality of Judaism, their miseries, the op-pressure in which they lived and which constituted the part
 the most moving and cruelest in their history.

Clermont-Tonnerre summarized this story in three lines:
 They were forced to isolate themselves and punished for isolating themselves; we reduced them to a single trade and punished them den contract the mind; they were only allowed one way of make use of their money and they were punished for using it;
 this matter the | enriched and they were punished for being rich 23.

- `å. Le Journal de Paris, n* 359 et seq.
 2. Le Patriote français, n° 138, of December 24.

To Maury who exclaimed: "Whatever you do, they will be always strangers in our midst," Robespierre replied said:

"These are national crimes that we must atone for!! »
or :

"Return them to happiness, to the homeland, to virtue; let's give back them to public esteem by restoring to them the dignity of men and citizens? »

The sentiment of the gazetteers was no less energetic.
"It is the conduct of the nations towards the Jews which forces them to become perverse... When will we return to humanity this people outraged by our persecutions? »

But, while the newspapers, which supported the cause of Jews, were employed for them in philosophical theses full of strength and elevation, the Courrier de Provence, returning to the very subject of the discussion which was continuing to the National Assembly, summed it up in a few words of remarkable way: "All men have a homeland; this homeland is the place of their birth and their education. Jews born in France to parents established in France are. therefore French; they are our compatriots, our fellow citizens. Do they want to enjoy all the rights of citizens? They must submit to all civil and political laws of the kingdom. Do they obey all state laws? We cannot deny them the exercise of all national rights. So what does the diversity of worship matter? It's at mass that we are Catholic; it is in the preaching that one is Protestant; it is in the synagogue that one is Jewish. But in the world,

1. The Courrier de Gorsas, n° XIV.

2. La Gazette de Paris, November 17, 1789.

3. See. the article by Roederer, in the Journal de Paris, n° 82, of 22 Frimayor year VII.

THE JEWS, THE COMEDIANS AND THE EXECUTIONER 4A

before the courts, in different social functions, patriots are all of the same religion. »

In the National Assembly, where attention had been so strong-trained on "The question of the Jews" by the debates passions which had occurred outside of her and within her

nelle of Mr. Brunet de la Tuque. Representative Duport brought him back there. He had endorsed the Clermont motion—Thunder and he had removed the word “cult” from it. Present—so much “a writing which seemed to him to offend the prejudices less directly”, he proposed that he could not be opposed to no French. either to be an active citizen or to be eligible for any public office, other reasons for exclusion sion than those which are pronounced by the decrees of the Assembly wheat. |

Soon the discussion on this motion was exhausted. The ace—seemed so tired that M. de Montesquiou could not obtain the speech. Everyone was eager to go to the vote. It was about know which of the two motions would have priority. " One of sides of the room strongly opposed the motion Duport had priority, which the other, on the contrary, claimed strongly?. » These were, on the one hand, the Church and the failure of Jews. On the other hand, the Republicans and a new progress — towards freedom.

We went to the vote by sitting or standing. Twice the ordeal was doubtful. 1) had to resort to roll call: 408 votes were met to refuse priority to the Duport motion, who received 403. He came within five votes that day, that the Jews of the kingdom did not obtain citizenship rights until they requested so ardently.

1. Le Courrier de Provence, No. LXXXIII, December 23 and 24, 1789.
2. Le Journal de Versailles, n° 84, of December 26.

42 EMANCIPATION

But how much effort it took to win this little glorious success! “It can be surprising,” remarked one gazette, that the clergy and other opponents obtained by only five votes that the priority for this motion is not was not granted! » The clergy had once again defeated the Jews. This victory had filled him with pride; she encourages him raged to pursue his advantages.

Debates on the motion itself resumed the next day, no less lively, no less stormy. Three days already had been devoted to this great question “in the middle of the tumult, the cries and the marked opposition of party 2”: it was now a question for the Church of “excommunicating the Jews civilly? “. This is what his efforts were aimed at.

Rewbell declared that it was necessary to clearly pronounce their

did not want the Jews to be kept "continuously in a state of overwhelming uncertainty for them? ", and proposed to decree without hesitation that they would remain in the state of half-tolerance where the old regime had placed them. What elicited from him from Clermont-Tonnerre this blunt response: "He can there be a nation within a nation!"

But here again the intrigues of the opponents were foiled. "The Prince de Broglie" requested the adjournment of the question towards the Jews, declaring moreover that no exception could not be made against any citizen other than those decreed by the Assembly. M. de Beaumetz and Barnave supported the motion. The entire Republican Party followed them, feeling that it was the only way to save the Jews from

1. The State and Citizen Journal, by Keralio, n° XIII, 2nd quarter, from December 27. |

2. Id.

3. Le Patriote français, n° 139, of December 25.

4. Les Annales de Mercier, No. LXXXIV, December 25.

THE JEWS, THE COMEDIANS AND THE EXECUTIONER 43

the absolute exclusion that the Christians wanted to pro-speak out against them. |

The main motion with its amendments was as follows: designed:

"The National Assembly decrees: 4° That non-Catholics liques, which will have also fulfilled all the conditions prescribed by previous decrees to be voters and eligible, may be elected at all levels of administration without exception; 2 That non-Catholics are capable of all civil and military jobs like all other citizens, without hearing anything prejudging relative-ment to the Jews, on which the National Assembly reserves to pronounce. Furthermore, it cannot be opposed to the election bility of no citizen other reasons for exclusion than those which result from constitutional decrees. »

This motion was adopted and, according to the admission of one newspaper to his devotion, "against the wishes of the clergy! ".

It was variously appreciated by the press.

The monarchical and religious leaves came to an agreement to applaud. "There are few questions so delicate," said the Gazette de Paris which, republican a few years ago days more, then applauded "with transport" the motion of Abbot Gregory 7... The law of Moses so linked the politics and religion that it is almost impossible for the Jew is a French citizen, unless he renounces party to the principle of its law?. » And on January 31, 1790, all

v

1. The General Journal of the Court and the City, No. 99.

2. Her liberalism was such that she highly approved of marriage of priests and divorce. "Woman," she said, "is created for the happiness of man; thus, the priest who has one will be happy. »

– "Religion and morals have, she said again, an equal interest in pronouncement of divorce. »

3. La Gazette de Paris, December 25, 1789.

44 EMANCIPATION

confided in devotion, the respectable leaf added: "What such great interest can moreover make us wish that the Jews are active citizens, as long as they are happy? Do we not have not too many times already forgotten that the king of France was also the very Christian king? Can't he be king of the French without being king of the Jews? »

The Jews, who had just experienced such great disappointment, at least hoped to find in the republican gazettes a support, a comfort, a cry of consoling protest. But there too they encountered diverse opinions. THE "patriotic" sheets did not care to attach themselves independently finally to this question. One found this postponement "reasonable, since, without excluding the Jews, he prepared the minds to see them one day eligible: he gave time to prejudices to dissipate, passions time to calm down, and to the Jews the time to make themselves worthy of the rights of citizens!..." And a few days later: "A reason for prudence and humanity undoubtedly dictated the restriction made for Jews; let's hope it disappears soon. It's the the only way to regenerate this wandering and persecuted people tee. » Another newspaper, the Courier de Provence, was of the opinion that it was necessary to use "circumspection" and "measure"; Then victory of the Jews over these good Christians who, having been to them unfavorable in the debates, wanted the case to be judged immediately, in the doubtless hope that the exclusion would present as having fewer difficulties and consequences quences... »

The question was indifferent to opinion journalists extremes. Marat does not have "the strength to make any observation

1. Le Patriote français, n° 139, of December 25.

THE JEWS, THE ACTORS AND THE EXECUTIONER 45

on the childish objects with which the Assembly deals at this time moment! ". However, he thinks about it enough to defend the actors, reject the executioner with disgust and declare, as for the Jews, that, "although there is no appearance of seeing them devote themselves to the various jobs of society, it is not not a title to exclude them."

Camille Desmoulins remained ironic and cheeky in the report he gave of these agitated sessions. "Mr. de Clermont-Tonnerre, he says, adding to the motion of Mr. Roederer, who demanded eligibility in favor of comedies diens, proposed to decide that no citizen, bringing together the eligibility conditions, cannot be excluded from any employment, because of his profession or the religion he exercises.

" - What! cried a certain Mr. Rewbell, and the Jews also?... |

"And the Jews too," replied M. de Clermont-Tonnerre.

Would it not in fact be the height of absurdity if, with the receipt of the silver mark?, it was still necessary to justify of a foreskin ??... » |

Not everyone judged the question with this casualness. Serious minds saw this failure of the Jews as a failure to the principles of the Revolution, and understood that there would be some weakness, even after the warm pleadings pronounced at the national forum, to leave without reply the accusations against the Jews. It was then that the Day-nal of Paris published this remarkable study which we have reproduced and where, taking body to body the assertions of Abbot Maury, he destroyed them one by one with examples taken from Hebrew history itself. A justification too

1. L'Ami du peuple or le Publiciste parisien, n° 77, of December 25.
2. You had to pay a mark of capitation money to be eligible.
3. The Revolutions of France and Brabant, no. 5.

CHAPTER IV

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS –

This long discussion had greatly stirred public opinion “public. The passion that the clergy had put into it had contributed committed to making the Jewish question a question of principle for the people themselves, already tired of constant resistance that the right side of the Assembly opposed the resolutions
 taken for the salvation of the kingdom. |

The prelates, too closely subservient to the Church, had in lacked effect of skill and patriotism. After a fugitive enthusiasm for the work of the Revolution, they had shown to be refractory to any social or political improvement tick which seemed to compromise the supremacy of the clergy.
 But when the dangers which threatened the State necessitated a supreme. effort of the National Assembly; when, for food
 When the treasury was exhausted, we inquired about all the income ecclesiastics of the kingdom and who were resolved to suppress ~
 I have the right to tithes in kind; when the decree was issued inviting the churches to abandon, to save the nation, silverware unnecessary for the celebration of worship; when, finally,
 on the memoir of the Bishop of Autun listing the brilliant wealth of the clergy, the project of handing over the property ecclesiastics in the hands of the nation, the hostility of –

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 47

the Church no longer knew any bounds, and while "honor from the French name! » should have taken precedence over any personal interest, despite the heartbreaking distress of the country, she fiercely refused to any concession.

The nation felt the insult. The clergy blamed themselves to himself for his successive faults, and, to escape the own weight of his responsibility, he sought to divert from him the anger of the people. He struck his blows at the guards tants and Jews. In 1789, the Constituent Assembly attacked the ecclesiastical properties; from 1790 to 1792, we attacked the

each new measure taken against the Church, with each new calf decree tearing off a shred of its flesh, she straightens out, seeking to awaken against the Protestants and the Jewish hatreds and prejudices which, during the centuries precedents, had been its strength; but the people have none worry.

For this task she has a series of newspapers at her disposal. devotion or in his pay. The Journal of Louis XVI and his people or the Defender of the altar, the Throne and the homeland; the Monarchical, Philosophical, Political and Literary Annals raries; the Paris Gazelle; the General Journal, by the abbot Fontenay; the French Ranger; the Journal of the Court and the City; the Mercure de France, by Mallet du Pan; the Sabats Jacobites; the King's Friend, by Royou; the Rocambole of the days-nals; the Scandalous Chronicle; the Journal of the nobility; the Bulletin Board and the Song of the Cog; the-General Journal of the France, are among the most important.

In the assault attempted against the recovery of the deprived,

4. National Assembly or French Courier, session 36, of August 8, 1789, |
2. Lavissee and Rambaud, History of Europe from the 15th century to the present day, t. VIII.

48 EMANCIPATION

against freedoms first, and soon against the Republic even, everyone has their designated position, their indicated role. Such, like the French Kôdeur, the Jacobite Sabats, the Rocambole of newspapers and the Scandalous Chronicle, troops leaders of the "black" party, form the vanguard of the opposition and support with their coarse salt projections, their sometimes painful stings, from the liveliness of their mind Gallic, the bulk of the religious and royalist troops, at the ar- / thick and heavy blackberry.

It is to the people that they address first, reminding them the happiness he enjoyed under royalty and doing so judge of that which he tasted under the Revolution. The Journal of Louis XVI, in a long parallel which he entitled: "Appeal to the people", and who does not lack energy, proclaims in turn in turn the benefits of the reign of Louis XVI - "My king" - and the iniquities of the representatives of the nation - "Your kings."

"My king has restored the civil status to the Protestants; but it has wanted the religion of the State to be the only dominant one.

"Your kings, people, refuse to the ministers of religion of the State the tolerance, the rest granted to the Jews, the Lutherans nothing, to the Calvinists... It is the perjurers who strip the faithful ; it is the Protestants who load the people with irons Catholics."

Protestants, in fact, are no more spared than Jews. The religious papers are fiercely against them, the charge with the darkest misdeeds, attribute to them the most dark plots. Protestants and Jacobins are confused in the same anathema. The decree of 1790, which ordered the restitution to fugitive religionists of property confiscated from

1. The Journal of Louis XVI, call preceding n° 1.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 49

following the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, puts them in a beautiful fury. France is threatened with a new invasion if we. According to them, Protestants are arriving from all sides, from the North, from the South, "even from England". Each day we observe in Paris "new faces that the minister Rabaut is not leaving." They gather together every night. We predicts "next adventures" in this regard. We are talking about secret meetings, arming of Protestants. "We supplicalls on Geneva to raise funds. » Is it to "machine . new scenes of horror against Catholics"? Maybe. But they also thought of overthrowing Louis XVI in profit of a Protestant prince. "This is their plan. They don't wait than a favorable opportunity. »

In the meantime, they are there – rest assured – to hasten the sale of clergy property that the National Assembly decreed on November 3, 1789, "to pay Jews and traders to whom the State is in debt? ". Protestants and Jews, moreover, agree on this subject: "Buyers "all ready", they are "waiting for their 'prey' to be delivered to them 5". A curious but usual thing: while, on the right, we fulmine against them and they are accused of stripping the Catholics, – on the left, they threaten to "deport" them if, within six months, they do not justify the acquisition of goods of emigrants and communities {.

The Church had attempted to redeem these properties under ' hand. In an important meeting held in Brussels, he had been decided that the Jesuits, who had been expelled from

No. 151, of December 49, 1791. LL

2. Letter written by Father Perretti in Corsica, and read from the podium by Mirabeau. Le Patriote français, n° 457, of November 8, 1790. –

3. Gazette de Paris, March 29, 1790. –

4. Annals of Mercier, n° CLXXX VIII, of October 16, 1793.

4

50 EMANCIPATION

France, would reappear there in civilian clothes, and there, re-maintaining the rights of citizens, would acquire the ecclesiastical property. From all sides we pressed the various orders from Jesuits "to take part in this great project and to keep their funds ready to send them to Paris! ".
The attempt failed.

The clergy then resumed their antiphon. He asserted that the well-vigilance of representatives for religionists and "the Jewish nation" was intended solely to ensure "winning bidders" for the sale of these properties?. If that was, the National Assembly succeeded beyond belief. Buyers showed up in crowds, everywhere. We have a few Jews among them. In Bordeaux, Mr. Peixotto-subscribed for 750,000 pounds?. In Paris, "the descendants of Aaron, of Moses, of Elijah, of all the patriarchs of the Palestine, will successively seize the trans retreats--bowling and laughing disciples of Saint Bruno, of Saint Benoit, of the Seraphic Saint Francis, of the converter and roaster Saint Dominic and other saints of the same ilk; where you see uncircumcised monks, you will constantly see men of depraved usurers; where the trafficking took place. indulgences and masses, we will now sell brocade and braids; the Bible will supplant the four gospels there--lists; a doubtful virginity will be replaced by them. sweetness of the marital bond, which, ordinarily, is infinite--more chaste and above all much less sterile. In two words, a company of Jewish capitalists offered 800,000 pounds. of the location of the Carthusians of Paris, from where we can conclude that it is worth double that..."

1. Universal Gazette, No. 142, of April 21, 1790.

2. Id., January 30.

3. Le Patriote francais, n° 463, of November 14, 1790.
4. L'Observateur de Feydel (La Reynie), n° 89, dated February 27, 1790.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 54

All religions, moreover, according to the organs of priests, are also after the priesthood: "A numerous association of Calvinists, it is said, presents itself to acquire a temple. » The Jews of Paris, too, "set their views on the Jesuit church of Saint-Antoine" for establish a synagogue'. And the Mohammedans, 4 in turn, set their sights on the Feuillants to convert them into mosque. The enthusiasm is overflowing. The French Mail complains: "More submissions for national property nals! Were we all to pass for simoniacs, he there will not be a single piece left in our hands that does not suitable for some heretic."

The sale is going well. Will there only be one abbey left? to offer to "Polish Jews" who, under the spell of new new constitution, left, it is said, the Vistula, to establish themselves on the banks of the Loire? On 15 Brumaire Year IV, it was announced It will still be that a "society of Portuguese Jews" arrives. has Paris to buy "a very large part of national property" nals è". Now, stripped of everything, the unfortunate priests, reduced to the sole salary of the State, will have to beg their subsistence, "as the Jesuits begged for it". And meanwhile, "the superb Protestant and the insolent Jew" will tread "with a bold foot the miter and the pallium...; they insult will be afraid of their tears" and, a thought more touching than correctly, "they will offer them this bread of sorrow that it will be worth better to die than to accept ".

The Church was panicked. The sale of national goods causes there was a movement that exceeded all his predictions,

.

- . 1. Le Courrier francais, n° 108, of April 17, 1790.
2. Id., n° 168, of June 17, 1790.
3. Annals of the French Republic, No. 10, 15 Brumaire Year IV.
4. Gazette de Paris, March 26, 1790.

52 EMANCIPATION

Every day, she published legal consultations where it assimilated the buyers as the sellers of these property to "public thieves". She pursued them with her threats, seeking to inspire in them a real terror of the act itself and its consequences in the future. " THE accessory to a crime must suffer the same punishment as its perpetrator; we hang the thief, we burn the thief sacrilege... See what that you risk, if the laws are resuscitated..., if the people sufferer someday attributes his calamities to the attacks committed against the Church..."

And these attacks are increasing. "There is nothing we will not do to destroy religion. » All the favors of the Assembly national wheat are for Protestants and Jews: Cl n'y that the Catholic religion which has the honors of perseverance execution?" The Journal de la Cour et de la Ville made this cruel observation an ingenious apologue ®:

"Mr. Chas..., left-handed deputy, one of the most ardent persecutors totors of religion, gave the example of his doctrine: he de-robbed his lawful wife of her jewelry; he refuses him worship matrimonial and sadly relegates her to Ville-S... A mistress very pretty, very attractive, does the honors of her house, Paris ; and, every day, a continuous circle begins again for her of pleasures and enjoyments. This is a striking image of what is happening before our eyes: the Catholic religion has been rejected, stripped, persecuted; It's the woman! the Protestant religion, the Jewess, is showered with favors: we do everything for her... it's the mistress! »

And again: "What do you say about our religion? Will not- It is not fair that, in this time of freedom, she was

1. Letter from Father Peretti.
2. Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, n° 28, dated September 28, 1791.
3. Jd., n° 42, of February 11, 1791.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 53

free in turn? Why then chain her or hinder her by oaths? You want to place Calvinism, Judaism, Lutheranism on the throne? But, at least, by grace, – deign to tolerate this poor Catholic religion..."

The Jew and the Protestant are the "intruders". They are the ones who "bring scandal and division, which will bring good

however, it is for them alone that the National Assembly seems to have "innards?" ". "The churches of all convents are closed; we threaten to attack the inviolable asylum domestic chapels' »; and, while the Jews ready to open their synagogues, the Calvinists their oratories, and the Muslims their mosques, the refractory priests silences cannot "find a place where they can invoke the Supreme Being 5". |

Rumor has it, in fact, following the decree on the decommissioning of churches (May 8, 1791), that companies present themselves to buy "non-parish churches". The club of Jacobins will hold its sessions in the Jacobins church; THE Calvinists want to acquire another; the Jews threw the eyes on that of the former Jesuit novitiate. To believe even the newspapers, this church would not be enough for them. We have-knew that they had "Philip the Red" solicit their give up "la Clapaudière" – others said "le Cirque" – of the Palais-Royal to make it their synagogue. "They offer fifty thousand crowns, not counting the bribe, and twenty écus in Saint-Huruge) to exercise the police there 7."

- . Journal of the Court and of the City, n° 43, of February 12, 1791.
- . General Journal, of Father Fontenai, No. 3, February 3, 1791.
- . L'Ami du Roi, n° 226, of January 21, 1791.
- . Mercure de France, n° 16, of April 16, 1791.
- . The Jacobite Sabats, No. XVII.

- . Le Journal des Journaux, n° 47, of April 20, 1791.
- . Le Journal de la Cour..., no. 6, of May 6, 1791.

mi 0 OF mR © LO =

DLLs

YORA

bh EMANCIPATION

However pleasant these gossips were, they found belief, and the Christians believed in good faith that the churches were going to be divided into three parts: "the nave for the preacher, – the choir for the mass, – the Calvary for the synagogue! ", Everything seemed lost to them, worship itself:

"You who still pray according to our ancient ways,

"Good women, it's too much burden on your memory

"Of Paters and Aves, useless grimoire:

"Only with the Jews should we pray to Jesus? »

And the jokes rained heavily on the Jews.

The example falls from the national podium. Mr. Treilhard had asked, as something inherent to the Cons-civil title of the clergy, that it be decreed that, during the during the year 1791, the bishop who would have given the confirmation canonical order to an elected bishop, could make the consecration in such church as he deems suitable. Mr. Couturier, priest of Salis, deputy of the bailiwick of Mortagne, protested, got very angry, and proposed by amendment that the bishops were consecrated in "the synagogues Jews ". The joke was little appreciated: it raised a real storm.

– At the Abbey! At the Abbey! we shouted from all sides.

The Assembly was not so severe; but the speaker was called to order, and his motion recorded in the minutes with the name of its unfortunate author,

The religious and royalist press was full of this spirit easy. We can judge this by this joke about the representative

4. The Journal of the Court, No. 24, of January 24, 1791.

2. La Rocambole des journals, n° 31, of October 9, 1791.

3. Universal Mercury, from March 2, 1191; – Journal de la Nobility, de la Magistracy, No. XI, of March 1, 17191; – Annals of Mercier, n° DXVI, from March 2; – Journal Général de France, No. 61, March 2.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 55

both Duport, who was the promoter of the decree on emancipation complete statement of the Jews of the kingdom:

"The Jews, scandalized to see Por... at the bottom of the decree which makes them active citizens, offering, it is said, a considerable sum

mands, who have a lot of tenderness for the family of this sir, propose on the contrary to make it salty for the conserve longer. »

At the same time, in fact, that the serious gazettes, of a your saddened and pompous tone, threaten the deicidal nation of thunderbolts of the Church and the anger of the people, the leaves avant-garde cast sarcasm on the Jews every day and sought to ridicule them and their defenders.
'sors.

At the time when the appointment of prelates was put to election tion (January 30–March 30, 1791), the question of the choice of bishops greatly concerned the Church. The religious press echoed these concerns. "It appears," says the Journal de la Court and the City, that in several places Jews are placed in all administrative bodies; we must hope that before how little will we see them elected to bishoprics?..."

We remember that the Bishop of Nancy already spoke on this subject, in the middle of the National Assembly, the naive interpreter of terrors of its administrators. This exquisite witticism is renewed any moment. "The proof that they want to remind us of primitive Church, says M. Gauthier, is that in Saintes there are protests Both married people had votes to be bishops. " He adds that at the election of the bishop of Saint-Flour "there were eight votes for the Count of Mirabeau, four for a Jew, and

1. Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, issue of June 14.
2. No. 5, of March 5, 1792.

56 EMANCIPATION

twenty for a famous thief who had just been arrested and lacrosse thought about saving some rope! ". The Journal of the Court is more affirmative: "the Rabbi of the synagogue of Nancy had eight votes to be bishop of the said city, and the priest Fauchet only one. O tempora! O mores?! »

The royalists feigned great fear in this regard. "Who can assure us," they cried, "that we will not be not forced to have us all circumcised before thirty years old, if things continue to go the way they are going in this moment 3? » And, in fact, this fear asserts itself, spreads. The prophecies are getting darker. But these prophecies strike more vividly the imagination, put into verse. – Is not it the language of gods and angels?

By fatal decrees, henceforth, O Christians!

You have to Judaize to be citizens.

For priests we will have the usurer of Judea,

The impudent sophist, the Protestant, the atheist...

Synagogue, high school or temple, it's all the same;

Preach, sermon, sabbath or infernal system... -

Apostates, what oaths do you take in this place?

Whose? is it in Franklin, in Mir...(abeau) the impious?

To religion or philosophy,

To the Protestant, to the Jew, to the odious Pathée?...

Those who defended the Jews, as we have said, do not were attacked no less than the Jews themselves. Their existence entire society is scrutinized, the motives of their conduct suspected, their disinterestedness questioned.

1. According to the Bulletin et Journal des Journaux, n° 40, of August 4, 1791.

2. No. 16, of March 12, 1791.

3. Journal of the Court, No. 34, April 3, 1791.

4. Id., n° 36, of January 16, 1791.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 57

The "blacks" doggedly pursue the "patrigots", and the most powerful argument that is invoked against them

ae

. is that they allowed themselves to be won over by the Jews. Grotesque fables are invented about this. Here is,
for example, the staging imagined by the Speaker of the People :

"The Jews of Paris presented a petition on August 5, in the National Assembly, in favor of the Jews of Alsace, tending to ensure their properties and their existence already threatened since long: This request was referred not to a Committee, but to Messrs Lameth, Barnave, Voidel, Chapellier, Bailly, Lafayette, Touret, Malouet, Dandré, Target and company, who, after examining their petition, responded eight days later to the deputation that this object could be decreed, but that there is a considerable job estimated at 80,000 pounds. The Jews observed that everything was done, that there was nothing left to do but say. A Jew, who is not so Jewish as these deputies, says: Gentlemen, gentlemen! it's necessary reduce this to 72,000 pounds. After a moment of reflection: money, says Barnave. Yes, Sir, purse untied, and the Israelites retire to Mr. Zacharie, another Jew, rue Saint-Louis-au- _ Palace. They report to him about their mission and announce to him that the decree will pass for 72,000 pounds. Mr. Zacharie responds: "It's not expensive, let's take advantage of the circumstance." »

Already at a time when the Portuguese Jews are pending to be recognized as active citizens, the French Ranger pre-sees that their "naturalization" is assured: "They know what what they lack and what the National Assembly lacks. They have money and the Assembly needs it. They offer two million !. » |

Is this where Grospli..., representative of Strasbourg, acquired His "prodigious" state of fortune? No doubt

1. Le Rédeur français, n° 71, dated January 16, 1790.

58 EMANCIPATION

for the Journal dela Cour. "He must have received sums considerable numbers of Jews, Lutherans and Calvinists, including he constantly supported the claims to the Assembly for to have amassed so much wealth in such a short time. » Mira-beautiful also had its part. Once he experienced crises of necessity; today what a difference, thanks to revolution, Jewish gold, ministerial assignats?!

Mr. Suleau's journal, which appeared on May 4, 1794, published "a very pleasant confession from Honoré Riquetti", followed of his will, product of the brilliant imagination of the day-nalist. "I bequeath," it says, "to this much-loved brother (the vicomte de Mirabeau) an interest of 4 0/0 in the domains national with M. de Menou; 2 0/0 in the Jewish affair

This bishop of Autun was often taken to task in this regard. part. We read in the Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, of

January 24, 1791:

"Mr. Lév... d'Aut... lost, a few days ago, 50 thousand écus in the capital's gambling den best stocked with crooks and girls. Rest assured, sensitive and honest souls! The day before yesterday he took his revenge and won, in the face of all Isragh; eighteen thousand louis: that's a nice haul...

Another time it is said that secretaries of the Assembly national occupy their leisure time with caricatures.

"One of these gentlemen recently decided to draw a caricature representing Mr. Bishop of Aut..., at the bottom of Vhabit from which we read: Motion to grant civil liberty to the Jews. Before the prelate is an Israelite who brings him a purse of gold under the nose and the prelate exclaims: King of the Jews, you win. The author

1. Le Journal de la Cour..., n°16, of November 16 (794.
2. The People's Speaker, No. 25 (volumes V and VI}.
3. According to the Bulletin and Journal des Journaux, n° 52, of May 2, 1791.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 59

of this caricature presented it himself to the prelate, who laughed a lot f. »

Abbot Grégoire himself could not escape these unjust and miserable suspicions.

"What is this ambitious bishop doing in Paris? Fearless Defender property usurped by the clergy as long as it flattered itself to share it ger; then ardent advocate of the children of Israel who deceived him, ` they say, with touching recognition; today the saint priest is no longer either Jewish or Christian; he is patriotic like Bris-Fool and Carra 2. » |

However, the gazetteers did not always have the pen so cruel. They were just being mean, victims without causing them serious injury.

Bailly, the mayor of Paris, had to laugh first, as did the Bishop of Autun, of this anecdote told by the Courier extraordinary :

"Mr. Bailly, convinced of this truth that all religions are pleasing to God, provided that they are returned to him by souls pure, and that all men are equal, provided that they are honest, receives Calvinists indifferently into his society, – Lutherans, Anabaptists, etc. In recent days, the Brandon brothers, Jews, came to invite him to honor their club with his presence. Isn't it clear that M^{re} Bailly imagines that the mayor, to attend, must be circumcised... Mr. Bailly reassured his tender half; he promised that she would experience no deprivation, and attended Hebrew Session 3."

The Bishop of Autun, of whom we spoke earlier, had to undergo a thousand pinpricks.

1. Le Rédeur français, n° 26, dated February 6, 1790.
2. Le Babillard et le Chant du Coq, n° 149, dated October 10, 1791.
3. The Extraordinary Mail or First Arrival, of November 5 ber 1791.

60 EMANCIPATION

The Paris Gazette, reviewing the work carried out the Constituent Assembly, presents a very gloomy picture the conduct of Mr. de Périgord:

"A financial prelate weighs a currency in the scales golden, but fleeting like the flowing wave; he wants to continue his cherished idol: groups of respectable priests, dead in the torments of hunger and pain, present to him for his torture the image of the divine founder of whom he was the pontiff. Everyone repeats to him: "You have done everything for the Jewish people and nothing for us; so you were a deicide like him!?" »

* The bishop, upon reading this, must have felt a shiver pass through him through the whole body. Other gazettes took charge of him restore cheerfulness.

"Mr Baron de Bezenval recently met Mr Bishop d'Autun at Madame de la Reynière's. The prelate was in tailcoat and boots: I took you, the baron told him, for a Jewish merchant who came to buy the goods of the clergy? »

The Journal de la Cour announced, on January 15, 1791, among the "changes of domicile", that of the lame prelate:

"Mr. Bishop of Autun, formerly Rue des Jews, dislodged because competition from new active citizens, currently rue Vide-Gousset, at the corner of rue Cloche-Perche. We prepare for him, an apartment on rue Clopin 3."

He proposed, a few days later +, to modify the name of several streets of Paris "to replace those of the principal "pale heroes of the Revolution". At rue de l'Université, where houses the abbot of Périgord, we will give the name "rue de la

1. La Gazette de Paris, September 30, 1791.
2. The French Ranger, No. 39.
3. The Journal of the Court, No. 15.
4. Idem, n° 20 of January 20, 1794.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS | 61

Jewry! »; and the former rue des Jews that he left will bear the name "Emer... and company".

It was Emery, the deputy for the bailiwick of Metz. THE: Catholics accused him, a Jew, of having, being president of the National Assembly, forced the ecclesiastics to lend oath to the Constitution and decree taking office those who wanted to escape it. – He was not Jewish and he was not presiding over the Assembly that day? However, all protected traders and Jews. That's enough for him attract all the wrath of the Church?.

But however venomous were the darts thrown against – Mirabeau, Talleyrand-Périgord, Émery or Duport, nothing equals the hatred with which Abbot Grégoire was pursued. Plaisan-bitter words, insults, accusations, threats, nothing came to him – spared since the day he intervened on behalf of the Jews until the hour when he withdrew, justly glorious of the noble task to which he had devoted all his strength. He was, of this fact, one of the most maligned, most flouted men, the most ridiculed, the most insulted of the Revolution. Before the austere virtues that he showed, before the greatness of soul that he demonstrated, we feel overcome with admiration for this good man, and pity for the pugs who grabbed so furiously at the legs. |

Here, at random and without choice, extracts from the sheets which were hostile to him: they are all equally profound.

Monday, February 21, 1791.– Abbot Grégoire is appointed to the bishopric of Tours. We assure, and this is not a joke, that a

4. The Journal of the Court, No. 31, of May 31, 1791.

2. See. the Israelite Universe, 51st year, no. 10, November 29, 1895; – THE representing Emery, by Léon Kahn. ©

3. The Scandalous Chronicle, No. 19.

62 EMANCIPATION

Jewish colony is preparing to establish itself there under its philosophical aegis pastoral-civic!.

Friday August 26. – We noticed in Bordeaux, especially in Metz and Nancy, that since the time the Israelites convinced that the pontiff Grégo... was the Messiah, they do not open plus their windows when it's stormy 2.

Friday May 13. – Mandate from M8" Grégoire, constitutive bishop functional by the grace of God, and in union with the Holy See despite the Holy See, prescribing Jacobite dress, and exhorting wear a beard like the Jews...

have resolved to obey the command of the Jewish prelate 3...

Sunday October 9. – NEW Books: Dissertation on the excellence of bacon and blood sausage, dedicated to the Jews, by Mr. Cochon. We must read this work with even more confidence and edification. cation that it was skillfully commented on by little Grégoire and that he is the sole author of the dedicatory epistle. Found in everyone the fleshcooks of kingdom 4.

April 41-18, 1791. – Portrait of MG..., constitutional bishop from Blois.

So what is this G... so much vaunted today?
By the synagogues of France?

It's this obscure pedant, this starving priest,
Who, sometimes Protestant and sometimes Catholic,
Circumcised and Christian, but still fanatic,

Like Judas, his predecessor,
Cowardly sells his soul to whoever wants to pay for it.

Tuesday February 8. – Nothing has been so cheerful as the civic meal of which Abbé Fauch...(and) was the entrepreneur at the circus. The abbot Taste...(you) drank copiously; Abbot Grég..(oire) sang there

4. Court Journal, No. 52.

2. Idem, No. 51

3. Idem, 13

4. La Rocambole des journals, n° 3.

5. Journal de la Nobility, n° 11.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 63

for dessert, similar verses, to the Jewish tune, and zon, zon, Solomon burps. But, when the guests had stood up, an honor-member went up to the podium and denounced a small national distraction which made fifteen place settings disappear, which L'Ami du Roi, the Journal général de France, the Rocambole des Journals, the Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, the Journal de la Nobility, the Babillard, in turn or with a cruel together, leave him neither truce nor rest.

One, having the motto: "one Faith, one Law, one King", imagine an "Epistle of the apostle Greg... to the Hebrews", beginning with these words: "To the Jewish nation, greetings, money and plenary freedom: Amen", and ending thus: "Don't you don't get tired of giving money, we have plenty need ?. »

Another? exalts "Mr. Grégoire, priest without ambition, priest without presumption, beloved priest of the Jews perhaps still more than Christians", and ironically celebrates his nomination to the bishopric of Blois, "reward due to his high piety, to his vast knowledge, to his submission, to his respect exemplary towards the episcopate and the Holy See. And always this accusation of being in the pay of the Jews makes us swoon, by contrast, before Abbé Maury "who finds: as much merit in defending Catholics as Mr. Abbot Gregory finds advantages in defending the Jews.

All opportunities are good, even the worst vais, to insult and vilify him. He is, at the presidency of the National Assembly, the "vile" predecessor of Mira-

1. Court Journal, No. 39.

2. La Rocambole des Journals, n° 28, of September 29, 1791.

3. Journal Général, Wednesday February 16, 1791.

4, Idem, n° 6, of January 6, 1790.

—+

64 EMANCIPATION

beautiful. The famous speaker "established order in the room unknown under the reign of Rabbi Gregory, who seemed having converted the Assembly into a synagogue where every day on the Sabbath."

"Rabbi"! the insult should hardly have reached the one
"whose sublime passion for Jewry is known to us? ".

"great friend of the Jews", "apostle of the Jews", "protector as zealous of the Church as of the synagogue", "servant of Israel", with which, every day, the libellers peppered their articles against Grégoire. -

Furthermore, Gregory was not the only prelate accused of Judaize. During his election to the bishopric of Paris (March 1791), it was insinuated that Gobel, bishop of Lydda, whose appointment nation had aroused real enthusiasm, could well-being of the Jewish race: "As it is the time of triumph Jews, it was said, this new success would not be without analogy with the tribe of Judah. » Some time ago Before, a peddler sold clandestinely, at the Palais-Royal, an aristocratic pamphlet entitled: Death and Passion of Louis XVI, king of the Jews and the French\.

But the hour is coming when the vocabulary of people of the Church becomes exhausted, where the point becomes dull, where the line becomes distorted. There figure of the venerable pontiff remains in his noble and all-sing serenity. Besides, the Revolution is taking its course; her strength defies the pygmies who seek to trip her;

1. Extract from the King's Friend by the Courier de Ports, n° 2, of February 2 April 1794.

2. Idem, No. XXI, January 21, 1794.

3 The religious movement during the Revolution, by Dr. Robinet (Paris, 1896, p. 435). |

4. Counter-revolutionary Clubs, by Augustin Challamel. Paris, 4895.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS 65

and, faced with these weak survivors of a rotten society and that death awaits, the men of this era borrow to the Revolution itself a power and a greatness which ensure their work success, existence and perpetuity.

CHAPTER V

THE "PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONAIS" JEWS

has

We clearly feel that, imbued with the justice of the cause, they wanted to defend, strong in the duty to accomplish, the Gregoire, the Duports, the Mirabeaus, the Clermont-Tonnerre, do not did not allow themselves to be diverted from their plans by insults, the cries or the anger which rose increasingly from the "cul-de-sack the blacks." The adjournment pronounced by the Assembly nationality did not set them back further. Their firmness was a strength for the Jews.

The rumor then spread that those of Alsace, Lorraine and Trois-Évêchés had a moment of weakness. However the very day when the Assembly was to postpone at one o'clock more favorable his decision towards them, they sent him nite a "New Address" where, fighting the accusations brought against them, they begged that we not stop consider them as citizens, since, for almost six month, they assiduously fulfilled their duties. " One says that we have holidays that are not established on the same day than those of the Catholics, and that, on these days, if necessary would bear arms for the Fatherland, we would refuse to fulfill our duty. Ah! ask... if every time that it was necessary to arm oneself for public safety, day, night,

THE "PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONAIS" JEWS 67

even day of our feast, we did not leave our occupations the most cherished pations to go where the Homeland is threatened call us !..." |

And yet the Jews of Bordeaux had been, they said, informed by public papers "that the Jews of Alsace, of Lorraine and Trois-Evêchés aspired to live in France under a particular regime, to have laws that were appropriate for them own and to constitute a class of citizens separated from all others ". Alarmed by this excess of discouragement, the Jews of Bordeaux protested on December 31, 1789, in a address to the National Assembly, against this "effervescence of a misunderstood religious zeal", and, like some twenty years before in their response to Voltaire, separated clearly, they "come from the tribe of Judah", their cause of that of "Jews of other nations". Just as then they defended "the rights of the Portuguese when they were pre-judiciable to the Germans and Avignon residents", they heard today that we distinguished "from the other Jews the Spaniards and Portuguese which have never been confused or incorporated with the crowd of the other children of Jacob.

This distinction had passed into public opinion; She table, so that when the rights of Portuguese Jews had triumphed in the Constituent Assembly, it was a newspaper favorable to the cause of the Jews, the Journal de Paris, which took charge with a very clear feeling about things, to reduce to its value this distinction that the Portuguese Jews had so misunderstood terribly brought into being. "What do we mean when we call Spanish and Portuguese Jews who, for two or three

1. Apology for the Jewish Nation, or Critic Reflections on the 1^o chapter of VII, vol., of the Works of M. de Voltaire on the subject of the Jews, by the author of the Essay on Luxury (attributed to Pinto).

68 EMANCIPATION

centuries, from father to son, were born and lived in France? They were Spanish and Portuguese two or three hundred years ago years; but it seems to us that, since then, they have had time to become French: these false names are not proper than to entertain false ideas, and false ideas are always close to some injustice..." Which was true for those of Bordeaux were no less so for those of Alsace. "The Jews of Bordeaux and Bayonne, we call them portugais; those of Lorraine and Alsace, we call them Germans. It is obvious that some are not more allemands than the others are Portuguese. But no matter! These two names, both equally false, serve to make an unjust division, indulgence for the some, hatred for others, and passions do not notice not to ask if there is justice in such things denominations. We have some pity for human reason when that we see her so governed and misguided by words! ", Nothing was more accurate or more sensible than these observations: they remained true. |

However, the Jews of Bordeaux, some of whom were naturalized French, and of which a large number enjoyed, since 1550, of all the rights of the "regnicos" under of letters patent which had been renewed "from reign in reign", had serious claims in favor of the Assembly national wheat. The rights they legally enjoyed for almost two centuries, the services they had provided due, the patriotism of which they had given many proofs, their brilliant qualities of mind, a pride of appearance that bequeathed to them by their Castilian ancestors, all this had reconciled powerful sympathies among the representatives

1. Le Journal de Paris, n° 30, of January 30, 1790.

so much of the nation. "It is easy to see that with such existence the Jews of Bordeaux did not need to be admitted to the rank of active citizens, – they were there; what if we had wanted to exclude them, the same revolution, which recovers their rights to all men, would have stripped the Jews of their rights; for them there was no question of acquiring, but not to lose; we didn't need to give them, we had to leave them only what they have..." They had: –so some reason to fear – if they were true – that "the poorly thought-out requests of a few Jews from Alsace –and Lorraine" could not compromise such a good cause and consequently seriously infringe their rights centuries-old. |

Their Address was intended to hasten the decision of the Constituent with regard to them.

This Address, signed by their trustees and 215 heads of home, distributed to the public and sent to the homes of deputies, had been submitted to the Constitution Committee which had instructed the Bishop of Autun to make his report.

The matter came before the Assembly on January 28, 1790. People came there –to discuss the geographical division of France in departments, when M. de Talleyrand went up to the rostrum, and –"soon the heat of the most stubborn debates revived the listeners numbed by these cold details of geography? ".

The Bishop of Autun, organ of the Constitution Committee, interpreter of the wishes expressed by the Jews of Bordeaux, made "the table of their rights", "that of the virtues which give them dignity", and gave the conclusions of the Committee on the petition: "The Revolution, which recovers their rights

1. Le Journal de Paris, n° 29, of January 29, 1790.
- 2 Le Courrier de Provence, n° 99, January 27–28, 1790.

70 EMANCIPATION

all French people, cannot make them lose to such citizens. Consequently, without prejudging anything on the question general meeting which has been adjourned, the Committee proposes to the Assembly to grant the Jews of Bordeaux what they ask if justly, and to declare them active citizens under the same

"Who could believe," says the Journal de Paris, "that what . that one would come forward to fight such a motion! Several deputies, however, presented themselves in this -des- breast, and the first of all was Mr. Rewbell. But bad for him took: the Assembly was tired of this opposition, systematic, stubborn, to his projects on the Jews, and she made him feel. A "cry of general indignation" arose, in fact, against the speaker, "from the moment he wanted to open the mouth ".

"-We offer you, Gentlemen...

"Rumours, noise, shouts. |

"-We propose to you, Gentlemen, to declare that the Jews from Bordeaux...

"The noise and new cries still intercept the voice of the opinionator; however, he persists in wanting to force the at- be careful...

"-We offer you, gentlemen," he shouts for the third Sith time and with all the strength of his lungs, to declare that the Jews of Bordeaux are not Jews...

"For once, the thunder of all the voices united has growled at the merciless anti-Israelite. We demanded the voice with the greatest force, and Mr. de Rewbella was forced to get off the stand? > |

1. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 99.
2. Le Courrier de Gorsas, No. XXI, January 29, 1790.

THE "PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONNAIS" JEWS 71

However, he was able to go back to it, returning again to his argument- 'ment favorite: "Alsace will be on fire if we return the same . decree! » Patriotic anxieties! The dreaded idiots sequences | this is the argument which the impartial and the moderates used at the start of the Revolution to prevent the Revolution; this is still the argument invoked by the supporters of the slave trade. "Tyranny," said the French Patriot, that's it, everywhere, if not the same face, at least the same delirium. » Mr. Rewbell, instead of asking for injustice in favor of a prejudice, should he not rather use his eloquence to convert the Christians of Alsace? "We need to suppose both imbeciles and cannibals to: not that they will slaughter the Jews, because they are treated like men. Mr. Rewbell made a cruel satire of the Alsatians; We let's like to believe that it is unfair! »

Abbot Maury, who one might expect to find side of Mr. Rewbell as long as the good of the Jews was in Game, "showed himself on the stage again? ". He passed to the Bureau a restrictive amendment to the motion presented by the Constitution Committee, demanding that the Jews of Bordeaux continued, but provisionally, to enjoy all the rights and privileges granted to them. The word "temporarily" excited "the most lively demands" tions" and seemed to everyone "a crying injustice? ". The abbot Maury is irritated by this opposition. He goes up to the podium and tries to prove that it is fair to grant only one state provisional civil service to men who enjoy this state for a long time perhaps, but provisionally. Vain-

1. Le Patriote français, No. CLXXV, January 30, 1790.
2. Le Courrier français, n° 29, of January 29, 1790.
3. Annals of Mercier, No. CXX, January 30, 1790.

72 EMANCIPATION

ly, he added, we treat as laws the letters patent which were granted to them by the kings of France: "These letters are at most only a derogatory patent subject to a periodic renewal. Z? would be quite different from a national decree which would be eternal like the French nation that's it!. »

` This ingenuous declaration did not fail to embarrass the nobility and clergy. Enfant terrible of the Church, the abbot Maury often caused trouble in his party, both through abruptness of his repartee than by the independence of his opinions and the brutal frankness of his speeches. This time still, the right side remained gloomy, while the patriots applauded, they wanted nothing other, in fact, than what so feared Abbé Maury. |

We nevertheless took the trouble, in the Assembly and in the press, to refute his ideas.

"They are absolutely lacking in accuracy," said the Journal de Paris?. If the rights granted to the Jews of Bordeaux are called privileges, it is not to characterize these rights, but to distinguish the Jews of Bordeaux from all the other Jews who there. are excluded. By what principle or by what authority Mr. Abbot

patents registered in Parliament were not counted among | the laws of the kingdom? If the letters patent granted to the Jews were renewed from reign to reign, and at the time of the inauguration of each king, it is because at that moment the contract. of the nation with the Throne was renewed in some way, that the kings renewed them with the Catholics in their coronations, and with the Jews by the letters patent, Is it permitted to say that by ascending the throne a king could remove from the Jews the prerogatives which they enjoyed and which were nothing other than

1. The Annals of Mercier, No. CXX.
2. No. 29, of January 29, 1790.

THE "PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONAIS" JEWS 73 |

human and citizen rights? Father Maury therefore thinks that there existed some power which could have legitimately removed to men what they had legally owned for centuries? Well! here is a very different principle, and which is consecrated by the feeling and by the laws of the whole earth, it is that a possession, without even being a hundred years old, turns into a liter of property that Kings and Laws cannot violate without crime. What does it matter that we have given the title of Privilege to the rights Jews? Some time ago, everything was a privilege and nothing was right. If it were a Privilege, the National Assembly should not not confirm it, and it is to be consistent with its principles that it must transform these privileges into rights. »

While Rewbell and Maury stood so of stubbornness against the motion supported by the Committee of Constitution, the request of the Jews was supported by the Viscount of Noailles, MM. de Beaumetz, de Seze, Le Chapel- link, of Fumel and Grégoire, with the energy, precision and common sense that the Journal de Paris had put into it.

Mr. Le Chapellier had just finished his speech. There The question seemed sufficiently clarified. The discussion was closed, although a number of speakers had asked to speak. What else was there to add to everything what had been said? "Natural law speaks; the charters confirm; centuries consecrate it; can we swing in © his opinion'? »

The National Assembly understood this. But, when it comes to to go to the votes, we found ourselves caught in an inextricable network cable of proposals where amendments were tangled, motions, sub-amendments, etc., which threw the greatest

Mr. Le Chapellier concluded in favor of drafting the

4. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 99.

7 a.m. EMANCIPATION

Committee. Mr. de Beauharnais proposes a new wording. Mr. de Beaumetz presents another. M. de Sèze a three-sieme. Mr. de Beauharnais asks that the Jews of Bordeaux continue to enjoy the same rights that they enjoyed until present and which are consecrated in their favor by letters-patents. But a question arises, that of knowing what are these rights? Mr. de Sèze demands for them "the rights of active citizen. -"M. de Croix proposes, amends, in his turn; Mr. de Saint-Fargeau reworks everything, divides, subdivides... Uproar, coalitions, intrigues'. » The draft decree of Mr. de Beauharnais finally gets priority over bishop's motion of Autun. Mr. de Beaumetz's amendment is adopted. He ... not All that remains is for the Assembly to decide on the motion to Mr. de Seze... It is against him that all the fury of the opposition tion was carried. "We then saw everything we could, for put an obstacle to it, other citizens, very active too, but whose civic-mindedness did not excite all the movements?. »

The motion was put to the vote by sitting and standing. "A pre-The first test seemed doubtful, and it was. We made some a second ; no doubt in most of the room ; almost everyone was convinced that the amendment was admitted; among the secretaries, only one doubted"; it was then necessary to resort to roll call. "Immediately the party anti-Judaic himself traced the image of the synagogue'. » It is impossible to depict the tumult which, for two hours, violated the dignity, the very sanctity of the deliberations of the Assembly. A continual rumor rose from the part of the room occupied by the members of the "ci-devant"

+

1. Le Courrier de Gorsas, No. XXI, January 29, 1790.

2. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 99.

3. Id.

4. Le Patriote français, No. CLXXV, January 30, 1790.

orders" of the clergy and nobility. MM. Abbot Maury, of Foucault, Duval d'Espréménil and the bishop of Angoulême were noted for their ardor in rejecting the roll call nal'. "Ah! if you could have heard and distinguished these voices Argentines of our bishops and our abbots, you could not have believe that these weak and delicate breasts make such sounds! The zeal for the house of God and the hatred of Jews gave these pious men a holy fury?. »

They abandon their seats, spread out in disorder and in tumult in the middle of the room; when the secretaries raise their voices to call the names, their voices are muffled fairies by confused exclamations 3. Cries, clamors, interpellations crisscross with increasing vehemence.

"The public loudly demonstrated its indignation."

This scene, "the most scandalously painful" there is possible to imagine, lasted two hours two hours for which the roll call, made by the Viscount de Noailles, was interrupted at any minute by "a terrible noise".

Twenty times this appeal was started, stopped, resumed, without "the most revolting cries" ceased to be heard.

Opponents requested a postponement. But "such was the ardor of the patriotic neighborhood that these respectable citizens would rather have spent the night without eating than giving up thus the cause of the people. They remain motionless on their seats, await the outcome of this astonishing scene.

The president, "the organ of the most named party" leader of the Assembly? », declares, in fact, that all

- . Annals of Mercier, No. CXX, January 30.
- . Le Courrier de Madon, No. XXII, January 28, 1790.
- . Le Journal de Paris, n° 29,
- . National Assembly and Commune of Paris, n° 176, of January 29.
- . Le Courrier français, n° 29, dated January 29, 1790.

Id.

- . Le Journal de Paris, n° 29.

mim 0t me © bo M

76 EMANCIPATION

efforts to prevent roll call will be useless; Mr. Toulangeon exclaims: "If there is an impious conspiracy against the public good, that the conspirators at least be convicted naked and let them be named! » Everyone is protesting against this to denounce their conduct to the Provinces.

Many members, "especially ecclesiastics", exhausted, feeling defeat coming, then try a another subterfuge. They retire, "preferring their dinner to their duty! ", but thus hoping to "break the session" and make useless the energy of the Republicans. Vain attempt! Mr. -Liancourt observed that, as long as the session was not legal- lifted, the absence of a few members could not suspend a deliberation, and the combination of black failed pitifully. Soon "the warmth of the place, the mephi- tism, the very harmful dust that spread in the room these impetuous movements of 800 people, finally the fatigue or impatience? ", got the better of so much violence. "Little by little their cries, their murmurs grew weaker, expired; the call of the deputies and their responses by ow? and by no were able to be heard? », and the vote finally followed its regular and normal course.

Mr. de Sèze's amendment was adopted by 373 votes. against 225. "It's more than three votes to two," said observe the Courrier de Provence. "M. de La Fayette was at this session, and his voice, given in the affirmative, was very applauded f. »

The session was adjourned at eight o'clock in the evening; victory remained

1. Le Mercure de France, No. 6, February 6, 1790.
2. Id.
3. Le Journal de Paris, n° 29.
4. Le Spectateur national, n° 29, dated January 29, 1790.

"PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONAIS" JEWS 7%

to "generous defenders of the sacred rights of man and of the citizen, who had started by swearing that they would never stop would not appear that the decree had not been issued! ".

The next day, "after the stormiest session in which the Annals of this legislative can preserve the. souvenir", the Journal de la Cour et de la Ville published this entry:

"Mr. Abbot de Montesquiou went to his Majesty, serving as Vice-President of the Assembly the suppression of the Stud Farms and the restoration of the Jews? ".

_ The line lacked vigor. NOT

La Gazelte de Paris, for its part, accompanied the mention of the vote of this hypocritical declaration: "... He was terrible no doubt to torture them almost every half century by all kinds of torments that avarice or fanaticism could imagine. But, by granting them, under the protection of the laws, all the happiness they can enjoy, Could we not observe that, in the centuries where we was a little more convinced of the truth of the dogmas of Christianity, any Christian nation could not and would not must have seen that with a sort of horror the people who had laid bloodthirsty hands on the divine founder whose we reserved the dogma, even while attacking its ministers 3? »

The "aristocratic" and "christian" newspapers were obviously distraught in the face of the vote on the decree and the majority imposing rity that he had assembled. The republican press, on the contrary, was unanimous in applauding it. The success of the "quartier patriote" was coupled with the failure of the "prestolets".

1. The National Assembly, no. 176.
2. No. 31, of January 31, 1790.
3. La Gazette de Paris, January 30, 1790.

78 EMANCIPATION

In this regard, a few quotations are necessary, revealing the state of public opinion.

"The cause of Spanish, Portuguese and Avignon Jews is therefore won! exclaims the Journal de Paris. That the sky God bless you! And may human reason rejoice! It's a triumph for her. » It is also "human reason" invoked by the Courier de Provence, whose articles on Jews are inspired by the surest judgment: "—Here then a new blow to these prejudices, half religious, half political, who fomented a war in society dull and continuous. They will all fall under the sin of time, which is also that of reason*," Le Courier de Madon in turn rejoiced at this decree which, "already consecrated by public opinion, is very consoling for humanity nity 3," And in a painting, where he shows the Jews "struck of infamy from the cradle", exposed to "proscriptions of hatred", "persecutions of fanaticism", "attacks" states of greed", he adds this thought that today

We are no longer at the time of the Crusades, and when the nation rises with such majesty and nobility above the prejudices which subjugated previous centuries, it would be terrible to imitate their barbarity. » The Courier of Europe, lyrical first when he exclaimed: "The Messiah whom you wait has arrived", also noted that it was "a great victory won over prejudices", and, in a somewhat hasty vision of the future, he added: "Perhaps in the next legislature we will see, alongside Mr. Rabault Saint-Étienne and Mr. Nérac, one of the descendants of Moses

1: N= 29:

2, No. 99.

3. No. XXIII.

THE "PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONNAIS" JEWS 79

who, through this distinction, will return to his brothers this noble pride that another prejudice had made them lose! »

The unanimous feeling of the organs of opinion was significant: it proved that the Assembly had done a work healthy, consistent with the rights of man and citizen that it had the mission to defend. | |

However, while the Portuguese Jews shipped to Bordeaux an extraordinary letter to announce the decree of the Assembly, the nobility and the clergy, simulating a lively interest in the Jews of Alsace, sought to alleviate the scope of the vote by proposing, on January 20, to add to this decree that nothing was prejudged with regard to those of Alsace. It was feared, it was said, that in this province we would not did not distinguish them from the Jews of Bordeaux, and that jealousy, indignation, fanaticism, did not bring Christians to greatest excesses against them. "Wisdom, foresight, humanity demands that we prevent an equivocation also murderous, ironically said the Courrier de Provence. He must declare, out of pity for the Jews of Alsace, that they are not point: included in the rights of the Jews of Bordeaux; that they are still carefully sequestered from political society; that, born French, it is enough for them to be disciples of Moses for being foreigners to their homeland; let us be careful not to assume nothing in their favor; all for their greatest advantage and to shield them from the furies with which they become would treat the object as citizens 2."

The National Assembly is also not mistaken about the scope of such a motion. She understood that, not to pre-unmasking the "finesse" of today as it had

4. Vol. 27, n° 41 and 15 of February 5 and 19.

2. Le Courrier de Provence, n° C.

80 EMANCIPATION

fought "the violence" of yesterday, both implemented for the same purpose, she energetically refused to adopt this proposition.

The "enemies of the Revolution and the Constitution" saw "with pain a decree which called for in France a crowd of men persecuted elsewhere by fanaticism and priestly domination. Wouldn't one day come soon not, however, where "they would bless these same citizens, these same philosophers, friends of freedom and humanity, that they curse today! » ? It was counting without their intolerance and their hatred.

From now on, in fact, they are working to prepare the uprisings that they have just predicted. They stir up opinion public in the departments concerned, stir up hatred and jealousies, set passions in motion so easily overexcitable at this time, and, while waiting for the results countries in Alsace meet their expectations, they succeed in cite in Bordeaux against the Jews a movement which, thanks to the esteem which they enjoyed and the wisdom of the good citizens, abort as soon as started.

For several days, in fact, letters from Bordeaux spread the rumor in Paris that, on the arrival of the decree concerning the Portuguese Jews, the citizens had risen against them and drove them out of the city. The Gazette of Paris claimed that it was "said loudly" what it had written a few days earlier "that the king of the French should not have been the king of the Jews? ". The people of Bordeaux were therefore accused of having lacked respect both for humanity and for the decrees of the National Assembly. But these rumors were exaggerated; the evil was not such

1. Annals of Mercier, No. CXX.
2. La Gazette de Paris, February 12, 1790.

THE "PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONNAIS" JEWS 81

that we could fear him, and Mr. Garat the elder went up to the tribune, on February 9, to calm "the cruel alarms" that these noises had given rise. He read there at the same time the letter that the Jews of Bordeaux had sent by a extraordinary mail. |

"We will see there," he said, "that there was a plot against the Jews in the city of Bordeaux, but that the city of Bordeaux had soon stifled this plot, and that it transformed generous-ment, as a testimony of esteem and honor for the Jews, these breasts designed to persecute them, as they so often were in centuries of ignorance and barbarism. »

Here is this letter which is worth reproducing in entire :

_"I will therefore tell you that on Monday, at the Stock Exchange, some young people allowed themselves to form a cabal against us; she got manifested at the Comédie where, after shouting: Down with the Jews! they tried to get them out. The wisdom and moderation that put those to whom these inconveniences happened produced the better effect, since the whole room and the whole city were indignant. The next day, we had the satisfaction of seeing come to us various people, traders and others, to show us their sensitivity. Our General proved to us its attachment in the most friendly manner, the patriotic troops did the same, as did the ninety elect-people who told us that we could stay calm by the precautions they had taken.

"Today we felt the effects of their wise-prefortune telling ; the cavalry and the Saint-Rémi regiment came together around the Stock Exchange to repress those who could rise up against us!. I cannot express to you how satisfaction we were welcomed at the Stock Exchange by treating us like

1. The Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, of February 10 (no. 41) wrote on this subject: "All patriotic regiments are assembling this evening to drive out the Jews incorporated among them. » We could no longer

82 EMANCIPATION

comrades and brothers. The whole city is in the biggest tranquility and we are there too; what happened today—today is well done to compensate us. It was read news at the Café de la Chocolatière, where there were eight hundred people. The President of this Assembly, named Dérieux, rose to the pulpit; he first made the motion that no one interrupted him from the reading he was going to do, under penalty of incurring the indignation of the Assembly: everything being in silence, and the reading finished, we shouted long live the King, long live the National Assembly; then the President asked that everyone take an oath of loyalty bound by the decrees of the National Assembly and to look at the Jews as brothers; several of our young people who have found at this café received the most favorable reception; is the had placed in the center of the room to witness the oath that we were going to do and that they did themselves. Guests to go this evening at the Comédie, several went there: it is impossible to express to you the welcome and the politeness that they received from all the world, as well as several Navy officers who were found in a lodge and who demanded that one of our gentlemen placed themselves at their side. I thought I had to instruct you to everything that happened. I tell you again, and you can believe it, we are in the most perfect security!. »

Reading this letter caused real joy and loud applause in the National Assembly. While while we were still applauding, Mr. Garat exclaimed: "It's thus, Gentlemen, that your decrees will be received everywhere when that they will be based on reason and justice, and that they will bring men back into the enjoyment of their rights eternal. » |

The decree concerning Spanish, Portuguese and

The Avignonais was done and well done. Counting from this day, and as Abbot Maury had so well predicted, it became "law eternal" and definitively prepared the indistinct admission of all Jews with the precious rights of French citizenship.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION

The affair of the Portuguese Jews was in fact for the Jews of kingdom an important step towards general emancipation. Among those who had initially shown themselves to be the most hostile at this great act of justice, some remained, fierce, on their positions, contenting themselves with saying stubbornly: "Heaven is opposed to the projects of the Jews." 4. A greater many were shaken, no longer rejecting at first glance the very idea. Still undecided, yes. "The spirit of this nation, they said, is only oriented towards commerce, and the others work is repugnant to him. » We will have to change this mind, change manage these habits, purify their principles. This can be done, but slowly. "It is the work of time, the work of national education. » We must not rush anything, and it would be risk infinitely than granting to the Jews, without preparation any and without modification, all the advantages of the city at a time 2. Temporize. Adjourn. This was also the policy of the National Assembly for many months.

1. Cf. Halphen, Legislation concerning the Israelites, p. 211; – Acts of the commune of Paris during the Revolution, by Sigismond-Lacroix (Paris, 1895), t. III, p. 648; Bertolio's speech.

2. Mercure de France, No. 10, March 6, 1790.

84 i EMANCIPATION

But, in short, their cause had become that of all real citizens!. In the Constituent Assembly itself, at the Hôtel de City; in the press, abroad, we were finally wondering if the accusations against German Jews were justified, if it were true that ever, their religious laws even if they defended it, they would not submit to the laws of the country, and if, finally, the work of their adversaries – work of hatred – did not taint the very work of the Revolution.

Thus "human reason" gradually triumphed, but further hindered by a supreme prejudice: the fear of threats, simulated and childish, as we saw later, that we was against the security of Jews. Republican gazettes neglected nothing, however, to make everyone feel that the unequal treatment of the Jews was unfair, and by consequently these very threats are abominable. The day when the Journal de Paris announced the triumph of those of Bor-

triumph, there are still regrets; the Jews of Alsace and Lorraine can say to the National Assembly, like Esau to his father: Have you only one blessing to give ?? » |

Other newspapers appealed in a manner no less eloquent "to justice and humanity" of the representatives of the nation, and urged them to no longer reject "this part of his family? ". But how could we achieve to convince of their error men convinced that this would be "to oppose the will of God", because "God had declared that the Jews would always be unhappy ^ »?

4. The Courrier de Provence.

2. Le Journal de Paris, n° 30.

3. Le Courrier de Provence, n° 99, of January 27 and 28, 1790.

4. Le Mercure de France, n° 13, of March 27, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION © 85

The National Assembly therefore focused on the preventions of middle ages, and religious passions like terrors politicians instinctively dominated the best resolutions tions; and these reprehensible hesitations formed a contrast painful with the principles of freedom and equality that the Assembly blee had proclaimed: "Tear then, cried the Chronicle of Paris, tear up your Declaration of Rights, or pronounce highly commend the freedom of the Israelites who inhabit the kingdom!. » |

So what stands in the way? Religious opinions Jews ? Why then did you admit the Portuguese Jews?
gay and from Avignon? "Don't they have the same dogmas as the Germans ? What is this inconsistency of fear from the latter what you do not fear from others?... Opinion is not a crime, it is the act alone which is punishable; you have laws, they will crack down on guilty. » | |

Do you still doubt the Jews? Pretend that they want neither the right of citizenship nor moral uplift What does he bring with him? "It is an abominable slander. She is so unfounded that the Jews are crying out for their freedom. Do you want to keep them in chains under the pretext of defend them? It's a strange way to do good to men than to chain them in spite of themselves. » Give the political interest of France, request this salutary operation ? . » . | |

German Jews established in France, strong and proud in same time of the competition that they found in public opinion public, in the press, in municipal bodies, do not

4. The Chronicle of Paris, no. 67, p. 91.

2. Id. `

86 EMANCIPATION

could, as the Portuguese had accused them of wrongly, having abandoned themselves. Not an hour, in fact, they did not renounce the just ambition of becoming citizens French'. They repeat it with energy the same day when the National Assembly will decide on Portuguese Jews. They want to receive this right of citizenship, not "by "gradual improvements", but "with the greatest promptitude"; they ask it "with the force that is appropriate to men who demand, not a grace, but an act of justice? ". They do not conceal, in their address, that "it it's about their social life or death"; and, participant at the expense of society, should they not participate in its benefits ? This is an incontestable truth, we seek prove otherwise. Everything therefore contributes to their cause is identified with that of the Jews of Bordeaux. But the specter of the massacres in Alsace, agitated by the Rewbells and the Maurys before the National Assembly, prevents it from consummation the long-awaited "act of justice", and all that his courage allows him to make this petition that the Jews of the kingdom, united with those of Paris, addressed him January 28, 1790, is, as we have seen, to "stifle" the motion of "black," tending not to prejudge anything once again the state of "German Jews". |

The Jews of Paris then understood that they could not obtain the pusillanimity of the "August Senate" to repair it tion which was due to them, and the signatories of the request, among whom we met men of high value, such as Berr-Isaac-Perr, Cerf-Berr and Davitz-Sintzheim, former

i

4. Carmoly, France and Israel, p. 55; – Letter from S^o Jacob Berr, master in surgery, to Monseigneur the Bishop of Nancy.

December 1789 (Paris, from the printer Prault, 1790).

3. Le Mercure de France, n° 13, of March 27, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 87

inhabitants of Paris, like Lazare Jacob and Traisnel father, turned in supplication to the Paris Commune. They had no reason to regret it. |

The same day they addressed their petition to the Assembly national wheat, a deputation of Jews from Paris, among the- which featured the famous Hourwitz', was admitted to the Hôtel de City before the General Assembly of the Commune. It was Mr. Godard, lawyer in Parliament, who had just introduced it = reduce. Member of the Commune himself, author of the Petition of the Jews, "loaded by most of the Jews of Kingdom to defend their cause? ", he appealed to the feelings "humane and just" actions of the Assembly in favor of Jews, and, in their name, requested the Commune to issue a wish which would second to the legislators of the nation a request made in the name of the nation?. Father Mulot, presiding tooth of the Commune, could not in his response sense what would be "the precise wish of the Assembly on the merits of this application " ; but he assured the deputies that "his judgments would conform to the laws of reason and humanity", and, as a first testimony of fraternity, he invited them to attend the session.

. The Jews were touched by such a friendly welcome. But, it was observed, was it possible that they had core need defenders? How "the people of God" was he obliged to go down to prayers to obtain the qu- said of men? to run from deadline to deadline to obtain

\

4. See. Zalkind Hourwitz, p. 130.

2. Speech delivered by Mr. Godard, January 28, 1790 (Cf. Halphen, Legislation Concerning the Israelites, p. 199). `

3. Abbot Mulot's response to the Jews of Paris (Halphen, p. 203).

4. Journal of the municipality and districts, January 29, 1790; - Chronicle of Paris, No. 36, February 5. |

88 EMANCIPATION

a law that was favorable to them? And yet "they are worthy by the patriotic zeal which, from the moment of the Revolution, transported their soul, covered them with armor civic, and made them brave and tireless soldiers, entirely really devoted to the salvation and prosperity of the nation! ".

Did we have a single criticism to make of them? Despite their anxieties and their disappointments, had they ever murmured against men? Had they rebelled against the law? No. It was a solemn attestation that had to be made, a tribute that had to be paid to the truth. Submission, pure and truly civic zeal, patriotism: the Commune had could see that the Jews of Paris, in particular, had, since May 1789, given numerous proofs of these virtues. So what were we waiting for, after having destroyed prejudices relating to actors, the executioner, infamous sentences, to destroy the prejudice against the Jews?

This was the truth that Mr. Cahier de Gerville, prosecutor-deputy trustee, in turn proclaimed before the Commune, when, on January 30, he presented him with a deputation from district of the Carmelites who, having been more than any other able, since the Revolution, to observe the conduct of the Jews, came to demand citizenship rights for them. "If they don't are not yet French, they deserve to be..., they are already among us? ". City rights, they have it possession; all that is missing is "the seal of the law". THE will representatives of the Commune refuse, to obtain it, to add their pressing and just demands to those of the Carmelites? | |

Once again Abbot Mulot responded in the name of the Assembly general meeting of representatives of the municipality; Again

1 Speech by Godard.

2. See. Halphen, p. 204. – Acts of the Commune..., IIL, p. 638.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 89

once he applauded the steps taken in favor of Jews: "Your district, the extent of which contains several streets almost entirely populated by them, is of great weight when he speaks in their favor"; once again, without had promised the Jews themselves: judgments dictated by the reason and humanity.

The same day in. indeed, the General Assembly heard the report that Father Bertolio made to him about this affair in an "opinion" which, especially based on the inequality of condition of Portuguese Jews and German Jews, brings together unanimity of votes. "The Jews of Bordeaux, of Bayonne and Avignon see their status as citizens assured by a solemn decree. It is this justice that French Jews do enjoy in Paris and in other parts of the kingdom, so lawful today. Could we refuse it to them? What a difference essential reference between them and their brothers from Bordeaux could we assign them? Will we say that some have letters patent and a state possession that the others ? The letters patent of the French Jews are in the nature, and the seal of nature is well worth the 'seal of all the chancelleries of Europe!'. » Father Bertolio concluded by expressing the wish that the National Assembly takes care without delay of the question of the Jews and issued a decree which assimilated with other Jews. He added, however, that this wish would only be brought to the National Assembly after having received the approval of the majority of districts.

These conclusions were adopted by the General Assembly representatives of the Commune, January 30, 1790?, and

- i. Opinion of Abbot Bertolio... (Halphen, p. 205).
2. Order of the General Assembly of representatives of the Municipality of January 30, 1790 (Halphen, p. 210).

ws ep mm ee ee ee ee e

90 EMANCIPATION

Abbot Mulot, by making him known to the Jewish deputation who attended the session, said to him: "My promises are accomplished. You have just heard the decree that I had previously seen... I applaud it with all my heart! ". Mr. Godard, to his turn, went up to the rostrum and repeated the words that Bailly had pronounced a few days earlier in front of the demonstration of "plumets", coal carriers:

– Let us bless the Revolution which will make us all brothers!

The District Consultation was an act of high politeness. tick; it was generally approved. It was observed, in this regard", and that their wish would be "more authentic and more solemn for the Jews than the wish of the Assembly alone representatives of the Commune? ". The Districts were going therefore be the true organs of public opinion; and if public opinion was won over to them, it was over. meiments and childish defeats.

Extraordinarily summoned to express their opinion nion, they ruled successively on this object. THE' Carmelites had already made their feelings known; they later confirmed in a letter, still unpublished, that they addressed on July 10, 1790, to the National Assembly:

Mister President,

The General Assembly of my district did me the honor of to send you his wish regarding the Jews of Paris...

She is the first who issued one in their favor, and our district is perhaps the one which contains the most in its bosom; we voted for a legal existence for them; the National Assembly nale, on the petition of the Commune, which joined us, believed

4. See. Halphen, p. 214.

2. The Annals of France, by Maugard, vol. I, February 19.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 94

having to postpone this great question with regard to those of Paris who have no letters patent from our kings; reasons for wisdom and policy undoubtedly engaged the National Assembly nale in not yet worrying about their fate. But at this moment when all men aspire to the title active citizens, we are contacted daily by families whose children bear arms in our battalion, to make them obtain from the National Assembly a decree which is favorable and which erases their original stain, |

Deign, Mr. President, to take into consideration the tender solicitude of the District of the Carmelites for its brothers the Jews of Paris, and present to the August Assembly that you preside, and at the head of which your merit and your good citizenship had to place you, the request, the respects and the dedication Jews in our district and citizens who support their fair pretensions.

Leverdier, president of the Carmelites 1, -

has

Already the Districts of Peres-Nazareth and Saint-Joseph had spoken out. in their favor, February 4; those from Saint-Marcel, Saint-Séverin and Petits-Pères, the 5th; THE Capuchins-Saint-Honoré, the 6th; that of Saint-Laurent, on the 7th; the Theatines, the Premonstratensians, Saint-Etienne-du-Mont and the Jussienne, above Saint-Leu?, 44; Saint Germain-des-Prés, the 12th; the district of the Red Children had taken, on the 24th, the following deliberation:

The General Assembly of the district of the Enfants-Rouges, entered deference and respect for the decrees of the Assembly national, will see with pleasure that it welcomes the complaints of Jews born or naturalized French, calling them to enjoyment rights which belong to men who are brothers and equals;

1. National Archives, D 1V, 49-1425. - Mr. Sigismond Lacroix in cites another dated February 18, and signed by Robin, president, t. HI, p. 201. - See. also Bibl. nat. Mss 56 Fr. NA 2681 and 2683.

2. Municipal and District Journal, No. LIV, February 17.

92 EMANCIPATION

Further decided that this decree will be presented to the As-national assembly in the person of its president and 59 other districts. - Leroux, Pt, - Bournisien, secretary.

Only one district expressed a contrary wish, on February 20: it was the district of Mathurins?. It was based on what the Jews still had their magistrates, their judges, their Sanhedrins, their rabbis, their leaders, - that those who presented today were not authorized to act all those who existed in France, - and he asked the As-national assembly that before pronouncing the admission of Jews with the rights of active citizens. In France we collected the wish of the French people in the Primary Assemblies of all the provinces of the kingdom.

The General Assembly of the Commune does not seem to have sixty districts, fifty-three had issued a favorable opinion saddle. The deliberations of the other six remained unknown. nudes 3, Mulot was therefore able to tell the representatives of the people: "It is Paris as a whole which speaks to you in this moment by our organ. »

The Paris Commune presented itself, on February 25, before The national assembly. Godard, Abbot Fauchet, Abbot Bertolio and Duveyrier, who were joined by Faurot de la Tour, Ravault and Abbé Mulot, had been delegated to deliver the address prepared to the Town Hall on February 24, and ask the Constituent Assembly to "accelerate" its justice by favor of the Jews. The address was accompanied by an order, work of M. Chaulaire, who had only composed it from very expressions which several districts had used.

1. National Archives, C. 31-316.
2. Acts of the Commune..., t. 1V, p. 201.
3. Id., p. 198.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 93

This document is known, but it is useful to recall its glowing considerations:

Considering that in this moment which fixed the fate of the Em- worse, the Jews of this capital hastened to meet to good citizens; that the patriotic zeal they demonstrated has, by anticipation, incorporated them into the French nation, since, like all other citizens, they have supported and are supporting: still the charges of service in the national guard, which having thus served with ardor the cause of liberty, good conduct that they have always shown, the virtues that we have known that they practice kept in secret, the proofs that they gave as citizens, as good brothers, of their entire dedication to the public thing blique, deposit powerfully in their favor;

Considering finally that, for many years, many of Jews residing in Paris acquired in this immense city . a benevolence based on their zeal to fulfill the duties of citizen, their loyalty in commercial commitments, their exemplary conduct and service in the current Revolution; that this people, considered as citizens, will be what all good French must be, good citizen, good father, good husband, good son, and in a word, honest man!...

mune, by Mr. Abbé Mulot, coated, by captivating with eloquence what the cause of the Jews, the habits of a Catholic priest?. Voltaire said he was tolerant, but he could have gone to school of Abbot Mulot 3. He was warmly applauded by the As-seemed 4. "Everything seemed to conspire to make the defense of the cause of the Jews more solemn, since the first of cities of the Empire demanded for them, that a priest respected table spoke in their favor, and that a famous prelate presided

1. Address of the representatives of the Paris Commune to the Assembly `national.

2. Le Journal de Paris, No. 58, February 27, 1790.

3. Le Courrier de Provence, n° CIX, dated February 23, 24 and 25, 1790.

4. Le Courrier français, n° 58, dated February 27.

94 EMANCIPATION

the Legislative Assembly. It was the bishop of Autun, M. de Tallevrand-Périgord. As he says in his response, what other spirit than the spirit of the decrees already issued, the As- Could the national assembly judge the cause of the Jews? But hasn't this cause already been won? Would there therefore be another law and another destiny for the Jews of Bordeaux and Bayonne and for the Jews of Nancy and Strasbourg ? That the principles, even when they are recognized, have difficulty reaching all their consequences?! »

l} therefore seemed that everything was said on the question of the Jews and that it could no longer be resolved except by an immediate vote. diat and favorable. The Count of Castellane – others say Mr. de Liancourt? – no doubt also thought so when the the day after this important interview, he asked that we deliberation on the Jewish affair. But other questions concerned the Assembly that day, and, upon reflection from a representative that, however interesting this affair was, it only concerned "a portion of men", the motion was postponed.

She found herself on the order on the evening of March 23. We approach probably from Easter week, and a newspaper religious immediately made the observation: "Their agents should suspend their procedures during the week when we are going to enter; they must not hide from themselves that it is full of memories that are unfavorable to them.

opposed the discussion? Maybe. The coincidence in everything was curious. Anyway, under various pretexts alleged by them, the Assembly again adjourned the question.

1. Le Point du jour, n° 228. of March 1, 1790.
2. Le Journal de Paris, n° 58.
3. The Universal Monitor, February 27.
4. Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, n° 87, dated March 28, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 95

She could not wait to be taken back. The Paris Journal was assured of it. Could it be appropriate, in fact, "to the justice of the National Assembly and its humanity for allowing so long time of thousands of men uncertain of the conditions on which they live in society! » ?

The prediction was right. The matter was brought to the attention of evening of April 45. "But we don't know what fate makes her –see from session to session?. » Here Mr. Rewbell claimed that this was a constitutional question which required solemnity of the morning sessions and which it was not appropriate to hide sort of in an evening session#. For any other than him, the thing was however very simple. "Two or three catechism questions must decide this question: – Gentlemen, are our laws your laws? Our tribe–are your courts? Are you legally our citizens, our brothers? Can you mentally lend and verbally the civic oath? If so, well! you are good French people, you will be active citizens. If not, then stay passive citizens, awaiting the restoration of Jerusalem, where you will be active or passive, as you please #. »

But Mr. Rewbell, helped on this occasion by Mr. Lavie, saw things in a less clear way. I] continued to tremble for the security of the Jews, that their "claims usurers * » would expose themselves to the most serious dangers if they were admitted to the rank of active citizens, for the integrity of the territory that the Jews were going to "swallow up". We no matter how much I told him that they wouldn't be imprudent enough to expose themselves to being massacred, that besides the power

. Ibid.

. Le Courrier de Provence, No. CXXXI, April 14–15, 1790.

. Le Courrier de Madon, No. XII, session of April 13.

OT in © IN 1

96 EMANCIPATION

public, which protects the lives of men, could prevent such a massacre! ; MM. Rewbell and Lavie wanted nothing to do with it believe, and any decision was set aside until after the organization complete operation of public authorities. The question was asked sent to the Constitution Committee.

Mr. Rewbell's dire predictions nearly came true. ser. When he again expressed his fears, Great unrest broke out against the Jews in Strasbourg. "Deputies from Alsace," it was asserted, were aware of this fermentation whose focus was in Paris?. We add | was that this movement was dedicated to the aristocracy, powerful still in this country, and who was seeking by this means to pay the debts she had contracted with them 3. The festivals of Finally, Easter had contributed to "stirring up fanaticism popular of this province. Whatever the reason, citizens had been summoned to protest against the decree which could assimilate the Jews of Alsace to the Jews Portuguese. This "fanatical congress" took place on April 7. Those who wanted to speak for the Jews were booed, chased out of the meeting, "sure way to have unanimity of votes", then a memorandum to the National Assembly was voted by acclamation nale "to represent to him the fear that the negotiators had cians to be in competition with the Jews 5".

The circumstances were serious. Cerf-Berr, the ci-devant general syndic of the Jews of Alsace, informed the Assembly national, who took fear; but dominating his fear, rises rising above the pusillanimous feelings which agitated

4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 107.

2. Le Courrier de Gorsas, No. XII, April 17.

3. L'Observateur de Feydel, n° 112, of April 24.

4. Le Courrier de Provence, No. CXXXII, April 16–18, 1790.

5. Le Mercure national or Journal d'Etat et du Citoyen, n° 3, of m.

May 2, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 97

some of its members, it issued one of these decrees "which made it so imposing and so great in the days of danger, and, for the second time, placed the Jews of Alsace under safeguarding the law. |

This insurrection could only have had for the Jews painful consequences. All fears, real or false statements from the opposition party, were they not justified? And the time when the Assembly would pronounce in their favor would not Would it not be the signal of their triumph and their death? This thought was to haunt the Assembly, and it gave the proof a few days later.

For a long time Bevin's difficulties of all parts, and mainly in the departments of the borders matters, concerning the origin and naturalization of foreigners gers. To the numerous complaints, to the claims which had occurred, no remedy had been provided, and the The situation was becoming more confusing every day. On April 30, Mr. Target presented to the Assembly a draft decree which granted the exercise of active citizen rights to "any individual vidu who, born outside the kingdom, of foreign parents, was established in France for at least five years, provided that he acquired real estate, or married a French woman, or trained a commercial establishment or received in some city letters from the bourgeoisie...

The decree was adopted without difficulty, without the shadow of a opposition. A newspaper, the Courrier français, searched for the reason for this unanimity. I] attributed it to what "blacks" ` did not realize that, "under the pretext of Frenchifying the more foreigners than possible, they thereby admitted the Jews in our Primary Assemblies. New citizens, they will be worth many more! »

4. Le Courrier français, n° 121, dated May 1, 1798.

Mr. Rewbell, "who follows everywhere the Jews he hates!" ", Was he aware of this mischievous interpretation? Y
he thought to himself? Maybe. What is certain is that, the next day, taking advantage of reading the minutes, fearing that one would want to apply to "German Jews"
the decree issued the day before, he proposed adding to this decree the following words: without intending to rule on the question in any way of the civil status of Jews which remains adjourned.

And the Assembly approved the amendment.

Le Journal de Paris, seeking to attenuate what these delays were contrary to humanity and justice that we never ceased to proclaim, wrote: "Without doubt, the Assembly national government wanted to reserve the glory of pronouncing on this question of the state of the Jews, not in an indirect way and diverted, but with the solemnity that it is appropriate that it gives to those of his decrees which triumph over the prejudices of centuries? ". This wasn't terrible for anyone. However the Gazette de Paris was irritated. Could we forget the interval which separated the "Christicoles" from a "nation guilty of a decides"? Erase "the dividing line" if clearly trans-between them? How awful! Wanting to bring them closer, it was "denying this decision" or running into the "abyss" dug by "innovative spirit*".

If it could be assumed that such adversaries or such arguments could tire the obstinacy of the Jews, we deceived. The zeal of those who were established in Paris did not did not slow down; the delays they were subjected to could not will only spur them on further. And, in fact, they missed any opportunity to assert their

4. Le Courrier français, n° 122.
2. Journal de Paris, n° 122, of May 2.
3. La Gazette de Paris, May 3, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION | 99

rights to justice of the nation, to claim civil status. There discussion in the National Assembly of a plan on the municipality allowed them to renew their efforts. They address sent to the representatives of the people a new petition, signed by. Mordecai Elijah, their deputy, and to whom it was given reading in the session of May 10, 1790. | |

For its part, the Commune did not abandon those it had taken under her protection and of which she had promised to general meeting of the Commune, had written to the Committee of Create a letter where, refuting the arguments used against the Jews of Paris, he argued in eloquent terms and energetically their rights to active citizenship. He did tribute of his letter to the Assembly of the Commune which, in its session of May 24, 1790, appointed MM. by Condorcet, Brissot de Warville and Robin to examine this work. It was Brissot de Warville who reported it to the Hotel of City. He read his report there on May 29. This document appeared on June 45 in Le Patriote français, Bris- fool. [it has never been published since?. We will see at once

Paris Commune stopped sending to the National Assembly an address in favor of these unfortunate people. This address was received with applause. However, the fate of the Jews has not

1. Acts of the Commune..., t. V, p. 498.

2. It has just been reproduced in the Actes de la Commune, t. V, p-593, with some variations.

3. Le Patriote français, No. 311, June 15, 1790: Report on the letter of Mr. de Bourges to the Constitution Committee concerning the affair of Jews, made by Mr. Brissot de Warville at the General Assembly of Representatives representatives of the Paris Commune, May 29, 1190.

100 THE EMANCIPATION

not been improved. Prejudices, passions rose against them and prevented the discussion of a question which could not be problematic, according to the Bill of Rights. We woke up fear, this ghost with which we often stop the arm of the good man. And, will we believe it? the safety of the Jews was invoked as a powerful motive to continue stripping them of their rights! Thus, to continue to be unfair to the Jews, Christians were supposed to be ready to become assassins.

Mr. de Bourges pulverizes, in the letter you have under the eyes, and this insidious objection and all those that have been made since then, to rule out the question of the sanctuary of the Assembly national. I] takes, one after the other, all the opinions, analyzes them, I fight with irresistible logic.

I] proves that by suddenly admitting the Jews to the rights of active citizens, this will, in fact, only admit them freely. dually, because the prejudice of Christians will not be promptly defeated; that thus admitting them there is to do nothing will be at their disadvantage for a long time.

It proves, against the deputies of Alsace, that their fellow citizens are not and will not be cannibals, and that all their predictions of massacres are dreams of a misguided imagination or perverse.

He proves to the Commune of Strasbourg, where fanaticism has provoked, against the Jews, the same storms as in Nîmes and Montauban against the Protestants, he proves that moral objections and policies against the Jews, if they were founded, do not mean anything else, except that the Jews, like the Christians, must be regenerated by the Constitution.

He proves that this whole affair is only the trial of fanaticism against tolerance, and of the corporate spirit against the spirit of the audience. f

Finally he proves that the Jews should not be men, so that the exception to which we want to subject them was not a crime against humanity.

From all these reasons, Mr. de Bourges concludes that the Assembly national must hasten to decide that any man who replaces will comply with the conditions set by its decrees on the composition of representative assemblies and administrative assemblies,

a oe aaa, M a A ie:

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 104

L.S.

will be a voter and eligible, of whatever profession and whatever religion that it can be.

After having done justice to the reasoning developed in this letter, the rapporteur adds: "It is worthy of a commune, within which philosophy shone, even under the despotism, to take up the cause of these victims of ignorance, when another commune, lost by fanaticism, seeks to persecute them. Thanks to the eagerness of the Assembly nationally, the anarchy which devastates this municipality will cease; new elections are being prepared. It's time to admit to civil communion the Jews that the capital has in its breast. Hey! why would we deprive this capital, which, the first, fought for universal equality, for the pleasure of seeing it, for

This example, as great in its basis as salutary in its infuency of the commune which will give it, can only hate the universal regeneration of the Jews. :

Brissot therefore proposed the following decree:

The General Assembly of representatives of the Commune, on the report of its commissioners, appointed to examine the letter expressed and addressed to the Constitution Committee on the matter of Jews, by Mr. de Bourges, representative of the Commune of Paris, reflecting that it is important, on the eve of the formation of the new municipality of Paris, to leave no doubt about the rights of active citizens of Jews, believes it must recommend to the most serious attention of MM. of the Constitution Committee of the National Assembly this work where the rights of all Jews of the kingdom are proven with the latest evidence.

This motion was put up for discussion. "Several members, fruitful in prior discussions, asked that it be put to vote; others wanted a charitable postponement—is lying!." One of them even, who returned from Alsace, servile

1. Journal of the Municipality and Districts, n° 98, of June 1, 1790.

102 EMANCIPATION

imitator of Rewbell and Maury, seeming to fear that "the peasants of the country do not immolate the Jews!" », proposed, in their interest, not to "listen to their request". He ... not What was needed was nothing less than the intervention of Abbot Mulot to reassure sure this fearful man. He recalled the decrees of the Assembly national wheat "which give full respect to human rights their strength; and, showing these indelible rights inscribed on. the cradle of the Jews, with the unanimous wish of the districts, he proved that one could not balance for revive the fraternal dispositions of our legislators? »

"The friends of reason and justice" thus silenced the opposition that was emerging. And, immediately, the Commune decided that Brissot's report and the letter from M. de Bourges would be brought to the National Assembly.

A matter of even greater importance must, by bringing temporary relief to the miseries of the Jews

Until the beginning of the 17th century, the Jews of Metz had been subjected to the same impositions as the other residents. But under the Regent, "under the prince who abused of everything, of his passions, of his talents, of his virtues same", the Duke of Brancas and the Countess of Fontaine had obtained in 1715, as one obtains a pension or a gratuity, the right to collect from each family Jew of Metz a tax of forty pounds under the name of right of habitation, protection and tolerance. It was not granted in principle only for thirty years; since then it has been extended twice, and each time for another thirty years. Over there last concession, it was therefore to last until 1805.

4. Municipality Journal.

2. Id.

. GENERAL EMANCIPATION 103

"An act of tyranny of the same kind and the same injustice-

"tice" was established in several parts of Lorraine and Alsace'. The Jews asked to be freed from this concession made for the benefit of Mr. de Brancas fils, only in consideration of personal services and on the occasion of his wedding. Should such vexations pass from | this century to the next? ?

Mr. de Vismes, who reported on this affair, Duport, Robespierre, Bouche, Barnave and many others do not didn't think so. This shameful contract, they said, must be dissolved appear forever from a free land%. Jews are men; were they foreigners or locals, "they must not not be treated like animals. Besides, do not contribute Did they not drink, too, at all public offices? what did the other citizens put up with?

The Domains Committee therefore proposed the pure abolition and simple, and without compensation, of this "outrageous vexation" tion". Alone, Mr. Rewbell opposed this decree "as to surprise, in an evening session, at the end of this session, and in the absence of a large number of members, a constitutional article in favor of the Jews®"... Alone, he dealt with this discussion of "slewing contrary to the regulations". But his complaints were useless. Could we also expect "supreme legislators" to bind themselves to the laws they made themselves 6? The bitterness of Mr Rewbell does not convince the Assembly. We shout to the voices.

1. Le Journal de Paris, no. 203, July 22, 1790. e
2. Id.
3. Le Mercure National, n° 4, of August 1, 1790; – Le Courrier de Provence, n° CLXVII, of July 22.
- 4: Le Courrier français, n° 202, of July 22.
5. L'Ami du Roi, by the continuators of Fréron, n° LII, of July 22 let 1790.
6. Id.

104 EMANCIPATION

We're warming up. We observe that there are not two hundred deputies tees in the room. Pointless remark. We deliberate, and the law.
of protection is abolished, according to the wish of the Committee!.

For more than fifteen months, the Jews had not stopped to fight for their rights. Nothing had could distract them from this goal, neither slander nor terror:
that we sought to convey into their souls, nor the.
threats, nor the crazy accusations of a confusing party.
with intention politics and religion. By force of perse-- veritude and energy, in testimony to the civic virtues of which They gave the most obvious proofs every day, they:
obtained favors, concessions, which the Assembly se-- allowed it to be torn off shred by shred. But whatever:
whatever the difficulties, the Jews were not discouraged, and.
the hesitations of the representatives of the people did not begin nothing neither their ambition to become active citizens, nor their desire to obtain this title.

Any opportunity was good for the "blacks" to delay this moment. September 2, 1790, about the organization judicial, the Assembly decrees that non-Catholics can will be elected to the positions of judges. This time again on their proposal, it intends not to prejudge anything in relation to the Jews, as she had done on August 20, for the eligibility lity of citizens at Administrative Assemblies. But the.
Jews responded, on October 28, with the publication of the "decision of the Constitution Committee", declaring that Jews with special letters patent can,
like the Portuguese Jews, invoke the decree of January 28
life 1790, and "must enjoy the advantages that the consecration-- _tion of an obvious maxim assures them." The decision, made

4. L'Ami du Roi, No. LII, July 22, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 105

on the requisition of David Sylveyra, trustee and agent of the Jews French, was signed by all the members of the Committee of Constitution'. Mr. Chasset, President of the Assembly, said bearing the national seal.

The "monarchist" press protested. What ! There decision of a simple Committee became law of the empire. THE French imagine themselves to be governed by the National Assembly nale? What a mistake! Now the decrees no longer need of royal assent to be executed; all it takes is a law already promulgated to produce the same effects as the law herself?!

The noise they made was such that the question was raised presented to the National Assembly. It was Mr. Martineau who, January 18, 1791, proposed a motion in this regard. He asked that all Jews, who had naturalization letters enjoy the rights of active citizens, provided that they have the other qualities required by law.

This draft decree had all the more chances of success that it was consistent, as we have seen, with the opinions of the Committee of Constitution on the specific requests made to him had made 3. But we counted again without the "members of Alsace". Mr. "Broglie", among others, pre-claimed that this was a "plot", that it was "prepared | for a long time by four or five powerful Jews", and that one of them in particular (Mr. Cerf-Berr) was spreading "for a long time considerable sums in this capital to provide protection and support. M. de Broglie therefore requested an adjournment. |

1. They were the bishop of Autun, Demeunier, Target, Le Chapelier, J.-P. Rabaut and Touret.

2. L'Ami du Roy, de Montjoye, n° 210, of December 27, 1790.

3. Cf. Legislation concerning the Jews, p. 222.

4. Id.

M. de Folleville also requested it, but for a reason totally weird. Fearing that, in the public, people will say that the Assembly had wanted to benefit from the presidency of a member known for his zeal for the Jews, to pass Martineau's proposal, he said: "I complain about what Fon waited for the presidency of Father Grégoire to abuse ser of the system of tolerance that he professes '..."

And the project was referred to the Constitution Committee.

The Jewish affair then suffered a pause. Neither has the Assembly, nor in the Commune, there was no question of it during more than three months. She woke up in the first days of May. |

On April 44, a decree was posted on the walls of Paris of the Directory of the Department "to maintain public order in all that concerns the service of Catholic worship." But, intending not to dedicate more buildings to it than was necessary necessary for the entire and complete exercise of this religion, the municipality had established "lay attendants" to supervise supervision of parish churches, and decided that the others churches would be put up for sale for the benefit of the. nation or reserved for any other destination. The purchasers of these buildings remained free to make such use of them as they deemed about. It was, in discreet terms, proclaiming your freedom religious.

This is how the Church understood it. On May 7 and 8, she brought the question before the National Assembly. " So therefore, cried Abbé Couturier, that we want to establish the abomination nation of desolation in the holy place! We propose to you . to convert your temples into synagogues, mosques, Lutheran and Anabaptist temples, in pagodas?. " He

4. Cf. Halphen, p. 222.

2. National Assembly or Courrier français, n° 105 and 428, of April 45 and May 8, 1791.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 107

requested the withdrawal of the decree taken by the Directory; the Assembly, on the contrary, that Mr. Couturier's apostrophe was very amused, approved it and converted it into a decree which was "received with the loudest applause! ".

The Jews of Paris thought the moment was favorable

were, on May 9, 1791, a request to the National Assembly to ask him to make a definitive decision on their spell. It was communicated on May 16 to representatives of the nation. |

There, they reasserted the titles they had to the quality of citizen: their long residence in the capital tale, their submission to the laws of the Republic, their patriotism, their zeal for the Constitution, and their dedication always ready for the glory of the country, for the support of freedom. What were we waiting for to assimilate them to Portuguese Jews and to draw from the "cruel perplexity" into which the delays threw them always renewed from the examination of their case?

This time at least, they are no longer content to "beg" the Assembly, to appeal to its feelings, to invoke its humanity. Acting like men who want to become free, and who are concerned about their dignity, they discuss, and, in support of their just claims, they remind the Assembly accepts its decrees and the commitments that result from them.

"The National Assembly decreed that foreigners resident in France would enjoy, after five years of residence, the _ French citizen rights. By what fate the exhibitors would they be deemed less than foreigners and the only ones excluded rights that nature gives and that the decrees of the Assembly national wheat returns to all men. Considered as

1. The National Assembly.

108 EMANCIPATION

Jews, they are part of French citizens, since they represent bend conditions and duties; considered as foreigners, although most were born in France, they have, under the terms of the law, acquired the title of French citizen only long residence in the capital gives them; so they must enjoy all the rights that depend on it. »

The municipality is on the verge of making a list of active and eligible citizens, in accordance with the decree of December 29. This is an opportunity to place them in society policy. On the contrary, will they continue to form a class apart ? And will the Assembly not finally decide to "settle their destiny"? ~

The favor which attached to them, to their requests, to their pressing wishes, increased every day. The Assembly mands" and "Portuguese" Jews; we began to establish a difference between "German Jews" and "Jews of Paris ". It was said: "The reasons for prudence which could urge the Assembly to postpone fulfilling the wishes of the Jews Alsatians cannot look at the Jews of the capital. " Or again: "Granting to some and refusing to others would be a manifest injustice: all men are equal in law?. »

The Assembly was unable, this time again, to renounce its habitual "slowness", nor get rid of its "terrors vain? »; but she neither dared to renew her eternal adjournment, nor take a forceful decision: the petition was referred to the Committees, Constitution and Reports to account for it.

1. Le Courrier de Provence, No. CXLII, May 10–11, 1790.
2. Le Mercure national or Journal d'Etat et du Citoyen, n° 6, of May 23, 1790.
3. Le Courrier de Provence, No. CLXVII, July 20–22, 1790.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 409

Although according to some there can be little doubt of the draft decree of this Committee and the "necessity" where would be the Assembly to adopt it!, the Jews of Paris were determined not to be lured by empty promises. THE Constitution Committee was favorable to their cause, they knew; but when would his report be ready? and ready, when would it be discussed? So they turned again on the side of the municipality, and, confident in recent laws on religious freedom, in the encouragement which came from all sides to open a synagogue, ready to rent or acquire a national building for the exercise of their religion, they again asked the Commune its support to the National Assembly.

But in what ambiguous situation they were going to find themselves? worm! "The religious slavery of the Jews has just ended, they said, but their civil slavery still lasts; and however—therefore, if they received from the law the right to build synagogues, can they not receive from her finally the title and the rights of citizen? Can they be citizens in their synagogues, only, and outside of there foreigners or slaves? Wouldn't it be not contradictory that the law recognized them on the one hand, and the –

Because they are Jewish? They would therefore be punished for being born in their religion *?? »

The municipality, "permeated with the justice of demand that the Jews renew with such honorable perseverance-rancid", issued a decree on May 26 to support their request to the National Assembly, and "pressure it to extend formally to the Jews of the capital the consequence of

1. Le Journal de Paris, n° 131.
2. Le Moniteur, June 11, 1791.

110 EMANCIPATION

beneficial principles that she has just dedicated to freedom of religious opinions! ".

The National Assembly was about to finish its works. Was she going to separate without having accomplished the great act of reparation that the civic virtues of the Jews, their devotion to the country, their zeal for the Revolution? But no. The fruit was lol now. Nothing could no longer prevent it from falling. And, in fact, suddenly, in the session of September 27, 17941, Duport requested that all adjournment as far as they were concerned was revoked, and that in Consequently it was decreed that the Jews would enjoy in France rights of active citizens. At this motion, no one was surprised. It seemed to everyone that it was a planned, expected fact, which was bound to arise. "The only Mr. Rewbell was I don't agree!!! Is it to support his character? East-this prejudice 2? » When he wanted to explain it, Regnault de Saint-Jean-d'Angeély cried out: "I ask that we recall to order all those who speak against this proposition, because it is the Constitution itself that they will fight. »

The adjournment was then lifted by a sort of unanimity#, "despite Mr. Rewbell's shouting." The day after, Duport presented to the Assembly the drafting of the decree that he had proposed. Mr. Chabroud wanted us to move to the order of day. He was booed.. Rewbell, in the supreme convulsion where he debated the man shot to death, made a last effort. We closed his mouth. And the decree was instantly issued 4.

It seems that an act of this importance, the preparation of which tion had aroused such diverse feelings, raised so many

1. Cf. Halphen, p. 7. – The municipal staff of Paris during the

2. Le Courrier de Gorsas, No. XXVIII, September 28.
3. Les Annales de Mercier, n° DCCXXVI, September 28.
4. The Journal of Debates and Decrees, n° 860, of September 28.

GENERAL EMANCIPATION 444

passions, provoked such heated controversies, had to be for the newspapers an object of ardent discussions, of sharp lines, declarations of principles. It did not happen. And this is explained. Such a long time had passed since the question arose for the first time when the gazettes were certainly tired of it. And then the political situation had become worse by the flight of the king and the redoubled anti-pathetic distrust that this event had cast between Louis XVI and the people. Concerns were turning so on this side, almost completely. Everything had been said moreover for or against the civil status of the Jews, and, in a left as in the other, there was nothing left to say. Even public opinion, so powerful at that time, stirred every day by a world of ideas, had, we can say it, welcomed with favor the very idea of the admission of Jews in French society, because it was consistent with the work of the Revolution, to its essence, to its principles.

In general, therefore, the newspapers were content to record simply register the decree. The day before, the gazettes re-
The girls still hoped in his failure: "It would be enough singular, they said, that the majority, after having marked almost every day of his reign by a cruel war against the ministers of the Catholic religion, the terminat by a great benefit towards those who blaspheme it divine author! ". The next day, they considered this decree as "a new blow to the clergy? » and designed by "enemy sects" of their religion. Rewbell said with more anger that there were only stock traders and

rt

4. L'Ami du Roy, de Montjoye, n° 272, of September 28, 1791.
2. The General Journal, No. 240, September 28.
3. L'Ami du Roy, n° 272.

usurers who could take such a keen interest in the Jews.

The Republican newspapers were also very sober in their assessments. In one word they welcome the vote of the Assembly. They applaud it "wholeheartedly"; they rejoice that "this insulting and inconsistent postponement tutional" has ended, and, like Dubois de Crancé, that the . Jews obtained this justice, "although a little late".

The effect of this great act of reparation was quite different from that predicted by the prophets of doom. One of their days-naux even had to admit, on October 17, that the decree on Jews had not made in Strasbourg "the sensation that feared did the good patriots hate? ".

On the other hand, "the good patriots" expected this that "a coalition between the rabbis prodigiously increased sows the number of refractory priests." These, at to believe, spoke of nothing less than opening "a synagogue of non-conformist Jews.

The accusations that no one wanted to believe anymore were necessary well supplemented by daydreams designed to ruin now nating the Jews in the minds of the Republicans!

1. Le Journal de Paris, No. 219, September 28.
2. The universal Mercury, October 11. |

SECOND PART

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

FIRST CHAPTER

_ THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES, CLUBS AND THE SECTIONS

It was wasted effort.

The districts, the Commune and, after them, the Assembly national, had the conviction, then the assurance, that the Jews were worthy of the justice that had just been meted out to them. due after two years of waiting. | |

Godard, they had given many proofs of ardor civic, dedication to the heritage, evident moral virtues teeth, and "no one among sensible and just men had could refuse them his support to bring them in, at the same time title than other citizens in French society. THE people did not wait for these late demonstrations until tice to grant their wish; he saw in them equals, brothers, and he welcomed them as such into his midst.

The Church alone did not disarm. Fanaticism, politics or ` personal interest, she redoubled in bitterness and violence towards the Protestants and the Jews, seeing their credit growing say as its preponderance diminished. She dear-tried to deflect on them the blows with which she was overwhelmed.

8

114 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Against the centuries-old enemy of her religion, she piled up false accusations, convinced that they would continue to germinate in the people. She attributed to the Jews the worst breasts, representing them as incapable of serving the country; - the most unhealthy thoughts, pretending to fear that they will exert a harmful influence on the destiny of the country; - the most shameful passions, in them denouncing to the nation as parasites created for him eat away at the heart. The future belied these sinister predictions. The Jews were good citizens, and, if they had truly clearly the designs, the thoughts, the passions, that the Church lent them - fruit of all oppressions, of all miseries, of all the sufferings - they had all the more of merit in moralizing themselves, and, by monitoring their own duite, to get rid of the vices that were attributed to them. They were twice honest, twice patriotic: as Jews and as French. Their deputies, their trustees, charged with the rabbins of their moral direction, concerned with the good reputation of their brothers, neglected nothing to help them in this beautiful recovery of souls. They felt that the slightest failure of just one, encompassing them all in the same reprobation, would compromise at the same time and forever

perhaps your civil and political fortune.
We find in the newspapers of this period the trace of this concern. On October 15, 1789, L'Observateur, de Feydel, published the following note:

A religious community in the Marais district sold to the Jew Alexander his sacred vessels, his crucifixes, his utensils, for ten thousand crowns. Mr. Alexandre paid a thousand louis in cash, and seeks to borrow the rest to pay definitively. The curious will be able to find this Israelite in a café in the rue Saint-Martin, known as the Café des Jews.

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 415

When reading this article, the Jews prick up their ears. They're worrying. They "grieve." [they are paid, in fact, to find out what a disagreement with the Church could mean to them. They have learned the history and are not tempted to renew the episode of the host on rue des Billettes. [It seems that they opened up to L'Observateur. |

A fact reported in my previous issue is said to afflict the Jews of Paris. I am angry about it, said the gazetteer, two days later, but this fact is true; only I should not have talked about vases: we assures me that there are none among the items sold. But for- What do the Jews grieve? If someone is wrong, it is certain- the buyer is not lying, and, if it were him, why should you imagine that Abel is responsible for Cain's behavior? We have to walk with the centuries. We are far from those times when, to punish a single man, an entire race was slaughtered.

It's good; but the Jews do not consider themselves satisfied. They want to know the truth about this incident. They move, do research. Is the fact true? If it is, who is it? the author? On October 20, the Observer reported on this kind of investigation; and he does it in terms that are worth being cited: |

A Jewish friend of mine comes into my house and tells me that he is not came to know of the synagogue that one of the brothers, named Alexander, bought the sacristy of a convent; but after much research they learned that religious people pro- asked Mr. Abraham Hesse to buy silverware and that he denied ! |

Maybe I made a mistake with the name. The remainder, not been guilty. And besides, I like to repeat a truth which I fear that the Jews will doubt for a long time to come, it is that only he who has committed a fault must experience the shame.

PES, 7

116 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

A writer, for example, has just published a text in which he supposes that the Jews of Avignon and Comtat formed–last–rement the project to slaughter the vice–legate, Parbishop and the priests, and to rape the nuns, etc... Certainly, I would not believe myself not dishonored when I saw this writer undergo the Strike punishment he deserved.

The Observer certainly had a high conception of responsibilities; but such a tolerant spirit was a thing extremely rare then; many prejudices were rife still in all their strength, and more than all the others” Jews suffered from it.

Besides, it didn't take that much to agitate public opinion. The Parisian people, usually excessively nervous, are worried who was able to do everything with extreme ease, and those who were placed at his head, just as impressionable as him, do not could give him an example of calm and serenity. A rather grotesque incident, of which a Jew was the hero invo-¹lontaire, reveals well the state of mind of the Parisians in those days troubled.

The Chronique de Paris announced, on October 26, 1789, that the day before, at the Palais–Royal, they distributed – no one knew “for what purpose” – the following address:

M. Mayer Silvain, House of M. Bonnet, Lion wine merchant D'OR, barrier Saint–Martin, third on the back 2.

It seemed obvious that it was a conspirator who sought to make recruits. We give ourselves big movements³. Paris is all alarmed. The mayor spends part of the night

1. L'Observateur de Feydel, n° 29, 30, 31, dated 15, 17 and 20 October October 1789.

2. The Chronicle of Paris, No. LXIV, October 26, 1789.

3 The Revolutions, by Prudhomme, vol. II, No. XVI; October 24–31, 1789.

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 117

at City Hall. A large body of the national militia is set up. We finally go to Mayer Silvain, where an exact search is carried out. Minutes are drawn up, and soon municipality, militia, population, can push a long sigh of relief: "This innocent" was selling water for the eyes, and he had only given his address only to pique curiosity and attract the crowd to him. A innovative, this Jew! | |

The supervision of the trustees and the concern they had to the conduct of their brothers was therefore explained. From Jews residing in Paris, in fact, if there were a certain number who immediately rose to the occasion, there were others who, of less elevated spirit, of less soul proud, did not seek to be troubled in the state of service study where their fathers had lived, where they themselves lived, . and which, depressing the faculties, obliterates all feeling of duty. Street vendors, fairgrounds, peddlers, using the roads, by the wind or the burning sun, a tossed life from all sides, eternally worried about tomorrow, do not saw in their humiliating state nothing beyond what was not the immediate, assured enjoyment of gain. Of these, it was necessary to enlighten the reason, touch the heart.

But how many were there in Paris? How many Jews surplus, were then residing in the capital? We only have Godard's only assertion on this subject, undoubtedly coming from of a communication from the Jews. However sincere she may be, she is not, however, supported by any known document. Five cents, he said. We have, on the other hand, states drawn up several times by the police during the 18th century, precise, complete statements of the Jewish population from 1756 to 1759.

1. The Chronicle of Paris, No. LXV, October 27.

118 | THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

The 1758 list mentions the presence of one hundred and six Jews in Paris.

'This is the highest number!. However, there is no doubt has attracted a certain number from foreign countries. This is therefore only by browsing the gazettes of the time and the official documents that we can, not establish a statistic even approximate Jews in Paris, but note their names in passing and group them to get an idea – vague moreover – of their number and their occupations, but quite clear about their attitude and the part they were able to take to the events of the Revolution.

Two certain facts – in any case – emerge of the pieces that we have cited: it is that, from the first – days of the Revolution, and without waiting for them to have obtained their civil rights, the Jews of Paris enlisted in the national guard, and, like their fellow citizens, registered to a club or a patriotic association, very diligent all the time days at their section meetings. We'll see later that they appeared with honor in the ranks of the militia. The publications of this period are more sober details on the organization of the societies and the members who composed them.

Some of these clubs, such as the Soci    of 1789, of initially moderate policy?, the Society of Friends of the Constitution sitting at Jacobins 3, the counter-revolutionary club de la Sainte-Chapelle * formed in 1791, the Feuillants® club

4. Cf. L  on Kahn, The Jews of Paris under Louis XV (Paris, 1892), and the Jews of Paris in the 18th century (Paris, 1894).

2. Bibl. nat., Lb 40/2403.

3. Bibl. of the Arsenal, 7189-356.

4. Counter-revolutionary Clubs, by Augustin Challamel (Paris, 1895). .

5. Bible of the Arsenal, 7189-354.

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 419

of which Andr   was president, published the list of their members. There are few that did not include a few Jews in their assembly.

Lists were also printed of active citizens, voters and electors of their sections. We know that, to be active citizen, it was necessary, at the beginning of the Revolution, be French, over twenty-five years old, take the oath was abolished in 1792, and the same decree thus put an end to the start-cation made between active and passive citizens. To be voter, it was necessary to meet all the conditions required to be an active citizen and, in addition, pay at least 10 pounds in tax direct. Finally, to be eligible, it was necessary, in addition to these conditions, not be assigned to any financial, religious or municipal employment or politics.

In the Théâtre-Français section! appeared in the title of active citizens six Jews, at least, with the tax rate direct payment that they paid; they were:

Cavaillon, merchant, rue Saint-André-des-Arts, 32. 17 liv.8 sols
Henriquez, engraver to the king, rue de la Vieille-Bou-

(0 C0 EE EEEE EEE EEN T» +

Lévy, merchant, rue Pavée, 81..... 61 » i Lévy, merchant, rue des Fossés-Saint-Germain, 15. 22 » 3
Nonès, merchant, rue Saint-André-des-Arts, 92.... 44 » 6
Simon, embroiderer, rue de la Harpe, 118..... 19 » 19

The list of the Tuileries section?, which was published in 1790, contained five:

Ettinghausen, florist, rue Saint-Honoré, 30..... Eligible.

Hesse, bookbinder, rue Saint-Honoré..... Id.
Mainz, tailor, rue Saint-Nicaise..... Id.

4. Bibl. nat., LB 40/2158.
2. Id., LB 40/2174 (October 1790).

120 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Mayer, known as Gustave, miniature painter, rue Saint-Honoré, 508..... Eligible.
Salomon, citizen, rue de Valois, 46..... Id.

“Calm, bourgeois, rue de Choiseul, 13”, was the only
Jew belonging to the Library section. |

The National Almanac, on the other hand, recorded annual-

Paris ". We see there appearing, for 1791: |

Abraham Alcan, 33 years old, rue Montmartre, 30, from section XI
posts ; | |

Jacques Bidermann, merchant, rue des Jeûneurs, of the section III, de la Fontaine-Montmorency;

Berthe père, rue Jacob, section XL, Quatre-Nations.

In 1793, the number of Jewish voters increased. To names indicated above it is necessary to add: |

Pierre Wolff, engraver, 39, rue Bourg-l'Abbé; 29 years old, from the section XV, Friends of the Fatherland;

Philippe Simon, the young, bourgeois, grand rue du Faubourg-
St. Anthony, 243; 67 years old, from section XXVI, from the Fifteen-Twenty; |

Abraham Azur, citizen, rue Saint-Martin, 438; 30 years old,
section XXIX of the Meeting;

Moise Gaudchau-Trenelle, merchant, rue de la Perle-au-Marais,
5: of section XXXIII of the Federates:

Léon Fernandès, rue des Petites-Boucheries, Court above
Abbey; 45 years old, from the XL section of the Quatre-Nations.

If clubs, sections and electoral conventions, we _ let's move on to the municipal, justice or governing councils
Finally, we will also meet the names of some Jews who were honored, by election or by choice, of

4. Bibl. nat., LB 40/1719.

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 42)

the confidence of their fellow citizens and that of the powers
public. a |

In 1790, Calman, a Jew from Metz, domiciled in the district des Petits-Pères, a volunteer grenadier, was chosen by the district to "fill a place" in his Committee, and, said the president to his colleagues, "your Committee can only applaud your choice! ".

attorney general trustee to form "the juror of judgment" of the criminal court, include Jacques Bidermann and Cerf-Berr, banker, boulevard Montmartre?. Quiet, street Meslée, 35, was part of it in 1793. Pereyra, merchant, rue Saint-Denis, was an assessor of a justice of the peace in the section of Good Counsel; and Heymen, said the German, in the section of the Observatory. The General Supervisory Committee, in 1793, had Hazan as secretary. In the Committees revolutionaries we found, in the year IT, Jacob Reis, at the Pikes section; Lion, rue Saint-Denis, 126, in the section Friends of the Fatherland; Azur, in 1792, secretary of the Popular Society of Friends of Equality (section of the Réunion); Weisweiller, attached to the Central Committee of the 8th district saying. The city. Lazarus was appointed, on Floréal 14, year III, member of the Revolutionary Committee of the [5th arrondissement; finally Fould the young, residing rue Favart, n° 4, secretary of the police commissioner of the Le Peletier section, was in procedure to be admitted to the offices of the Committee of General security.

So this was true. Little by little, as attested
– the representatives of the Commune, the Godards, the Mulots, the Bertolio, the Cahiers of Gerville, little by little the Jews of

4. Acts of the Commune..., t. IV, p. 199.

2. The Chronicle of Paris, n° 57 and 59, dated February 26 and 28, 1792. +»

122 | THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Paris, through a patriotic dedication that the districts had proclaimed loudly, entered the Revolution, adopted were its ideas, its institutions, its principles, and, without renounce their faith, their worship, faithfully submitted to the laws of the Republic. The spirit that animated the people also animated. His passions, his enthusiasms, his disappointments became theirs. But, far from following a overall policy, everyone obeyed their feelings own, to his assessments, to his views, and the moment will soon come where, in the midst of revolutionary excesses, a large number of them will keep a wise reserve, while others, without associating themselves with the worst decisions, will throw the violent into the party and they too will perish, victims of these very excesses. |

But we were still only in the early hours of the Revolution, and the horizon was without bloody gleams. THE Jews joined, as they said then, to the institutions of the country, and made generous efforts to get started

Already at this time, we meet some of them in the arts, in letters, in industry. Jacob Simon prints the Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, and the Ami du Peuple the threat of the wrath of the patriots! Jonas Nathan is jewel-binder; Moline, "poet and writer", makes idylls about the Freedom in 1790? and swears loyalty to the nation, "to the laws, to the king whose days are dear to us." Vienna year II, and he will celebrate in a sans-culottide in five acts, at the Théâtre des Sans-Culottes ci-devant Molière, "the meeting of August 10 or the inauguration of the French Republic? ", after having

1. L'Ami du Peuple, n° 311, of December 21, 1790.
2. Journal de Versailles, No. 38, July 8, 1790.
3. Journal de Paris, n° 367, dated 13 Nivôse year II.

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 123

"cried Marat." The Paris Commune grants a mention civic to citizen Arnold, painter of the Marseille section and Marat?; finally Denner, professor of music and forte-piano, accompanies M'e Homberg on the guitar, from Havre, young poet who "prefers to the sword of Mars the arrows of the god of Cythere? ". |

A fact to note is the ease with which some among the Jews, from the day they were assured that this quality could not serve them, used advertising to make it better known. Mayer Silvain had ingenious imitations. It is the citizen Samuel Cerf, patented and resident of the king for the destruction of rats, who, in 1792, also advocated "a health opiate" of his invention, and to which he attributes the most diverse and effective cures. Favoring the people to the detriment of the aristocracy, "he sells the pot to the poor brothers and sisters one pound, and to the others six pounds'. It is Mr. Hénoch who treats, "always successfully", the | gout, nerve diseases and rheumatism. "Mrs Lyon, Jewish, rue Grenier-Saint-Lazare, at the Baker's", which `resorted to his art, as evidence. It is Mr. Bloque, who "holds mourning carriages", rue Chapon-au-Marais f; And Salomon Lévy, "residing on the boulevards Montmartre, next to the Montholon hotel", says the greatest good of his wines? which he sells "at a fair price".

That was the commercial side. The newspapers were used also confidants to the Jews.

- . The Universal Mercury, n° 894, of August 15, 1793.
- . Le Mercure de France, n° 13, of March 26, 17914.
- . Le Journal de Paris, n° 32 and 349, year 1792.
- . Evening Posters, No. 25, year 1792.
- . The Revolutions, by Prudhomme, t. XI, No. 133, year 1792.
- . Journal de Paris, n° 314, year 1790. 1

al A 0t de C9 ND =

124 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Freedom of the press had opened vast horizons to all those who, under the monarchy, had been unable, for fear of quite serious penalties, develop their thinking while at ease. Public opinion then spread in the gazettes with all the more strength and abundance the more it had been long stopped in its course. Everything became subject to motions, projects, proposals. Good or bad, ideas took birth at crossroads, on the places, in the open-air stands, ran on the days-national, imposing itself on the National Assembly and often even flying to the king whose weary serenity they disturbed.

The Jews of Paris were won over by this fiery contagion of speech and pen. It is believed that they experienced some pleasure. Everything was new for them in the dignity of citizen, and, like big children, they tried their hand in the posture of free men in the Free State. One of their purest pleasures was certainly to write without hindrance, first proof of their equality among men. Policy, religion, daily accidents, external events, they are influenced by are involved in everything, mingling little by little, but with soul, with developments of the nation, of which until then they had been con-only the timid and fearful Spectators. | | |

Their first communications to the newspapers were especially inspired by the need to assert themselves and the desire to associate public opinion with their cause. The documents officials that we have already cited, and that they spread throughout the press, accustomed the people to their demands. Their letters were intended to highlight the unequal condition which was made to them and their hope of seeing the end approach.

time to speak again, aimed at the decision of the Committee of Constitu- |

THERE

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 1425

tution, pointed out its importance to the Journal de Paris: "The Licensed Jews, he said, are recognized as active citizens. It is a first point... It is to be presumed that soon the Assembly national will extend this benefit to an entire nation, which has not need only a happier fate to develop more of energy and virtues'. »

"What an astonishing contrast!" wrote another to the Courier de Gorsas?, after the violent debates concerning the Portuguese. The representatives of the French nation resurrected the rights and freedom of men, without distinction of religion or by profession; they deprived Jews of the dignity of citizenship, and, by a manifest contradiction, these same legislators deprive us of the benefits that all French people and our con- brothers have just received. I don't want to hide from you the impatience with which we await the final decision sion of the National Assembly. »

This "decision" is near. The same ones who had put the most stubborn in delaying it were tired. Rewbell! Rewbell himself!... "For the honor of our century, for the honor of humanity", he has just done justice to his "Principals"; they are no longer citizens ready to jump at the throats of the Jews; all fear of massacre is dissipated: "his fierceness against the Jews therefore only came from of an error...", and Benjamin, now "colonel of national guards of Dimont, district of Joigny", .famous _this about-face of the fiery opponent of emancipation 3.

The decree is issued. The Assembly granted to all Jews the rights of active citizenship. "Praise be to Jehovah!" " writing "one of our Jews, trader in Paris". In vain did we make

4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 357, of December 23, 1790.
2. Le Courier de Gorsas, n° XXIX, of August 29, 1794.
3. Le Journal de Paris, no. 251, September 14, 1791.

objections; in vain even some Hebrews opposed difficulties with the decree, nothing could stop this great affair. :
"The men of God, Lafayette and Bailly, contributed to this their best... The city of Paris wants us to buy a church to convert it into a house of prayer for our nation. I would like this to happen..."

Is there a municipal, political or religious issue? gious, if they seem to have something useful to say, they express their opinion, their projects, their doubts.

One, signing "Judith M. of the tribe of David", protests against the order to close theaters on Pentecost:
"p"I am Jewish, he wrote. In this happy time of tolerance religious, we can loudly admit that we sing or that we chant the hymns of David in Hebrew. I was planning to go with my family see represent, rue de Richelieu, the beautiful tragedy of Brutus, in which I am assured that Talma and Monvel display sublime talents. » But no spec-tackle. The mayor gave orders for the uprooting of the posters, "and that because he is Catholic. But what do you think-would it be if, me, head of the municipality – I can be one in a year – with the municipality composed largely of Jews part, we ordered that every Saturday we close the shops? It seems to me that our order would not be more ridiculous than the one that deprives Jews of going to the comedy on the day of Pentecost..."

Another, "a good Israelite," writes "to his fellow citizens," through the Courrier de Gorsas, for their denunciation cer Duport du Tertre who, Minister of Justice, has "a hundred thousand pounds salary", descends from the "fourth" where he

4. La Gazette Universelle, No. 299, of October 26, 1794.
'2. The Chronicle of Paris, No. 165, June 14, 1791.

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 127

had "only one bed and two squares" to strut about in a "noisy" hotel! ".

"L..., Jew," rises so strongly against a conventional who had described a loan shark as "Jew", that the Journal de la Montagne, who had reproduced the sentence, apologizes for it and expresses Milliot's regrets. "...He did not intend to indict citizens who follow the sect of Moses... We no longer know Jews, Protestants, or Catholics. liques, we see in all citizens only

This is what another Jew tried to demonstrate to a priest refractory by asking him for his offering for "the victims of Chateau-Vieux. But the ecclesiastic, deaf to these arguments, wanted to prove to the Jew that outside the Church and there was no salvation for the aristocracy. The discussion gets worse: "Paralogisms," writes the Jew, "have come blunt against my sturdy faith and the shield of common sense that I opposed to him. So he didn't prove anything to me, and I told him proved, I, the Gospel in hand, that he and all the priests rebels to the oath are so many impostors. Do you know, Sir, the answer given to me by the hypocrite who only knew reply to this argument? "You're just a Jew!" You have crucified Jesus Christ! And he gave me to all the devils. 3":

These letters, it must be said, were warmly welcomed by the public papers. They aroused the interest, drew attention to citizens whose origin mysterious always provoked a certain curiosity. There's had, among these letters from second-hand journalists, writings who had a truly patriotic breath. The one that in 1792,

1. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° X, of November 10, 1791.
2. Le Journal de la Montagne, n° 22, dated 13 Frimaire, year I].
3. Le Courrier de Gorsas, No. XXII, February 22, 1792.

128 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Samuel Lévi, calling himself "Prince of captivity," chief Supreme of the Eastern and Western Synagogues", addresses knows to Anacharsis Cloots, orator of the human race, was for this published with genuine enthusiasm, despite the soup-stupid that this ingenious title could bring about the existence hypothetical of the author. |

It was the time when the kings had declared hatred to Republic and swore its doom because it had "broken the yoke with which the great and powerful had burdened her. Samuel Levi took the text of these impious threats to make people understand the most touching words of gratitude to the people French, "the first", who had "erased the reproach of Judah", and celebrate "the great free nation" which had "unraveled the bonds of all captives! ". What a touching letter! cried the People's Speaker. "There is not a single one of my subscribers who reading this does not make one shed tears. The love of homeland and freedom is painted there in fiery characters. It is truly the expression of the soul and the feeling?..."

to prove that the Jews, as we said earlier, were interested in all things of the Revolution. But, among those who became volunteer bulletinists for the newspapers, there was one who, by his fecundity of writing, by the – original and sometimes bizarre turn of his mind, by the finesse of his judgment and the uprightness of his reason, as finally by his ardent love of the homeland, deserves a special place in this gallery of letter writers: we want to talk about Zalkind Hourwitz.

Apart from professional gazetteers, there are few of them, we

4. La Chronique de Paris, no. 94, April 3, 1792.

2. The People's Speaker, No. 36, p. 281 (vol. XI-XII). :

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES 129

mod
f

we believe, who have so profusely communicated to the public sheets their ideas, their projects, their thoughts on the events of each day, and each time inspired by a just observation of the general good.

For all these reasons, it was appropriate to reserve for Hourwitz

a few pages which will put this curious figure in full view light.

CHAPTER II

ZALKIND HOURWITZ!

Zalkind Hourwitz is the one we know best, the one whose name is most readily cited among the Jews of Paris in the 16th century; but we do not know him and we do not cite him | generally only for his Apology of the Jews, which was crowned, in 1788, by the Royal Society of Sciences and _ Arts of Metz. At that time there was a lot of talk about the "Jew Polish." As soon as his work was advertised, the Journal de Paris (September 15, 1789), the Mercure de France made a particularly laudatory analysis of it; Mirabeau cited him in his writings; and Clermont-Tonnerre, one of the representatives most favorable to the emancipation of the Jews, said, about this competition, that "the Polish Jew alone had spoken as a philosopher.

Other than that, everything about Hourwitz is generally ignored. However, it was one of the figures most original of this end of the century where so many physiognomies—

4. Part of this study was published in the Annuaire des Archives Israelites (Paris, 1895–1896), where we will find the letters that we do not have not thought necessary to reproduce here.

ZALKIND HOURWITZ 131

had their special mark. Born around 1740 in Lublin, Lithuania, he belonged to that valiant part of the race Polish Jew who does not put off any effort, who is not deprived of any thing does not stop, and which on the contrary draws new and more male energy in difficulties, in obstacles. It was finally of those whose powerful brain never tires to store scientific and literary knowledge.

Hourwitz had, like his co-religionists in Poland, disdain for dress and elegance. If you have to believe one of his biographers!, it was this very contempt which, in 1806, kept away from the Assembly of the Israelites where his knowledge would have taken him to one of the first places, and where "his position and his miserable exterior" prevented him from being admitted. But, if he did not have these external appearances which, whatever one says, always exert a certain influence on public opinion, he at least had the knowledge which imposes, and, if he did not sit among the notables, the Commission which prepared the decisions of the Sanhedrin was careful not to neglect his advices.

He had had the bitter ambition to educate himself, and it was pushed | by this desire, which, some time before the Revolution, he had left his native country. After staying in Berlin where Mendelssohn received him with open arms, in Nancy, in Metz, in Strasbourg, where, "despite the oddity of its forms and his education. ", he was greeted with the most friendly eagerly, he came to settle in Paris. There he began to learn the French language, which he knew nothing about. During the At first, life was extremely hard for him, and, for to survive, he had to engage in hawking. But the day came

4. See. Quérard in Hourwitz, Michaud in Zalkind-Hourwitz; Larousse to Z, also. i

132 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

finally where he triumphed over bad destiny: the poor clothing merchant was attached to the King's Library as curator of oriental manuscripts! |

His appointment was not made without difficulty. Mardo-Dea Venture, who had this job, had just succumbed to an attack of paralysis. Lenoir, superintendent of the Library the King's library, in announcing his death on March 14, 1789, was do not recommend replacing it. The minister was of an opinion contrary: "We know very well," he said, "that the functions of a interpreter are not daily; but it seems indiscriminate to me thinkable that these places do not remain vacant, and above all that of the Hebrew language'. »

Hourwitz's candidacy was put forward, on March 19, by Mr. Lebegue, who highly recommended him to Mr. Lenoir. "My friend, Father Lallemand, makes this a special case, he wrote. He is a man very well versed in languages..., very honest, of impeccable conduct, exact in everything his homeworks. He deserves every confidence? " A few days afterwards, on March 30, Hourwitz, who then lived on rue Saint-Denis, at the Iron Cross, sent his Apology to the minister, and wrote to him: "I hope that it (this work) will obtain your indulgence when you know that it is the first attempt of a uneducated man, who spent his whole life in the womb of ignorance and misery, and of which the entire library consists of half a dozen mismatched volumes. » His modesty was greater than his "ignorance", because, to prove his knowledge, he added – if the surety of Mr. Lebègue was insufficient: "We find in the Biblio- the King's library several works on two columns: Hebrew

1. National Archives! 01 622. Establish. scientist. – Bibl. of the King.
2. Id. |

ZALKIND HOURWITZ 433

and Latin; let's cover the last one and I'll explain the original immediately, without the help of a dictionary. »

The Apology had the approval of the one that M. de Villedeuil,

"a lot of knowledge in the Hebrew language and rabbinical. I am also informed that Mr. Zalkind is particularly devoted to the study of Sciences. He is already known to the Library and deserves preference?. »

But everything was not said yet. Serious competitors had lined up. It was Lefèvre, a man of letters, professor at the Royal College, who "needed help?" ". It was Ensheim, introduced by Moïse Lévy, agent of the Court. of Bavaria, and who, born and residing in Metz, was recognized "by his entire nation for him who possesses to the highest degree the Hebrew language. A wonderful and gifted polyglot, he spoke Chaldaic, Greek, Latin, Italian, English, German, French, etc. A profound mathematician, he asked for this place "to obtain," said his boss, a little subsistence assistance, in order to be able to know in the capital where talented men are distinguished 4". | |

David Silveyra, appointed in 1780 general trustee of the Portuguese-Spanish Jewish nation after the death of Jacob-Rodrigues Péreire, also aspired to this position that his knowledge of Spanish and Portuguese put him at even to occupy. If his scientific titles were little important, on the other hand its location and public works that he had done seemed likely to call attention to him – by Mr. de Villedeuil.

4.Arch. nat., 0! 622.

2. Id.

3. Id.

4. [bid. | _

134 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

He claimed that his ancestors, originally from Portugal, had rendered great services to Europe through discoveries they had made in the New World. A ` of his ancestors, Diego de Silveyra, had been named viceroy of the Indies by the King of Portugal: the history of Portugal and the works of Abbot Raynal demonstrated this. As for him, born in Bayonne, he had been sent to Paris by the Government, in 1778, "for the establishment of a planned bridge over the rendered similar services in Bayonne and Dax, where he also had bridges built. He promised himself, . if he obtained the vacant job, "to make a place as an interpreter a continuous occupation! ".

However important these candidacies were, the one d'Hourwitz triumphed. On May 13, he was appointed secretary-interpreter of the king for oriental languages. His merits, so appreciated by the minister, were no less esteemed subsequently by the Republican Government, the Commune and the revolutionary committees which, on various occasions, resorted to his lights *.

He was, as Graetz said, a very educated Jew, a pen-deep heart. The functions entrusted to him and this Apology even testifies to his vast erudition, his high intelligence, matured and perfected at the Arié school | Loeb, the famous rabbi of Metz. But he has, besides this Apology, left several works highly esteemed by scholars. . It was a Project for a New Map of Paris, which the Journal de Paris published on 4 Pluviôse year VII; then in 1804

1.Arch. nat., O! 622.i

2. National Archives, F7 4745 and F7 2494. – Minutes of the Committees revolutionary members of the Réunion section.

3. See. also the Journal de Paris. from 19 Thermidor year VI,

ZALKIND HOURWITZ 135

(year IX) an 8° of 114 pages, entitled: Polygraphy or art to correspond using a dictionary, in all languages, even in those of which we do not only have the alphabetical letters. The Liège newspapers announced, in 1808, that Zalkind Hourwitz had sent thirty copies there please of his work entitled: Origin of languages, "for be sold for the benefit of the fire victims of Spa"; finally he published, in 1811, an 8° pamphlet of 88 pages, under the title from: Lacography or laconic interviews as quickly as one can talk.

The fever of the Revolution had seized him entirely. Wrestler ardent and convinced, he could not remain a stranger to the movement irresistible ideas, nor to the fascinating debates which agitated the Assemblies, the clubs, the streets. His mind was always awake. He made newspapers the confidants of his thoughts, his projects, his emotions, his ideas. THE Courier de Gorsas, the Chronique de Paris, the Journal de an eager welcome to his writings. Morals, prejudices, sciences, religion, homeland, he approached all subjects with warmth and a communicative sincerity.

One could expect that the author of the Apology of Jews would, when the time came, defend their co-religious

'sionaries with the ardor he put into resolving the question posed by the Metz Academy.

What must, in fact, be observed first of all is the energy with which he worked in their favor and supported their cause. Independent character, a rough pew nature, he showed himself

.more severe – and less fair also for their rabbis and their trustees whom he clearly separated from other Jews'. It seems–

i. See. his Apology, and Arch. Nat., O! 622.

136 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

It seemed that he wanted to see them get rid of the "rabbi-niques" which linked them closely. He dreamed of seeing his co-religionists rise to the level of other citizens and encouraged them to renounce certain religious customs gods whom they followed slavishly and who now swore with the progress of ideas and morals. There was nothing in the sense that he did not do for the unfortunate Jews, for their moral uplift and for the improvement of their political fate tick.

The Municipal Administration had just published (January 1791) the responsibilities of the various sections of the Paris police, and in the 3rd division it included the Jews with the worst scammers. Hourwitz immediately protested against this unjust measure and against this shameful promiscuity. " For what, he wrote to the Chronique de Paris on January 9, the office of does the city hold towards us the odious conduct of the former police ? » Was this not contrary to "human rights", contrary to the unanimous wish of the sections of the capital and the decrees of the National Assembly? The trustees of the Jews of Paris, Silveyra, A. Asur and Mordecai Elijah intervened their turn, and, on these energetic complaints, the department ment, retracting, removed the word Jewish from the "poster con-surrounding administrative objects! ".

One of the first too, Hourwitz pointed out what their situation was abnormal and strange in the nation where, in

Constitution, and where this same Constitution deprived them, – German Jews, of the right to take this oath:

4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 13, of January 13, 1791.

my

ZALKIND HOURWITZ 137

To the authors of "the Chronicle of Paris"

Allow me, Gentlemen, he wrote on February 18, 1790, to consult, through your Journal, the casuists of all religions, on a scruple that I have about the civic oath: by this oath I must commit to maintaining the Constitution, that is to say say all the laws that compose it; the main and basis of these laws are human rights that the National Assembly assures, in its address to the Provinces, that it has been returned to all human race. However, another law of the same Constitution _ deprives of human rights, all men who pray to Being supreme in Hebrew, and which he gave birth to elsewhere than in Bordeaux and in Avignon. I therefore ask for the means of swearing the maintenance of these two laws so discordant. That's not all; I am myself Polish Jew; I fear, therefore, of committing a kind of suicide, praying to maintain a law that degrades me beneath the executioners, and which even forces me to use violence towards my colleagues who would dare to encroach on the prerogatives of these execrable beings, to whom I am all the more repugnant as my colleagues, I dare say, have deserved well from the homeland? and the National Assembly has already tacitly recognized them for citizens, by accepting their patriotic gift; what she wouldn't have not done if she looked at them as foreigners. But also what disastrous effects will produce this law of proscription; she will revive the rest of the expiring fanaticism; it will reduce the number of concurrents for the purchase of clergy property; and, what will be more even more serious, it will expose us to the insults of the people, who will see more of his fellow men in men degraded by the law below the executioners.

Here, he said, in closing, to the authors of the Chronicle, the

4. No. 53, of February 22, 1790.

2. Mr. Marquis de La Fayette authorizes me to subscribe, in his name, to the honorable testimony given to us in these rooms. It's not same conduct in all the cities of the kingdom where we wanted to approve their services (Note by Z. Hourwitz).

438 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

question that I submit to the light of theologians of all the Nations; while awaiting their unanimous decision, I am, in despite the law that separates us, your brother and friend, ZALKIND Hourwitz, Polish, secretary-interpreter from the King's Library.

It was again to point out this cruel and strange posture Jews in the society he protested, in the Chronicle of Paris", against the advice of the police, the day they put the Jews on the same rank as crooks and public women:

I have the honor, Gentlemen, of being your relative, although to a very distant degree, being, like you, descendant of Adam in direct line. Despite this relationship, I do not, like you, have the right of citizenship: the reason is that the man and woman who – produced me (without consulting me) prayed to be supreme in Hebrew and lived in Poland, that is to say outside the bars – behind Bordeaux and Avignon. Not being a citizen, I looked upon as a foreigner. What was my astonishment to see, the list of administrators, inserted in your sheet yesterday, that I am neither. Because I read there: Mr. Perron, for cafes, inns..., foreigners and Jews. This recalls the Cicero's joke, which distinguished Julius from Caesar. But the city office which surely did not mean to joke, for – what does he treat us like a species of amphibian?

Why does he hold, towards us, the odious conduct of the an-old police, against human rights, against the unanimous wish nime that the sections of the capital generously demonstrated in our favor at the bar of the National Assembly, and against the decree of this august Assembly which placed us under the protection general law? has

God forbid that I fear the administration of Mr. Perron. Its nomination by free citizens answers me for its interest. grité and its lights. But, however great his merit, if I ever have the misfortune of being brought before his tribunal, and before to hear my defense he is curious to know if I have not not suffered a certain amputation, instead of answering him, I

Please send me to the quarries. I am, despite the police,
Gentlemen, your relative and friend,
ZALKIND HOURWITZ, Polish.

Not once does he miss the opportunity to refute the slanders spread against the Jews, or to respond to attacks that the clergy continues to make against them. With a courage that nothing discourages, he faces everyone.

Abbot Maury promises a memoir against the Jews, and in advance he challenges the Jews to answer it? Hourwitz challenges him to his turn! "to grant Abbot Maury, intolerant and impious, who denies the Bible by assuring that the Jews never been farmers, with Father Maury, grand pensioner and supposedly great defender of the Catholic religion, which assures that his foster mother is the most tolerant of religions". |

Le Babillard proposes, under the assumed name, to strike Jews with a special tax, and he assures that "they are all equipped with a well-stocked wallet" (?). Zalkind is indignant at this slander. Is the writer "bribed by the enemy to resurrect fanaticism"? Is he not "more ignorant than wicked " ? And did he not take the sentence for Hebrew who says: Heretics neganda is PARSE

+

" Think again...; this abominable sentence is Latin, and it was not the rabbis who pronounced it, but your reverends made fathers of the Council of Constance, by virtue of which they burned, in all conscience, David Huss and Jerome of Prague, badly-thanks to the safe conduct they granted them, and it is apparently still by virtue of this sentence that we saw, in the declaration of the royal commissioners, the project to exterminate, in the event of counter-revolution, all the republicans who would have had the imprudence dence to trust in the amnesty of the very Christian king.

1. The Chronicle of Paris, no. 124, of May 24, 1790. "To the abbot:
Maury. »

This, Sir, is what I thought I could allege for your defense.

I end up advising you not to give credit to any Jew who you do not particularly know, because I know several hundreds of Israelites whose wallets contain only their security cards.

Your unofficial defender;
'ZaLRIND Hourwitz, Polish'.

In this daily struggle where the Church, seeing with anger the emerging credit of the Jews, constantly sought to belittle them, it was to be expected that Zalkind Hourwitz would not hesitate to intervene and, despite the inequality of the fight, to strike knock and cut on those who were relentless against his brothers. This is how, little by little, and in the heat of the fight, he was led, after waiting for the attack, to take the offensive. He did it with the passion and bitter irony he brought to – all things. | L

The first blow he struck dates from the day when the Assembly national decreed the return of the Church's property to the nation. The clergy cries out, protests, is indignant; the prelates in call to the councils, which, from century to century, defended, under penalty of anathema, to seize the property of the Church. But what! priests "retreat behind authority of an assembly of men who were judges in their own cause, and who have only placed under the protection of anathema the goods of the Church, without bothering with those of the people? ". What do the Jews have to do with this, and why threaten them? of eternal damnation? Why involve them in this quarrel? between the Assembly and the Church? "What does the abbot get involved in? Maury et Ci, if, following the example of Austria and Poland, –

4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 36, 6 brumaire year VI.

2. Le Courier de Gorsas, n° X, January 10, 1791. Leltre de ZHP (Zalkind Hourwitz, Polish) to [Author of the Courier.

ZALKIND HOURWITZ {41

we want to incur the anathema of the Council of Trent; It is our business. » |

And, immediately, the tone becomes more aggressive, the question

rancid "in the natural history of the clergy", Z. Hourwitz asks, one day, for an explanation of "several phenomena physical and moral" that he observed:

4° Where does it come from, he wrote to the Chronique de Paris, that, under the this regime, most of your prelates and your big beneficiaries had very pretty nieces? Where does the number of these nieces has decreased considerably since the Revolution?

2° By what chance does it happen that the ecclesiastical deputies-tics, to which conscience does not allow us to lend the service ment on the Civil Constitution of the clergy, are all accustomed to the right side, in the sign of the aristocracy? Consciousness, where does it go? does it nestle? :

3° Why do these priests, so scrupulous about the authority of the Pope, . about the oath in question which is surely indifferent to him, have they submitted without scruple to the decree which exempts them from it pay for annates and buy bubbles?

Another day, in a "very urgent notice given to the tor of the Courier", he warns "jealous husbands" against "confessionals and aristocratic altars raised in cellars, in attics and in shops dormitories". But let them hurry, he adds, because "some-some of my friends, people of good fortune, have already benefited from this clandestine devotion to propagate patriotism in the very bosom of the aristocracy? "...

Certainly, these jokes were not in the best taste.

1. La Chronique de Paris, no. 42, February 11, 1794.
2. Le Courier de Gorsas, n° XII, of April 12, 1791. A

142 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

But, if we admit that the Jews had to use the same weapons than those which were used against them, if we recalls, moreover, the aversion of which the Church was the object in the people, and the state of acuteness to which the religious war had reached wise, we will agree that these taunts were not too cruel...

It is: from this point of view also that we must place ourselves in order to appreciate the feat that Hourwitz boasted of in 1792, and who had the guardhouse as a theater, one day of trial if we. Walks through the city had not yet religious abuse", hesitated to issue a compliant decree, although that public opinion was unanimous in protesting against the use which obliged the inhabitants to decorate their houses, and the soldiers to kneel "when passing a certain figure called the Good Lord. |

"I recently had this subject," Hourwitz wrote to the Chronicle. nique of Paris 1, a rather pleasant theological-military controversy keep quiet with my corporal, a very angry man, actually quite good drinker and excellent beadle of his parish. Being on duty, I saw the aforementioned coming Good God, I'll let him go his way without shouting to arms; all my comrades applauded my negligence, which spared them the trouble of getting into the mud, and to cover themselves from the rain which was then falling.

"However, one of these gentlemen had the mischief to awaken the corporal who, at that moment, was peacefully drinking his wine, and release him against me. So this man came and reproached me harshly-ment of having failed to respect religion and the instructions which carry fire, good God, etc. I apologize for my ignorance in the French language. caise ; I believed, I told him, that Good God means the Supreme Being; but I didn't know that it also means a man in a worn shirt such a cup. This excuse, as we well imagine, redoubled the

kos

4. La Chronique de Paris, no. 330, of November 19, 1792.

ZALKIND HOURWITZ 143

fury of the beadle; he called me impious, a deist, an atheist and, what's worse, of a man who renounced his baptism. Me! I cried, pretending to be angry in my turn; me, give up at baptism! Learn, Sir, that I have never been baptized neither with water, nor with fire, nor with the Holy Spirit. What! he said shuddering-health, would you then be of the nation guilty of the murder of - Jesus Christ? Yes, sir, I replied, and you are well ungrateful for blaming me for this murder which saved you from sin original, and to which you are indebted for your place as beadle. He wanted to reply, but the burst of laughter from my comrades made him do so.

run off giving ourselves to all the devils... » |

One could, on this reading, suppose that Zalkind Hourwitz let himself, with so many others, slide down the slope which led the clergy did not degenerate into bloodthirsty emotions; there – Jutte did not lead him to any of the excesses which darkened this era. In politics, he was also wise. Marat remained for him “the apostle of murder and anarchy!” »; and when the trial of Louis XVI was initiated before the Convention, he wrote two letters about this unfortunate king, which are a model of common sense and we would almost say prescience. In the first he severely qualifies the conduct of the “chief executive”; he states that “it is absurd to say that Louis XVI should not be punished for his crimes, under pretext that the Constitution is not clear enough on this regard... The Constitution would have expressly permitted the murder of Louis XVI that he would still be punishable in virtue of natural law which is more sacred than all human institutions?...”; but, whatever its indignity, Hourwitz does not demand his death.

4. La Chronique de Paris, no. 330, of November 19, 1792.
2. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° XXVII, of November 27, 1792. Letter “on Louis XVI ”.

144 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

His second letter “on Louis XVI”, dated January 4 1793, contains a precise presentation of his ideas on this subject. He shows himself to be profoundly political, and undoubtedly one of the first initiators of the referendum! :

Zalkind Hourwitz, to A.-J. Gorsas, on Louis XVI.

The King of England, while feeling sorry for the fate of Louis Capet, refuses to take any action in his favor before the National Convention, under the indecent pretext that his dignity does not allow him to send an ambassador to French. – The truth is that George III, as well as all the crowned executioners, have no more pity for their former brother, that thousands of innocent people they force to slit each other's throats for their personal quarrels; that their supposed compassion for him is only hypocrisy, while they ardently desire his death to slander the French, to treat them as patricides, and make them odious to their superstitious people, whom they have accustomed to believing that kings are effectively established by grace of God to torment men. – To foil their plots, let us take them at their word, and grant them life and freedom of Louis Capet on the following conditions: – 1° We will make a armistice for three months, during which the Brabancons, the government that they deem appropriate; and so that their choices are absolutely free and exempt from any foreign influence, their assemblies will be held in cities where there will be neither French garrison, nor other.

2° When all the peoples have made their respective choice, the peace will be signed, the French will leave the countries whose residents will not have declared themselves for their meeting at the France: we will disarm on both sides; we will empty the stores trained in Germany, and the troops will return to their ordinary birds.

3. Le Courier de Gorsas, No. IV, January 4, 1793.

ZALKIND HOURWITZ o 148

3° After the execution of all these articles, Louis Capet will be taken and his family outside the territory of the Republic.

The Emperor and the King of Prussia will dare all the less to reject these conditions, which they declared in their manifesto that they do not do not claim to dismember France, and that they do not make us war only for the interests of Louis XVI. It will therefore be impossible .to refuse to make some slight sacrifice for him save life, unless you dishonor yourself in the eyes of the universe.

From the beginnings of the Revolution, which he welcomed with enthusiasm and to which he made the patriotic abandonment of a part of his income, Hourwitz was incorporated into the guard national. It was the time when the inhabitants of Paris, more filled with good will than experience, more citizens than soldiers, threw into the ranks of the militia a confusion that was increased by the tumultuous events of each day. Military disorder was at its height, Accra again by political intrigues. False patrols roamed the streets; the regular patrols fraternized among themselves to the point of indiscretion, and, often the watchword, passing from mouth to mouth from one district to another, caused among the squads responsible for city security one trouble that the leaders were powerless to prevent.

Struck by this danger, Hourwitz imagined a "means of fish for the revelation of the slogan in the patrols", and communicated his plan to Gorsas. The Courier de Versailles at Paris and from Paris to Versailles published it in its issue of December 4, 1789 with the following letter:

ZALKIND Hourwrrz, Polish Jew, Author of the Courier:
HI. |

You know, M., that Diogenes, one day seeing all the Corinpeople who were very busy, decided, in order not to remain alone idle, to roll your barrel...

10

146 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

You know, Mr., that the Capital is at this moment filled with people with motions, with projects, and people who tell them, or who don't care, eremplum ut... talpa, to which the ignorant onlyrefuse their eyes. Following the example of Diogenes, I reproached myself my inaction; however having neither the talent nor the leisure for these MM. to multiply grains, or to calculate a large volume-of zeros for the payment of the national debt, I limit myself to project which I attach to this epistle; if you find it useful, ow weird, please do me the pleasure of inserting it. In the first case, I will have served my fellow citizens and they will be grateful to me; in the second, I will have amused them, and they will laugh at me; but in all-both I will not have remained idle and I will have rolled my barrel; and you will agree, M., that it is as well worth rolling som barrel, than making impertinent motions.

It's not an easy thing to analyze this project, minu-carefully designed and of which all the details are closely linked is lying. The law of silence, respect for duty were formal there-ment ordered, and the communication of the slogan surrounded such precautions that secrecy seemed impossible.
could be disclosed. This project was, in some of its.
parts, quite "weird" indeed, and one may be tempted to
I think he laughed. Hourwitz himself wondered a little worried: "Will this seem very ridiculous? » There was none.
Nothing. Le Courier de Gorsas recognized "particular merit" of the author, and announced that, if this project was "hidden under a singular form", it was at least "useful", quite useful even for the city of Bordeaux to adopt it in part..

We have said everything about his feelings as a Jew and a Frenchman.
It is time to see it successively in its aspect of-wise and fine scholar, beneficent, in love with humanity and.
public good, capable of relieving suffering.

Whatever the form in which he conceived.

caustic and mocking – Zalkind Hourwitz contained difficult to express his thoughts when he believed he had ~to say something useful, fair or true.

Cazalès and Barnave, both members of the Constituent Assembly, had just fought a duel. This incident had profoundly-moved public opinion because of the popularity of which Barnave was still enjoying. The liberal and republican gazettes caines were indignant at the danger that could pose to his most beloved representatives arrogant provocations nobles familiar with the use of the sword. Hourwitz addressed to the Courrier de Paris in the eighty-three departments (Tuesday August 17, 1790) a letter, where he added his reflections to those addressed to the same newspaper by the abbot Grégoire, on the duel. 7

"All the friends of humanity," he wrote to him, "share your indignation about the duel... I don't understand how-sane people have managed to persuade themselves that the forgiveness of insults be an infamy and that homicide becomes an honorable action when done bravely. I do not do not understand either why they do not conclude this last principle that Cartouche was the most honest man of the world? » | s

What would have been thought of Cicero if he had left the rostrum and Senate to go fight Catiline outside the gates of Rome?

"What will our nephews finally say when they know that the legislature |
lator Barnave did not blush to abandon his post in the sanctuary of the law to yield to a ridiculous prejudice and barbaric ? Oh! Barnave! Barnave! what a mistake to repair! »

Hourwitz was not one of those who was content to criticize quer. It was the characteristic side of his mind that he never never pointed out evil without looking for what it could be, to his eyes, the remedy; and this remedy was sometimes so simple that the

448 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

The very simplicity of his ideas made them suspect to him. " If they were not absurd, I said to myself, had they escaped until now to every man of common sense, and even to scholars who have seriously dealt with this object? »

nity, he published it, at the risk of appearing "ridiculous" to the eyes of a few. :

This is how he waged a fierce campaign against the game sounds, "rogue caves", where, every week, the Newspapers reported thefts, murders, suicides. He later imagined a way to escape from the burning floors die when you can no longer go down the stairs, which anticipated the most recent ordinances on the subject.

But where did he not look for good and progress?

The Earl of Rumford, a high-ranking English personage, had founded popular establishments in London where one can enjoy offered soups at a very low price. fl contributed to the creation of works of this type in Paris.

Zalkind Hourwitz who, in the early days of his stay in Paris, had been forced, in order to survive, to sell old clothes during the day, while he spent his nights at work, remained in a very precarious state of fortune. It no longer belonged to the National Library. A few-some of his co-religionists helped him to live. 11 was therefore very tempted to take advantage of the foundation of the English philanthropist; but his relationships, his situation as a man of letters, "a remains of vanity", hardly allowed him to go, in the middle day, in front of everyone, looking for his portion of "soup". Couldn't other citizens, like him, be prevented from enjoying this philanthropic enterprise? This inconvenience struck him. He then wrote to the Journal de Paris, 12 Brumaire Year IX, a letter where the idea of the Fourneaux

\

ZALKIND HOURWITZ 149

current food standards are ahead of their institution by almost a half century:

To the editors of the newspaper

. My financial manager, citizens, has just prescribed to me the Rumfort soup; I willingly submit to this re-gime, if I had a lackey to bring me soup, or if a remaining vanity allowed me to go and get it myself.

straight soup seven farthings or two sous. If the directors of the state happiness in question adopt this project, I undertake to procure at least fifty thousand practices and make them earn more than one hundred thousand crowns per year.

Hello and consideration.

ZHP

We could give many other letters from this curious thinker, because he approached with as much talent and passion the linguistics, pure science, foreign policy, civil reading, questions of military art'; but we must limit. |

These letters will also be enough to give the measure of the wealth of imagination and vast erudition of Hourwitz, as the ardent faith that he put at the service of the public good and his co-religionists. We don't know what biography said of him that he was an "extraordinary man". Nothing more true. Modest, kind to the humble, severe to the bad guys, tough on himself, he acquired the esteem of all as much by his character as by his knowledge.

4. See. for example the Journal de Paris, n°101, of 41 Nivôse year VIII; – LeCourrier de Gorsas, No. XIX, September 19, 1792; – The mail, No. XII, of June 12, 1792; – L'Ami des Lois, n° 884 of January 16, 1798; – Le Journal de Paris, n° 165, of 15 Ventôse year VIII; – The Journal of Paris, n° 12, of January 12, 1806; etc., etc.

150 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Hourwitz, who towards the end of the 18th century no longer occupied his functions at the Library, had become under the Empire simple "language master!" ". He died in 1812. "Beau-
At the same time, his co-religionists, says Michel Berr, attended his funeral procession. Mr. Lazard, member of the Assembly Israelite of 1807, who was then a member of the central Consistory

tral, pronounced his eulogy. »

This great intelligence had suddenly died out.

1. It is under this title that it appears in the official census that the Consistory made, in 1809, of the Parisian Jewish population (See Léon Kahn, Les Intitulions de patronage, Paris, 1885).

CHAPTER II

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Let us now return to the attitude of the Jews of Paris during during the Revolution. E

We know what the financial situation of France was at time of the meeting of the Estates General: the Treasury was empty, and bankruptcy threatening. l] had to meet the necessities urgent situations of the moment. Necker first counted for –this on better handling of public funds. But, from the first days, perceptions were stopped by civil unrest which broke out almost everywhere. It had to use extraordinary resources. A first em– loan of thirty million, then a second of eighty millions were decreed in 1789 within fifteen days; but they were both tried without success.

The National Assembly placed the creditors of the State “under the safeguarding of French honor and loyalty”; it was a noble and generous inspiration. However the deficit. grew ever more. A shortage too deep should inspire traits of generosity. The nation was indeed moved. The provinces sacrificed their privileges; the Church, in a moment of enthusiasm which did not last long, abandoned his silverware; all citizens renounced

152 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

with joy, in favor of the homeland, a quarter of their income; a large number of them stripped themselves, moreover, of their silver dishes, their jewelry, their earrings shoes, to come to the aid of the State. Patriarchal gifts ticks flocked. |

The Jews of Paris also contributed their contribution. They could have held it against the National Assembly, which showed itself merciless trait for 'them, and, always considered as foreigners in the State, hesitate to contribute to the recovery of finances of the kingdom which continued to proscribe them. They don– enthusiastic movement which had won over the nation.

The newspapers recorded some of these acts of patriotic generosity.

From the first days, among others, "a young man, dressed in the uniform of the national militia of Paris", and who belonged to the district of the Carmelites, deposited between the 'hands of the President of the Assembly, a sum of six hundred books. It was a man named Trénel, a Jew by nation! ".

Zalkind Hourwitz, in turn, gave the quarter of his income, while this extraordinary contribution was all momentary and we were never to return to it?.

Cerf-Berr, banker, appears, on October 14, on the "state of jewelry and gold and silver dishes worn at the Mint of Paris", for one hundred and seventy-eight marks and nine deniers of silver tableware 3. |

"Some poor Jews from Paris, in a hurry to compete in

1. Le Patriote français, September 16; – The Journal of Debates, from September 14; – Versailles and Paris, September 15; – The lesson-French laugh, September 15.

2. Le Mercure de France, October 24; – Le Point du jour, n° 107, from October 12.

3. Le Journal de Paris, No. 293, October 20.

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS o 453

public affairs and not calculating with their misfortune, but filled with a fervent desire to come to the aid of a homeland that has become theirs, and to recall their Christian brothers hold on to less unjust ideas, have been working together for a long time. They managed to collect one thousand five hundred books, which were placed on the altar of the homeland. " They had this offering delivered by Abbot Grégoire. Elie Mar-Dochée acted as their interpreter and renewed for them the commitment that they had taken to pay a quarter of their income.

Moreover, it was not only on this occasion that the Jews – those from departments like those of Paris –

of circumstances where, for the Revolution, the homeland or humanity, they did not take real joy in joining their offerings to those of their fellow citizens. _

Thus in 1792. We know the episode of the Swiss of Chateau-Vieux. Sent to the galleys for seizing the fund of their regiment, for having resisted, by force, two decrees of the National Assembly, to have, finally, defended the entry of Nancy into the national guard which, in the struggle, lost a number of men, they were soon considered by the Republicans as the "unfortunate victims" of the aristocracy, Under the pressure of the society of Jacobins, the Assembly included them in the amnesty decree of September 17, 1791. Collot d'Herbois then claimed that with the French guards they had been the first in the army, on July 14, to recognize the sovereignty of people. Public opinion was moved by the story of their sufferings. Frances. We decided to bring them to Paris, to award them

1. Le Courrier de Paris in the Provinces and Previnces in Paris, No. VIII, of November 21; – Le Journal des Débats, n° 99, of 20 November November. |

154 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

ner "the honors of triumph", and a subscription was opened in their favor in the Courrier de Gorsas.

This newspaper published the offerings addressed to him. We see the following mention there, February 22, 1792:

"Received from eight Jews, including five books from an officer of Nièvre battalion, who wanted his gift to be confused with that of these honest and compassionate Jews, thirty-five pounds. »

Then, on the following days:

"From a Jew, three books"; – "of two Jews, four pounds"; – "from another Jew, two pounds?."

A patriotic impulse, roughly similar to that of 1789, – occurred in 1792, when France was forced to prepare for war against kings. It seems that the quality of citizen gives the generosity of Jews a plus great boom. Their offerings flow from all sides. Their contribution even takes on at certain moments something particularly touching.

In Paris, "Mr. Isaac, volunteer of the national guard, offers four crowns of six francs.

Zalkind Hourwitz, not content with having abandoned annual-quarter of his income, sends "an assignat of five as many pounds for the costs of war against the despots, against these destroyers of peoples, whose audacity they have sacrilege to call ourselves masters by the grace of God, as if God had granted them the privilege of Molière's doctors, de faillendi, pungendi, occidendi, impune in tota terra".

1. The Patriotic Correspondence, n° 28, vol. V, of April 15, 1792.
2. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° XXII, XXIII, XXV, of February 22, 24 and 25 April 1792. ` `
3. The Journal of the second Legislature, no. 205, of April 24, 1792.
4. Le Patriote français, n° 1005, dated May 14.

CIVILITY OF THE JEWS 155

Marx Berr, from Strasbourg, brings to the Convention, which applauded, "six hundred pounds for citizens who have the suffered more at the siege of Lille! ".

Trénel, elector of the departments of Paris, sends his annual offering and, for the second time, the sums of seventy-two pounds in gold and seventy-eight in silver, intended for war expenses. Honorable mention?

The Sans-Culottes section publishes the list of donations it received for the arming of two volunteer companies who leave for the borders (the year IV of Liberty, the I of Equality). Joseph Petit appears there for three hundred pounds; Louis Simon, for two hundred; Jacques Philippe, for fifteen books, "a coat, jacket, breeches, saber, pouch, cap pomegranate tree", etc.

Enthusiasm is translated into action everywhere patriotic. |

In Strasbourg, "good citizens hasten to bring every day, to the Friends of the Constitution of the Jacobins, patriotic donations for war expenses... A rider of the national guard, Baruch Cerf-Berr, sent three hundred pounds, namely two hundred pounds for the war and one hundred pounds for the widow of the first citizen who will perish in the first Jews from the surrounding area send several pieces of silverware to the same use. In another list there are five more Jews, including Junius Frey *.

A little later, the Batavian related the following fact, that we reported to him from Strasbourg: "Citizen Joseph Lévy, father

1. Le Mercury Universl, n° 586, vol. XX, October 11, 1792.
2. Id., t. XXVI, n° 784, of April 23, 1793.
3. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° 15, of May 15, 1792.
4. Le Courrier de Strasbourg, n° 118, of May 21.

156 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

of nine children, two of whom serve the homeland in the 7th battalion. along the Bas-Rhin, felt he could not celebrate the festival better national victories only by contributing, following its means, to the relief of our brothers prisoners at the enemy. To this end, he handed over to the director of the Gazette Strasbourg, the pay he received as a guard national, for the whole month of Frimaire, to which he added twenty-nine pounds. » And the newspaper adds: "What is the being degraded who does not read such traits with gentle emotion tion!? » |

Finally, the Jews of the Réunion section contribute to the moment when the war, the high cost of food, make the life so hard for poor people, and submit to the Committee of charity a sum of four thousand five hundred and thirty books "to be used for the relief of the destitute of the section? ".

Such feelings of patriotism and charity cannot be should have provoked only feelings of recognition. It was a poor understanding of those who never abandon their preventions. Do the Jews not give? They are accused of avarice. Are they helpful? It is said that they are not become compassionate since all the merchants became Jewish. | | |

However, let us not tire, however tedious either the nomenclature, to report their acts of generosity for the homeland. The registers of the minutes of the Committees revolutionaries will help us provide new examples that have remained buried there for more than a century.

provokes the most touching offerings.

1. Le Batave, n° 326, 18 dives year II.
2. Annals of the Republic Re n° 38, of December 4, 1795.

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS 157

France is surrounded by land and sea, put out of control law by the powers; its soil is invaded; his situation seems desperate. The Convention, to save the homeland, takes the most energetic measures. A levy of 300,000 men, decreed on February 24, 1793, was insufficient to cope to the enemies who, on all sides, threaten the independence of the nation. On August 16, the lifting in. mass is ordered. Paris and France are making a superhuman effort to defend themselves. All is requisitioned, men, horses, forges and metals for melt down cannons and woodwork of all kinds to extract 'saltpeter and make powder from it. The kingdom is everything whole on foot. Those who cannot fly across borders come to the aid of the State through their work or their donations.

The Revolutionary Committees, with regard to the Jews, applaud the facts that we are about to read.

Section of Spades. – Session of 18 Brumaire Year II. – " The citizen Hesse sent the Committee a rifle with bayonet and a pair of pistols to arm the rider that the Popular Society proposes to equip, with an assignat of fifty pounds. »

Reunion Section. – Popular Society of Friends of Equality.
– March 25, 1793. – "Letter from citizen Morhange who offers give your uniform for our brothers on the borders 2."

2 frimaire. – "Jacob Bodenheim young, child of eight years old, –residing at rue Simon-le-Franc, 10, place a bag on the desk of skin, containing seven pounds thirteen sols in gros sols, including an assignat of fifteen sols coming from his savings. It offers this object for the wives of army volunteers.

"Society stops the civic mention... furthermore stops that extract from the report will be given to young Bodenheim 3."

7 Frimaire. – "Citizen David announces that citizen Jacob
1. National Archives, F7 2476.

2. National Archives, F7 2495.
3. Id.

158 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Benjamin offers the company complete horse equipment for its part of the open collection with the aim of arming, dressing and equip a rider...

"The same citizen David also offers, on behalf of citizen Benjamin, fifty tents. The company names citizens David and Breaks to come to an agreement in this regard with citizen Benjamin; THE same commissioners are also responsible for presenting these five Quante tents at the National Convention on behalf of the company!. »

But the courage and valor of the soldiers are nothing, their weapons are useless, if they do not have cartridges for them guns, powder for cannons. Blowing snows cannot produce more; work is stopped everywhere. How substitute? At this time, the famous chemist Berthollet discovers that you can get saltpeter by washing old walls. "Revolutionary" courses are open for teach the new way of extracting and refining salt peter. Guyton de Morveau, Monge, Fourcroy and Berthollet thus strive to multiply the means of defense. _

Their scientific activity increases tenfold the patriotic activity of Parisians. All the cellars are scraped, cleaned, the walls carefully raked, the woodwork brought to the Convention. |

Jews strip their synagogues for the benefit of Ia National Defense. The revolutionary committee of the section of the Meeting drew up the minutes?. We reproduce it let's read it verbatim.

2 Ventos |
Leave declaration
of Sinagogue.
The duody ventose year two of the French Republic one and indivisible.
4. National Archives, F7 2495.
2. Id. F7, 2494.

Citizens Cerf Bodenheim appeared before our Committee, Isaac Isac and Polak fils and Joseph Allemand, all four came declare that they had given leave of their former synagogue located rue du Renard Mery, house of citizen Coquelin, and that they give the woodwork to the section for the saltpeter service, after having made the necessary repairs to restore the apartment as it was and hope that in their imitation the citizens of other synagogues will do like them.

Deer Bodenheim; Polak, eldest son;
Isaac Isaac; Joseph Allemand;
President, Dolizy; Secretary Registrar, Dourlens.

This call is heard. The register of minutes of the same section bears, in fact, on the date of 8 Ventôse:

The Deliberative Committee decides, on the proposal of the Jews below in front tending to donate to the woodwork section which are located as well as the cabinets in the synagogue rue des Petits Champs, requests that commissioners be appointed to, jointly with them, be authorized to make a sale of these same woodworks and that the money which would come from it in would be bought wood to help make the saltpeter for our section. For which the Committee, receiving their offer, appoints the citizen Léger, their colleague, for being present at this sale.

Finally, on 18 Ventôse, another certificate:

Seen to the Committee the certificate and receipt from the Salary Commission = priests, the Committee decides that it will be mentioned at the trial verbal, and approved the civic act of formerly Jewish citizens commissioners for the remuneration they made of wood for the making saltpeter. And signed: Cerf Lyon and Salomon

Levy.
HuMBERT, president.

These sacrifices to the homeland were not a rare thing at that time. era. We would find numerous proofs of this, if we wanted to milk collect them, in all departments. And in this Alsace itself, where for so many more years we aroused hatred against the Jews, we could cite traits admirable in their generosity and selflessness. How much of facts then protested against the detestable opinion that gave their enemies these brave citizens!

Here is an example. This is Marx Berr, from Strasbourg. His admission into the Society of Friends of the Constitution and in the National Guard had been poorly received. How: did he respond to these unjust feelings? In 1794, we learned, from Landau, that the volunteers arrived there without effects, without ammunition, without food. Society is moved, decides to come to the aid of his brothers in arms and appeal to patriotism of all to provide for their basic needs. "The project was carried out the next day, and one of the members of the company, the Jew Mr. Berr, offered to send these effects to Landau, and to accompany them himself, if we can wanted... » |

War comes. The homeland is declared in danger. " A citizen, craftsman of this city, complained of not being able to follow the example of others and rush to the defense of country. "I have an old mother," he said; if I leave, she will be without bread." Citizen Marx Berr, of the Jewish religion, finding next to him, takes 500 pounds from his pocket and says to him: That's it for your crew, go get registered, and so much that your mother will live, I will take care of it?. »

It seems, moreover, that the Alsatians, at that time, return to a fairer feeling of morals and virtues civic rights of the Jews. The emancipation decree, far from producing

T

4. The Extraordinary Mail or the first to arrive, from Monday September 7-September 1191.
2. The Chronicle of Paris, n° 230, of August 6, 1792.

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS 161

the sinister effects that the Rewbells and La Fare expected, gathered around the flag citizens of all religions. Already, at the July 14 commemoration ceremony, Bischwiller – and, later, in Bischeim – Catholics, Lutherans, Calvinists and Jews, merge closely in patriotic enthusiasm. The church, the Protestant temple, religions, the priest, the pastor, the rabbi. "All citizens of the commune attended the ceremonies of these religious gods!. »

An even more considerable testimony of esteem was given to them given in 1792, in Fort-Louis, at the time of the re-election of the Municipality. It was, according to the Strasbourg newspapers, something unheard of until now in our region.

Here is the fact: "A nonagenarian Jew was appointed president of the Primary Assembly, amid universal applause. This venerable old man who, with his long white beard, looked of the patriarch Abraham, was embraced by all the members of the assembly. We remembered, while blessing him, that there are five for many years he had been the benefactor of the place where he lived. Fort-Louis absolutely lacked salt; it was at the fort of the summer of 1744, during the Austrian invasion. Abraham Dreyfouss {this is the name of this respectable Israelite) imagined filling salt from hollowed-out tree trunks, which he floated on the Rhine, and thus provide its fellow citizens with this essential commodity. sand. The other Jewish inhabitants, who became citizens one day ago, by the benefit of the law, were welcomed by Christians with a fraternal cordiality, worthy of our holy constitution 2."

In Paris, Jewish patriotism was also manifested by their valiant attitude in the National Guard and in

1. Les Annales de Mercier, no. DCLXIT, July 26, 1791; – and the Audinational fire, n° 28, of October 29.

2. The Chronicle of Paris (Supplement), No. 51, February 21, 1792.
11

162 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

the army. We know that it was only by the decree of September 29 November 1791 that all active citizens had to register for the service of the militia, under penalty of deprivation of their political rights. But the Jews had not obtained their civic body only on September 27. And yet, from the first days of the Revolution, they enlisted in the guard national. We have already, as testimony to this fact, the assurance that Godard had given, when he presented, on January 28, 1790, a deputation of Jews to the Assembly general of the Commune. The Directories of 1790 tell us Until 1791, service was therefore voluntary. It was extremely painful. Despite their business and their work servants, citizens had to supervise of the city, guarding the barriers, at the re-entry of sub-resistance, and later in the guard of the king and that of The national assembly. Everyone relaxed their ardor, the first moments of enthusiasm passed. It seems like the Jews were keen to distinguish themselves through their active regularity. We can at least deduce from the news that published Feydel's Observer in 1790: "... Let's talk about little from the red table of the Petits-Pères district, he writes on February 8. On this table are registered all the citizens who refused or refuse to stand guard. It must let everyone be rewarded according to their works, and the table red will be useful at election time. The district of Petits-Pères invited other districts to adopt this simple way to tell voters which citizens they must be wary. It was my friend, Mr. Calman, brave Israelite! and grenadier sergeant, who had the first idea

1. See. above about Calman, page 121.

THE CIVILITY OF THE JEWS 163

of this red table. Mr. Calman doesn't want me to appointed; and I want to name it twice, for him learn that modesty is not always in season. He It's time we knew that Jews are good for something thing' ". |

They sought to prove it. Godard said, on January 28, that, out of five hundred Jews who existed in Paris, there were more than a hundred enlisted in the National Guard. The Directory of "Etrennes aux Parisiens patriotes" published, in 1790, the list of regiments responsible for the defense of the Constitution. We find a certain number of Jews there, and we we noted the names, taking care to leave aside those which did not seem to belong uncontested to the Jewish religion: such as the Kleins, the Picards, the Jacobs, the David, the Salmons, the Meyers, Lambert, Bernard, etc. |

The National Guard, as we have said, was initially united only composed of volunteers. To provide the services irregularly made and maintain among the militiamen a discipline impatiently supported, compa-troops of paid grenadiers and riflemen, and later companies of hunters and gunners also

The Jews of Paris appeared in these different bodies. In here is the nomenclature that it is necessary to give, whatever tedious as it is, because it constitutes an unpublished document of their existence during the Revolution.

First division?

Heimen, rue Saint-Jacques. Stein.
Castro, rue des Cordeliers. Ely elder, rue de la Harpe.
Oury, rue des Deux-Ponts. Ely young »

1. L'Observateur de Feydel, no. 81, February 8, 1790.
2. It included the districts of Saint-Jacques-du-Haut-Pas, Saint-164

Hertz.
Berthe, rue Saint-Jean de B.

Lyon, Ste-Geneviève mountain.

Henriquez, rue d'Enfer.
Lang, corporal (6th good, 3rd cic),

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Hertz, sergeant (7° be", 3rd company).

Kauffmann, captain (40° bo),
3° cie).

Oury, rue Zacharie, n° 3, capital
tain.

Company of paid hunters attached to the division: Klotz.

Second division!

Mayer »

Dacosta, rue du fg. Saint Germain.

Brandon, rueSt-André-des-Arcs.

Lévi, rue Pavée.

Sazias, rue Pavée.

Naquet,

Mayer, rue du Haut-Moulin.

Anspach, rue de la Thuilerie.

Daniel, rue du Colombier.

Abraham, rue de Seine.

Baer, at Petit-Dunkerque, quay
by Conti.

Adelmann, rue de Bussy.

Schouler, rue Mazarine.

Foy, rue Saint-André.

Wolff, rue de Bussy.

Brach.

Mayer, corporal

Mayer, » 3¢ co. of the Center.

Rosenzweig, » 4° » »

Berthe, It. in 24, r. Jacob, 19.

Berthe, "4er"

Third division?

Enoch.

Isaac, rue de Lancry.

Mayer, courtyard of Grand-Cerf.

Hesse, rue des Arcis, 33.

German, r. Grenier-St-Lazare.

Abraham,"

Lallemand, rue Saint-Martin.

Trenel. »

Mozès fils, rue de Montorgueil.

Elder Polak, rue Saint-Martin.

Daniel Polac »

Abraham Polak »

Bodenheim, r. Simon the Frank.

Emmanuel, rue Beaubourg.

Saché, rue de Bondy.

Calmer, 20, rue Meslée.

Frankfurt, rue des Gravilliers.

Haguenauer, 22"

Isaac, Enclos Saint-Martin.

Victor, Saint-André-des-Arts, Saint-Marcel, Saint-Louis-en-l'Ile, Val-de-Grace, Saint-Etienne-du-Mont, the Sorbonne, etc.

1. It included the Premonstratensians, the Cordeliers, Notre-Dame, Saint-Séverin, Saint-Germain Abbey, the Jacobins, the Theatines, the Carmelites

shoeless, etc.

2. Comprising: Faubourg Saint-Martin, Trinité, Grenéta, les Carmelites, Filles-Dieu, Saint-Martin-des-Champs, Red Children, the Fathers Nazareth.

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Michel, rue de Bretagne.

Salomon, rue de Bretagne.

Salomon, Faubourg Saint-Martin.

Deer, Faubourg Saint-Laurent.

May, rue Fontaine-au-Roi.

Wolff, rue Beaubourg.

Trénel fils, r. Grenier-St-Lazare.

Moyse, rue Saint-Martin.

Emmanuel »

– Salomon Ulmann, r. Geoffroy-Langevin.

Zacharie, rue Saint-Martin.
Manuel, rue des Vieilles-Etuves.
Simon, Faubourg Saint-Denis.
Jacob the elder, rue Meslée, 68.
Calm the young person, bd. St-Martin.

165

Mayer Calmer, bd. of the Opera.
Jacob cadet, rue Meslée.
Merchant, rue de Bondy.
Merchant, r. St-Benoît, Enclosure
Saint-Martin.
Schweitzer, rue Saint-Martin.
Oury, corporal (Grenéta).
Philippe, corporal, fg St-Denis, 23.
If we " "
Mayer, sergeant (10th good, 3rd company),
Speyer, sergeant major, r. Geoffroy-Langevin.
Rodrigue, sergeant major (10° b™, 4th company),
Lallemand, second lieutenant., r. of Ménilmontant Road.
Homberg, Lieut. (10th good, 3rd company).

Company of paid hunters: Malher, corporal.

Fourth division!

Abraham, passage of the Salmon.
Ulmer, rue Tiquetonne, 10.
Astruc, rue de la Poterie. Zimmermann, rue Poissonnière.
Lyon, rue de Cléry, 71. Lazare. |

Baer, corporal, Marché aux Poirées (5th battalion, 4th company).

Alcan, second lieutenant, rue Platrière, Hôtel Ballion (5th battalion, 4th company).

D'Acosta, captain, rue Bergère (10th battalion, 3rd company of the Center).

Bidermann, rue des Jeûneurs.
Dacosta, rue Bergère.

Appointed: Mayer (5th battalion, 3rd company of the Center).
Salomon, rifleman.
Mayer, company of paid hunters.
Munck, gunner. –
Joseph Schneider, hunter.

1. Comprising: Saint-Jacques-l'Hôpital, Saint-Leu, Saint-Opportun, Saint-Jacques-la-Boucherie, Saint-Eustache, Saint-Magloire, Saint-Joseph.

166 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Fifth division!

Schuler, Faubourg St-Antoine. Lallemand, rue Saint-Avoie.
Haas, rue Saint-Louis. Simon fils, rue Basfroie.
Portcullis, rue du roi de Sicile.
Sion, rue de la Tixanderie.
Koch, Quai Pelletier.

Mayer, rue de Lappe.
Simon, corporal, rue Saint-Paul.

Caen, rue Saint-Antoine. Lallemand, Lieut. old street of Esther, rue des Jardins. Temple.
Lion, rue des Barres-St-Paul. May, second lieutenant. (40 bo, 3rd company).
Grenadiers on sale: Mayer.
May.

Sixth division 2

Schwartz, rue de l'Arbre-Sec, 76. Wolff, r. of the Mint, pomegranate.

Salomon, rue de Valois. will.

May, rue Saint-Honoré. 'Heimann, rifleman, place des Ettinghausen, rue de Rohan. Trois-Maris.

Mainz, rue Saint-Nicaise. Simon, rifleman, rue des ditches

Sion, rue Croix-des-Petits-Salom, rifleman, rue Boucher.
Champs, 12. Wolff » r.dela Monnaie.

Mantel, rue des Vieilles-Etuves. Simon » »

May, rue de Sart, 58. Astruc » rue Boucher.

Simon, rue Grange-Batelière. Cain » Porte St-Honoré,

Schwartz » Cerf » Fg.St-Honoré, 14.

Marx, sergeant (8° good, 3¢ company), Simon, sergeant (grenad. vol.),

Calmer, sergeant major, grenade. 33, Royal Palace.
volont., rue de Choiseul, 13. Judein, sergeant (grenad. vol.), 11, rue d'Argenteuil.

Company of paid hunters: Mayer, lieutenant.
Cavalry » Mayer, sub-brigadier.

1. It included: Faubourg Saint-Antoine, place Royale; Street
Saint-Antoine, Saint-Louis-de-Culture, Blancs-Manteaux, Popincourt,
Marshes, etc. |

2. It included: the Oratory, the Feuillants, the Filles Saint-Thomas, Saint-Philippe-du-Roule, Saint-Germain-l'Auxerrois, Saint-Honoré, Saint-Roche, etc. See. also for Jewish soldiers, National Archives,
F13/783.

CIVILITY OF THE JEWS 167

It is therefore an incontestable truth that the Jews of Paris did not wait until they were recognized as active citizens to fulfill their duty to the homeland. However their devotion became even more keen when under the regime of arbitrary rule followed the reign of equality and justice for all.
Even foreigners did their service like citizens French'. In all the sections where they resided, the Jews of Paris had the honor of bearing arms. Some even raised free companies. The captain d'Acosta, whom we cited earlier, commanded a company that bore his name. Wasn't it also a Jew, this Rosenthal who was at the head of the legion as well named and who was for a long time responsible for the custody of:
Temple? ? |

But their patriotism was not limited to domestic service from the country. They ran to the borders and fought also for the integrity of the national soil. When the homeland was declared in danger, they did not hesitate to leave everything for the defend.

In Strasbourg, – we must always cite the example of the Jews Alsations, who were accused of never wanting to comply with military service, – in Strasbourg, in March 1793, he presented himself for enlistment twenty-three citizens, among whom there are had eight Jews. At the same time, it was rumored that the enemy moves forward and moves towards the Rhine which he will cross. It was a Saturday. We beat the general. All the city is under arms. The Jews are at their post; they there stay all day. It is, for those who do not know them

1. National Archives, F7, 2185. – Register of the Revolutionary Committee of the Lombard Section. |

2. Arch, nat., F13/783.

3. Id., F7, 2486. |

4. The Universal Abbreviator, extract from the Jacobins session, no. 86:

168 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

there is no birth, an astonishment that they take up arms “on their sabbath day”. And we see it naively in. the press!, |

And yet the hatreds do not disarm. We learn to Paris, in October 1793, that the department of Meurthe issued a decree “which condemned him to deportation. the entire Jewish nation? “. It is read at a meeting of the Society of the Jacobins, who gets up indignant. Leonard Bourdon did so. the interpreter of the horror that such a barbaric act inspired in everyone bare: he energetically condemned a measure contrary to the law, in that it submitted to a general decision an entire: class of people, – contrary to justice, to humanity, to the very interest of the country, – since, said Bourdon, “there is at the moment in our armies there are at least 2,000 Jews, who conduct themselves there with honor and patriotism. It is to do, he added, the greatest harm to the nation than to deprive it of faithful and courageous citizens 3.”

Acts of bravery and heroism were reported even, which they had accomplished in front of the enemy.

We have already told the life of this Jewish engraver 4, Jean-Henry Simon, who, faced with threats of invasion, threw dormouse from him his chisel and left for the border with the battalion of the Butte-des-Moulins. Appointed to command a compa-genius of hunters, he made the first campaigns of the Champagne and Belgium under the orders of General Du-- die, who named him, in Saint-Amand, lieutenant-colonel

t. Le Courrier francais, n° 19, of March 20, 1793.

2. Le Journal de la Mon'agne, n° 143, October 1793; – The Abbreviator-universal, no. 298 (excerpt from the Jacobins session); – The Journal of: Jacobins, n° 520; – The Annals of the French Republic, No. 301.

3. Id. |

4. The Israelite Universe, n° 22 and 23, 51st year: A Jewish engraver in 16th century.

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS 469

from a frank company. After being noticed in several dangerous encounters, he was injured while fighting in Anderlecht and Boncoux, and returned to Paris in 1793 to “se recovering from an injury to his left hand! “. Descended rue de Grenelle, 28, in the house of citizen Chaussard, he was apprehended, as an accomplice of Dumouriez, by Îles members of the Supervisory Committee of the section of the Wheat Market. But it was requested by the Butte section. des-Moulins, who “did justice to the civic virtues of citizen Simon... formerly captain of the hunters of the Butte-des-Moulins section. He was only released a few months later, saved from the scaffold by his bravery and his patriotic conduct.

How many traits of brilliance have, like this one, remained in oblivion! And how many valiant actions could be attributed to the Jews, if, instead of doing history, we did gazette, and if we counted as Jews men whose at least the name has a Jewish ending! Like the general Sepher, André Mayer, officer attached to the headquarters of Far-river of the Rhine in the time of Custine, Becker, adjutant general near the army of the Moselle...

– But we do not want to honor the much-maligned Jews

only traits that can rightfully be attributed to them.
steamed. -

As such, we simply transcribe here the acts of military courage, by which two or three of them distinguished:

On the day of August 10, 1792, "a federate from Nancy,
Mr. Lang comes forward to parley with the Swiss;

4. National Archives, F7 4752.

170 THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

as he knows German, he maintains them in an idiom who is known to them; he encourages several to meet at the good citizens; a dozen had already gone to his invitation tion..., this scene took place while externally we threw cartridges at citizens to group them in order to to draw a more frightening number... It is in this tumult, in the middle of a very deadly rolling fire, that Mr. Lang,
after having two comrades killed next to him, escapes...
sliding along the walls..., rushes with five so many brave ones; he rushes with them on the traitors; three perish under his blows; the standard bearer of the Swiss succeeds combe, and Mr. Lang snatches from him the sign that bravery
only give up with life... » |

In 1793, two remarkable traits of value were carried aware of the Convention. Here is one of those facts:
"At the capture of the town of Pornic, citizen Henriquez, ca-volunteer nunner aged sixteen, served a room of cannon; fifty shots could not make him leave his battery ; lying on his cannon, he burned from time to time some primers and thus remained in front of the enemy for more than three quarters of an hour: forced to give in to the multitude attackers, he pinned his cannon and retired last deny?,"

Finally, one wrote from Strasbourg in 1796: "We have here Astruc, brave corporal of the first battalion of the Pyrénéesborn. At a deal between Manheim and Heidelberg, remark-while several of his comrades, not knowing how to swim, perish, Astruc goes down to the water up to his shoulders; he held a small boat in his left hand, and in his right,
he grabbed his comrades as they fell into the

2. Annals of Mercier, No. CII, April 12, 1793.

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS 171

river, and brought them back on board. He was seized by a sudden cold get out of the water, and since then, his legs have been crippled. Astruc is one of the two soldiers who obtained the sum of 50,000 pounds intended by a citizen of Bordeaux for finest feats of arms! »

This is where we want to close this chapter.

Civic virtues, humanity, patriotic sacrifices, self-sacrifice gation of oneself: these are the qualities of which some Jews demonstrated and which raised "the Jewish nation" in the eyes of all.

It is true, glory is personal; but, we must repeat it constantly, we must not hesitate to honor all from the patriotism of a few, when out of hatred, by envy, by slander, we include all the followers of a same religion in – the same feeling of disapproval for the vice or crime of one.

4. Annals of Mercier, n° 209, of 29 Germinal year IV. – During forced borrowing, a citizen had protested against excessive taxation sive which was imposed on him. He won his case and spent the sum unduly demanded to reward heroic acts of war.

THIRD PART

TERROR

FIRST CHAPTER

THE CULT OF REASON

Here then are the Jews – and particularly the Jews of Paris – in the national guard, in the army, competing to the surveillance of the city, to the defense of the country, and current, not only through their patriotic contributions ticks, but also their people. This attitude con- definitely won the sympathies of the people. The nation does not

its hopes, its joys, its pains. |

Moreover, their fusion in society gradually pushes them to follow the march of the Revolution, to cross its various stages, to accept the consequences: they are as if caught in the gear that involves all those that the misery, slavery, suffering are instinctively carried towards the great liberator. They appear in all parties, in the moderate camps as well as the extreme factions. But wherever they are, they are committed to being good and loyal patriots. All, in fact, are now thrown into the melee, dominated by a feeling of deep gratitude for the Revolution which definitively took them out of service study. |

174 TERROR

Already, full of faith in a better future, they had lent the oath of loyalty to the Constitution of 1789. They were not no less quick to swear homage to the Constitution of Year I. "Live free or die!" the revolutionary cry of moment became their personal cry. They proclaim it as Jewish and like French.

Everywhere, following the example of the Republicans, they are asking "to live as free men", to "regenerate", following the expression so frequently used at that time.

In Alsace, near Colmar, the Jews of Witzenheim requested the municipality to be admitted to the provision of civic oath'. In Strasbourg, the newspapers announce as Marx Berr, Baruch Berr, his brother, Samuel Seligmann, | Alexandre and Wolf Lévi, his brothers-in-law, "permeated with the time of the freedom and rights that they would enjoy under his empire", take an oath and cry: "Live free or die ?! »

In Paris, the registers of the Revolutionary Committees keep many traces of this act of faith accomplished by the Jews: "I swear to be faithful to the Nation, to maintain equality, freedom, and to die defending them. » Berr Ratisgood, Jacob Salomon, Silz, L. Alcan signed on the book of Section 92, next to Carra and Girey-Dupré, two of the most valiant journalists of that time.

In the Réunion section, names abound. It is Isaac Raphaël, Salomon Jacob, Samson Isaac, Pacra, Jacob Nathan, Joseph Lévy, Bernard Lévy, Aron Schmoll, Lazare

1. Le Courrier français, n° 30, of January 30, 1792.
2. The Chronicle of Paris (Supplement), No. 48, February 25, 1792.
3. National Archives, F7 2483.

THE CULT OF REASON 175

Oppenheimer', and the citizenship certificates which are given to them delivered prove that their protest of devotion is not not a vain word. | |

In the same section, in fact, the committee decides, the 42 ventôse an IT, "that it will be written to the Supervisory Committee

d'Hazebrouck, in order to urge him to release the citizen Salomon Jacob, motivated by the fact that it is nothing to us succeeded against him and that his company returned us a good account of his conduct..."

From 22 Ventôse: "The Committee, deliberating and considering the request from citizen Joseph Bernard, rue Grenier-Lazare, No. 670, orders that he will be given a citizenship certificate, given his patriotism..."

From the 17th: "The Committee, deliberating on the request that it said Citizen Bernard, rue Michel-le-Pelletier, after examination of the documents he carries, which announce his good conduct and his patriotism attested by almost the entire committee, orders that a certificate of civic-mindedness to show him reason. »

From 18 Messidor: "The Committee, deliberating, decides that it will be written to the established authorities of Troyes to the effect that it is not never reached our committee any complaint against the citizen Cerf-Lyon, that on the contrary he has always shown himself good patriot and good republican 2,"

Joseph Allemand, Abraham Azur, Lazard, Louis Spire, actor, Joseph Weill..., many others, move on to purification or censorship, and emerge pure from the crucible. Not everyone had this satisfaction. There were some suspects, who, for incivility, for stock trading or even for royalty

4. National Archives, F7, 2494.
2. National Archives, F7 2495.

lism were without hesitation thrown overboard. We We'll find some of them later.

The Jews of Paris therefore fell into line. Nothing no longer separates them from other citizens, because the Republic no longer knows no more "sect"; she only knows patriots.
One day, a decree of the Society was denounced to the Jacobins of Nancy tending to expel the Jews from the Republic. There meeting declares that "the Republic no longer knows the word Jewish, since it no longer serves to name a people, but a sect; but the Republic no longer knows sects and claims to deport sectarians only when they disturb order social ". i

The Church could not watch such a spectacle indifferently.
Distraught, deeply troubled in the decline of her rights, her prestige, her power, she sought yet to stay above the ever-rising flood which would soon engulf it, continuing to attack the Jews and Protestants, to whom she attributed her discredit and his fall. She still believes in her recovery, seems ignore the sans-culottes and count on the remains of his power to once again dominate France: "The counterrevolution will therefore not be difficult; she is all the more assured that, on all our borders, as in the international laughing, with the exception of Protestants, Jews and bandits revolutionaries, the inhabitants of the countryside desire it and ask for it." »

And she ingeniously explains her plan: "As soon as the counterrevolution will be made, all Jews will be expelled from France and

4. Le Journal des Jacobins, n° 523, of the 8th day of the 2nd month of year II. ;

2. La Rocambole or Journal des honnetes gens, n° 3, January 8, 1792.

THE CULT OF REASON 177

the Protestants who will not pay a mark of gold in contribution Bution!

But it is the Jews especially who hate him. We could wonder, in 1790 and 1791, if his relentlessness

could be true when the clergy were able to take peach that they were granted citizenship rights. But when, after witnessing the triumph of Jewish rights, she saw when the law turned against her, her anger no longer knew of terminals. Over time, the question becomes all other. Religious fanaticism is confused with passion policy. It's no longer "the deicidal people" that she wants strike, but the race which blends into the French race and increases the number and value of his enemies.

It places the responsibility for decisions on them.
taken by the Constituent and the Legislative Assembly against her, as if they could have exerted pressure or any influence on one or the other of these "legislatures". The decrees issued against the clergy to strip them of its property for the benefit of the nation, to annihilate its self-rity on "sensitive" souls, to hit him in his ministers themselves, shake the Church to its foundations.
The abolition of tithes of all kinds, the sending of money
terie of churches at the Mint, the sale of ecclesiastical goods siastics are all formidable blows. When the April 13, 1790, the National Assembly refused to adopt the motion from Dom Gerle and to recognize the Catholic cult, apostolic and Roman as the dominant religion of the state,
she understood that she no longer had anything to expect from the movement.
revolutionary movement which had excited the nation

1. La Rocambole, according to the Universal and Impartial Reviser, No. 69, of June 40, 1792.

12

178 TERROR

whole, and which she hoped to direct as she pleased. That day, definitively defeated, she tried to rouse the people.
But the people roared. The defenders of the altar ran the greatest life risks at the end of this famous assembly. Abbot Maury and the Viscount of Mirabeau, between others, were insulted, threatened, pressed by the shuddering crowd-health; Mirabeau, trying to make his way, pulled his sword, but he only escaped with great difficulty from the closest lantern close ; and Abbot Maury only owed his salvation to a Jew, serving gent of the national guard, who threw his "frock coat" on him shoulders. It was "nobly avenging the Jews of the opposition" tion that the Christian deputy attributed to the justice demanded by the entire Jewish nation! ".

Soon, however, the National Assembly sought to ministers themselves. The suspension of monastic vows which reduced their number, the payment of priests who reduced knows their character, the election of bishops which put them at power of the people, the civic oath imposed on the ecclesiastics and which put them at the level of other citizens, finally the decree against seditious and unsworn priests... all the fortresses of Catholicism fell one by one, collapsing in joy and hatred.

The decree of the Directory of Paris, which ordered the sale of non-parish churches, made them available to anyone would like to buy them, even to celebrate a cult there on, and appointed a lay attendant to supervise the religious buildings of sworn priests, carried the last blow to his omnipotence. "So there you have it," cried Abbot Coutulaugh in the session where the National Assembly approved this

1. Le Journal de Paris, No. 106, April 16, 1790.

THE CULT OF REASON 179

arrested, "to the sound of the liveliest applause", that's it therefore we want to establish the abomination of desolation in the holy place! We propose to convert our temples into synagogues, mosques, Lutheran and religious temples

Baptists... What frightening and disastrous progress has not been been thinking for eighteen months!!..."

Religious newspapers joined in this protest, frightened not only by "this first act of perseverance" legal execution against Catholics", but also "to see a synagogue, a mosque, a Protestant temple, river read in the same street with a church." They took the darker predictions, and they who knew about "fanaticism" feared "the fanaticism of the people", feeling "that he would let Jews and Muslims exercise publicly in Paris their cult and that he would throw himself with fury on the churches of the Roman Catholics? ".

. These terrors, which Louis XVI shared, since he opposed his veto of the decree confirming this order of November 29, had no influence on the National Assembly. The Church and the King, on the one hand; the representatives of the people and the people, on the other: who would see their cause triumph? The Church

The Church is in the State, she said. and not the State in the Church. If it wants to be preserved and protected by the State, it must submit to the laws of the State. And, at the same time suddenly, she threatened to treat the ministers on the same footing of all religions, to pay them equal salaries to priests t.

Such decisions, such serious circumstances exasperate—

1. National Assembly or Courrier français, n° 128, May 1791.
2. Le Postillon par Calais, n° 410, of April 16, 1791, and L'Ami du roi, according to the Impartial Reviewer of the Pros and Cons, No. 48, of April 22, 1794.
3. The National Auditor, no. 60, of November 30, 1791.
4. National Assembly or Courrier français, n° 303, of October 30, 1791.

180 TERROR

herent the clergy. However, he had not reached the end of his setbacks, his sadness, his humiliations. There The Paris Commune soon took charge of putting the finishing touches to it.

To tell the truth, the attitude of the population made the task easier of the National Assembly. Skepticism of the 18th century had degenerated into religious indifference, and this state of mind would soon become atheism. The General Journal of France already noted this in 1790, and, strangely enough, it addressed the same reproach to the Jews as, until then, the Church accused with an almost barbaric fervor. " They are not anymore these hard-headed men, lasted a long time; they no longer have this obstinacy and tenacity in their religious opinions who characterized them; they dispense without scruple from these practices that we regard as meticulous and ridiculous, and which they regarded as sacred and very obligatory for their conscience. » And he concluded — Was it a presentiment or a bout of bad temper? — that in ten years, Catholic priests, Protestant ministers and rabbis would have infinitely lost their credit!.

This gazetteer, so well advised, was only mistaken in a few years. The truth is that little by little the passions religious and civil were exalted, and that the obstinacy that put the Church to defend its ancient power, the Republic blique responded with even greater determination to defend its new conquests. The patriots traced then, in their clubs, a very dark picture of the harmful influence of priests who, "wrapped in the sacred mantle of own interests, bringing trouble and terror everywhere? ".

1. The Journal général de France, n° 92, of April 2, 1790.
2. The Universal Mercury, Society of Friends of the Constitution, t. XV, No. 444, of May 147, 1792.

THE CULT OF REASON 181

Such a portrait must have opened the eyes of those less clear-indicator lights. But the Church did not want to see anything: only refraction silence the powerful movement of ideas and passions, she had to be crushed in the struggle.

Once again, the Paris Commune brought all its efforts. Besides, she only had to complete the work that the three legislatures had successively accomplished.

It first prohibits the closure of theaters during the Easter fortnight. "When France was bending under a dominant religion, the police lieutenant could well make a law with the priests. But, when a Constitution protects all religions as well as all opinions, it is people alone to order festivals, the festivals of the fatherland'. » She then regulated the processions, leaving each cun the freedom to tension or not to tension the houses, to keep the store open or closed; then, tackling the priests, forbade them to wear religious costume outside temples. "All types of masquerades are prohibited speechless," said Chaumette. And he asked that the patrols were authorized "to arrest any individual who carries a weird costume? ". And, to ensure this decree all its execution, the Council of the Commune made known, a few days later, to "rabbis, Greek priests, protesters tans, Catholics and others", that it would be forbidden to them to exercise their worship outside consecrated buildings 3. It is forbidden finally to all merchants to close shop, "the days hereinafter called Sundays", under penalty of being looked at

s

as suspects and prosecuted as such. Only the

. The Mercury, t. XIII, n° 392, of March 27, 1792. Letter from P. Manuel

2. The Universal Abbreviator, No. 283, of October 40, 1793.
3. The Annals of the French Republic, No. 295, October 19, 1739.

182 TERROR

decade days could be religiously observed.

But it was not enough to hit the Church in its living works. The Commune wanted to lower its prestige by analogy and comparison. She put, with perseverance—particular rance, the Catholics in opposition to the Protestants and Jews. The Church could not, at that moment, only blame her for the poor posture she was in, because she had never missed the opportunity, pretending to sacrificed to Jews and Protestants, to imagine the paintings the most deceptive of the privileges granted to its detriment to non-Catholic religions, deliberative assemblies, sections, clubs, patriotic societies, in turn used this detestable process of belittling.

Already in 1791, when it came to imposing the oath civic to priests, François de Neufchâteau, rapporteur of the Legislation Committee, had in brief but precise terms, asked the question and reproached the Church for its insubordination: "No other cult," he cried, "presents this system of resistance to the law. Protestants, Jews, have maxims religious beliefs different from ours; but they are subject to the law, but they respect all constituted authorities!. » And he added: "See if they do not obey the magistrates; see if their ministers refuse to take the civic oath; see if they abhor the proposal to share the sorrows like the property of the company?. » A few months ago, the Friends of the Constitution were already speaking out against the rebellion of the Church and proclaimed that they would "respect" the Jews and the Protestants who would come to establish their worship in France, but that they would not tolerate "factious...

1. The National Auditor, no. 60, of November 30, 1791.
2. The Journal of the second legislature, no. 59, of November 29, 1791.

THE CULT OF REASON g 183

priests refractory to the law who want to make the people believe that obedience to the law is a religious crime'. »

The Commune in turn used this argument. When after

National Guard provided its assistance, it formulated this truth "that armed force does not belong to any religion". – "Would it be worthy of a free people and friend of reason," wrote the mayor of Paris, to force a Jew or one who professes any other religion, to take part in the ceremonies of Catholic worship? Couldn't this Jew answer you: Tomorrow, my brothers will walk in pomp in the streets with the external marks of their worship, and, by reciprocal procity, I ask for them what you demanded of Me; the law must be equal for all. »

The situation of the Jews that the Church wanted to pass off as privileged lasted a short time. The struggle of civil power against the Catholic Church soon reached the churches of all cults. The Jacobin Society was on the agenda on the decree of Nancy tending to the expulsion of the Jews from the kingdom, "motivated by the fact that she knows no other religion than that of freedom and equality? » ; Manuel, the prosecutor of the Commune, wrote to the general commander of the forces of Paris, by blaming "the sentinels of the Constitution who, under the gun, force the citizen to bend, his head uncovered green, before the priest who carries his God in his hands": "it is finally permitted to no longer believe in the hunting of Geneviève that on the Sabbath, because a priest does not have more than privileges on the consciences of a rabbi?..." ; and Chau-put, in turn, required, on 3 Frimaire year II, the

- . The Universal Mercury, April 24, 1791.
- . Le Journal des Jacobins, n° 523.
- . Le Courrier français, n° 131, dated May 10, 1792.

Lo 10 =>

DCS TRE eet

184 TERROR

immediate closure of "all churches or temples in whatever religion or cult they may be in Paris." All person who requests the opening of a temple must be arrested as a suspect'. Catholic worship then seems yield to force. He is content to claim for himself "the freedom of the Jew and the Protestant to meet in society particular and to celebrate their worship as they judge suitable ?, "

eruption erupts, passionate, furious, on both sides. It is not no more question of the Church, of its goods, of its privileges, of his ministers. The spirit of the nation has been transformed. It's here very religion which is discussed, desecrated, denied. We want replace faith in a God with faith in the religion of freedom and equality: the cult of Reason was born.

We then witness a painful spectacle. The refractive priests silences hide, the constitutional priests lose everything courage and all dignity. Under the violent pressure of Commune, at the injunctions of the people, they abjure "the state" ministers of religion 3; we encourage them, we force them to "depretrising". Every ecclesiastic who abandons his letters of priesthood, has well deserved humanity and truth, "Morality is everything; worship is nothing."

We then see the priests crowding at the bar of the Convention, renounce the priesthood, declare that "the peoples will be happy only when there is no longer either priest or king on the ground ". They ask for civic baptism, in order to

1. Chaumette claimed that this decree had been taken in his absence; and he denied him. But the order of the Commune nevertheless remained.
2. The Universal Mercury, n° 100, vol. XXXIV, from 45 Frimaire year II.
3. The Universal Abbreviator, No. 314, 20 Brumaire Year II.
- 4, The Universal Abbreviator, no. 313.

THE CULT OF REASON 185

regenerate. They no longer believe "in any religion except that of virtue and the country! ".

The cult of Reason is celebrated throughout the kingdom. Of all sides the patriots swear not to have any other objects of worship as freedom, equality, truth, homeland, reason. Bishop Gobel, giving the signal for abjuration, lends himself to a shameful masquerade, in the famous session of 17 Brumaire at the Convention, and dances the Carmagnole, the bonnet red on the head. This earned him the title of "man free regenerated". Following his example, "the priests hasten on all sides to admit that they were only the organs of imposture, harlequins, pierrots, who put the men to live at their expense? ".

More priests, hence more churches. "The shop of mée 3. On 14 Brumaire, the prosecutor of the Commune requested that the gold and silver found in religious buildings be brought to the Mint. All sections come solemnly affirm to the Convention that, no longer wanting priests, they no longer want saints, images, confessionals which furnish the buildings in their neighborhoods. One after the other the Revolutionary Committees bring to the Convention the remains of their temples: Saint Roch, Saint Marcel, Saint Crépin, whom the Markets section sends in paradise "to make shoes for his comrades the saints", Saint Madeleine "to mourn her faults", parade, a last time before the representatives of the people before pass to the creiset. The Convention then became the theater

1. The Cult of Reason and the Cult of the Supreme Being, by F.-A. Bacon (Paris, 1892).

2. La Gaïe!e française, n° 688, dated 28 Brumaire, year II.

3 The universal Aoresialeur, n° 314.

186 TERROR

of the most grotesque scenes, which almost compromised his greatness and dignity.

The momentum @irreligion was given. He won over the citizens of all religions. Protestants and Jews did not escape not to contagion. The sans-culottes rejoiced. " The God fierce of Israel, the implacable Jehovah, the equivocal God of Christians, the gods of all nations will therefore bow down their superb heads before the sole divinity of men free, the Reason of all time; so they will all escape gloat like vain ghosts to the beneficial aspect of God of nature and freedom'. » Everyone's eyes finally open; everyone now laughs at their old mistakes and tramples under foot that which he has worshipped. "The Catholic, the Jew, the Protestant, whom a difference of opinion and worship divided for so many centuries, happily united, do not recognize no other divinity than freedom, nature, reason?..." "All now have no worship other than the love of freedom and homeland 3. » |

On 23 Brumaire, Maron, Protestant minister of religion, had presented himself before the Commune, in the name of the "Consistory of the Religious Society of Protestants of Paris". He had read a decree authorizing him to deposit "as an offering patriotic the four cups or chalices, the only pieces of art gentry employed in his worship." All citizens agree ternity, inseparable companions of freedom 4.

The citizens, "known under the name of Jews", began,

- . Le Batave, n° 286, 8 frimaire year II.
- . La Gazette française, n° 688, dated 28 Brumaire year II.
- . The universal Mercury, t. 34, n° 98, of 2 Frimaire year II.
- . The Universal Abbreviator, from 23 Brumaire Year II.
- . La Gazette française, n° 705, 15 frimaire year II.

This was GO ND

THE CULT OF REASON 187

they too, live up to the principles. He was assured of different rents sides.

In Avignon, they had brought to the department "all leg machines of gold and silver" which were used for their worship'. HAS Buxviller and Ingwiller, in Alsace, where the churches were "metamorphosed into temples of Reason", the first speaker who presents himself is a Jew?. In Metz, everything recalls a public worship is overthrown. "The Tables of Moses suffered the same fate. The laws of this clever imposter, written on skin, will be used for drums to beat charge and knock down the walls of a new Jericho 3."

No one, it is said, was affected by it, except "a few women whose the mind will be imbued with stupid prejudices for a long time to come." HAS Nancy, on the injunctions of the municipal officer Bigerot, the Jews had to make an offering of their "mystical charters",
as well as all gold or silver effects, furniture, ornaments
ments, emblems, which served their cult >. – Finally the representative of the people, Lequinio, recounted with satisfaction that in Rochefort, Saint-Jean-d'Angély, etc., the Jews abjured retaliated, as publicly as the others, the lies of their priests and dedicated their books of impostures to fires of the patriotic pyres which carried into the air the purifying flames of Reason. |

The Jews of Paris did not stay behind. " Is it possible ? The Jews have also become reasonable. THE circumcised people, this harsh people who, our priests said,

- . The Batave, n° 347, of 9 Pluviôse year II.
- . Le Courrier republicain, n° 100, dated 19 Pluviôse year II.

Id.

- . Israeli archives, year 1844, p. 415.
- . The War of the Vendée and the Chouans, by Lequinio. Paris, year III.

Oot to © ND 1

188 TERROR

had been struck by eternal blindness, this nation, separated of all other nations, becomes enlightened and reconciled with us by his wisdom and by his generosity!. " Newspapers celebrated this great event and proclaimed that now holding that the Jews truly deserved to be part of the French nation: "They declare themselves citizens, fraternize with us, think like us, act like us?. »

Indeed, the temples were stripped of their riches, undoubtedly closed their doors, and the only two schoolmasters that the Jews then had in Paris, Aron Polonais and Jacob Cahen, led their students on the days of decade, at the temple of Reason è.

The first synagogue to appear at the Convention was that of rue des Boucheries, n° 94, in the Faubourg Saint-Germain. She brought "the spoils of her little temple", on 21 Brumaire year JI, and the deputation which was received at the barre exclaimed: "Our fathers transmitted to us laws emanating born from the top of a mountain; those you give to the France emanate, from a mountain that we do not worship less. We come to thank him 4, »

The 22nd of Brumaire, a scene of the same kind, but more theatrical, performed at the council of the Commune.

Before reading the minutes, the Revolution Committee—leader of the Reunion section brought to the General Council general of the Commune, crosses, chalices, suns, banners nières, etc., objects belonging to the former Jewish and Catholic. Members of the deputation observed

. La Feuille de Paris, n° 504, dated 24 Brumaire year II.

Id.

. The Israelite Universe, year 1864–1865, p. 159.

. Le Journal de la Montagne, No. 163. – History of religious sects gieuses, by Grégoire, t. IT], p. 421.

mw IN Pr

THE CULT OF REASON 159

Advice that, among the objects deposited, there were a few who belonged to individuals of the sect Jewish; They asked what side they should take with regard to these objects. Various proposals were made.
– What happened then? The newspapers are sober in their cations in this regard. All we know is that at one certain moment “the discussion began to become oral geuse! D.

Citizen Jacob Benjamin “of the religion of Moses, Abraham and Jacob”, quickly put an end to it by asking the name of his co-sectaries, to no longer be seen as belonging belonging to this or that sect, but as French citizens.
As for himself, he willingly renounced, for the benefit of the nation,
all the objects that could belong to him. The board general applauds strongly the philosophical expressions of citizen Benjamin and his disinterestedness, stopped the civic mention in the minutes, and Benjamin received preside over the fraternal kiss.

A member of the Revolutionary Committee of the section of the Meeting paid tribute to the patriotic and enlightened zeal of the formerly Jewish citizens of the Réunion district;
almost all of them, he said, had anticipated the wishes of the Committee revolutionary, by bringing all the relics themselves and the ornaments to which the jugglers attached so much of importance, among others the famous screed which, it is said, belonged to Moses, and which his descendants carried, from father to son, until today.

The Council similarly stopped the civic mention of all these citizens, ordered that all the objects deposited would be taken immediately to the. Currency, in accordance to the decrees of the Convention, without excluding the "screed" of Moses.

The president then sang the anthem of the Marseillais, the refrain of which all the citizens repeated. The Revolutionary took all the saints, chalices, etc., to the cheers from the entire assembly!

Individuals, – even if it is conviction, training or religious skepticism? – did not resist this movement ment "philosophical". We even cite a "Jewish priest?" ", Salomon Hesse, who, on 20 Brumaire, declared that he "no longer no god other than that of freedom, no other belief than that of equality", and placed on the desk of the Assembly general of the section of Friends of the Fatherland "the stuff and gallons of silver fabrics of its Judaic ornaments. [L accompanied his offering with an address where he declared himself happy to place his "Judaic rattles", which had "only served to hide the truth to men longer." The Assembly congratulated; the president gave him a fraternal hug; men-civic recognition of this offering was made in the minutes, and the address, printed in twelve hundred copies, was sent to the sections, popular societies and constitutional authorities killed 5.

I] must not believe, however, that the Jews of Paris would have so completely renounced the practices of their religion. If the exercise of their worship was, as among the Catholics,

1. Posters of the Paris Commune, n° 140, of 22 Brumaire Year II. – Political News, National and Foreign, No. 347, November 13 November 1793. – Journal de la Montagne, No. 1, from Brumaire an II.

2. Bibl. Nat., Mss. Fr. NA 2704.

3. National Archives. – Extract from the deliberations of the Assembly general of the section of Friends of the Fatherland, of 20 Brumaire, of the second year of the one and indivisible Republic.

not to risk their lives, they had to openly abandon their modest temples and the few "brimborons" which adorned them; if they had, so as not to be suspects, transported in some way the apparent observance from Saturday to decad, however, they continued to remain Jewish. . And this tenacity in their religious fervor failed them be fatal. Suddenly, in fact, the leaves to the devotion of sans-culottes came to "sound the tocsin against abuse"

ul, they wrote, "outrages nature".

9 9 D

Citizens known as Jews are said to be still in the custom of circumcising newborns. We ensure also that children of a delicate complexion perish suddenly wind of the consequences of this operation. The law of circumcision, necessitates knowing perhaps in the countries where it was made, is useless in our climates. To observe it here is to outrage nature; And humanity protests against this pious barbarity. Without doubt the reason, in its rapid march, would soon overthrow before it this sacred abuse of which the religion of the Jews makes a precept to its cultists; but, before the error is dissipated, how many Can children perish as victims of this Jewish observance? This object, which interests society, has not yet fixed the attention of our legislators. We need a precise law that protects descendants in Abraham to circumcise male children. It is not undermine the freedom of religious opinions; it's scattered cause involuntary crimes to men whom the blindfold of superstition prevents us from seeing the light.

The Convention, it must be said to its praise, did not respond to the injunctions made to him. Besides, there was no in this ritual precept nothing which, if it upset the feelings-

1. The Leaf of Public Salvation, n° 130, octidi of the second decade of brumaire year II (November 1793).

192 TERROR

elements of humanity of a few sensitive souls, could carry ter infringement of laws or decrees concerning the exercise audience of worship.

[is even to presume that these clamors did not frighten not the Jews too much. [they gave, in fact, proof

tion of religiosity was an immediate reason for suspicion. Gold we know that every suspect was on the verge of the guillotine. This perspective did not prevent Moise Pimentel, from the section of Marat, to ask the Paris Commune, on Pluviôse 16 an II, the flour needed to make unleavened bread.

Here is his letter. She is curious in more ways than one.

Our August Senate, he writes, has, by its decree, admitted freedom cults. The Israelites, recognized as French citizens, are in the custom, for eight days of each year, of eating only unleavened bread, prepared by their hands.

Citizen Moise Pimentel, from the Marat section, undertook responsible for the supply of bread which is consumed during these 8 days, ask you, citizen mayor, that he be allowed to buy the quantity of 24 septiers of wheat, which he will grind; and in the event that he cannot obtain this quantity in kind, that you, citizen mayor, authorize him to purchase the number of 8 bags of flour weighing 325 pounds. These 24 septiers of bread, or these 8 bags of flour are enough for the food of 220 Israelites, which would consume 2,517 pounds among bakers weighing ordinary bread instead of during this week, in which the Israelites handle their flour, they do not use than 1,264 pounds weighing: the difference is therefore 1,253 pounds, which are distributed among consumers; and so, citizen mayor, to convince you of the purity of the feelings of the Israelites, of their submission to the laws, of their zeal for everything that tends to the public good, citizen Pimentel proposes to ensure its employment in the section.

Signed: PIMENTEL, cul-de-sac-du-paon!.

1. Le Journal de la Montagne, n° 85, dated 18 Pluviôse year II.

THE CULT OF REASON 193

A member of the Council asked for the agenda pure and simple, and another the referral to the administration of subsistences.

A third says that it would be granting a privilege to a sect, which was against the laws. He was of the opinion that we sent Pimentel to appeal to his section, which he would present himself as having to provide bread to a certain number of citizens, without any mention of the sect to which he proposed to provide it.

A fourth finally observed that it would be to renew customary to make wafers; moreover, according to a decree of the Commune, only a kind of bread ; and it is on this ground that the Council issued the order of day !.

We know that Robespierre put an end to this lugubrious comedy of the cult of Reason. The 1st Frimaire Year II, the dictator, Jacobins, recalled that it was not in vain that the Constitution had proclaimed the declaration of human rights in the presence of the Supreme Being. The idea of a great Being who watches over oppressed innocence and punishes crime triumphantly phant smiled at this dark mystic who exclaimed: "If God did not exist, it would have to be invented. »

The cult of Reason succumbed. The Supreme Being was born ! But terror continued to dominate all souls.

1.. The Mountain Journal, n° 85.

PE

13

CHAPTER It

JUSTICE

It would be madness to say that the Jews of Paris, during this deeply troubled period, all gave proof of incontestable civic and moral virtues. There was, in fact, alongside great dedication, acts of self-sacrifice and sacrifice to the homeland, failures which moved public opinion public or came under the jurisdiction of the country's justice system.

The truth is that they were neither better nor worse than their fellow citizens. To judge things impartially, it is necessary make allowances for time, passions and the state of society. Now trouble was everywhere, confusion in all ranks Population. As the days grew longer threatening, the lofty idea of homeland no longer dominated alone exalted souls. Egoism was reborn. Each, without denying absolutely the interests of the country, thought of its interests clean. Enthusiasm in action gave way to empty and sonorous sentences. And we thought that we had to live.

trait more than with fear. The assignats, created to suppleer, had fallen into disrepute. The most selfless among the patriots hid their property, buried, to a more secure future, what cash or money they had jewelry.

JUSTICE _ 195

The press was angry with the Jews of Avignon who,
it was said in 1793, had "imagined a pleasant way of protect their cash from any requisition." An epi-
The epidemic suddenly seemed to afflict "the ancient people of God ". We only saw "mosaic" funerals; but the coffins weighed more than usual. The carriers succumbed under the burden. This became suspicious. A day that they were making a convoy of this kind, the people, struck from the gravity of the corpse, stops the convoy, opens the beer and finds her full of money. A search was made in the summit-tier and a "large quantity" of gold was discovered there. " All these dead" were sent to the Mint to be "resurrected cited "for the benefit of the nation".

- We know with what harshness the conventionalists reproach themselves share their fortune so quickly acquired, in front of the "impartials" and the "monarchians" that these bitter criticism greatly rejoiced. On all sides, in fact, the disorder was at its height, and many took advantage of it.
to get rich. In the armies especially where everything was improvised, weapons, equipment, cavalry and subsistence, the accusations, often made lightly, were confused with slander.

The Jews, it goes without saying, were not sheltered from either the other.

A purchasing directory was established in 1792 by the Con-
executive branch to provide for the body's supplies of troops. A Jew was one of them: it was Marx Berr. He was, with his colleagues, denounced to the Commune on December 2, 1792, accused of prevarication, and placed under arrest at home

1. Le Courrier republican, n° 4, of November 3, 1793; - The Leaf of Paris, No. 497, of 17 Brumaire Year I; - The Annals of the Republic French, n° 307, of October 31, 1798.

tation under the guard of three sans-culottes. The affair was, at month of January 1793, mentioned by the Convention which confirmed the arrest and nevertheless ordered that the accused would continue to exercise their functions so that the service armies was not interrupted. They were not put into freedom only six months later, on the report of Boissy d'Anglas, who, on behalf of the Contract Review Committee, declared that "nothing motivated the rigorous decision that had been taken against the administrators of subsistence! ".

Supplies made to the armies also gave rise to to loud clamors. The Convention intended to be served promptly and well; it seemed to her that, as she had not than to stamp the earth with one's foot to bring out hordes of men who became wonderful soldiers, provided them with sisters, they too, only had to order so that the corps of troops were provided with everything. Of difficulties insurmountable, she did not want to know about them; and opinion public, so easily suspicious and irritable, would not admit neither delay nor failure in supplies. all kinds. Hence denunciations, appearances at the bar, trials, trials. Some Jews had to fight for their very honor, and they emerged intact from these trials, particularly harsh at that time. Such as Alcan, Mayer Lazare, Isaac Netter, Wolf Lévi?... Others, like Natan Aron father, from Dijon, "supplier for clothing, equipment and encampment of the troops of the Republic", and Worms, attached to the service of the army of Sambre-et-Meuse as "road inspector of the food section-

1. The Universal Monitor, t. XVI, p. 706. Session of June 21, 1793.
2. The Universal Monitor, t. XXI, p. 579.
3. National Archives, F7 4584.

JUSTICE 197

meat ! ", had, speaking of integrity, "competed for victories of freedom."

Two Jews were particularly involved in the representa- many of the people: these were Olry Hayem Worms and Jacob 'Benjamin. |

Worms, winner of army supplies during the ministry of Servan, was accused of having corrupted Le Page, one of the clerks of the war office, giving him twelve fact, denounced by the deputy Mayerne, was denied by Tronchon. The matter was referred to the Supervisory Commission extraordinary. On July 28, 1792, Lafond de Ladébat made the report to the Legislative Assembly, which decreed that there was there no room for deliberation? It was recognized, in fact, that the accusation was a "maneuver used to discredit the patriotic ministers 3".

Jacob Benjamin did not get the better of the denunciation that, on November 8, 1792, Cambon brought against 'him, and which included Vincent, commissioner of wars, ordered-chief navigator of the Army of the South; Vase, commissioner authorizer; Delaunay, authorizer; Lajard, cousin of the ex-minister, and Lebrun, ordering officer in Montpellier.

Benjamin was one of the biggest suppliers of arine. Food, livestock, clothing, cavalry, harness, 'firewood..., he alone is responsible for supplying, -feed, maintain, one of the most important bodies of troops that France then put on foot. Cambon raised 'The indignation of the Convention in reporting the conditions contracts which had been awarded and obtained only

1. National Archives, F7 4775/53.
2. Le Journal de Puris, n° 190 and 211, dated July 8 and 28, 1792.
3. Le Patriote français, no. 1065, July 10.

#

198 TERROR

ser, commissioners and authorizers were arrested 'tion and translated to the bar!.

Benjamin, whom this decree surprised in Paris where he was "on special business", goes to the Convention and announces "that he waits with the tranquility of the honest man the hour at which the National Convention wishes hear it well? ". |

He was admitted there the next day. "I] gave on each of the articles if not a proof, at least a presumption in its favor. He cited contracts already made, exorbitant costs transport bits for an army scattered here and there, the comparison of a previously concluded contract with the minister. »

"The man of God's people," says Perlet's Journal,

the Assembly", when Cambon, Manuel, Tallien, made decree that Benjamin would immediately go to the Committees of finance and war gathered to make his depositions and provide all necessary information.

But it was the time when the discussion on the trial of Louis XVI, and, if we had agreed to hear the Jew incriminated before these important debates, no one cared to fail in the preliminaries of the judgment. Benjamin was therefore taken under guard to the General Security Committee to be available to representatives. Following From this interview, the seals were affixed to his home. THE 20, the Assembly brought a decree of accusation against Benjamin, Vincent, Vase, Delaunay, Lajard and Lebrun, and the referred to the criminal court of the department of

1. The universal Mercury, t. XX1, n° 614, dated November 9, 1792.
2. Id.
3. The Courrier des Départements, No. IX, of November 9, 1792,
4. Le Journal de Perlet, n° 54, of November 14, 1792.

JUSTICE 199

Rhône-et-Loire. Taken immediately to the Abbey, they were released on the 13th to be transferred to the prisons of Lyon. By judgment rendered on January 22, 1793, Jacob Benjamin was, with his co-defendants, acquitted of the charge against them by the decree of December 7, 1792, and it was ordered that they would be released. The French Patriot and the Thermometer of the day added on this subject: "These various judgments will be more circumspect the men who accuse and decree with so much ease. »

In the street, the disorder is no less great than in administrations and in the army. Every citizen was a master to whom everyone owed submission and obedience. "Each corporation, each individual believed themselves to be the State and the nation. A universal delirium seemed to have seized the heads: everything was a deliberating body. Soldiers on guard deliberated at the Oratory. the tailor boys at the Colonnade, the wigmakers on the Champs-Élysées; four thousand servants ticks opened their session at the Louvre; three thousand boys shoemakers gathered at the Place Louis XV.

_"But nothing equaled the anarchy of the districts; all had a standing committee, a police committee, a military committee silence, a civil committee, a subsistence committee. Each of his secretaries; each district attributed power to itself executive. » The mania for epaulettes became general. There had more soldiers. Everyone wanted to be officers.

The squares, the streets, the crossroads, crowded with men of the bourgeoisie and the people who discussed in the open air public affairs, presented the show every day

L. Le Patriote français, n° 1972, dated February 4, 1793; – The thermometer of the day, n° 402, of February 5.

2. Memoirs of the Marquis de Ferrières (Paris, 1821).

200 TERROR

of a hive upset by a catastrophe. The Patriots were brooded there by adventurers who drew on unrest the opportunity for criminal exploits. Men ill-famed people gathered there, and the impotence of the police helping with social anarchy, were able to prepare at their ease the most daring undertakings. Soon banditry reigned supreme in Paris. Bands of thieves devastate passers-by read in broad daylight. The Convention learned suddenly with amazement that, under the protection of a false patrol, one of these gangs attacked the guard national furniture and had completely robbed it.

. This incredible flight took place on September 11, 1792. A large number of individuals were involved in this plot against the wealth and security of France: mixture of bandits and politicians who united for a whole night with the intention of dealing the country a blow which it could not get up. We know that this affair became, following the fight between Rolandists and Brissotins, a real question policy. The passions, already violent, which animated the two parties became more heated. The Mountain .accusa Roland for having placed a traitor at the head of the storage unit, and the former Minister of the Interior was able, in a letter published on this event in 1793, ensure, without being denied, that this theft was "part of a great plot", that it was to a great conspiracy and that he had serious links with the bloody "operations" of September 1792,

Let us say right away that a few Jews were among the victims of these massacres. Here is the list according to a document ment of the time:

4. Le Patriote français, n° 1366, dated May 11, 1793.

2. General list of people put to death in the different prisounds of Paris on the night of September 2 to 3, 1192. Bibl. nat., L" 39-10885.

i

JUSTICE 201

Abbey: Altmann.

Strength: Elder Abraham, David Moyse, Gabriel Lévi, Jacob Michel, Lévi Simon, J.-B. Lévi, Mayer Godichon (Godchau), Châtelet: Edouard Momené.

`- Bicetre: Joseph Lambert.

Conciergerie: Jacques-Alexis Salomon.

Seminary of Saint-Firmin: Costa Sauveur.

House of Carmelites: Abraham-Moyse Bessel (Jew).

Already in 1792, when two of the thieves had been arrested, Roland declared that the brissotins had soaked in the theft of the Garde-Meuble to gorge their accomplices, and, in support of his assertion, he said in full Convention: "Their responses indicate people who have received education and which relate to what we formerly called per-sounds above the ordinary'. » This way of seeing was confirmed by the criminal court during the proceedings?.

To which of these two categories did the Jews belong? who took part in this criminal expedition? We would be very embarrassed to say it. But the certain fact is that Jews were involved in this affair. The revolving committee tionary of the Unit section, alone, did not make any stop less than nine who, within the extent of its district-ment, were accused of complicity and concealment. But he doesn't It does not appear that the accusation was sustained against them.

Quite different was the case of Louis. Lyre, Lyon Rouef and Jacques Lévy, whose trials took a long time. criminal court hearings. |

Louis Lyre, a native of London, practiced the profession in Paris of merchant. He appeared on October 12 before his judges.

1. The Universal Monitor. t. XIII, p. 722, 726, 136,
2. Bulletin of the Criminal Court, No. 29, of October 18, 1792.
3. National Archives, F7 2501.

202 TERROR

Convinced of having taken part in the "plot tending to despoil, by open force and armed hand, the immense riches deposited with the National Furniture Guard to pass them on to enemies of the State", he was condemned to death and executed on the 43rd, at half past ten in the evening. Mounted alone with the executor in the car that was taking him to execution, he showed of courage and composure worthy of a better cause ?.

Aaron Homberg, wrapped up in the same accusation, was immediately released, after "a fatherly speech" of citizen Pépin, president. Homberg, a native of Mainz, had been unjustly arrested. He had fallen ill in the prison. Far from having participated in the theft of which he was warned, he had, on the contrary, helped in the arrest of one of the thieves. Roland obtained a gratification from the Constitution for him of 400 pounds. "I believed," he said, "that national justice demanded that this man be given compensation for the harm that he suffered, and a reward for the good he did."

The trial of Lyon Rouef and Leyde, his wife, occupied twenty-six hours of hearing. He came in front of the first section of the Tribunal on November 17. The accusation against Lyon Rouef and his wife was solely based on the test-death note that Louis Lyre had made before going up to the scaffold.

Lyon, aged fifty-two, fairground merchant and innkeeper, rue Beaubourg, and Leyde, his wife, aged thirty-eight years old, "also Jewish", were accused, namely: Lyon Rouef, of being one of the despoilers of the Garde-Meuble of the Revolution and to have been present at the sale made in his house

1. Trib Bulletin. crim., no. 29.
2. Id.
3. The Thermometer of the day, by Dulaure, n° 297, of October 23, 1792.

of a considerable part of diamonds and jewels stolen audit Furniture storage ; – Leiden, for being present at the sale of a massive pot of gold with its lid, and that of a fairly large number of silver-gilt plates, etc.

The debates demonstrated in an incontestable way that at moment when, according to Lyre, Rouef had attended the sale of diamonds, this unfortunate man was at the café de la Renowned, rue Saint-Martin, where he had been for a long time playing dominoes, and Levde, his wife, was ill, in bed, unable to be present at the sale of diamonds.

The public prosecutor dropped the charge, and the court, according to the jury's declaration, ordered that within twenty-four hours the accused would be released.

After the verdict, Citizen Pépin addressed them with these words: "By this judgment you must recognize the justice of the French that's it: live honest people, and, enjoying the benefits of a free nation, show yourself to be good republicans. »

"Thus, a cause which at first seemed serious, ended undermined to the satisfaction of an immense people who filled the audience. » Half an hour after they were acquitted, Lyon Rouef and his wife went out "in the midst of the liveliest applause! ". |

The case of citizen Jacques Lévy and citizen Dan-Dreda, his wife, was more confused. Arrested on 8 Pluviôse year II, Lévy protested against his incarceration, invoking the services that he had returned to the homeland "since the first moments of the revolution ". – "In all great circumstances or freedom had enemies to fight and defeat," he was at his post, notably, on August 10, 1792, at

1. Bull. of the Trib. crim., n° 49, of November 22, 1792.

204 TERROR

the Legislative Assembly where he was on duty and which he never left only when the representatives were safe. The same day, he had been delegated to the Commune by his section in as commissioner, as he had already been on May 31. And, in fact, in his file there is a certificate by which several patriots from the Réunion section, to which he belonged, note that "he always showed up and Police intelligence, judging from the table on the following page, were no less favorable to him. We ingenuously admitted to having discovered nothing against him.

There were not all serious grounds for accusation firstly, and this formally results from the deliberations of the central court of directors of the indictment jury of department of Paris. After hearing the commissioner 'national and having deliberated on it in the Chamber of the Council, the court declared, in fact, on 22 Pluviôse year II, that there was no no grounds to present against Lévy and Dandréda the act of accusation tation to the jury, and ordered that they be put "outside the remand centers" where they could be detained. However, kept secret by order of the General Security Committee, they were only released on 29 Vendémiaire Year III.

But the trials that Lévy had to undergo were not 'finished. Dameuve, one of the directors of the "jury" composed health the central court, suddenly declares that, if this accused had not been released, he would have kept him in custody 'arrest. The General Security Committee gets angry: "The course of justice, he replies, must resemble the course of sun; no power can stop or surprise it. We agree to attribute your hesitation to a plausible reason. tion; but, when you think about it, you will see that our opinion is an effort of indulgence, and your conduct a reprehensible excess

29
(oi

JUSTICE

*SNSSAP-19 B[IT}IV | B 9118JST}
-gs Inod oaes ua nd Bu JpU
-09 af 1onbanod 's1edued su9407
-19 So] 994 JUOWI9I84 Sau} anb
quanbiunwuwo9 or suslo ap

'9919

-W09 YEARS, 0Psjinf{ s0p sno}

ap £31139 'suos

!
'nuuo9 |

saios sao anb 4a 'Jml 359 p Iwuwo -rer 39 SU0TJVJ9Y |NUIADI BP JUI0Q

'SIPPII 8919118 NO SUON
-nod sæp gu$is 8 [IS 'along ef op 8ðS19
soç suep 13 rem Jf ne 'uelÂy np yow
Bl R 19 INJ Bl V '1008 OF NB"GEL} 2140790
39 yayjin{ 'rem op stom sa] suep sp1juom L
pnb sanbyijod suoruido sæf 49 o19198189 ðT

“SU0S

-18l 83S 'SU0IL[II 826

-N|0AI BI

|

"uon
sindəp

.

'inf pueyoueey]

“won|

-0A9Y BI sindap 79
19 JUBAB nu9A9I U0S jUBAB uoissaJoid LS

、

*“2H9XNY P U0ISSIUIWI0D VI
ap 22UBI|I2AINS

ied sagfoaua
snou ® sadgid
72 91739] oun
sade p ajqnaut
-9p185 ne 18]
JOA no 9194009
MOAB p guU0d
-dnos æwwoə
'QIIBUINIG Epał
sindap oJezuT
-JUIRS 9p uos

BU 8] B NUA

*onbinod
'oxpio janb = aed anbodg ajanb §
'puenb sindap 'nua}

“PP 189 I! NO nəl 27

“uouda094 vs ap nol np 4ajdwoo p 'sanol g ap wap a] SUDP | aq11qpsuodsat DS SNOS U0TUNIY V) IP U01J99$ D] ap aDUD]PIaALNS ap aywo) 3) avd Aydwas D NV

"SUB 83
op 99e 'u0die3
'sI Np
9J89 Np U0SIBUI
uTJJen ond 'AA9T

'gueu
no uoe 'ynaa
189 [LS *}U008 SIL no
'ag ine, 'syuBjua
səs op 91qu0u əf
'aß uos 'uotaa}9p
BS Jugag 9]I1WOP
uos 'nu93]9p Np WONI

206 ERROR

of weakness.” Lévy was put in solitary confinement, at the Grande Force, on 9 Brumaire Year III. But Dameuve's suspicions were not

Lévy was released on Nivôse 11.

In this affair of the Garde-Meuble which was never clarification, if there were compromised Jews, there were also who demonstrated probity and disinterestedness to whom the public authorities paid a resounding tribute mage.

We have already seen the national reward that the Convention agreed to Homberg.

On September 25, 1792, Mr. Anselme Lyon, "jury" of Nancy, deposited on the office of the Commune "a large quantity of diamonds" that one of the thieves had sold him of the Furniture Storage. The General Council appointed a commissioner know to, with Mr. Lyon, transport these precious objects at the registry of the criminal court, and ordered that the trait of probity honorable mention in the minutes?.

Camus announced to the Convention on October 34 that a another Jew, who had been offered to buy several diamonds coming from the Garde-Meuble, removed them "at the risk of his life" from the hands of thieves to return them to the public treasury. "This loyalty was greatly applauded. »

Finally, in the session of October 9 in the morning, the Convention tion received a letter from Roland relating to this theft. THE Minister of the Interior added * that a Paris jeweler, Mr. Cerf Berr, had received several brilliants from an individual

4. See for this whole affair: Archives nat., F7 477422.

2. Le Courrier français, no. 272, September 28, 1792.

3. La Chronique de Paris, no. 286, October 4, 1792.

4. The universal Mercury, t. XX, n° 585, of October 10, 1792; – THE Journal de Perlet, No. 19, October 10; – The Annals of Mercier, No. CCLXXXIV of October 10.

JUSTICE 207

who had brought them to him to sell. The jeweler, recognizes born the jewels to be from the Garde-Meuble, did not think than by saving the greater part of it by pretending to want to buy them. This ruse succeeds: the thief brought jewelry worth 200,000 pounds.

to bring "the effects" that it would have and which it would give him then the amount. The thief returns; placed under arrest
tion, he reveals several of his accomplices and provides such information found for around 300,000 pounds | jewelry. The jeweler, who agreed with Roland and the warned of everything he did, had received a sum of | 15,000 pounds taken from funds allocated for expenses secrets, in order to bait the thief...

The National Convention decreed the honorable mention of the conduct of citizen Cerf Berr, whose name she wrote in his minutes.

CHAPTER 11

TERROR

Events followed one another in rapid succession, always digging deeper the abyss which separated the Gironde from the Mountain, throwing the population into alternatives of discouragement and joy. The day of August 10 gave to the people, with a new awareness of their strength, a sort of foretaste of brutal justice, executions bloody; the capture of Verdun, the fear of the royalists, the pushed to the most abominable actions, imposing in at the same time to the Convention the most terrible.

Little by little, under the pressure of violent hatred which break out among the Sans-Culottes and tear apart the parties, the revolutionary period deepens; the terror gets worse; to laws of general interest, made to protect patriots, succeed give way to special laws, laws of circumstance, which take citizens as if in a tight-knit net real and from which no one can escape. Suspicion weighs on foreigners, stockbrokers, bankers, merchants. The law of September 17, 1793 affects all people. She orders the arrest of all suspicious people, and it considers suspicious all those who,

TERROR 209

"either by their conduct, or by their relationships, or by their remarks or their writings, have shown themselves to be supporters of the tyranny or federalism, and enemies of freedom." There entire population is enslaved to the Revolutionary Committees nationals, arrest citizens, judge them, declare them suspects and throw them in prison.

Death looms over everyone. Existence is strewn with obstacles and traps. Everyone feels watched, watched, spied on in their attitude, in his words, in his actions'. The term me-
"aristocrat" covers it all. Denunciations facilitate the work of the Section Committees and the Committee of general supervision. Terror, in fact, does not go without denunciation. The "flies" and "indicators" are on the teeth. The Revolutionary Committees don't know who to listen to, More people are brought to them than they can accommodate.

The Jews naturally had to suffer from the common law. Even their recent emancipation was, in some ways, case, the cause of the biggest problems. Many of them were accused of violating foreigner laws. One (October 16, 1793) ordered the arrest of all individuals born subjects of the governments with which the France was at war; the other (27 germinal year II) required nobles and foreigners to leave Paris. The laws were formal. However, the Jews, who, for this reason, were threatened with keeping the prison until peace, protested against the status of foreigner that was wrongly attributed to them. Mon, Mayer Simon, claimed that he should be considered as French, since for more than twenty-three years, he had constantly remained in Paris. He was established there, rue Avoye,

4. National Archives, F7 4622, 4712.

2. Id., F7 2517.

14

210 TERROR

section of the Armed Man, with his mother, his wife and his children !. Another, Lyon-Jacob Mayer, was delivered, 44 nivose an II, by a sort of mohel a certificate cons- as he was born in Paris in 1777. A third, Simon Mayer, second-hand dealer, is only saved from prison thanks to his mother who brought to court, on 23 Messidor Year II, "a written where she states that she arrived in Paris in 1771, that she and her children are recorded in the yearbook old police as Jews, that for twenty-two years its son knows no other place or domicile than Paris"; In these conditions, he was justified in believing himself "excepted from the laws."

and Mayer Aaronf. | |

. The Law on Foreigners and Nobles was a law of police ; in its application it could admit peraments. The one on the suspects was formidable, merciless; she sowed hatred between citizens, aroused the passions the most detestable, the most barbaric feelings. There was no no more friendship, no home, no family.

Simon Simon', decorator, born in Reims, lived in Paris, rue Bailly, section of Gravilliers, when, on 17 Brumaire year II, he was arrested as a suspect by order of the Committee of general security. "Denounced by all patriots as inveterate aristocrat" – following the order of the prisoner – he was accused of wanting to "insinuate his aristocracy into the character-

. Arch. nat., F7 4774.

. Id., F7 4774/27,

. Id., F7 4774/40.

. Id.

. Id.

. Id.

. Id.

Se © D Re

ace

TERROR 211

kill men he believes to be weak. It was assured that he was "the sworn enemy of all popular clubs and societies" and that he pushed the contempt of the friends of freedom to the point of fleeing in the General Assembly the representatives of the "side LEFT ". He was sent to the Madelonnettes. |

Questioned on Prairial 25, he defended himself energetically:

– Didn't you attend the general assemblies of the section, on the side of the aristocrats? his judges asked him.

crate. I have always placed myself at the assemblies according to which found vacant places on one side, on the other, or in the middle.

– Weren't you from Brissot's party?

– I never knew his clique.

– On the Jacobins and the Republic?

– I have never deviated from the opinion that the Society of Jacobins is made up of devoted citizens and that the Republic is favorable to the people. I have always acted in this direction, since I fulfilled different civil functions in the Revolution...

He was known, in fact, to have, as early as July 12, 1789, "contributed with all his power to the public welfare". He had attended all the assemblies which took place in 1789 and the confidence of his fellow citizens had earned him, in 1790, to be appointed elector of the department of Paris, commissioner of Civil committee of its section. The functions he held included caused serious harm to his condition; nevertheless he continued to devote oneself to public affairs, participating at the same time to the collections made for the expenses of the war, in favor of his brothers in arms, citizens marching for the border, Vendée and the department of Eure where they were going to defend freedom against rebels against the law. Volunteer in the 42nd company of the army section des Gravilliers, he produced a certificate from the Assembly general of the section attesting to his good citizenship. It was put in freedom by order of the General Security Committee of the 1st fructidor. His incarceration therefore continued for more than ten months. |

212 TERROR

Solomon David! was arrested, on 23 Germinal Year II, on the denunciation of the revolutionary committees of the section of Bondy and the Mountain. He was a talented engraver. "A worker and living from the work of his hands", he engraved numerous stamps for individuals and municipalities who had, for this purpose, delegated regular powers to him. In the search which was carried out at his house on 25 Germinal, we had seized various seals ordered by the Revolutionary Committee of Claye, the municipality of Perville, the district of Péronne, the company of Chenet gunners from the Arcis section, the municipality of Normant, the general of the army of the North.

case of counterfeit stamps no doubt. The file is not very clear in this regard. The General Security Committee had ordered that a search be made, "wherever necessary", stamp engravers bearing the imprint of the authorities constituted, and to "question them without wasting time to go back to the first perpetrators of the crime. After This order, David Salomon was arrested and con- taken to the Plessis remand center, rue Jacques.

The Revolutionary Committee of the Gravilliers section, to which the accused belonged, protested strongly against his incarceration. She gave the most flattering account of the David's conduct. "Moreover," she added, "he is our knowledge, that he had the courage to denounce a manufacturer maker of false assignats and that the nation granted him for rewards the sum of 1,000 pounds. » This is "an act of patriotism" which was "useful to the entire Republic".

1. National Archives, F7 4775/24.

TERROR 213

There was therefore no doubt that "this unfortunate man without panties" was "a victim of either ignorance or despotism of the Revolutionary Committees of the sections of Bondy and of the mountain ". Specific petitions, in addition to the certificates of the section, attested all "the proofs of patriotism and republican virtues" that David had data. It was necessary to recognize his innocence and hand him over at liberty: his detention had lasted almost six months.

Similar errors occurred every day. At amidst the disorder and confusion that the arrests gave birth, in the tangle of denunciations, in the feverishness of unbridled passions, the revoking committees lutionaries were drowning, as if overcome by panic. Of the citizens were forgotten for entire months in the prisons, others were transferred from: remand centers in a remand center, without reason; finally others remained there, unable to know why they were detained.

_ Disorder and disarray everywhere.

Nothing is more comical in this regard than the letter written by Vaubertrand, concierge of Madelonnettes, to the Committee general security. On 5 Nivôse year II, he received a prisoner which he doesn't know what to do with. No reason for arrest. Point

Isaac Simon. That's all he knows, and he has to believe what Simon tells him. Detained, he said, as above-pect, he had served in a large part of the city's prisons: Lazare, the Scots, the Town Hall, La Force and the Madelons-sharp. At the Scots, from rue des Fossés-Victor, he had only passes by: "Being poor, not having a bed of his own, and the concierge of this house not having any to provide him, he had been refused and transferred elsewhere. Vaubertrand informed to the Police Administrative Commission, and the Commission tells him that she knows nothing. He calls out to him Revolutionary Committee of the 6th arrondissement, and, despite its research, the Committee cannot find the minutes of arrest. So who should we contact? at the Lom section bards, where did Simon live before the month of Pluviose? Or to that of Réunion where he lived afterwards? Vaubertrand loses his head. He only sees one way out of this imbroglio is to set his prisoner free, However, everything soon becomes clear: "Isaac Simon, manufacturer of portfolios", first "postponed as a Jew and as intriguer in his trade", had been, on Pluviôse 22, held as a suspect. But, as in his papers we had "found nothing contrary to the laws of the Republic", he was released after a few weeks of detention.

214 TERROR

Quite different was the case of Fernandez, canvas merchant and fabrics, established in the Unit section. "Jew above Portuguese in religion, born French", he had always lived France. His once wealthy family, he said, had been persecuted and proscribed by the Spanish government. He had two children, "one of whom is male" who, since the Revolution, fought for the homeland. He himself had rendered the services most publicized. He was my friend hot of freedom, the most outraged enemy of slavery", and, while the enemies of the Republic united against the Convention, "almost alone in his section he maintained the sacred fire of love of the fatherland.

So much dedication deserved a reward. But on the denunciation of the conventional Lacroix and other "supats which are not yet sufficiently known", he was arrested as suspect in the first days of germinal an IJ, "by a

TERROR 215

could not know the motives", In reality, "we do not know no wrong in political terms. His public vows always been the regeneration of society; his only reading, the patriotic newspapers; his only and very new study, the works of the immortal J.-J. Rousseau. »

Such pure occupations could not be the work of a criminal. Durvy, "deputy chief of the 3rd subsistence section plants", Esther, Devieux's wife, his daughter, and Devieux, his son-in-law, supported this information with their petitions favorable. Hébert's conspiracy had just been discovered. Lacroix and his "accomplices" had perished on the scaffold. What was the General Security Committee waiting for to make Fernandez "to the society which was deprived of it"? The request was not received only on 27 Thermidor. "The vehement Fernandez" had to wait for the death of Robespierre to receive the justice due to the "victims of their enlightened patriotism and intrigues of the conspirators! ".

= Among the crimes severely repressed under the Terror, there had to be counted as one of the most serious that of disobeying 'sance or contempt for "constituted authorities". There was then "constituted authorities" from the top to the bottom of the ladder social, and it was necessary to exercise a singular power over oneself or have excessive luck not to hurt one of the any member of multiple powers, civil, military silences or revolutionaries who abounded at the time. Moses Brunswick had the hard experience of this.

The Vendée insurrection had suddenly taken on a considerable extension, and the Republic had no

4. National Archives, F7 4704.

216 TERROR

troops to suppress it. Levies were decreed by the Convention, and, in order to face it, the sections of Paris had decided that each company would appeal to the patriotism of his men and would contribute, either through the draw fate, either through voluntary commitment, to the training of Parisian bodies.

The captain of the 6th company had therefore summoned his troop. This did not seem to be to the taste of Brunswick. He accused his captain of abuse in the exercise of his functions and, after a rather lively discussion, treated him as a "rascal" and threatened to have him dismissed within forty eight hours. Moïse was arrested and appeared without delay before

The witnesses heard, "we arrested Moïse Brunswick to declare to us his name, position and residence, and we having presented his card, replied Moïse Brunswick, marchand, residing rue Geoffroy-Langevin, 3".

- Alui asked how long he has been living in France.
- Answered, since his birth in Bouxviller, near Altkirsch, in Alsace. |
- Asked him how long he has been living in Paris.
- Answered, for seven years and three months, and for five years in the same street.
- Asked him which Judea he is from.
- Answered from Judea of Israel.

eee kd seeeeeeeeeeeeeeee

The debates thus enlightened, the jury approached the very merits of the denunciation. Brunswick, convicted of contempt of "authorities constituted", was taken before the administrators of police "for the purpose of ruling on what they consider fit to be on the offense of said Brunswick! ".

4. National Archives, F7 2401.

TERROR 217

It is about comments of the same kind that Alexandre Guastalla had to be arrested as a general security measure. At moment when a collection was made to help with the departure of volunteers from the department of the Seine, he had said, allegedly they said: "You will see that everything will become more expensive, that shoes will increase day by day and they will rise to 120 pounds per pair. » And as the frame was too thin to accuse Guastalla of incivism, it was declared that in 1794 he had "ruthlessly" slandered the representatives of the people, Legendre and Bazire; he was "suspected" of having arrested in Lyon, during a trip he had made to Italy, to take part in the troubles that had broken out there and, as he

he sought to make himself useful"; what inspired the greatest mistrust. On this report, to which we later added new grounds for suspicion, the General Security Committee ordered, on 8 Ventôse year II, that Guastalla would be put in arrest in a Paris prison.

So what was this Guastalla, whom the Revolutionary Committee tionary of Fauboug Montmartre had just denounced that, domiciled on Franciade Island (Saint-Denis), he depended Committees of this commune? "Citizen Guastalla is born Jewish; it's not a shame, wrote his wife, on 23 thermidor, to protest against the denunciation of the section; but twenty-four years of residence in France have served him well given the glorious title of French citizen. » The following table before provided by the Whistleblower Committee will enlighten us further tage on the accused and on the accusations against him. Guastalla will complete this information with a full letter of curious details which he sent in his defense to the Convention 'tion.

—
'onboda 91199 @ quatel9 A
mb ojdnod np syuejuasaidoi sa]
BIULI0]R9 J1 'U0AT Op AN0JaI uos V

"000°08 Sep uor
-1j9d B] ap aireyeusis sə pp 'aared
Bl SOJAI[OZ} @ JU0IPUSIA SII
-nos sof onb 4a saquawuane rere
mo} onb op op WJU sruiod 952.8 It ' yUamMaZeIN0dap af 1379!

*29[NULIS 9JU9A
gun 59.9 ənb
suo{o1o snou
onb 'uvaf3 np
saiste[d snuout
sap juepua}
-ul '9413A VJ V

12 JUBAB nuəəəJ uoçljueau uoissajoid egistndap:nuajap

'900s es ap jin
'operoutdy ISL |
g JUBIN9UWAP

'orJetu 'sue 8Y
ap ase 'elle

“193

-ueij9] qnod |'areiguas
S9119P04I P
$910 ap SIH0

ua JUBI)0SaU

-QS ap JPW
np əɪpɪo aed
'asQquaa 6 ə

uonjoagy æ] |smdəp sasre[s

saide 49 queavi-uy xne nu939q|-SUnr) 91pUBX9[Y

– EERE

'9118
“tonbanod 'aspio |no uoŷ4es 'ynaa 18a
Jed 'onbodg [118 'quos sj no
'puenb j'ady ana 'syuejua
sas 9p 9iquou a]
no not] 27|'23g uos 'ajlorwop

“Tony
-0A9Y 8] sindap ja

janb
ajjenb ok

189 pl

uos 'nu919p np woy

sueq 'ue uə .aXojdma yny ou ayuanbosuoo
If 'oonjse uos op ndsade 4s9,s uo uosiew ounp
a STEW SUOT}IAS 91J0U Y IM JIPU uorjisinboe]
z əS Y MUU919)9 [I NO SHBd 8 NUA yey B [I [99
= -31 189 [t 'sed zlessissngi or pnb 2948 42 '008'G
5l quuAoA'uo{''] ap sa[qno1}S191w191d u0IJNIOANH etT
Zz XNY 'sajqnod] sap sajuawoy nod stndap ja'uodIA
= U0] B VIPLIBS |! Jo 'ILY ua "SOJVII0JSIIB |-U9 SIAL] 000'L
Joe anod yodassed a gpuemt {sap 4a sina, [uornioagsH Be]
-3p Pear J['JUBBIAJUI A p INF9)[-01FU sap daAy|jULABNUaAaTUOS
"SIPON S919118 NO SUON
-nəd sap gods B [LS ue i ee Pee 'uon
es omni oi tigre a wae oor Sidono Tel] $9S 'SU01L]3I SIS pa LE . e sindap ja yojnnof 'ew ap Siow saj suep 3914U00W V
mnb sonbnyod suorudo 83] ya 9193098189 97
Or
N *u011d2994 Ds ap anol np 491dwu09 p 'sinol yny ap 1012p 31 sup

'IPMQVSUOdSIA DS SNOS ILJADUJU0JY PANOQNI] NP U017IəS D) ap IIUDMəAUUNS ap JNU0J 2) «od sy

TERROR 219

Search was carried out at Guastalla's home. We know-sit 28 pieces, business letters written in Italian and registers compatible. Then Guastalla was taken into the house stopping the English.

As soon as the established authorities of Franciade learned
These facts, they took steps after steps and sent several deputations in Paris to demand enlargement of the inmate. He was, said the commune, "a true patriot"
'which she intended to "take under her responsibility". There municipality, for its part, attested to its good citizenship and proved that the sale of the house of Papillon de La Ferté could not be simulated. The General Council met in Assembly extraordinary to declare that Guastalla had "always urged his fellow citizens to maintain order" and that he had "always fraternized with them." Finally the very section of Faubourg Montmartre, protesting against the act of its committee revolutionary, certified that the accused had "professed without ceases the purest citizenship, the most ardent love for freedom and equality". He was, in a word, "an honest man, virtuous and beneficent" which had made the greatest ser vices. :

Faced with these truly precious testimonies of dedication to public affairs, the General Security Committee remained undecided. The energy with which municipal officers in fact the Revolutionary Committee of the Faubourg Montmartre in a strange posture. But, when from the prison, where he was waiting to be put on trial, the "Italian" Jew replied in a precise "memorial" of the attacks to which he was the object, 'Tinanity and the injustice of the accusation could no longer be doubted.

220 TERROR

Citizens, he wrote to the General Security Committee, I am bli in France since the year 1770. At the time of its revolution, I was on business in Italy, where I traveled regularly Probably every two years.

At the end of 1789, I went to Paris where, after having made reading human rights, I saw that in the end reason had gained the upper hand and that the Jewish nation would no longer be persecuted. The letter that I sent to the National Assembly in 1790, accompanies pawn of 1,500 pounds of patriotic donation under number 1165, you will prove that I had more confidence in human rights that in the Constituent Assembly, and that I did not wait for the decree which made us languish to know if we should be in the class of citizens or not.

To show myself worthy of being so, my first care was, in February 1790, to take advantage of the benefit of the Revolution and to . marry, since I no longer had to fear that my children would be unfortunate, something that always kept me away from marriage before the Revolution, because our nation was so persecuted that the children had died civilly before being born. The following March, I entered into a marriage, on the condition that before consummating it I would go on a trip to sort out my affairs, either to Lyon where I had my home in Italy to withdraw the little fortune that I had there.

At the end of 1790, I left for Italy. After having done _ a lot of sacrifices to leave a country where a man of our nation should not live, I went to Paris in sometime in March 1791. There I consummated the marriage. From that moment, I did everything a good citizen should do; my section has entrusted me with quite important commissions, and I am acquitted with all the loyalty of a republican franc.

In September 1792, I provided a soldier equipped and armed with submission to me to take charge of it for the rest of his days, if he had had the misfortune of returning injured, and the citizenship certificate of my section can prove to you what I am saying.

I am not talking to you about donations that I have made, which are too

(and whose income is taken as proof); it's a parade unworthy of a republican.

Last July, I bought a country property, the only available wealth that I possess, not to retire like an egoist; I dare to hope that my municipality will do me justice that I deserve.

TERROR 221

I took up arms at every opportunity for support of freedom and the overthrow of tyranny and federalism, notably in the memorable days of August 10, 1792, March 31, {4" and June 2, 1793. Finally, I accepted in the Pri-mayor the holy Republican Constitution and sworn to defend it until death. I invoke with confidence the application of the decree of 8 Ventôse, present month, which orders the release of irreproachable patriots.

Alexandre GUASTALLA, Citizen of Franciade Island, detained at the so-called house of the English, rue de Lourcine. |

The call of this patriot was heard. The 4th of Fructidor, the General Security Committee ordered that he be released!

So what was the real reason for the security measure? taken against Guastalla? It is immediately found in a case related to his and which targeted Mosès, his step-in-law father. Guastalla was undoubtedly considered a "man of means" whose fortune was to be more useful to the Republic than to himself.

In fact, the day before Guastalla was arrested, the Revolutionary Committee of the Faubourg Montmartre had made take Mosès to the house of Saint-Lazare. On May 15, 1793, this Committee had requested him, in the name of the homeland in danger, to pay within forty-eight hours, "in the form of a loan", the sum of five thousand pounds for the first third of that which he had to provide, in order to help with the Vendée expedition. Mosès had refused to comply with this requisition warrant. He was accused, without further information, of "cabbings to the appointment of Chambon, mayor", and "for having removed gold and silver bars abroad!" Moses and his woman did not remain subject to this accusation. They both protested against this "atrocious slander" and against "the tyranny" of the Revolutionary Committee which wanted "absolutely make a rich man out of citizen Mosès." There's was going from his head.

1. National Archives, F7 2482 (Registers of minutes of Revolutionary Committees).

Stock trading and cash trading were, in fact, „punishable by death at that time. The law of September 5, 1793 was carried out with the greatest rigor. Bankers and all those who were suspected of trading money were severely worried; searches careful searches were made at their homes, their papers seized, the seals affixed to their registers, and their persons guaranteed dice on sight.

Already, in 1791, the sections closely monitored all these "Cash kidnappers": the discovery of a crime of this kind caused the strongest emotion. The section of Mauconseil was the scene of quite serious disturbances on this subject, following similar maneuvers attributed to the "Jews of rue des Prêcheurs? ". |

The Jews were not the only ones suspected. "They are almost all nobles, gentlemen and bad priests, said the French mail *, which hold or encourage manufacturers counterfeit assignats, counterfeit notes, counterfeit louis, false shields... They are almost all nobles, gentlemen and bad priests who, after having monopolized all our cash, invade under different names, our coffees and our sugars, with the intention of soon speculating on our flour and our corn..."

4.Arch. nat., F72 482.

2. Le Courrier de Gorsas, n° 19, of February 19, 1791.

3. No. 30, from Monday January 30, 1792.

TERROR 223

When, on September 7, 1793, on the proposal of Danton, the Convention was authorized to take all measures that she would deem suitable against the bankers, Lhuillier, prosecutor-syndic of the Seine department, ordered the incarceration of all money dealers. Since then, any citizen suspected of this crime was brought to the section and

gold and silver; stockbroker, one who was found carrying of crowns and deprived of assignats; stockbroker, one who, passing to possess some property, refused to provide for the fantasies headquarters of the Revolutionary Committees; stockbrokers, aristocrats, the Jews', who were accused of "caballing" for the candidates who were not in the odor of holiness among the fiery Jacobins! Every day denunciations of this kind were brought to committees: vain words, slander, insulting noises laughter, slight suspicions, slanderous statements, police reports, these committees welcomed, received, admitted everything for indisputable truth. |

A member of the Civil Committee of the Friends of the homeland recounts, in 1792, that "an individual" traveling with him from Meaux to Paris "told him that five weeks ago two truckers from Germany had bought from Jews, coffee from Commerce, rue Saint-Martin, quantity of white money and 4 to 500 pounds heavy soil? »

In the Réunion section, on 17 Pluviôse an IT, "the deliberative committee was informed by one of its members that it rich Jews arrived from Strasbourg and it is doubtful that they are fugitives and buyers of assignats by denigrating them with the aim of monopolizing them more cheaply? "...

4. National Archives, F7 2471.
2. Arch. nat., F7 2489.
3. Id., F7 2494.

224 TERROR

And the committees delegate citizens to "verify the done" and run on the trail of the delinquents.

The corporate bodies were set in motion by business more serious. One of them simultaneously occupied the municipalities of Sens, Arras, Fontainebleau, Troyes and Paris. It occurred on 27 Prairial Year IT and targeted several Jews who, in reality, had no clear relationship established between them: it was Lyon, from Paris; Jacob-Patigold, from Belfort; Mathias Katz, from Cernay; Abraham Wormser, of Wittenheim; Salomon Wahl and his brothers Moyse, Félix, Charles and Elie, all five from Fontainebleau. We understand that the procedure of this trial must have been long, difficult and confused. We do not know what became of most of the indicted! |

Only one was released, it was Cerf Lyon. He had been, de Sens against Salomon Wahl, "suspected of having done the illicit money trade. Cerf was at the hotel

Growing at the same time as Wahl and he had been kept a seen with him. In a letter addressed, on Messidor 7, to Revolutionary Committee of the Réunion section, which he called for his help, Cerf recounted the adventures of his arrest. We only want to remember from his story that following passage:

"At three o'clock, the justice of the peace came to ask me: Are you Jewish? – To which I replied that I was here before, that in the Republic there were only republics cains. – He answered me: that's it." And he did it transferred to a remand center where he found himself involved in chained criminals and counter-revolutionaries.

4.Arch. nat., F7 4636.

TERROR 225

However, his ordeals soon came to an end. The Committee of the Réunion section certified that Cerf had always shown "good patriot and republican!" ", and, as he seemed to exist no complicity between him and the others, At Sens he was given a passport to return to Paris.

Cerf Lyon exercised, like his alleged accomplices, the profession of "fairground merchant". They went from town to town "flea market, buying, selling, carrying with them everything have them. It was then enough for a few coins to ring in their pockets so that mysterious notices reach to the Supervisory Committees. We then searched them, we per-searched their room or the car that took them carried from one commune to another; and, as soon as they admitted possess some hundred crowns, they were accused of "buying. money to pass it on to the emigrants", and to contribute buer, "by their improbous speculations, to precipitate the discredit and the fall of assignats? ". |

One of them, Salomon Wahl, "questioned (a Sens) for-which he brought coined money from Fontainebleau to instead of bringing papizr" – "replied that he brought it here to buy goods; that, if he did not have not bought it, he would have left it here."

And we insist...

"He observed that it was more suitable for him not to

that he would have done much better to change his money of the Republic and that with the assignats he would have received he would have made his way with ease, and questioned why he didn't do it. »

4.Arch. nat., F7 2494.

2. The religious movement in Paris during the Revolution, by the D^r Robinet (Paris, 1896), volume I, p. 329 and 19.

45

226 TERROR

Solomon, impatient with a pretension that nothing justifies, "replied that he has no answer to give us and that he asks us if there is a law that obliges him to do so.

The improvised judges, in the fixed idea imposed on them denunciation, sometimes asked strange questions. To one question put to him, Moise Wahl replied that, when that he was going to Paris, he bought goods and not money, which he had recently sent to Troyes, where there was his brother Salomon, "a bundle of silk".

He is then asked if, in his Judaic slang, he does not does not tend to be coined money per bundle of silk.

And Moise is forced to repeat that the package is none other nothing but a bundle of silk.

In Paris, more particularly, if Mayer is to be believed Dennerly, the "rue Martin" district, was "infected" stockbrokers and money merchants. Constantly, the strength army was required there, the houses surrounded and the accommodation searched from top to bottom. The "caffés", very numerous in this place – especially the Café du Commerce, which was the meeting center for a large number of Jews, so much so that we also called it the Jewish café – were the object of rigorous reuse monitoring. And, as we knew that they gave to stay in garni, that the inns there received a crowd of businessmen, the Revolutionary Committees do not allow them to had no sight. An accused, questioned about the "speeches" that we held there, replied that we held "speeches of merchants when talking about their mutual goods.

In these often brutal searches, it occurred, as in the Cerf Lyon trial, as in the ovens of guilty and innocent; we searched indiscriminately the one and the other, men "right down to their shoes",

TERROR | 227.

women "right down to their hair"; we seized papers, stones, letters, goods, jewelry, cash; all were thrown pell-mell into prisons, and the instruction of the only trial could cause the departure of the "pure" from those who could be "confused in this abject class and murderer of bad citizens." |

This was indeed the distinction that Mayer Dennerly insisted on TO DO. The General Security Committee, by ordering, on May 22, a search, one of these hunts that we have just spoken about, had not "intended to touch the property or obstruct a legitimate trade", but only ensure those who were engaged in the cash trade. Or Mayer Dennerly, - jeweler merchant, did not want to be included among those who carried out such trafficking. |

Commercial necessities had forced him to have a home separate from that of his wife. I had come to settle down, a year earlier, in Paris, while "his wife" remained in Verdun, "their common residence since their birth", and where she was responsible for supplying the district with canvases and sheets for making gaiters.

= Important purchases had brought her to Paris, where she had gone with Lazare Lyon, her partner, her daughter and her sister. They had been installed at Dennerly for eight days when the order came from the Committee to "surround three shops: lemonade shop on rue Martin. The armed force entered among these women and seized everything that appeared to him suspect. The file contains a long nomenclature of louis, écus, coins, jewelry and pieces of silverware that were seized there: more on the Dennerly woman than on her companions. This citizen had with her all the cash of her house, which consisted of a sum of approximately 25,000 pounds.

Let us hasten to add that, a few months later, the seals

228 TERROR

they were lifted, "the effects" returned to their owners and the defendants released (12 Ventôse year III). However, seized items had disappeared; the agents responsible for operations during the search were compromised. An instruction was particularly suspected of having found to his taste "a heart and a small golden cross"; the members of the Revival Committee lutionnaire of the Réunion section, who had been required to assist in this operation, gave proof of criminal levity. They declared, in summary, to have let Limage do as he pleased. The light could not be made – on the irregular circumstances in which he had been made the deposit of the seized effects!.

These sans-culottes, it must be said, showed a painful carelessness. The life, interests, anxieties of citizens were often just a game to them. All entire to their work, they laughed at the sufferings of women and children. Philippe Moyse, merchant, lives rant rue Simon-le-Franc, 348, had been arrested at the same time as Mayer Dennery and for the same suspicion, while that he was discussing business at the Café du Commerce.

As the detention of Moyse at Madelonnettes continues walked along, his wife went to the Revolutionary Committee to ask members for the key to their room. "After being looked at each other, they said at first that they had not point. One of them finally spoke and handed it to me, she wrote, telling me with an air of irony that he had kept her dated to sleep with me? »

All those to whom a particle of authority was vested

- 4. National Archives, F7 4669.
- 2. Id., F7 4774 55.

TERROR – 229

arrogate an even greater one; those who did not have no power attributed significant credit to themselves; and all, for hit those who had some property, did not hesitate to usurp positions or functions. The confusion of rank, authority, power reigned everywhere; and the trouble –there were still more exceptional laws that the Convention manufactured according to requirements.

Merchants and bankers were arrested in their business, exposed to the worst adventures.

A search was carried out on September 9 at the citizen's home. B.-L. Fould, banker, 4, rue Favart. The Supervisory Committee Lance then declares to him, simply, that, "for the interest of the Republic", he opposes the payment of all his

"I don't know," wrote another, on September 10, 1793, "I don't know if we will pay, because we have sealed all the banks quiers and merchants. I have the seals at home too. I I don't know what will become of us. I don't even know, if we don't do not unseat today, who will or can pay. We arrest a lot of people every day..." The one who said this, melancholy, was called Manus Polak junior. Merchant of canes and canes, established in Paris since 1780, he had business relations with Frankfurt, Holland, Switzerland and England. He was warned of having correspondents counter-revolutionary dances and facilitate the sending of funds to emigrants. With him were involved in this suspicion Manus Polak eldest son, Abraham Polak, his son-in-law, and Daniel Polak youngest son. Just a moment, the Revolutionary Committee from the Sans-Culottes section? had included in the

4. National Archives, F7 4710.

2. Id., F7 2494.

230 | TERROR

same accusation, in addition to "citizen Gins, boy at the "citizen Polak"— "Polak father and mother, son and daughter-in-law, daughter Manette Polak and Abraham, husband and son-in-law of the said Polak father and 'mother ". But, in reality, we found in this affair "nothing contrary to the aim of the Republic" nor "to the public good! ". At first their case was considered serious. They had been "pro- visibly reunited at home under the care of two homeless panties with the strict instruction not to leave them lay eggs with whom. that. it would be ". All the letters to them addressed had to be "unsealed and read" to serve "to further enlighten the committee". But soon the seals were lifted and all these great culprits set free after long days of ordeal?.

Political suspects, foreign suspects, criminal suspects 'mercy of money: the number is increasing every day -tage, and "counter-revolutionary crimes" increase constantly increasing the large population of prisons. Everywhere, at the Anglaises, at Sainte-Pélagie, at Saint-Lazare, at the hospital from the Bishopric, to the Abbey, to the Scots, to Luxembourg, the Jews, like other citizens, are delivered to the furies popular. To the suspects we have cited, others every hour are added who wait for chance, of indifference or oblivion, freedom or death. And the Terror will have been defeated, the Thermidorian period will have long since succeeded the Terror, that prisons

policies 3. |

4. Arch. nat., F7 2494.

2. The Polaks were, at the beginning of this century, among the members the most distinguished of the Jewish Community of Paris. They figured in the 1809 census as jewelers, next to Sébastien Gins. |

3. See. Léon Kahn, Jews in Paris since the 6th century (Paris, 1889).

ae TERROR 234

But then all citizens had to fear for their freedom, their property, their existence. France was absolutely dominated by the Robespierre faction. A part of the nation was in prison, another was at the borders. Between the two a bloodthirsty party is agitated, which moves the guillotine. And the knife falls and falls every time hour of the day to the song repeated a thousand times: It will be okay! that's cool!

CHAPTER IV

THE GUILLOTINE

Few Jews, as we have said, played a role during the Revolution. The same ones who were mixed up with a few some of its episodes had only a very secondary role in it. daire. |

An exception can perhaps be made for the Jew Ephraim, agent of the King of Prussia in Paris in 1791. Privy advisor to the king, enjoying with Frederick a credit which is explained due to the great influence of "the Jewish Ephraim", her wife, on this monarch, he had come to the capital to seek to detach France from Austria and make it enter into an alliance with Prussia. To accomplish his mission, he was admitted to the Society of Friends of the Constitution, frequented political circles, cafes where he led an active campaign against Louis XVI and Marie-Antoinette, and linked up quite closely with Carra, Brissot, Choderlos of Laclos. He had frequent interviews with Montmorin, Barnave, La Fayette, Mirabeau, Noailles, and fitune propaganda skillful in favor of his master with Pétion, Gensonné

Publicly accused of having taken part in the movement who bloodied the Champ de Mars, after the return of

THE GUILLOTINE 233

Varennes, on July 17, 1794, he was arrested at the same time as Rotondo, Virchow and the Baroness of Aelders. But, while that Prudhomme, of the Revolutions of Paris, Hébert, of Father Duchesne, Danton and Camille Desmoulins, compromised in the same affair, were obliged to flee, Ephraim, covered by diplomatic immunity, was released after twenty-four hours of detention. He soon had to leave France !.

Apart from him, none appears in the foreground in these days when the people each time win a victory over the monarchy. The influence of the Jews was therefore zero on the events. nements, however active their assistance may have been.

What emerges above all from the careful study of their existence at this time, let us repeat, is that, in the various periaffected by this disturbing drama, everyone acted according to their feelings. times, his passions, his convictions, or the political environment in which he lived. There was no joint action at any time moment, except in the first days of the Revolution, when they demanded the rights of active citizens. So they combine made their efforts and agreed, by mutual agreement, from a religious, social and political point of view, to sacrifices the greatest for the success of their cause.

But when the emancipation decree was issued, unity -sight among the Jews was broken; they threw themselves into skirmishers, right and left, in the general melee. More overall, no more concert, no more association. And when the Terror came, she found them scattered among the various factions which disputed power. Also everywhere in France, in Alsace, in Nîmes, in Lyon, in Avignon, they had to suffer a lot has. See. about Ephraim: An agent of the King of Prussia in Paris, by Leon Kahn. Directory of the Jewish Archives of Paris for 5658 (Peris, 1897-1898). -Sorel. Europe and the French Revolution (Paris, 1885).

of the terrible blows that the parties dealt each other, of the hatred bloody events raised by the Revolution.

In Bordeaux, the Military Commission made anyone pay dearly some of them their moderate political sentiments. Isabeau and Tallien, placed at the head of this Commission by arrested on 30 Vendémiaire Year II, hit them without misery ricorde. |

The Raba brothers, can. were by them condemned to –five hundred thousand pounds fine, including one hundred thousand for the benefit of patriots, for having paid 20,000 pounds on the injunction of the municipality of June 24, 1793, “instead of resisting the op- pressure that threatened to incarcerate them.” |

Charles Peixotto, banker, was ordered to pay twelve “one hundred thousand pounds. He] was accused “of having pushed the aristocracy, even under the old regime, to the point of claiming that it descends came from the (Jewish) family of Levi, and that he was by that very the first noble of the kingdom..., for having flatly done his court of kings and of having erected statues for them... of having played his section by giving him 30 pounds for the poor per month... ”

How many more! Aaron Lopes, Moyse Lange, Herzog, Moyse-Marc Foi, were under various pretexts, but especially “for having maintained a neutrality unworthy of a rep- 'blicain', put on notice by this Commission, and under the same form, to provide for the needs and maintenance of sans-culottes from Bordeaux.

Péreire avoided such a harsh end by dealing directly with ment with Jean-Baptiste Lacombe, member of this Com- assignment ; but, just as things turned out, this sans-culotte was, less than a year later, sentenced to death as an “exactor”, – extortioner, prevaricator and, as such, traitor to the homeland”. Among its judges was a Jew, Azevedo!. But there were also some, and the number is relatively large, who carried their heads on the scaffold? In this long massacre, many victims remained in forgetting; the names of a few others belong to his tory: such, in Paris, as the Freys, the Calmers, the Pereyras... _Surprised by the violence of political passions, they were the trials brought against the leaders of the parties they had formed the minions, they were enveloped in the formidable qualification of "suspects" who were placed on the big "actors" tators" and included in the same security measures . general. Their existence at this time is quite moving so that we dedicate a few pages to them.

THE GUILLOTINE | 235

4. The Universal Abbreviator, n° 362, 543, 565; – The Annals of the Republic French Bible, No. 326; – La Gazette française, n° 104; – The Postillon of Calais, n° 1068, of 25 Vendémiaire year VII; – The Paris Journal, No. 320, from Friday April 7, 4795. |

2. Cf. Léon Kahn, The Jews in Paris from the 6th century to the present days... (Paris, 1889). |

CHAPTER V

JACOB PEREYRA

The first of them to perish on the scaffold was Jacob Pereyra.

Jacob Pereyra was a native of Bayonne. Arrived in Paris for the Federation of 1790, with the crowd of delegates who came seal the union of the departments and the capital, he established definitively his residence. Until then he had lived on his income. I] soon organized, in association with a named La Borde, a "manufacture of all kinds of tobacco". His house, which bore the sign: Au bonne de la Liberté, was installed at rue Saint-Denis, 443. I] took up residence in the same street, at number 55.

The importance of his industry did not prevent him from throw into the political movement. He was received at Saint-Roch club which, with the Cordeliers and the Feuillants, had formed members of the first Jacobins club sans-culottes. He was then among the most important Jacobins ardent. There, no doubt, he became friends with Pio, a former clerk at war, the fly in the ointment of military offices; with Hébert, Father Duchesne; Vincent, authorizing commissioner of the war; Ronsin, who was general in the armies of the Vendée; Momoro, printer; and Anacharsis Clootz, the speaker to have seen it more than four or five times.

However fiercely republican it may have been, the Journal de la Cour and de la Ville claimed, the day after June 21, 1792, that Pereyra, on duty next to Louis XVI, "when the sans-breeches paid him a visit to which the Jacobins will try in vain to accustom kings", praised "of the presence of mind and noble firmness" of evil-happy sovereign. "The praise of this patriot," added this newspaper, will not appear suspicious to anyone when we know that he is a Jacobin..., an honest man moreover. »

The feeling of justice which Pereyra obeyed did not deter him point of the political line he had hitherto followed. It was became an assessor of the justice of the peace and vice-president of the section of the Good Council, when, with Proly and Dubuisson, he was entrusted at that time with an "important mission" by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and, say the Revolutions of Prudhomme, "on the way, to see the general Dumouriez to consult with him on the means of preserving Belgium A

It was on this date that the defection of Dumouriez. The three civil commissioners had the sad advantage of being the first confidants of grudges and the anger of the winner of Valmy, to wipe away, the first, the overflow of threats and insults that he launched against the Convention, and to finally unravel the real projects of the only general in whom the representatives had placed their confidence. Marat triumphed once again in his disasters predictions. . |

1. The Journal de la Cour et de la Ville, n° 60, dated June 29, 1792.
2. The Revolutions, by Prudhomme, t. XVI, no. 195.

238 TERROR

' After having recorded, in a very precise report, the conversation they had with Dumouriez, Pereyra, Proly and Dubuisson returned hastily to Paris, where they informed the representatives of the people of the plans of the winner of Belgium. They were immediately put in security. "Not that we suspect them," said Mercier, "in his Annals, but not to lose sight of the so precious witnesses. » It was, in fact, only a precaution. The Convention could not at first believe in the infamy of "the most fool of all the scoundrels devoured by the thirst for blood and greatness"; but, in the face of irrefutable evidence that Civil commissioners were released. Much better, in the session of April 6, 1793, chaired by Jean Debry, the minister of Foreign Affairs reminded the Convention that it had "welcomed with kindness the mission of the citizens Proly, Pereyra and Dubuisson"; that they were the first to "discover the betrayal of Dumouriez"; that "they could make still important services", and that "the reward which would flatter them the most would be a declaration of the Convention that these citizens have well deserved from the homeland. There motion, seconded by Montaut, was immediately decreed!.

His official mission accomplished, Pereyra remained in Paris. He assiduously frequented the Jacobins club, of which he was a member. one of the delegates to the Central Insurrection Committee, who was the origin of the Committee of Public Safety?. But at the same time

1. Annals of Mercier, No. XCII, April 3, 1793; – Mercury universel, t. XX VI, n° 769, of April 8, 1793; – The Revolutions of Prudhomme, t. XVI, no. 195.

2. The Israelite Archives of France (t. I, p. 421) published, in 1841, under the title of: Memoirs of a Jewish peddler, a moving story following before which Pereyra would have saved this peddler from the guillotine. Pereyra, while fleeing, would have "thrown his card" to the unfortunate man who would have read on his influential position began to attract enmity. Barbaroux, in a poster – very curious, say the Annals of the French Republic', – and which was plastered at the Palais-Royal, denounced him as being part, with Gusman, Proly, Desfieux and Pio, from a foreign committee, said Calonne Committee, which he accused of having directed the latest last days. However, the denunciation, coming from a Girondin, in no way diminished the credit that Pereyra enjoyed – knows to the Jacobins.

JACOB PEREYRA 239

In a club session, reported by the Journal des Jacobins, and which took place on the "twenty-eighth day of the 4th" month of the year II" (October 49, 1793), Pereyra obtained the radiation of Kellermann?. : |

This general had written from Chambéry "to congratulate himself for having made patriotism triumph in the department of Mont-Blanc, and he asked the Society to confirm the title to him general of the Jacobins that the enemies had given him. Pereyra spoke out strongly against this claim: "It is very surprising, he said, that Mr. Kellermann would allow himself to far removed from giving it; it is a mockery, and I swear that, if I had been eloquent enough to persuade all Society, he would have been punished a long time ago (Applause.) I ask that it be removed. » The radiation was pronounced.

But in those troubled times when idols were of the day the next day overturned, popularity did not go without unfortunate returns. A few days later, a deputation from the

"Pereyra, member of the Committee of Public Safety". Pereyra never is part of this Committee; official documents bear this out. – THE G. Ben Levi's story is very endearing, but it seems to belong more to the novel than to history.

4. No. 179, of June 28, 1793.

2. Journal des Jacobins, n° 519, of the 30th day of the 1st month of the year II.

240 TERROR

city of Bordeaux came to assure the Company that the town, initially entirely owned by the Girondins, had returned to order, and that "the Bordeaux cavalry was going to wash in the blood of the Spaniards the shame with which she had covered herself by the rebellion lion ". The Journal of Debates and Correspondence of the Society of Jacobins! relates that Pereyra intervened at this moment: "It's a misfortune," he cried, "that this run-rie, which is entirely composed of traitors and muscadins, march against the Spaniards. He would like the sans-culottes from Bordeaux first shed the blood of . this cavalry. (Whispers). He insists and says that this run-rie is an aristocrat, and that he, who is not new in the kingdom of the Jacobins..."

At this word, a cry of indignation rose from all sides: – Down! they cried, down with the kingdom!
_ And on the motion of Desfieux, Pereyra was called to order.

For some time now the Paris Commune, ardent instigator of the measures taken against the Church, which "makes knows common cause with the enemy of the fatherland" outside and within, sought to replace the Catholic religion a cult better suited to the new ideas of the people, inspired by the natural religion of the philosophers of 18th century and the religious theories of Rousseau. THE cult of Reason would be born. Considerable efforts were made to establish it in the form of a national cult. Léonard Bourdon, Thomas Lindey, Chaumette, Hébert and vention was initially strongly opposed to it. But the Constitution civil tutelage of the clergy had undermined the religious edifice; the con-

4. Journal of Debates and Correspondence, No. 505, September 29 November 1793; – Journal de la Montagne, n° 119, of September 29; – The Annals of the French Republic, n° 278–279, October 3.

í JACOB PEREYRA 241

secretion of constitutional priests had shaken him; and he All it took was a light push to do it completely. collapse. |

The Jacobins entrusted this care to Pereyra and Anacharsis Cloomz. "They said to each other! that, if they could obtain the abdication solemn statement of the bishop of Paris and his clergy, this shining example would perhaps lead to dechristianization _ from all over France. » And this approach was attempted at the time even where the holy hunt was transferred to the Mint Geneviève, patroness of Paris. |

"The day before, 16 Brumaire (year II), says Abbot Grégoire in his History of religious sects?, Léonard Bourdon delivers, at the Jacobins club, a speech full of impieties crude, which seems a preparation for the impieties of the day after hand. That same day, Cloomz and Pereyra went, at eleven o'clock in the evening, at Gobel's who was in bed, and who gets up for the. receive. They suggest he go to the Convention and to recant his errors. He replies: "I don't know any errors in my religion and I have none to abjure. " – " He It is not a question, they tell him, of discussing your principles, but to sacrifice yourself to public affairs, to give in to the wishes of people by abdicating your functions which they no longer want..." Gobel, overcome by terror, is dragged rather than consented. taken to the bar of the Convention, and there, in a trembling voice. blante, he declared that, yielding to public opinion, he abdicated: his ministry 3."

Bishop Gobel then laid down his cross and ring; we.

1. The Cult of Reason and the Supreme Being, by F.-A. Bacon. Paris, 1892.

2. History of Religious Sects, by Abbé Grégoire (Paris, 1828–1845). |

3. Bishop Gobel later recounted this scene, which took place without a presented him with the red cap, which he wore in the middle of the enthusiastic applause from the Convention.

242 TERROR

The role that Pereyra and Clootz played in this affair was their death sentence. |

Robespierre, who had followed this cam-philosophical loincloth and who had tacitly disapproved of it, rose with energy, at the Société des Jacobins, the 4th fri-mayor year II, against "the religion of atheism", and denounced those who adopted such a system. He concludes by denouncing cant "foreign agents", Dubuisson, Proly, Pereyra, Desfieux, and by proposing a purifying ballot, the principle was enthusiastically voted for.

Revolutionary justice was quickly underway. On the 3rd fri-mayor, a search was carried out in the two homes of Pereyra. The seals were affixed there by the commissioners of the Good Council section and that of the Lombards. There custody was entrusted to "the citizen Rachel, his wife, who took charge of it under the penalties imposed by the law! ".

On Frimaire 4, Pereyra was removed from the Society of Jacobins and incarcerated, the same day, with his friends, in the prison of Sainte-Pélagie. This is where, he said, he was provisional-been lying for a month, which he had posted on the walls of Paris, next to Le Chant du Coq, Le Babillard, [Ami des citizens and proclamations of the hideous Maillard, a poster thus designed? :

PREMIUM TO BE GRANTED

Three hundred pounds of Virginia tobacco for the one who proves sole action of Pereyra, tobacco merchant, residing in Paris,

4 National Archives, F⁷ 4774/67.

2. The Universal Abbreviator, n° 363, of 9 Nivôse year II, rue Denis, n° 55, tending to stop the Revolution since July 14

let 1789.

No one responded to his invitation. On Pluviôse 12, he was transferred to Saint-Lazare. It was from there that he addressed the Committee general security a letter justifying his conduct,
and here it is! ::

To the members of the General Security Committee

Submitted to your decrees, I hasten to obey that of 8 Ventôse on the prisoners. Since July 16, 89, I have been one of the first who took up arms and the cockade in Bordeaux. I established the first club. I made, with my brothers in arms, the decree which condemned the incendiary indictment of Dudon, general prosecutor ral, to be burned. I did the Montauban campaign. Federated by the national club in 1790, I did not leave Paris, I brought my family, I have always been a Jacobin. I never missed a session. I was shot with many of my brothers, true Jacobins, at the Champ de Mars. I have always fought all factions.
I am esteemed by my section, I have always walked with it. I have signed, with these true republicans, the petition of July 26 for the fall of the former king. On the day of the 10th, I did not abandoned our flags or our cannons for an instant. In the Belgium, we know my conduct with the traitor Dumouriez. I have been honored with a decree from the National Convention, which I had well deserved by the homeland. I signed at the bar of the Convention the address of my section which requested the decree of accusation against the 22 deputies where the right side wanted to brand me with a red hot iron.
On May 31 and June 2, no one is unaware of the happy part that my section in these happy days, I did not give up one only moment my brothers in arms.

I was detained for three months in Sainte-Pélagie prison and transferred to Saint-Lazare on an open cart. I am suffering without murmuring. My section?, of its own initiative, has indeed

4.Arch. nat., F7 4774 67. |

2. Good Council Section. Extract from the register of deliberations of the General Assembly of 45 Frimaire year II.

244 TERROR

wanted to proclaim himself as an intact patriot who defies enemies

a single fact since the Revolution of which I am not proud.
I await my freedom under the decree.

Hello and brotherhood.

Pereyra, gunner of the revolutionary army,
at the Liberty Cap, rue Denis, 551,

I] only left Saint-Lazare to be taken to the tri.bunal revolutionary. He appeared there on 30 Ventôse in company of nineteen other accused, among whom were Hébert, Ronsin, Vincent, Momoro and Anacharsis Clootz.

Pereyra, then aged fifty-one, was interrogated on thirteenth. He] had to answer several accusations.

It was a crime then to have friendly relations with Beaumarchais. Beaumarchais, accused of having made a "four-unfaithful niture", had been greatly worried, and, for escape as much from the summary justice of this terrible time that due to personal enmities, he had taken refuge in London. Pereyra was linked with him, he had taken up his defense; and, if we are to believe Jacques Moine, accounting agent of a weapons workshop, who was one of his prosecution witnesses before the revolutionary tribunal, Pereyra "made himself the advocate indecent of the immoral Beaumarchais.

Pereyra protested against this reproach. In reality, he had content to say that "the above-mentioned" could not be punished for its provision, "even supposing it to be unfaithful". He was able to declare that he had "essential obligations"
to Beaumarchais, but, he added in obscure language,
"this declaration had been dictated to him rather by the character

1.Arch. nat., F? 4774/67.

JACOB PEREYRA 245

"pleasant and facetious that we only know him through an attachment
"particularly for Beaumarchais".

Pleasant and facetious! Judging by one fairly incident recent, Pereyra could hardly pass for the joyful companion he said he was.

the office of Col Nidré, he presented himself at one of the synagogues of Holy Spirit (that of Brandon), wearing leather shoes. It was then a real violation of religious customs.

Despite the observation made to him that one could not, that night, let him enter the Temple only with felt shoe or slippers, he claimed to want stay there.

Protests broke out, and the uproar became so great that the parnass (head of the community) had to request the police to expel the troublemaker.

The day after the Great Fast, wanting revenge on the insult that had been done to him, he presented himself, armed with two pistols, at the home of the president of the Community, and made `- fired at him, fortunately without hitting him.

News of this attack spread quickly through town, and, faced with the explosion of anger he caused, Pereyra had to flee. I] immediately left Bayonne. |

Destiny led him to the revolutionary tribunal where he had to exonerate himself from other serious charges.

He was reproached, says the Bulletin of the Revolutionary Tribunal-naire', of having conspired in the prison, jointly with his fellow prisoners, "to destroy national representation; but these conspirators did not agree on the means ©

4. Bulletin of the Revolutionary Tribunal, No. 11. Ronsin case, Hébert, etc., nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6.

246 TERROR

to assassinate the Fatherland. It appears that, in distrust of one against the other, they feared to give themselves up entirely and displayed exterior impostors of patriotism to deceive themselves repeatedly shortly. » Furthermore, "Pereyra said he was the author of the day of May 31, added that she had not had the outcome that we should expect some, that we needed a second thirty-and-one may, but directed quite differently than the first; he announced that things were going to take a turn for the better different and that it would not take long. He said again that he was counting the minutes of his detention to bring down so many heads when it is enlarged. He had been, at May 31, 1793, mixed with a certain number of conspirators, at a project which consisted of establishing a triumvirate, composed of

of the guillotine.

He was condemned to death, on 4 Germinal year II, by the revolutionary tribunal of Paris, "as an accomplice of a piracy against the freedom and security of the French people, tending to disturb the State with a civil war, by arming the citizens against each other, and against the exercise of legitimate authority, as a result of which, in the course of ventôse, conspirators had to dissolve the representation national, assassinate its members, the patriots, destroy the republican government, seize the sovereignty of people and give the state a tyrant! ". |

– The same cart, which carried Hébert, Ronsin, Anarcharis Cloutz, carried away Pereyra. "Never executed," they say. the Annals of Mercier?, had attracted such a large crowd

1. General and impartial history of errors, mistakes, crimes committed during the French Revolution, by Prudhomme, t. V; – And Bulletin of the Revolutionary Tribunal, loc. cit.

2. Annals of Mercier, n° 446, 5 germinal year II.

JACOB PEREYRA 247

crowd of spectators; everywhere in their path there were fights hands, and we swing the hats in the air shouting: Long live the Republic! They seemed quite insensitive to the indignity which was manifested against them. » |

Shortly after the death of her husband, Rachel Pereyra, if we are to believe Le Bois, public accuser of the criminal from Paris, had left the capital, "in accordance with decree which excluded all people of his species." We have it was looking for, on 14 Messidor Year II, because she was a "witness absolutely necessary" in a police case accused of embezzlement, and that in his absence we found ourselves forced to adjourn the trial. Did we find her? Above it folder is silent. The widow Pereyra did not care without _ doubt of finding herself face to face with her husband's murderers!.

oo"

4. National Archives, F7 4774/67.

CHAPTER VI

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT

The Hébertists faction was no more, and its fall had raised still the power of the "virtuous", of |' "incorruptible" Robespierre. But the patriots who hampered his ambition, his interests, had not all disappeared. The genius of Danton's tone offended him, and he was already thinking of getting rid of his dangerous rival and of those who formed with him an important part of the Mountain in the Convention. But the motives for this new bloody sacrifice were lacking, and Danton's popularity forced Robespierre to make great ` with due care. He was a cunning mind. He tacked. Couldn't we cannot expect everything from the citizen unknown to all at first days of the Revolution, of the one they called, as he was ignored, Robespierre, Robertzpiere, Robes-Pierre, Robets-Pierre, and who, through the pitfalls where so many others succumb – bent, showed himself to be so clever that he almost became dictator in the Republic ? | |

He then showed all his skill, all his strength. He understands began by taking Fabre d'Églantine, Delaunay, Chabot, Bazire, by falsely accusing them of stock trading, and he associated in this denunciation the abbot of Espagnac, the two Freys, Diderichsen and Gusman the Spaniard.

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 249

What were these Freys to whom, in order to lose more surely Chabot, an important role was attributed in the imaginary plot that the conventional Amar had so many difficult to set up?

It was in 1792 that their name was first mentioned. first time. They were then in Strasbourg. J.-Ch. Therecalves, who was editor of the Courrier de Strasbourg, and whose sheet served as a supplement to the Chronicle of Paris, had just appeared in court. Jacobin, he had been accused of "having degraded the established authorities" and to have, in the Society of Friends of the Constitution, "provoked to murder and civil war." On May 16, 1792, he had been absolved by "the juror of judgment".

His acquittal attracted a large number of witnesses. sympathy. Among the most eager to him mark their enthusiasm, was J.-G. Frey. He imagined to send the Jacobins of Strasbourg 16 and a half louis in er and 400 pounds in assignats to strike twenty any part of the "triumph" of "Brother Laveaux!". In the letter which accompanied this sending, this "very orthodox Jacobin" announced his departure for Paris, and, in order to show his attachment to the Society, he added: "I requests you to receive payment in advance of the three tri- next months, at the expiration of which I intend to be back in your womb? ". There was never to be any more traitor. |

Mr. Frey, it was said in Strasbourg, was a gentleman German that the love of the Constitution had led in

1. Courrier de Strasbourg, n° 146, 122, 123, of May 18, 25 and 26, 1792;
– The Universal Mercury, t. XV, n° 450, of May 23, 1792.
2. Courrier de Strasbourg, n° 123, of May 26. |

250 | TERROR

France to enjoy the right of French citizenship; it was for two months "on the land of freedom", and he had already donated 400 pounds for war costs and a another donation of 400 pounds to compensate Laveaux for his illegal imprisonment.

The generous actions of this "rare citizen", his ardent Jacobinism, attracted enemies. He was especially taken to part by "a certain, daub journalist who, said Laveaux, barks insults here every day with brazen terie which is certainly without example! ". This "fool Feuillant de Strasbourg", as Citizen Frey called him, was a man named Chairoux. He was concerned about the origins of "German gentleman" and claimed, among other things, that we knew neither his homeland, nor his fortune, nor his profession, nor his mission. Frey took revenge for these attacks in a strong way. spiritual. Assuring that "being insulted by a feillant and loved by the Jacobins, it is the sweetest fate of which a man can enjoy on earth", he wrote down "twenty sous" for every word that Chairoux had printed or would publish against him. And as a provision he sent 200 livres to the Jacobins. Then, answering the gazetteer's indiscreet questions, he added: "Let him come to my house, this Chairoux who gave me priest the pleasure of doing a good deed, and I will prove to him embracing it that my homeland is the world, my profession to do good, my mission that of all sentient souls sible, and my fortune considerable enough to pay at 20 sous the word all the nonsense he could say against me without to repeat ?... "

- i. Le Courrier de Strasbourg, n° 122.
2. Id., n° 122. }

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 251

with Laveaux, on June 10, and, that same evening, they presented themselves were both members of the Society of Friends of the Constitution. There, on the presentation of the editor of the Courrier de Strasbourg, J.-G. Frey and his brother Emmanuel, who had it without probably accompanied on his journey, became friends with Chabot, Bentabolle, Simon de Strasbourg, Minister Lebrun, Louis Bas-Rhin, etc. ?. He went to stay on rue d'Anjou, in the "faubourg" Honored."

Junius Frey soon followed suit, following the example of the conventional groups that he frequented. On the occasion of the death of Louis XVI, and to celebrate this event, he took charge of the maintenance of an old man, at the choice of the section of the Republic in whose territory he was domiciled; he acquired several emigrant properties; and, when the Republic was proclaimed, he adopted "a little Frenchman in promising to bring him up in good principles."

Once he had entered Chabot's privacy, he followed his political, and, with the ex-Capuchin, attached himself to the ruin of the party Brissotins. |

Frey also dreamed, like the speaker of humankind, of give freedom to the universe. He wrote. "None of the patriots that he attracted to his house did not enter without surprising him the pen in hand, dreaming about the rights of humanity or hunched over the works of Plutarch or Jean-Jacques. » He published "two extremely patriotic works", the Anti-Federalist and social philosophy. He pushed friendship for Chabot until he adorns himself like this fierce mountaineer: "The austere exterior and revolutionary costume of Junius

—

4. Le Courrier de Gorsas, No. XI, June 11.

2. Cf. A Royalist Conspirator 'during the Terror (Israelite Universe n° 28 et seq., April 3, 1896, 51st year).

3. Le Journal de la Montagne, n° 128, of October 8, 1793.

responded perfectly to the idea of such a great character:
the philosophical cut of her hair, the red cap
which adorned his philosophical head, guaranteed to all earth the purity of his patriotism!. »

The moment came when this intimacy became even closer.
The Freys and Chabots became "one and the same family". THE Frey in fact had a sister, Léopoldine, aged sixteen.
years, which the vicar of the bishop of Blois had requested in marriage for one of his friends, a merchant. Junius refused this alliance, and, without hesitation, offered the young girl to Chabot:
"My sister was asked for by millionaires, I left her Refused. If you don't take it, no one will have it in France. » Chabot took it. Léopoldine was proud of this union with a sans-culotte who, "after Robespierre", was "the greatest of the French. |

While everyone could fear not seeing it shine
again the day was falling, it was for a man politics a reckless enterprise, at the end of the year 1793, than to chain his fate to that of a young girl, a child almost. Chabot, full of presumptuous con-engaged in the future, claimed and could believe in long days of bliss. 1] was indeed among the representatives

the most popular of that time. The Parisians con-were born well. They knew it easily, familiarly, and they had some weakness for this castoff with the big laugh, with an open physiognomy, which frightened them neither by its political moderation, nor by the austerity of its morals:
fierce mountaineer, he sat in the Convention alongside the Bazire, Philippeaux, Camille, Danton, Robes-rock ; very sociable man, especially with women, he

z

1. A Royalist Conspirator...

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 253

had tender and frequent i for their failures-spears – and his own.

was severe towards them; his intransi- political mood.
giant softens; and he subdued his monk's outbursts debauchery.

, He soon gave his fiancée a serious pledge of his wisdom. He complained to the Convention that a revolutionary committee sionary of women took part in ruling the Republic.
"Their leader," he said, "came to threaten me with all his hatred feminine, I know what we expose ourselves to by embittering a woman, all the more so when one embitters a big one number; but I fear neither their intrigues nor their words,
nor their threats'. » _

We laugh and applaud this joke from the new Chabot;
and a gazetteer, who was reporting the incident, added with a narrative air-
what: "We fear that the little annoyances of the ladies revolutionaries do not disturb the first moments of this union ê. » She must have been troubled by much Braver ones events.

Chabot was no stranger to the noise and emotion that _ caused the news of his marriage. He had given her a wide publicity both to the municipality and to its section, and had announced it very loudly to his colleagues in the Convention; so much so, said a journalist, that "we believed that he would also have presented his wife.

These gazetteers were already very indiscreet at that time.
They were wondering who this charmer was who had so quick reason of the fiery mountaineer, and, despite the

- i. The Journal des Débats jacobins, n° 498, dated September 18, 1793.
- . 2. Annals of the French Republic, n° 278-279, of October 3.
3. Id., no. 214, of September 30.

254 TERROR

anxieties of the present hour, they were quickly
built on the circumstances of this marriage.

Chabot didn't seem to want to hide anything from them. HAS the tribune of the Convention, to the Jacobins, to the gazettes, he recounted this surprising adventure in detail and each one soon learned the most secret details. :

"I had here," he recounted, "one of my parents whose fortune could suit the citizen Frey, sister of two jaco-

that for a long time it had been hidden from all male eyes:
I asked her elder brother for this relative; what was my surprise when he told me that he didn't want to give it to himner, because he had intended it for me for a long time; I was all the more surprised that his fortune cannot be compared to a capuchin pension of 700 livres; it is true that I have bought a national asset in my country, but I intend it to my parents, aged over eighty, to whom I have the greater obligation.

"I told Citizen Frey that I could not accept his sister for a wife, because I had nothing to offer him with my hand; he replied to me: This is why I want you reward, I give you 200,000 pounds with the hand of my sister, Since that time, I have seen her, I love her, I do not asks more than her; I'm not asking for his money; She didn't know me; but she was in love with my patriotism; this is enough to tell you that she is patriotic; she has
of the sensitive mind and heart; I don't need any more tage!. »

The bans were published on September 29. The wedding

i. Morning and evening newspaper of the Friends of Liberty and Legality.
Society of Jacobins, of October 5, 1193, no. 883.

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 259

was set for October 8. On the 5th, the defrocked Capuchin, after having gave the Jacobins reading of his contract, invited them to name-Wed a delegation to attend his wedding and the ban-civic quest which was to follow. "I warn them," he added, that no priest will defile my wedding and that we use rons than the municipality. The deputation would like to attend return at eight o'clock, because I want everything to be finished for new. » [] did not in fact want to "miss" the National Convention, and his wife told him that "she would stop loving him, if it made him neglect just once
the Convention or the Jacobins? ".

These childish confidences were first received by loud applause. But Dufourny spoke out against the request from Chabot, blamed him for marrying a foreigner, and the company, on his motion, moved to the agenda.

. This first failure must have been sensitive to Chabot. It was not however only a warning. A few more weeks late, the storm gathered over the head of the mountaineer and, from

to the Jacobins that he rose.

On several occasions, allusions to it had been made to this marriage. None were flattering. They manifested themselves loudly the day the members of the society passed in the purge vote. Chabot took the opportunity to be surprised of the slanders that were spread on this subject about his account. |

Dufourny F'cried: "Did we marry you?" " And,

4. Le Journal de Perlet, no. 383, October 10.

– 2. Le Journal des Jacobins, n° 304; – The Morning and Sow Journal of Liberty and Legality, No. 883, of October 5, 1793; – The Journal of la Montagne, n° 128, of October 8, 1793; – Le Moniteur, n° 19, of October 10, 1793; – Le Journal de Perlet, No. 383, October 10.

256 | TERROR

pushing hard on the ex-vicar of Blois, he accused him of having defied public opinion by entering into an advantageous marriage people, while a representative of the people must not laugh after wealth. "I will say," continued Dufourny, "that he defied public opinion by marrying a foreigner, and in what time again? When Antoinette was in the chair of revolutionary court; when the nation was at its peak mum of execration for foreigners; when our brothers, who are on the borders, have left us widows to con-

soler, sisters, parents to help; that's when

Chabot enters into an interested marriage with an Austrian woman. A woman is a piece of clothing. If this garment was necessary at Chabot, he had to remember that the nation had proscribed foreign fabrics. » | |

Chabot protested against the accusation of which he was the bish: He offered to put his head on the scaffold immediately, if the rity of these facts was recognized. And finally he called the "good citizens" to his aid to unmask the slander deniers. |

A voice fell into the icy silence that this unfortunate apostrophe: |

"Thus spoke the 21 on their way to the guillotine! »

This was the signal for his condemnation.

Although Chabot "called himself to order", he was—rejected from society. And, a few days later, the Freys, who had been able to probe, at this session which they attended, the depth of the abyss into which their step-in-law had dragged them brother, were in turn put to the vote.

Auvray, at this moment, exclaimed:

"I observe that these two individuals are foreign barons. gers, the brothers-in-law of Chabot, and that as such they do not can be admitted into society. » —

of

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 257

—And, in turn, "these two individuals" were rejected!.

It was 26 Brumaire year II. The next day, Chabot was stopped.

We then sought, to instruct his trial, what it was that these Freys who, it was said, "had not sought Chabot's alliance only to use him as a way of course to escape police surveillance and achieve their goal? ". The gazettes had, at the time of his marriage to Léopoldine, already published some information gments about their origin and their family: |

The family of Léopoldine Frey-Minaires, said a newspaper, is originally from Bohemia; she is of the Jewish religion and not of that of the Moravian brothers, as had been said. The grandfather Frey, during the Seven Years' War, made considerable purchases for the service of the Empress of Hungary, so that the Court of Vienna found himself owing a sum of two million to this family. She demanded payment for a long time and in vain... | But the empress was very keen on the propagation of the faith Catholic in his States, Leopoldine's father was persuaded to abjure the faith of Moses to follow the apostolic religion and Roman, which he did successfully, since then the empress, in favor of his abjuration, granted him as payment the beautiful lands of Found-Schomberg, around Brünn, valued at father neglected nothing to give him, as well as his two brothers, a brilliant and careful education; since the Revolution, this family, having realized its large assets in assignats, came to settle to France to taste the sweetness of freedom; she stared his home in Paris, rue d'Anjou, section of the Republic, It was there that Chabot met the citizen Léopoldine 3.

1. The Mountain Journal, No. 5, of 26 Brumaire Year II; – The sea-universal cure, t. 34, n° 987, of 1° Frimaire year II; – The United Monitor verse, t. XX, p. 49.

2. National Archives, W 342/648, no. 13.

3. Annals of the French Republic, October 4, 1793.

17

258 TERROR

Specific denunciations helped the police in their investigation. General Trenck, for example, furious, it was said, of having been eliminated from the Jacobins at the instigation of Junius Frey and his brother, pursued them with his hatred. If although, with the help of voluntary indicators, the office of police were able to provide the "Jacobin commissioners in charge to examine the case of the city. Chabot » the fairly complete note which we will read:

The Freys were born Jewish under the name of Tropuscka in Moravia, ennobled under the name of Schoenfeld. There are two brothers here and three in the service of Austria. The Countess their sister was baptized ago three years. There are still two other sisters in Vienna, only one of whom ement was baptized and is maintained by a German baron. Frey the eldest, in Paris, is married; his wife is in Vienna with two | of his daughters, and a sixteen-year-old son whom he placed in the revolutionary army. lutionnaire, whom he passes off as his nephew. We don't know them no other fortune than a lot of debt in Germany. Their connections sounds particular to Paris were those of Lavau, the former editor of the Journal de la Montagne, and Périgny, former deputy to the minister of the navy, which men were their close friends. Who- who only frequented them for a while must have noticed that these two beings were the most cunning intriguers that could be consequently find suspicious and dangerous beings. They are given all movements by all means to

tion and popularity, hoping thereby, through a false patriotism, deserve their trust and subsequently achieve the first Places de la République 1.

The Committee of Public Safety had already ensured that Léopoldine who, as a general security measure, had been taken to the English women, while Chabot was locked up in Luxembourg. It is from there that, animated by a feeling that one could not

4. National Archives, W 342/648, no. 14.

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 259

hardly expect from this profound egoist, he protested to the Convention against the detention of his wife.

I had the courage to dedicate myself to the interests of the Republic. blique, he writes, on 7 Nivôse year I; but I don't have the ability to sacrifice also my parents and my friends. The Republic section has arrested a friend who was leaving my house to console my sister on the absence of what she cherishes; and because one day list said, perhaps through inattention, that I served the views of Pitt, my wife was arrested for no other reason than I'm-even stopped. The Hébertists are therefore more daring than the Brissotins; because they did not attack my freedom; It is therefore a very terrible crime to have wanted to unmask the agents of Pitt and Cobourg, since, for 42 days, I have been moaning in irons? Justice, representatives, justice! And above all that we respect my wife, my sister, mother of eleven children, who who has experienced persecution all too often and who alone has fought in a country against all the supporters of the Brissotins 1."

This cry of pity was heard. Merlin rose up, at the Convention, against this measure which nothing justified, and the Committee of general security was charged with rendering justice to the woman and Chabot's sister.

_ Léopoldine Frey was released; but she found herself alone in her big house on rue d'Anjou in the suburbs Honored Saint ; his brothers, arrested on 4 Germinal Year II, were then to the Port-Libre prison where, says a Chronicle of time, "they made a very big expense and found that the caterer did not sell two chops for enough and a bottle of Bordeaux wine for the sum of 44 pounds."

1. Annals of the French Republic, No. 30, of 10 Nivôse year II; – The universal Mercury, t. 35, n° 1023, of 9 Nivôse year II; – The Abbreviator universal, n° 364, of 10 Nivôse year IT. i |

260 TERROR

Chabot was seriously indicted. At the Jacobins, Dufourny continued to violently reproach him for his marriage and pro-invoked against him, on Germinal 7, a decree declaring "traitor to the country he who takes an Austrian wife female dog ". And this decree was solemnly served on the accused. judge of the revolutionary tribunal! Dufourny finally accused him "for having released two Austrians, his brothers-in-law, that the section of the Republic had put in place of arrest". |

Although Chabot assured that all this was false, his detention tion continued: Robespierre's faction had not yet fixed neither the accomplices nor the points of the formal conspiracy dable in which, with his brothers-in-law, the ex-capuchin went be included, at the same time as Danton, Lacroix, Camille Desmoulins, Delaunay d'Angers, Hérault de Scales, Fabre d'Églantine, etc., etc.

At the Convention, people were getting impatient. Sinister noises were running. Every day brought a new arrest; every day the conspiracy of which the Dantonists were accused extended further, and it did not seem that the investigation into this vast affair was about to be closed. | Amar, in charge of the report on the accomplices of this "darkness" "breux" plot, rose from time to time to the rostrum, rising with indignation against "shameful relationships and criminal offenses" which linked the culprits amalgamated between them. I] especially obtained great success the day he gave reading at the Convention of a letter that Chabot had come to write to the General Security Committee and where he declared that the 200,000 pounds that his wife had brought him were "of no effect". He knew it when he signed the contract.

1. Annals of Mercier, n° CCCCXL, of 27 Ventôse year II. |

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 261

"These are 200,000 books which the nation can seize! »

tion, but also public opinion?. From now on, the last sympathies he could have preserved abandoned him. The very people kept silent until this news and bloody execution could frighten for the future. There cause was now heard.

The charges were finally established. Amar spared neither Chabot nor the Freys: "Chabot and Fabre d'Églantine, he said, had shameful and criminal relationships with agents of the Compagnie des Indes: they falsified your decrees, that is their crime. In the number of individuals compromised are a Count of Proly, presumed natural son from Kaunitz; the second is a Count of Frey, brother-in-law of Chabot, sold to the Austrian faction. This Frey has two brothers in the service of Austria; they were ennobled by Marie-Thérèse, mother of Capet's wife; and Chabot, in his interrogation, he himself tells us that he suspects that these men gave him their sister to attract a reputation for patriotism. Their vanity, he says, was flattered to have in their family the first revolutionary of TEurope; they gave 200,000 pounds in marriage to their 'sister, and Chabot was not afraid to bond with this family! He himself tells us that in Vienna these men were hanged in effigy; but, he adds, it is because of their works for the propagation of freedom. Is this pattern admissible 3? »

Chabot felt lost. Bored with his detention which was becoming

4. The universal Mercury, t. 37, n° 1100, of 27 Ventôse year II.
– 2. Schmidt tables. Situation of Paris, from 27 Ventôse year II.

3. Annals of Mercier, n° 440, of 27 Ventôse; – Le Batave, n° 396, from 28 Ventose.

262 TERROR

every day more severe, foreseeing, by the way in which he had treated the others, the fate reserved for him, he resolved to poison himself to avoid the fatal guillotine. "It was his woman who managed to make him hold the poison; but he didn't have it no sooner swallowed than, not being able to resist the pains which were tearing his insides apart, he began to ring the bell and shout at the Help!.,. »

[he was saved from death, but for a few days. And the news that he "was out of danger and that he was no longer running that that of torture" was received everywhere "with satisfaction? ",

Three days later, the trial of the Dantonists began before the revolutionary court. We know what Chabot was accused: "He had felt the need to take advantage of all opportunities to improve one's lot? » ; the Compa affair genius of the Indies and his intrigues with the Freys, "secret agents foreign powers whose channels of communication they directed corruption", had helped him in his criminal designs.

"Sigismund Junius Frey 5, aged thirty-six years, native of Brunn in Moravia, supplier to the armies, domiciled in Paris, rue d'Anjou-saint-Honoré;

" And

"Emmanuel Frey, aged twenty-seven, native of Brunn in Moravia, living on his income, domiciled in Paris, rue of Anjou-Saint-Honoré ®",

Appeared in turn, on 13 Germinal Year II, before the revolutionary court.

- . Prisons in 1793 (Paris, 1830).
- . Paintings by Schmidt...
- . Criminal Court Bulletin, No. 11.
- . Id. ~
- . The letters we cited above and which he wrote to Strasbourg bourg were signed J.-G. Frey.
- 6. Criminal Court Bulletin, No. 16.

Om © N =

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 263

The batch included 15 accused. Junius was questioned the thirteenth, and his brother the fourteenth.

Here is the part of their interrogation which concerns their cause, their origin, their relationships, and which opens with some questions asked to a man named Diderichsen, Danish, who was closely linked with them.

D. Deidericksen, were you not in Vienna in 1791? Didn't live you not with the Frey brothers? |

A. The fact is true and this is the moment to repay my benevolence owe them the tribute of gratitude that I owe them. So I admit lived with me, as did his wife and children.

Did not D. Junius Frey have frequent conferences with the emperor ?

A. I was aware of these conferences without knowing their purpose.

D. Did you not make several trips to England, then in Brest, Strasbourg and other places? Who provided you with the money to make these trips? Who did you get the money from? considerable amounts that you lent to different people in Paris?

A. I repeat again that I have been overwhelmed with the benefits Frey citizens; that they lent me two hundred large crowns for make my trip, that they send me some at the first request, that their generosity increased during my residence in Paris, and that the Danish ambassador also gave me help and made every effort to help me.

D. Were the Frey brothers persecuted by the Emperor, as they claim it?

A. I know that the Emperor did not fulfill the promises by 'do him to Junius; that the latter presented several requests in the imperial cabinet; that Emperor Leopold had formed the plan of a trading company, which Junius had made several advances on this subject and that he has not been reimbursed.

D. Deidericksen, are you not aware that the woman of Junius holds a great state in Vienna? Haven't you been charged by this family with various negotiations?

A. It is true that Junius's wife enjoyed a great opulence, that Deidericksen has the confidence of this family, and as such has been used in different occasions sions.

264 | TERROR

D. Junius, you claimed to have been stripped of all your goods by the Emperor, whom you elected in a kind of indigence upon your arrival in Paris; how is it then that you have found everything at once enough to exist and generously provide – to Deidericksen's needs. |

A. My income was stopped for several years; but my wife, adopted daughter of an opulent man, had to disposal of funds for nearly two million, and sent me that I was not the agent of the Emperor, it was because I was chased away of Berlin as an emissary of Jacobin propaganda.

D. How then, having no existence except that which you took from your wife, did you give your sister a dowry of 200,000 pounds by marrying her to Chabot?

A. I had promised the 200,000 livres, and they were not due than within the five-year period. | `

. D. Emmanuel Frey, what did you come to do in Paris?

A. I came to enjoy the freedom promised by the French; I have followed my brother, as a son follows his father, and I I will not regret having followed his example; I will even die willingly with him.

D. Did you not have frequent connections with Pereyra, Proly and Dubuisson? i

A. I have never been around the people they are talking to me about; concentrated with my brother, we lived in a kind of loneliness!.

b

Junius and Emmanuel Frey, "ex-nobles", were condemned born to death on 16 germinal year II by the revolution tribunal-

nary of Paris, "as accomplices of the foreign faction and the conspiracy against the French people and their freedom, said conspiracy tending to defame and degrade the representation

7

1. Bulletin of the Revolutionary Tribunal, nos. 25 and 26.

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT 265

national tation and to destroy the republican government through corruption and falsification of decrees."

The same day, the judgment was executed, in accordance to the order issued by the public prosecutor:

The executor of criminal judgments will not fail to return, today, to the Conciergerie courthouse, to carry out the judgment which condemns the names mes Lacroix, Danton, DESMOULINS, PHILIPPEAUX, HERAULT, WESTERMAN, FABRE, DELAUNAY, CHABOT, BAZIRE, DESPAGNAC, Junius FREY, EMMANUEL Frey, DRICHEUX and Gusman sentenced to [death. The execution will take place, 4 p.m., on the Place de la Revolution of this city. |

Done in court, on Germinal 16, the second year of the Republic

French. ; |
The public prosecutor,

| A.-Q. Fouquier!
Three cars.

Léopoldine Frey remained alone, without support, without experience none, at the height of the turmoil, without resources too, because the seals had been affixed to her furniture and she had sacrificed everything to pay the most pressing debts contracted by her husband and her brothers?.

She wrote to the Convention, imploring its humanity?. A decree on the general police, of 27 germinal year II, prohibiting knows, under penalty of outlawing the law, to any ex-noble or foreigner of the countries with which the Republic was at war, of reside in Paris, in strongholds or maritime towns of France until the conclusion of peace.

has]

Léopoldine Frey asked to be exempted from this law,

1. Retrospective Review, No. 1, 2nd series, January 1835.
2. Le Journal de Paris, n° 482, 8 Floréal year II.
- 3 Le Journal de Perlet, n° 582, 8 Floréal year II.

266 TERROR

adding that she was barely sixteen and a half years old, Sixteen and a half years! and she hadn't been married for six month !

The petition was referred to the Committee of Public Safety. But the Committee of Public Safety was like a tomb from which the complaints and cries of pain hardly rose to the ear of humans... Who knows what to the darkest days of the Terror became this sixteen-year-old widow! !]

1. Part of this chapter appeared in the Directory of Archives Israelites for the year 5654 (Paris, 1893–1894), under the title: La Femme de Sculpin.

CHAPTER VII

LIEFMANN'S FAMILY CALM DOWN

About twenty years before the Revolution, a native Jew from Hanover, Liefmann Calmer, came to reside in Paris with his wife and children. He kept a large household. Her fortune, acquired in army supplies, was considered saddle. His opulence, his high connections, the credit with which he enjoyed with ministers and in administrations public relations made him an important figure.

Calmer had obtained, in 1769, letters from Louis naturalness transmissible to his children. Five years later, he acquired the barony of Picquigny and emptied of Amiens at a price of 1,500,500 pounds. The stronghold of Picquigny was one of the most important lands of the kingdom. He ... not had no less than 4,809 vassals. Liefmann Calmer suddenly became a French baron!

[died in Paris on December 7, 1784. The right he had to the nobility undoubtedly brought him proud joys; it was also a source of disappointment and misery for him. A large part of his fortune was, in fact, swallowed up in

1. Directory of Israelite Archives (Paris, 1885–1886): A Jewish Baron French in the 18th century, by Isidore Loeb.

268 TERROR

an interminable process that, following its acquisition, it had to support against the bishop of Amiens and the archbishop of Sens, who denied him the right to confer power ecclesiastic attached to the barony, and demanded new

Calmer left his widow, Rachel-Moïses-Isaacs, of origin Dutch woman, and her children, the hard task of completing this trial which had poisoned the last years of his life. But in vain. The former bishop of Amiens emigrated in 1792; the archbishop of Sens was dead. Family affairs Calmer were more embarrassed than ever, and from her ancient splendor, only mediocre reliefs remained. Besides, this was not the time for demands for money. There Convention, requested to intervene in this matter, referred Calmer's heirs to appeal to the courts. A judgment had condemned M. de Machault, bishop of Amiens, to give them back a million. But the prelate does not pay, he seemed natural to them that he had "the good spirit" to share with them the treatment he enjoyed under the decrees of the National Assembly. The trial dragged on. HAS the example of the people, the judges were not favorable to powerful fortunes. The present belonged to the sacrifices patriotic; the future seemed to lie with bold politicians; the heirs of Liefmann Calmer did not dwell on the courtrooms. | | |

Of the four sons he had left, of them of them, Calmen and Meyer, remained outside the factions. They did not have to suffer from the revolutionary turmoil and died in Paris, one in 1844, the other in 1823. Both others were less happy. Antoine-Louis-Isaac threw himself in the party of the "enragés" and became a fierce sans-cheeky. Louis-Benjamin remained faithful to the king. But the ways very different in which they had engaged the condemned to the same goal: they perished on the scaffold during terror. Their sister, Sara, was worried for a moment; but she had the good fortune to be forgotten in her prison, and the 9 Thermidor saved her from the guillotine.

“

THE LIEFMANN FAMILY CALM DOWN 269

It is therefore from Antoine-Louis-Isaac, from Louis-Benjamin and of Sara Calmer that we will take care of in the pages which follow. |

CHAPTER VIII

ANTOINE-LOUIS-ISAAC CALMER}

A.-L.-I. Calmer was Liefmann's second son. It was – born in The Hague around 1746. [had married, in 1774, a Frenchwoman, Marguerite-Dorothée Metzger, who died on August 28, 1789 and left him two sons: one, aged eight, was, in 1794, in boarded with Ferret, private teacher in Champigny-sur-Marne and member of the Supervisory Committee of this commune; the other, Meyer, aged eighteen, had gone Sold in 1793, “to defend his homeland as a volunteer, dressed by his father. _ has

Gunner in the gunner marching company of the Paris Observatory, Meyer was then stationed in Saumur in Anjou. He had to stay a month in the Tours hospital, restrained by a wound which, in a fight, he had received in the thigh, and he only came out “half-healed”. Supported for a moment in the hope of obtaining a position as secretary of staff which had been promised to him by a senior officer laughing, he soon had to return to his place in the row, and the misery, suffering, privations made him grow a 1. Cf. on the subject of A.-L.-I. Calmer: National Archives, F? 4631; W2b 421/956. – Almanac des Prisons (Paris, year III): Bibl.-national, 7189-411 ter; and Léon Kahn, History of the Jewish Community of Paris, t. III: The Cemeteries (Paris, 1885).

ANTOINE-LOUIS-ISAAC CALMER 271

cry of distress. “If you have any help to give me, he wrote to his father on October 2, 1793, I am waiting for them with other so much more impatience that I lack everything: no point linen, no shoes, no clothes, some food insufficient; this is where I am reduced to. » Isn't that the true image of “volunteers in clogs”? Meyer's call was heard, and his father, a man of order, took care to make it mention at the bottom of this letter: “Replied on the 14th day of 2nd month of year II. Sent 100 francs by post, and as much every two months to send to him. »

Antoine-Louis-Isaac, suffering from deafness, had to abandon any society other than that of his children. I] devote myself to them in the Château de la Planchette – a “seigneurie”, said his enemies treacherously – that in January 1790 he had bought in the town of Clichy-la-Garenne, and which he had demolished, “as this name was so repugnant to him, he said, although it was one of the most beautiful architectural monuments | tecture which existed ten leagues around. There, surrounded of his children and his workers, exercising the profession of “cultivator”, following the term that on several occasions he agricultural work. | |

Before the Revolution, if we must trust a police note, "he did business at the Stock Exchange and the Caisse d'Escompte". He did better, according to him: "In 1785, I participated in the glow of revolution which was carried out in Holland by providing, with the citizen Lhabite, merchant of sheets, clothing and troops that I recruited in Corsica and France. But unfortunately Maillebois was sent as general in leader of the patriots, and he betrayed them in favor of the king of Prussia. Everyone knows it, and I better than anyone, since I was the victim. »

2712 THE -TERROR

Later, following the report of the auditor for the forced loan, Calmer lived on his income. The Plan-This chette brought him 1,903 livres, after deduction of the fifth. He waited in vain for the receipt of several debts which did not amount to less than 554,732 pounds 17 sols. The declaration ration that he made to the district of Saint-Denis, on January 13, 1793, was recognized as sincere. But what funds could he make on emigrated or fleeing creditors, "ci-devants", such as Henri de Rohan de Guéménée "formerly known as Prince", his wife Armande de Rohan-Soubise, Jules de Rohan-Guémé-born, Duke of Montbaran? And there were many others Again ! He was a "ci-devant infantry colonel", a "ci-devant" before captain of cavalry", M. de Vicourt, "above President of the Palais Requests", Mr. de Rolly, former farmer general, "alleged emigrant", etc., etc.

But all these speculations could date from before the Revolution: From the day he was at La Planchette, he was made admit into clubs, committees, popular societies de Clichy, and, through his activity, his ardor, his convictions revolutionaries, he soon occupied the first rank.

Calmer, however, had received very poor education. Nothing more pitiful, nor more grotesque, in fact, as spelling, as writing and as language, that the letter he wrote to Benoît, janitor of the remand center of Luxembourg, on 26 Pluviôse year IT, to complain about the "disagreements" that his fellow prisoners subjected him to. "You promised me that this wouldn't happen to me again, even though it I have not been less daily worried in the same way... I have suffered the beating of several prisoners in a plot awful... I suffer, I am in chains, I have to despite myself, nothing to say now, but you who are the father of here, you who is the friend of humanity, tell everyone not to suffer them..... I ask you for justice....."

This lack of education should hardly have harmed him at this time. era. He did not prevent him from fulfilling his duties as patriot, and even, if we must believe the praise he gave of himself, he could, from this point of view, remonstrate with his fellow citizens of Clichy.

In a long memoir entitled: "Instructions for the de-unofficial defender", and where he sought to justify his conduct, al cites what he did for the Republic and the "good principles" cipes".

When I was appointed to the Revolutionary Committee of our common, he writes, I abandoned all my private work to only take care of my place and deserve trust which I had obtained from my fellow citizens; to justify their choice I have often been to the Revolutionary Committees of the Paris sections in order to educate myself and acquire enlightenment for communication ask my colleagues and only act with knowledge and legality.

I have often spent days and nights in the exercise of my functions, and my fiercest enemies want my downfall I will be able to help but recognize the truth of these facts.

This prodigious activity astonished citizen Crassoux, who showed me his surprise and satisfaction during the examination of our work. All these facts do not indicate the conduct of a counter-revolutionary, and, if it was not a slander, certainly people would not have failed to reproach me for it Popular society where I was received despite the intrigues of Cazaubon, who invited the Popular Societies of Neuilly and Franciade to send commissioners to ours to prevent my admission. The one from Neuilly had the audacity to call me knight with the dagger, and accused me of having been at the Château des Tuileries, on August 40; but the captain of the company rose forcefully against these terrible allegations by giving a summary of my conduct in these moments. :

I also have a report which certifies that I was at my post on the morning of August 10, as indictment juror in the 6th tribu-aal from Paris, and as soon as the session adjourned I went to Clichy

join my brothers in arms and wait for orders to march if it was necessary. If I had said the things that were said to me, would I have obtained a citizenship certificate in the month of Nivôse. last ? And the 24th of the same month, an unfortunate day when the feeling of the people Crassoux dismissed me from my functions, not Would we not have alleged these alleged remarks if they had existed? Gold the vote took place in the presence of the authorities consisting of Montmartre, La Chapelle, Saint-Ouen and Clichy and no reproach rose against me... |

"I have always acted with the greatest desire to do good; I have filled the different places with which my fellow citizens have honored me with disinterestedness and accuracy; I don't believe he is possible to do so with more dedication to public affairs, I think I justified the choice they made of me on the Committee revolutionary of which I was, I can say, the ankle or-vvriere... »

In recognition of his services, his fellow citizens name him-was president of the Clichy Revolutionary Committee. |

But his fanaticism was fatal to him. He raised violent jealousies, and, while he was at the height of power, while he could count on popular favor, denunciations of all kinds were brought against him to the Safety Committee general. One of the first, and which clearly depicts the state of minds at that time, was an anonymous denunciation. We warned the Committee that there were at La Planchette, "two small leagues of Paris, parish of Clichy-la-Garenne, a named Calmer, Dutch by birth and career, who offends the good patriots of this commune, holds conciliabules at home and does all the harm possible." The informer demanded that the commune be rid of this "monster", of this "aristocrat" and signed Zn six six Tille.

A no less strange intervention was that of a certain Longueville-Clémentière, commissioner of the Safety Committee general, "always concerned with the salvation of the Republic".

ANTOINE-LOUIS-ISA AC CALMER 275

His eagerness to serve the authorities constituted on pushed him to propose "to go 4 the commune of Clichy in order to take, as a general safety measure, all

well convinced in advance of the result of his mission that he added: | |

_ "Longueville responds that, according to the information that he will have taken on the conduct of Calmer, he will be sent at the revolutionary court. » He had also posed very clearly his character by accusing Calmer of concealing aristocrats.

Such beautiful assurance, such a precise accusation, persuaded the General Security Committee. This strange clerk-saire received the mission he requested with so much dedication. patriotic. |

_ Antoine-Louis-Isaac Calmer was, in fact, arrested on Nivôse 22 year II, and transferred to Luxembourg. 30, Longueville-Clémentière transmitted his report on this affair.

_ Overwhelming charges were brought against the sans-Clichy panties.

It seems superfluous to us to focus on the small facts articulated against him. The serious accusations he was subjected to were few in number, but they were enough to mark Calm down for the guillotine.

It results, said Clémentière on 30 Pluviôse year II, that the September 8 last (old style) Calmer sent request by – one of his workers if his donkey was not in the commune, this which was taken as a demeaning derision for a cons-tituted with all the more reason since, a few days previously Before, Calmer had treated the municipality of JF, adding that those who wore scarves could not afford them, that he had been obliged to pay 25 pounds for them and that soon he would make the municipality dance. Calmer recognized the truth of these indictments in the same session on September 8 and testified to them expressed his regrets.

276 TERROR

Since Calmer said... that, if there was in the commune a dozen men who looked like him, he would break the municipality.

... On 29 Vendémiaire, Calmer had the Committee take notice of vigilance a deliberation to place the person under arrest citizen Cazaubon, prosecutor of the commune, and who filled primary.

... Calmer is a man of bad faith... Constantly municipality and the justice of the peace received complaints filed against Calmer by his workers; he carried panic terror in everyone's minds to the point that we run away as soon as we saw it. " L

Longueville-Clémentière reproached Calmer for having understood placed in office a series of arbitrary acts, then:

The Supervisory Committee further observed that, during that Calmer occupied the place of president of the Committee, he ena perpetually tormented members and forced them to sign various arbitrary acts, saying that his colleagues were not not literate, that they understood nothing about the laws and that moreover everything was his responsibility, Calmer... |

I must say again that a large number of citizens have reported that Calmer, during his presidency, had said and often repeated that he would have twenty to twenty-five people guillotined in Clichy, and that this threat had caused the greatest terror in the commune.

According to the facts, the documents, the evidence, concluded the com-missionary..., Calmer committed the most rebellious arbitrary acts tan...; he misled some real sans-culottes...

He is a bad citizen... a determined counter-revolutionary who sought to arouse the citizens, to arm the constitutional authorities-

killed against each other, and to bring anarchy into the commune of Clichy. »

ANTOINE-LOUIS-ISAAC CALMER 277

The search which had been carried out at La Planchette, 45 pluviôse, had not helped to alleviate his guilt. Longueville did not find, it is true, any suspicious papers there, but his disappointment in this regard was largely compensated by the discovery he made in the buildings of "remains of ancient dality and despotism." And what remains! It was, in the cooker's room, "a cast iron plate covered of three fleur-de-lys and sealed in the wall"; elsewhere "three other firebacks covered with a crown and coat of arms – a fir tree with acorns forming a coat of arms, – a copper pot coated with coat of arms", and "in the iron staircase at horse two plaster paintings representing the effigy of two kings." The commissioner had, in his careful research, supreme satisfaction! The castle chapel had a Bell; Longueville made her "depend" and he noted that she was "clad in twenty-two fleur-de-lis". He "confiscated" the bell, and he concludes that, in accordance with the laws of August 4 and 18 Vendémiaire, the house and enclosure of the Planchette were also confiscated "for the benefit of the Republic ".

As soon as Calmer learned of the formidable charges which weighed on him, feeling that his head was threatened, he put himself in a position to respond. His file contains three voluminous memories where it replies point by point to facts articulated against him. We will not follow him in the details of the arguments he put forward in his defense and which would be tedious for everyone. Besides what it applies above all to demonstrate is that in his functions he had no "any purpose other than the public good and the strict execution of revolutionary laws. Each of his memoirs shows the concern he has to clear himself of suspicions of incivility... This was especially in his "Precis pour le citoyen La Feuterie", his . defender and advisor, that he protested his ardent zeal for the true principles of the Revolution.

278 TERROR

"Is it me," he said among other things, "is it me that we can thus accuse, me born republican, victim in my person and my fortune of royal, priestly and noble despotism, who took away from my father three quarters of his fortune and the life, because he could not survive the horrors carried out against us by the priests and nobles authorized by the decrees of the tyrants. Certainly these reasons are sufficient to determine ter the government where these sacrilegious hordes exist. »

"I was," he wrote elsewhere, "appointed by my commune of Clichy-la-Garenne, about six months ago, one of the twelve members of the Revolutionary Committee of which I instructed, myself alone, the other members of the true principles of the Revolution: the entire canton will be able to attest to this fact and certify also that I alone have done everything since I was appointed member. I have been chairman of the Committee several times. My patriotism and my principles during the Revolution tion are known and even attested to by my own enemies. There must therefore be no suspicion against me which could Calmer struggled in vain in the tight web in which he was taken. Two men above all, in a feeling of retaliation personal, had dedicated a deep hatred to him: it was . Cazaubon, national agent of the commune of Clichy, who had unnecessarily sought to submit him to his arbitrary authority, and threatened with prison "those who were interested 'to Calm'; and a man named Toutin, who, to save the scaffold his two brothers-in-law, signatories of the petition of the twenty thousand, denounced by the president of the Revolutionary Committee lutionary of Clichy, had sworn the doom of Calmer. There the terror that Cazaubon inspired was such that the Société popular, intimidated, rejected the unfortunate president, whom she had repeatedly acclaimed, humbly protesting today of his submission to the law, of his ardor "for the severity of the principles. Calmer was lost. The committee surveillance ordered that the denunciation made against him by Toutin would be handed over to the public prosecutor so that he can follow -saw the judgment of the said Calmer "as quickly as possible".

ANTOINE-LOUIS-ISAAC CALMER 279

After trying. but in vain, to support its role as revolutionary in the Luxembourg prison where he entered, shod in clogs, dressed in rags, wearing a red cap', he had been transferred to the Conciergerie. It is from there, the 3 ventôse year II, that he was brought before the revolutionary tribunal. His interrogation was not long.

We asked him his name, age, PERICSSIONE pay and remains. `:

Answered his name Je ione Louis Calmer, aged 48 years old, born in The Hague, Holland, naturalized French in 1769, residing in La Planchette, canton of Clichy-la-Garenne, departing man of Paris, farmer, president of the Revolutionary Committee.

D. Why he is under arrest. |

A. That on Nivôse 24, the representative of the people came to purify the bodies constituted by Clichy-la-Garenne of which he was a member of the Revolutionary Committee and that he does not know why he was put under arrest and that he is surprised all the more since this same representative had an order taken stating that he knew him, responding to him, in the true principles of the Revolution.

D. If he has never had any correspondence with internal enemies laughers and outsiders of the Republic.

A. Never in any way.

D. Sil never provided our enemies with any paper money or in money.

A. Never.

4. See. Prison Almanac. Paris, year III.

280 TERROR

D. If he knows Toutin.

A. No, but he believes that it was a relative of the Brochets who were placed under arrest by the Revolutionary Committee which he presided over, which Brochet was then transferred from the Force in Luxembourg.

D. If he is aware of the denunciation made against him by Toutin.

A. No.

D. If he has emigrant parents.

A. No, that he has been a widower for four years and that he is only two children, one of whom is in the service of the Republic in the army of the West and the other is only six years old.

D. If he chooses a defender.

A. That he chose citizen La Feuterie.

Reading of this interrogation, said to contain the truth, persisted and signed with us.

Signatures:

MAYOR, GIRARD, CALM, FOUQUIER.

The judgment was rendered on 29 Messidor year JJ. Thirty citizens were included in the same batch, and the declaration of "juror" was affirmative on all the accused.

Antoine-Louis-Isaac, under the terms of this judgment, was "con- defeated in stock trading and warned of not having, in his municipality: Clichy, surprised his appointment as president that to abuse it by exercising despotism, extortion and vexations of all kinds, and seek to degrade and cover with contempt for the established authorities by taking the audacity to come ask the Municipal Assembly if his donkey was not that those who wore scarves did not have the means and.

that he had been obliged to pay 25 pounds for them, which soon he.
would make the municipality dance. Finally, Calmer abused his functions.
tions to throw terror among the citizens of Clichy in them.
threatening to have them guillotined. »

He was, the same day, sentenced to death and executed.

CHAPTER IX

LOUIS-BENJAMIN CALM DOWN!

Oddity of destinies! Here are two men to whom Fortune smiled in their youth, which she filled with her favours at a time when arbitrariness and intolerance reigned the Jews in degradation. The Revolution breaks out. Each follows the inspirations of his conscience and his feelings.
One throws himself headlong into the revolution movement- - naire, and he succumbs, victim of the popular passions that he contributed to overexcitement; the other, more moderate, aristocratic even if he did not want to forget that he had been "lord of the land of Ailly? », allows himself to be touched by the misfortunes of the royal family, devotes its forces to the collapsing dynasty definitively between two riots, and in turn perishes victim of his attachment to Louis XVI. At both ends of the politics so perilous then, two heads falling.

Indeed, eleven days after Isaac was brought to the Luxembourg, Louis-Benjamin was taken to the Conciergerie.
His business was quickly carried out. He was accused of having

1, National Archives, F7 4598 and 4631, and W'b 351. See. Also Léon Kahn, The Jews in Paris since the 6th century (Paris, 1889).

2. Acles of the Paris Commune during the Revolution, by Sigis-mond Lacroix, t. HI Paris, 1894. Session of Wednesday September 16, 1789.

282 TERROR

made "the most royalist and counter-revolutionary remarks lutionaries"; in year II, it was an accusation which led straight to the scaffold.

Besides, Louis-Benjamin had seemed suspicious from the start.

nadiers of Filles-Saint-Thomas who we knew were very devoted to the monarchy and who had given the Tuileries many proof of his zeal. "The Jew Calmer", who was lieutenant there, was accused, "with a dozen bad citizens", of wanting to "lead the patriots with the baton", and the days he had not failed to attack him violently for having refused to lend his aid to republicans, and in particular - in Carra, in critical circumstances'. He had finally in the financial world of numerous acquaintances, and his status as a stockbroker earned him, at the end of the year 1794, to be chosen as one of the ten commissioners who were responsible for monitoring the interests of creditors in the discomfiture of the man who was then called "M. Louis-Philippe Joseph, French prince", - and who was later Louis - Philippe-Egalité + | |

Also when, on 25 Nivôse year II, the Mountain section gathered against him the proofs of his royalism, no one raised the voice in his favor. His file contains no protection against the accusation which weighed on him; barely if the Revolutionary Committee of the Le Peletier section, wanting clear responsibility for the arrest of Benjamin Cal-Wed, timidly declares that he has nothing to do with it. Calm him down even, in the complaint he addressed, on 18 Germinal,

4. The People's Speaker, No. 10, TV-VI; - Annals of Mercier, n° DCXXI, of April 26, 1791.

2. Universal Gazette, n° 326, 355, 362, of November 23, 21 and 28 - December 1791. |

LOUIS-BENJAMIN CALM 283

. against his long detention, makes at most an allusion discreet to a "notorious intrigue" of which he is the victim, to his "innocence" and his "republican principles". He could have done it with more clarity, because, as a secretary of his section, he undoubtedly enjoyed a certain consideration. |

How did he not also assert the "certificate of honour" which was delivered to him on Wednesday September 16, 1789, by the battalion and the citizens of the Filles-Saint-Tho district, as "solemn testimony of their recognition for the noted services" which he had "continued to render: since July 13"? This pledge of civic-mindedness had all the more importance than the certificate of honor had been to him submitted to the General Assembly of the municipality and that the prehis "activity" and his "patriotism!" ".

Was it bewilderment in the face of the suspended threat of death hard his head? was it weariness? was it disdain? We do not know. But Benjamin Calmer passed these facts silently in his memory, where we feel neither the strength nor the energy that his brother to take advantage of his good citizenship.

He is content to moan about his prolonged captivity, and to deplore the expenses that the two sans-culottes to whose care he is entrusted at home, then that it is retained by the gout. We're losing it! We're ruining it! He no longer has "enough to pay overdue rent and other expenses cleaning »! Already in 1792, Manuel, the prosecutor of the municipality, reporting citizens "late to pay their contributions", cited among others, "in the court of opinion"

4. Acts of the Commune..., t. He. Wednesday September 16 session November 1789.

284 TERROR

before "leading them to the tribunal of justice", Calmer, merchant, who, paying a rent of 1,700 livres, still owed over the previous year 191 livres 5 sols of patent rights!.

But, from August 2, 1792, Calmer had been seriously indicted, and the minutes of the General Assembly of the section already noted that he had constantly shown himself the enemy of the Revolution. Soon the Revolutionary Committee of the Montague section received on his account denunciations which forced him to carry out an investigation. The deposits situations were overwhelming. Five citizens had been gone—particularly precise: their reports served as the basis for the act of accusation which was notified to him on Germinal 3.

Here it is: |

Louis-Benjamin Calmer, former stockbroker, grenadier of the Saint-Roch battalion, is well known in his section for having constantly professed principles of royalism and having shown himself to be one of the most active agents of despotism and tyranny. Indeed, Calmer, one of the worshipers of the vile courtier Lafayette, distributed over time to several citizens of his section, gold medals bearing the image of this traitor. Since this time, he always showed himself, both through his speeches and through his actions, the enemy of freedom; it is enough to cite a single line of tyranny and that he was initiated into the liberticidal plots of Capet. A few days after the Marseillais dinner at the Champs-Élysées, Calmer, who was only at this meal to annoy the patriots and participate in the assassination committed on several of these brave defenders of freedom, had the villainy to brag, in the middle of the guardhouse, that he had been at this dinner and that having seen the rout of his comrades, he had run to the punishment tableau of the Tuileries to speak to the king, that he had been introduced from following in his presence and that of the queen, that he had related the fact, and that the king had told him that it was necessary to bring help to the Greeks.

1. La Chronique de Paris, no. 97, April 6, 1792.

LOUIS-BENJAMIN CALM | 285

nadiers, and that the queen, in particular, had thanked him affectionately. These facts leave no doubt about the intentions of the Calmer's fides and counter-revolutionaries.

The Court, upholding the accuser's indictment public, gives him notice of the accusation made by him against Louis-Benjamin Calmer, former stockbroker and grenadier of battalion of Saint-Roch; accordingly, orders that at the dilatory authority of the applicant and by a bailiff of the court carrying the this order, Calmer, currently detained at home arrest of the Conciergerie, will be imprisoned on the registers of the said house of arrest, to remain there as in a house of justice. Do and tried in court, on 2 Floréal year II.

The same day that this act was notified to him, Benjamin Calmer, brought from "the Hospice house", appeared before the Revolutionary Tribunal. |

His interrogation was brief.

Asked him his name, age, profession, country and residence.

Answered his name Louis-Benjamin Calmer, aged four-aged four years, native of The Hague, in Holland, formerly com-merchant and currently living on his income, residing on the street of Choiseul, 13.

If the day that the Company of Grenadiers of the section, then du Mail, gave a meal at the Champs-Élysées, and when the meal had caused an argument with the Marseillais, he, however,

That no; and that he never spoke of his life to the wife of Capet. |

If, on the said day, when the Company of Grenadiers of the section de la Montagne was asked to go to the Place de la Montagne Fatal comedy, he, warned, having arrived there and someone having asked if he did not know what was happening in the castle, he only replied that we could be calm, only by leaving the Champs-Élysées, he would have passed through the castle, that he had spoken to the queen and that there was nothing to fear.

No, and that he surrendered, like his comrade Jean-Louis, Place de la Comédie-Italienne, coming with his Company.

286 TERROR

The judgment was rendered immediately.

HAS

“The court, after hearing the public prosecutor on the application of the law, sentences Louis-Benjamin to the death penalty Calm down, in accordance with the provisions of article 2 of the 2nd section of Title I of the Penal Code, which is thus designed:

“Any conspiracy and plots tending to disturb the State by a civil war by arming citizens against each other or against the exercise of legitimate authority, will be punished by death.

“Declares the property of Louis-Benjamin Calmer acquired at the Republic. Orders that at the request of the public prosecutor, the this judgment will be executed within twenty-four hours on the Place de la Révolution, and that it will be printed, read, published and displayed throughout the Republic.

“Made and pronounced on 4 Floréal, year II of the French Republic. »

CHAPTER X

SARA CALM DOWN!

Sara was arrested on 13 Germinal Year II.

Sara was taken to the former convent of the English, rue des Fossés-Victor. It was not without difficulty that she was admitted. Driving to different remand centers, zero guard did not want to receive her, the commissioners responsible for his arrest by the Lepeletier section not being equipped with no order against her. It was immediately necessary to request a authorization from the General Security Committee, and this is only the 14 germinal that the English opened their doors to him.

His arrest was no less curious a sign from the pro-expeditious transfers from this period. |

By order of the General Security Committee, the Committee revoked lutionnaire of the Lepeletier section had been required for arrest the man named Lavalette and his wife. The commissioners responsible for this feat, after having examined the papers, were about to withdraw when they had the idea of to "visit people". Sara Calmer was there. She was questioned. |

4. National Archives, F? 4769, and Registers of minutes of Revolutionary committees, F7 2479.

288 TERROR

But everything is so strange in this matter that we believe useful to publish the minutes of this "visit".

And just now, by visiting people at the said named Lavalette, questioned a citizen about his names; has replied Sara Calmer, a native of The Hague, Holland, naturalized in France for about twenty-four years, residing on rue Notre-Dame-des-Victoires, n° 29.

Asked if she didn't have a painting at home representing a portrait with attributes and costume of the old regime.

Answered that she has a portrait of someone named Becdael at home de Rethuert!, son of a merchant and in charge of the first herald of arms of the tyrant of the Empire, currently residing at Brussels, which painting he gave him, about four years as a testimony of friendship; that since then she had forgotten it in a corner ; but that, having found him about a month ago, she no longer wanted to keep him although he was interested in the portrait, and that, not worrying about annihilating it, she showed it to citizen Lavalette who advised him to burn it, but that, recalling that a decree made it possible to preserve the objects concerned decided to have it covered to hide what offended her the eyes, in relation to the costume, with a print representing a woman designated Melpomène, muse who presides over the tragedy, which painting she sent for from her house, and represented to us sentiment on which we have put the stamp of our committee, and the his marking these words: I prick, but I attach, which painting has was taken by the citizens Muller brothers to be by them posed to the General Safety Committee of the Convention as well as undertake, and have closed and signed this present after reading, to a hour after midnight.

The commissioners, undoubtedly smelling a conspiracy

1. See. Acts of the Commune..., by Sigismond Lacroix. Paris, 1894, t. II. Session of Saturday August 1, 1789. This Becdael de Rethuert was advisor-ler, first king of arms with the Golden Fleece of the Emperor of Austria. In our file (F7 4769), it is commonly called by the name of Beydaele by Ziltaert.

SARA CALM DOWN. 989

very dark, went to the home of Sara Calmer. For a moment their hope seemed to come true. They had just discover "a packet in a sealed envelope of three pills with coat of arms x. But their joy was short-lived. This package was none other than the will of Becdael de Rethuert, who, in 1788, had given Sara this act containing his last wills.

It was following these searches, and the seals affixed at home, that she was taken to prison.

Sara was then thirty years old. She was single and lived would be rue des Victoires "at the corner of that of Filles-Thomas". If we are to believe the information that Guil-'s section laume Tell gave on her account on 2 Thermidor, she lived of his income and had no profession. The clerks

saries added:

We do not know the portion of his income which is said to consist of life annuity that she had entered in the ledger, and comes from the estate of his late father. She still has to hope for that of her mother, aged eighty, living on rue Meslay.

woman where she was arrested, one would be led to believe | that she saw suspicious people; nevertheless, according to information taken, it seems that she did not have many associations. tions, and that she lived quite retired. She paid her rent very exactly which amounted to 800 francs. It was even said that she was little linked and even estranged with her brother who was punished with dead.

We don't know what his way of thinking was in the months of July, October 1789 and other famous periods of the Revolution. She made donations to her section, but the aristocrats did not didn't they? During the inventory of his papers, we found at her home a package in an envelope sealed with her stamp and coat of arms, on which packet was an act dated July 16, 1788 received by Vanteorberghe, notary in Brussels, containing deposit of said package para. Begdaele of Zilltaert with the wax seal red and coat of arms by which act it appears that in this package is contained the will of the said Bagdaele de Zilltaert (sic), which package was submitted to the General Security Committee.

19

290 TERROR

The facts against Sara Calmer were not serious, We see it. She nevertheless discussed them. Could she do less than "pasting an engraving" on Becdael's portrait "to cover the coat of arms which decorated it"? Could-it do less than "keep as a deposit of trust" the will his friend had entrusted to him? TRUE- There was nothing there to send a woman to escape. wrong! Besides, wasn't his quarrel with his brother proof that Sara in no way shared his opinions? "She is not guilty of anything," she added about herself in a petition to the Convention, she has always lived in true republican, and she never deviated from republican principles that she had when she was born. »

But more serious events preoccupied the Convention. The supreme struggle. committed himself against Robespierre, and, while daily cartloads led to the guillotine the major culprits, the simple suspects await anxious, in their prisons, that the Revolution, a moment in suspense, has resumed its course towards reaction.

The day came when, the Robespierrists defeated, France breathed a sigh of relief. The detainees, released from

The scaffold was only there to mow down "the tail of Robespierre. Pity and clemency followed salvation. vagerie, Sara Calmer took the opportunity to call on her the goodwill of the General Security Committee.

"Today," she wrote, "that the National Convention has just solemnized his victories over tyranny by deeds of justice the most brilliant and that the particular passions

SARA CALM 291

and individuals remain silent before the laws, citizen Sara Calmer urges committee members to fix illegality of her detention of reports of which she does not fear the severity. » She recalled that at the time of her detention she enjoyed the esteem of his fellow citizens and that "the Committee of his section shared this flattering opinion." She asks- It is therefore up to the Convention to "break its chains". The committee revolutionary of the section of William Tell supported this request. Far from having anything to reproach for evil-happy detainee, he had found in her only "the proof of good conduct." |

Sara Calmer was immediately released (22 thermidor).

The next day, at nine o'clock in the evening, "an individual" came to her house and gave her the following sheet:

FREEDOM OF CITIZEN SARA CALMER,
RUE NOTRE-DAME-DES-VICTOIRES, 29, DU 22 THERMIDOR

Innocence has rights over a people of brothers

Justification of the republican citizen Calmer rendered to the freedom by the representatives of a free people having been declared innocent of tyrants.

Verses of the air on Liberty

Yes, slander But, if tyranny -

You were the humble toy; Overwhelmed you with his features,

.Reversed this project. . Know all your failures.

Calm down, whom we revere, So forget this insult,
Of our good Doing good,

Most sincere friend, your soul is always pure
And support. And fear nothing.

Hello and brotherhood. |
The Trumpets of Innocence.

292 TERROR

By giving him this high-flying piece, the "particulier" congratulated her, on behalf of the Trumpet Society of Innocence, of the freedom she had just obtained. "Lacitoyenne Calmer hastens to show him his attentions; this party-
The culprit rejects them all and ends up asking for a small reward.
think to cover the printing costs that the list of innocent people will cause. Citizen Calmer, willing to con-cover all expenses, offers to subscribe and gives, independently
during its subscription, an assignat of 40 pounds. »
But the representative of the Trumpets, emboldened, replied that that wasn't enough. A citizen, who witnessed this scene strange, was indignant. Did she not recall "all the vexations" tions of the old regime"? it was "a real ransom" that we wanted to establish on the innocent. The individual was disconcerted. "When asked to say his name, he declared name Saint-Amour. - His residence: he resides in the prisons. - His age: thirty years," etc.

Information was gathered and it was soon known that the authors of these singular quests were the drums of the gendarmerie merie of the courts or the former guards of the city who of "all times" had "this habit of going to congratulate the bride and groom, the winners of the aforementioned lottery, etc., etc. ".

It was right. Those who, by an incredible chance, had escaped the death for which they were marked, had They didn't win the big lottery where mortals bet so feverishly their stake?

CHAPTER XI

THE SURVIVORS OF THE CALM FAMILY

What became of those members of the Calmer family that had the Terror been spared? |

On 21 Floréal year II, "the mother, brother, sister and nephew, heir third party of the late Louis-Benjamin Calmer, victimized on 4 Floréal year II", are pending before the revolutionary tribunal of the Paris department for, in accordance with the recent law of 4 Floréal, "appeal against the confiscation of the estate of their parent! ". But they don't have any parts helping to found their claim. They ask the judges to order that the file concerning Louis-Benjamin be soltcommuniqué. |

The petition is signed by the widow Calmer, the mother, of Calmen Calmer, the brother, of Meyer Calmer, the nephew, and by Sara Calmer, Benjamin's sister.

The same day, the court ordered that "it be done thus that it is required."

Then the Calmers disappear. And we don't know anything anymore of them that the date of the death of those who, as we have seen, were, many years later, buried in Paris.

1.Arch. national, W. 351. '

—

Digitized by Google

FOURTH PART

FROM 1794 TO 1809

FIRST CHAPTER

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR

Since the 9th of Thermidor, a year had not passed since the reaction triumphed. All those who had dipped in the Terror and in the insurrectional movements which who had preceded her were violently attacked. The Con-

moment restored, once again became the scene of the most intense struggles more After and the most hateful between the Republicans same. Sometimes only the announcement of a victory came throw like a ray of harmony into this abyss of mutual distrust and mutual denunciations. But apart from these rare glimmers of serenity in the face of the grandeur of the homeland, there was not a session where everyone did not throw at their heads the wildest accusations of cruelty, of theft, squandering, assassination and prevarication.

The least bitter insult was still, for certain mountaineers gnards, to be – we don't really know why – treated as “Jews”. Does Dubois-Crancé denounce “the tail of Robes-rock ” ? Fréron writes that “this speech displeased some Jews, and particularly in Bourdon, remarkable for the

296 FROM 1794 TO 1809

the most Jewish hair in all of Palestine. Elsewhere, Fréron calls Moyse Bayle, the representative of Marseille, “the Jew Moyse Bayle?” It is still Moyse Bayle who Courier republican accuses of having displayed in everything Paris against Fréron “a Jewry in its own way? “. A little later finally, whether it is a draft decree on the ten-day celebrations or “the funeral home of the representative Féraud” at the Convention, Mercier, who served all parties, all passions, assured that “the Israelites of Robes-stone” or “the Israelites of Maximilian” had deserted the mountain. |

The odious training of Terror was followed by anguish responsibilities. Everyone blamed their accomplice crimes committed. Everyone proclaimed themselves “pure in heart”, a “right conscience”, a “probable and spotless soul”. The rebels of Robespierre were the first to be summoned to to account for their bloodthirsty conduct; and soon Fouquier-Tinville and Carrier climbed the scaffold. Cras-sous and Duhem were deported. This success emboldened the kings lists. They thought of killing the very ones who had rallied to Tallien and, in an hour of true courage, had spent with him that day of 9 Thermidor when the All of France breathed a sigh of relief. We then saw, one after the other, Rossignol, Pache, Bou-chotte, Xavier Andouin, be sentenced to life imprisonment tuelle; Billaud-Varennes, Collot d’Herbois, Barère, Vadier, Joseph Lebon, Lequinio, “speculators of Human flesh”, indicted and sentenced by the criminal court

2. Annals of Mercier, n° LXXII, of 12 Ventôse year IIL.
3. Le Courrier republican, n° 475.
4. Annals of Mercier, n° 162 and 165 of June 3, 1795.

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 297

to atone for the crimes for which their civic-mindedness on 9 Thermidor had to erase the terrible memory.

But the "aristocrats", deluding themselves about the extent of their strength and power, pushed even further their claims. At the instigation of the royalists, the widows and the children of the farmer-generals, condemned to death on Dupin's report, did they not think to denounce this representative of the people! ? What more obvious proof than we were going to challenge the moral and material victories one by one. ries of the Revolution? In 1793, we called "federalists" those who resisted the Terror, and their throats were slaughtered like enemies of the fatherland; the reactionaries would soon designate patriots under the general name "terrorists" the purest. It was necessary, for political purposes, that we understands and to hasten reprisals, continue to keep terror in the nation.

From the day when parties no longer had to endure the dreadful constraint' under which the Robespierrists had too much long held France, it was in the population all whole, following the example of what was happening in the Convention, a mutual outpouring of insults, insults and anger.
 – In the first years of the Revolution if the passions were lively, the controversies still retained an edge. of this friendly skepticism which distinguished the eighteenth century, and, except in certain filthy gazettes, the press knew how to to respect oneself. The clergy, according to the patriots, _was only composed of "prestolets", and they confused in the same bag, which they called the "black cul-de-sac", the aristocrats, the Church and the "impartials". The republics Cains in turn were for the royalists only vultures. "patrigot" gaires, and, when the Jacobins club had acquired the power that we know, all citizens, friends of public affairs, were for the retrogrades of the Jacobins, from Jacobinaille, which they pursued even into their Jacobinière.

1. Journal de Perlet, n° 1039, 16 Thermidor year III.

It wasn't all bad. Wild morals, the smell and sight of blood changed these habits. When, in 1793, "moderateism" triumphed, and "youth – de Fréron" had invaded public places with cries of: Long live the King! the great republicans, all those men whose energy and heroic exaltation had made France so healthy, were covered in mud by the monarchists. A wind of hatred and contempt breathed on the terrorists; and turn to the "young people", the "coryphees of the aristocracy-tie", "square clothes", "braided cadets" or "turned up", "dog ears", "freluquets", the "ingrpyables" and the "muscadins", who came out of the land having nothing more to risk, nothing to lose, the Montagnards, these giants, were only "slaughterers", "men of blood", "blood drinkers".

In Vitteaux, in the Côte-d'Or, as in many other cities, Jacobinism, represented by a mannequin covered in a hideous mask and soiled with blood. The mannequin's ashes were buried with, at above, this epitaph: <= |

Below lies a Jacobin:
Would I say that he was a murderer,
Conspirator, trickster, forger?
No, that is not necessary;
Let us be satisfied with this refrain:
Below lies a Jacobin!.

-4, The Universal Abbreviator, n° 159, of 9 Ventôse year III.

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 299

We know with what harshness we pursued from then on all those who passed for Jacobins. The denunciation system continued again. Once again, personal vengeance and politicians gave each other free rein. The Comi-revolutionary tees were suppressed, replaced by civil committees, and the citizens who had been attached to them, „now becoming suspects, were actively sought. Some Jews had, in their sections, given

Henry Simon, the distinguished engraver of whom we have already spoken, had been a member of the Revolutionary Committee of the Buttes-des-Moulins section. In the first days of prairial year III, he was insulted "at his post" by men | who called him a "terrorist", a "blood drinker" and dragged to the General Security Committee. There, we didn't want not hear him, and immediately he was taken to the prison of Nettles. It was only at the protest of his brother Samuel, then seriously indicted himself, that Henry was. relaxed? | |

Jacob Simon, former member of the Revolutionary Committee from the section of Brutus, who lived on rue Montorgueil, 122, was accused of having "sought to intimidate the new members of the Committee. Denounced by the Civil Committee, he was arrested on 7 Vendémiaire year III, and detained at Luxembourg "until further notice". The Safety Committee general only released him for five months after 3, |

. Abraham Joseph, "merchant both second-hand and fairground", detained at Madelonnettes, complained that his requests failed

- . See. p. 168.
- . National Archives, F7 4752.
- . Id., F? 4748.

Clo =

300 FROM 4794 TO 41809

cessive measures to obtain its enlargement had remained without answer. This was, moreover, nothing surprising, said he: "At that time, the members of the Revolution Committees-nary sections of Paris were inaccessible, played the role of ci-devant and were supporters of terrorism, Robespierism, and real blood drinkers..." The Committee of Public safety judged it thus, because Abraham was immediately re-coward '.

The best proof that one can give of determination-ment that "moderateism" brought against all those who, in whatever capacity, were involved in the "government cutthroats", we find it in the indictment which was then brought against Henry Simon's brother, Samuel Simon, who, however, was not part of any constituted body. Her dedication to the Republic during the Terror was alone

Samuel Simon, from the Friends of the Fatherland section, was in year III engraver of posts, couriers and treasuries nationally for twenty-five years. He practiced this profession since the age of twelve, and he had always acquitted himself "with zeal and probity". The head of the central office impressions and citizen Diot, post director of the Convention, vouched for it. The 29th Company of Friends of the Fatherland attested, on the other hand, that Simon, willingly in their ranks, had always "made his servant vice with exactitude", that he had "always shown the greatest zeal to relieve suffering humanity", and that he had "always manifested principles tending to good-happiness of the fatherland." E

However, a denunciation was brought against him. She

4. National Archives, F7 4577.

,

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 301

was heard. The General Security Committee had Simon arrested and led him to Port-Libre.

Our inmate had a clear conscience. " I do not don't ask for mercy, I'm not guilty, he writes his prison at the Convention. I only ask for justice, because it is owed to me; I ask it all the more promptly tment that I am attached to the Postal Administration and to the National Treasury by powerful titles, which not would only compromise my particular interests and my responsibility, but also those of the Republic... Long live the National Convention! long live the Republic ! »

And Simon, in support of his claim, presented a supporting memorandum that it seems interesting to us to reproduce lead, because he edifies us about his life at the same time as he sheds a curious light on the political customs of the time.

4th Count. – It is declared and signed that he pre-sent to a citizen claiming to be carrying a decree from the Assembly general of the section, which enjoined all people of speech, wine merchants and others, to provide food free of charge, small and large poultry, for the Marat festival.

Answer. – It is false that I was the bearer of a decree of the General Assembly of my section; here is the fact.

I was appointed by the Commission established by the General Assembly for the execution of a party for Marat. We had assigned to this Commission the powers necessary for its execution.

The Commission issued an order of which I have a signed copy.

secretary, by whom I was instructed to go to all the mouth people of the section to invite them to give this that they could (the wills were free) to make a meal fraternal which should be given to the artists of the street theaters Feydeau and Louvois who had come to adorn with their talent this party.

2° Chief. – That during impositions to march against the

302 – FROM 1794 TO 1809

Vendée, he said: "If you want to succeed, do what I did for the feast of Marat, intimidate the rich, the merchants, the selfish and you will get what you need.

Answer. – I deny having made these remarks and we will see from here contradiction that exists between these two eras and the denunciation that it is completely false, the imposition for the Vendée was made long before Marat's feast. So I couldn't talk about this party before it existed because I didn't know if it there would be one. – 2 3° Chief. – It has been made known that the said Simon is a carrier of a copy of a letter withheld from the Administrative Commission of the police.

Answer. – I never carried a copy of the letter – referred. I formally deny the denunciation of such an infamous act, and I defy anyone to administer it find the proof.

4° Chief. – There has been testimony that he is known to profess

Answer. – I declare that I have never been to the Jacobins and that, if it is to be a Jacobin to have obeyed the laws, to issue opinions tending to ensure the general good, to love freedom, to support national representation in all its integrity, for sure I am one, and my denouncers are not mistaken not if it is according to these principles that they judge me. | |

3° Chief. – That he disorganized the 28th Company (now 29°). |

Answer. – The fact is false. I declare that I have never intrigued in no nomination; several times people wanted to give me ranks, I refused, not feeling capable of fulfilling them; If I had disorganized the Company, I would not still have holding the esteem of my comrades and they would not have given me the certificate submitted to the General Security Committee.
= 6° Chief. – That having a poor fortune he incurred expenses above ; he appears to be bribed by some secret means.

. Answer. – It is true that I have no fortune, but I have to talent in my state as an engraver, a lot of love for my work, since I only exist through him, and I have my wife, unc mother and a nephew to support; moreover since the age of ten I work (I'm thirty-five), it's not surprising that I'm

AFTER THE NINE THERMIDOR ` 303

become skilled in my state; I'm busy with administration of the Post Office to engrave its stamps, its seals, its prints, stamps, etc., and generally anything related to my condition, For twenty-two years, not counting my excess number (I have the authentic pieces), I pass. my bargain with this administration for all supplies.

I am surprised that people want to intrude into my interior; soon I won't dare buy a pound of bread for us make it exist, without asking permission from my informers, if I was weak enough to fear them.

`7th head. – He is accused of being a reported terrorist.

Answer. – This accusation is just an empty word, which it is used to aggravate the alleged facts that are attributed to me. I do not was never vested with any civil, military or revolution authority-nary, nor denouncer.

8th head. – Man of blood.

the beneficent views of the National Convention, by carrying out with zeal the missions which had been given to me by the Assembly general of my section to demand the release of several several prisoners, victims of revolutionary mistakes, undoubtedly it is a very singular way of applying the word man of blood ; it is not in such actions that one can find a single drop poured. |

9th head. – Disorganizer. .

Answer. – I responded to this fact (See the 5th head and response).

10th leader. – That he was encountered distributing letters, days of unrest; that, during the women's insurrection, Simon was found Chaussée-du-Petit-Carreau, rue Montorgueil, carrying a large quantity of letters.

Answer. – I call on those who accuse me, to provide proof of a lie as egregious as it is contradicted. It is in fact that I had a circular printed for the 44,000 municipalities of the Republic in which I offer my services at reasonable prices for their stamps, seals, etc. I took packages to the post office on several occasions. 'He is not surprising that I was met on rue Montorgueil, I remain rue du Ponceau, it was the path that I had to take for myself return to the post office.

t

30% FROM 1794 TO 1809

Simon's justification had such an accent of truth that, on 48 messidor, he was provisionally released under the supervision of the civil committee of the section. But his integrity civic was not satisfied with this "provisional", and he demanded resolutely the right to be rearmed to enjoy the right to citizen. He obtained complete satisfaction and, by decree of 18 Thermidor Year III, the Committee definitively put it into freedom, decided that he would be rearmed "and his name removed, in view of the present, of any disarmament list where it would have been included crit." |

In the midst of the deep unrest that the unleashing of the parties, the people feel abandoned by all, without guide, without direction, left to all chances of a policy of discouragement and mistrust. The taste-government is powerless in the face of a reaction which draws its audacity in the inertia of power itself; and the "moderate" through the resurgent passion for life, through misery, seeks further increase confusion, anxiety, and debilitate the spirits by sowing ruin in the kingdom.

Everything then, in life in Paris, reaches an exorbitant price. In a few months, the golden louis worth 8,600 pounds in –February 1796, reached 13,000 and 23,000 francs in assignats. Raw materials, foodstuffs, essential items sity, follow the fabulous price of gold and silver. THE sugar costs 1,000 francs per pound; the candle 300. The bushel of coal is worth 100 pounds; meat, 140; butter, 70; and the bread, 8 sous per pound in silver, which made it twelve times more expensive than in 1790. Thanks to assignats, accounts reach a fantastic height. Office managers in the administrations received a salary of 130,000 pounds per year, and simple order clerks,

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 305

72,000. Subscription to an eight-page daily newspaper in-4° was paid 200 pounds in assignats, per month, or “6 metallic francs per quarter”. A coachman fiacre asked 600 pounds to go from the Temple to the suburbs Sairit-Germain; a Savoyard, 50 francs to pick up a pair of boots. The Opera made a revenue of 269,000 pounds by representation. On the night of 14 to 15 Nivôse, thieves broke into a notary's house, at the Notre-Dame square. Lady, and took from her the value of a billion, so much in gold than in assignats. Finally, in March 1796, five officers were doing, at one of the most famous restorers of the Palais-Royal, a dinner which cost them 33,000 pounds.

The passion for the enjoyments of life was awakened with the desire and joy of living. The scandal spread everywhere, and everywhere there was a rush to debauchery. The people murmured, and, while he was suffering from hunger, the suppliers started were to give the spectacle of the most frightening excesses born. Mentioned, among others, "the Jew Mayer" who, it was said, in a meal given to ten people, deputies and ministers, had spent more than three hundred thousand pounds there. Another, arrived from Altona with two hundred louis in gold, occupied, in 1796, “a magnificent convict hotel”, for which he had paid furniture 300,000 pounds in cash. He was the owner of an “immense land” for which he had paid 800,000 pounds; And his fortune was estimated at 250 million in assignats.

Excesses of all kinds, following the regime of rigorous and violent constraint which had weighed on France, soon won over all the men who were somewhat enterprising

1. Pictures of the French Revolution, published on unpublished papers of the department and the secret police of Paris, by Adolphe Schmidt (Leipsig, 1870). |

2. Le Journal des Patriotes, January 15, 1796.

20

306 FROM 1794 TO 1809

nants. Everyone wanted to become rich in a short time, and, to achieve this goal, we devoted ourselves with furious madness to lagentage. More than 20,000 individuals indulged in this trafficking scandalous, and the people, confused in the same hatred, the stock traders, the "country people", the bakers, the butchers, commissioners responsible for the distribution of food, and the constituted authorities, treated them all indiscriminately. ment of "plagues", "leeches", "tyrants" and "of "Knaves!" ".

He was ready to revolt. Revolutionary newspapers who remained, some encouraged him to insurrection, others others proclaimed hymns to virtue, to probity, to renunciation. _ L

\ Let's watch the aristocrats,
Let us watch over the friends of kings,
Let's watch out for fake democrats!

Rascals, tremble!
'At any time you will be reported;
War, war on stock trading!
And abundance will be reborn!

This verse, which was sung to the tune Let us see to the salvation of the Empire, was from the Jewish Lyon, employed in the offices of the Ministry of General Police?

Tempers began to brew. Powers public had to act. The stockbrokers were pursued in all their lairs. The entire police department was put moving. The system of police denunciations,

4. Paintings of the Revolution...

3. Paintings of the Revolution...

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 307

suspicious, arbitrary arrests, was again put into force. Cafes and inns, expeditions and departures were closely monitored. |

"At the Maillard café, near rue aux Ours," says a report of 30 Frimaire Year IV, usually remain a large number of Jews whose intentions are very suspect. But they speak a language foreign to those sent for monitor them. There is also a billiards table, opposite the theater of rue Martin, occupied all day by Jews who seem to be playing a very big game!. » |

The indicators were installed in the frequented inns by the Jews, made people talk, joined, coordinated born their gossip and seriously reported it to their hierarchical bosses. Men are no longer enough to the work, the women got involved. Moon of them had set up its action center at the Hôtel de Châlons, rue Martin, 91, which "housed many Jews". With – a finesse that women are accustomed to, she had ` cornered a boy who seemed to be "good-natured", and, _ while he lit the fire, she skilfully drew out his worms of the nose.

For three months, he was told, the business had started to be taken over. However, the house still only accommodated two Jews. "They bought watches, jewelry, at such a price that it was in that they do not believe in the Revolution. » He added – on his claim – that they were "trading on money."

It is necessary to continue to reproduce this conversation–

tion. It shows too well against what background. the accusations were based then, and how honest traders,

41. Paintings of the Revolution.
2. National Archives, F7 4775/23.

?

suddenly become suspects, were arrested, detained for for many months, happy if they did not pay their heads the nonsense and plans that a policeman or a short coffee shop guy.

"For then the said woman Kitten used their names baroques to know what they were called. The boy gave him answered: We have a man named Lion and a man named David. This named Lion is a young man; he has been at home for a month House; he does a substantial trade, mainly on jewelry and dresses made from old fabrics...

"The man named David, according to what the boy says, is considered a young millionaire. He is a widower and does not do a big business at the moment. right now. |

"The conversation was interrupted by the master who came ask said Chaton woman what she wanted for supper. During the meal, she resumed the conversation, seeing that this boy is extremely easy to find out from him what is happening; She asked him again if this man named Lion, who only went to Strasbourg, in addition to the goods they took (sic) into made of fabrics, jewelry, if they took (sic) money.

"On this question taken skillfully, he replied that the coined money, they took it away; but, she replied, he it is easy for them, being rich as they are, to trade on the ingot. To which he responded that the bullion trade, they did it in Paris, in that they did not go further than to Strasbourg, because they are searched at the borders...

"He lives in a room above the one we let's occupy, a Jewry who usually stays in this house. Last week, someone came to offer him 48 louis in gold; don't not born people, she refused, saying that she didn't want to go against the law.

"These are all the clarifications that we were able to discover until this moment. »

The Chaton woman was on the right track. She doesn't abandon him don't give. She continues, on 23 Frimaire Year III, the story of his spinning. Let's follow him. It's worth it.

almost the same meaning as the day before except that the boy makes it fully known that these Jews are doing business hidden and only do it with their colleagues, as people they know perfectly, because, said this boy, the jewishness which refused the 48 louis, if she had known the person, she would not would certainly not have refused. It therefore follows that in the morning Day, I saw people entering and leaving these Jews' homes with something appearing heavy hidden under their clothes; in I took one to the local café further down the same street where this café is filled with jewelry of all kinds selling and buying at exorbitant prices. It is impossible, committed citizens-saries, to know more than what we have known for two days.

= The Kitten woman even becomes bitter: "I found in the courtyard, passing near them; not hearing anything their language, it cannot be of any use. »

=- However, the Administrative Police Commission, believing on the trail of a vast conspiracy of merchants money, had to order this gossip to stay at his post. Because she continues her reports. The one from 26 us gives curious information about other Jews, "the citizens Balance and Alkan father and son. »

"Citizen Solde, rue Favard, n° 425, still does banking and the trade of paintings, he is very linked with the citizens of Alkan and Elijah, Jews, of their state painters. They live on rue de Rohan section of the Tuileries. Father Alkan is said to be rich, he is of Nancy, there is a house that he keeps as a garnish. It's the woman who is at the head, it is near the cavalry barracks, he told me been told that he has a castle near the town, it only has one daughter and a boy, he married his daughter to a Jew from Frankfurt who the reputation of being rich. Alkan son came to stay, since the beginning of the Revolution, in rue Montmartre on the Social Contract section, his first accommodation was in the building of juivresse where he was very mediocre. Afterwards he lived on rue Platrière, at one time, currently rue

310 FROM 1794 TO 1809

J.-J. Rousseau at the house in Bouillon. It was at this time that he took a servant to wait on him.

After leaving this second accommodation, he came to stay, he and his father, in a house rue Montmartre, 30, always the same section where they had a set up house and they all received the days quantity of Jews, mainly those named Elie, whose who lives on rue des Vieux-Augustins, section of Guillaume Tell; I was told that they use this young Elijah a lot to pass many bales of different goods from all kinds even up to shipments of shoes for the vince and mainly for Strasbourg; Alkan son provided it provision of food for the Army of the Rhine; in addition to this job, he does the banking and even money trading, it is associated with the citizen Solde of whom he will become the brother-in-law, because he was says he is about to marry a young Jew whose father is powerfully rich and lives in Strasbourg, I was almost certain that it is the daughter of one Serberre, a Jew, who is very rich. I knew that Alkan Jr. had been detained in a house stopped for a few months in Strasbourg. |

For several days, Alkan father and son have been living on rue de la Chaussée-d'Antin, they occupy very large accommodation and they are richly furnished.

I] goes daily to the citizens Balance and Alkan quantity Jews from big cities who were noticed to come there; This are the Elias, there are several of this name and many Franks fort, Metz and Strasbourg. Here are the cafes frequented by the citizens of Solde and Alkan: the Caveaux, that of Chartre and, rue Martin, that of Commerce, as well as the one on the corner of the street of the Mail. A few months ago, Alkan father sent a crate different pieces of furniture of all kinds for your home in Nancy!

All these indications, however childish they were, had the gift of setting in motion the General Security Committee. Samuel Lyon, muslin and silk merchant;

1. Nat. Archives, F7 4775/23.

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 311

fsaïe Spire, "in charge of the subsistence of the troops in military marches and convoys, supplier of meat for the troops, hospitals and cantonments in the Blamont district and Sarrebourg"; Maurice Lyon, trading in watches, snuff boxes and silks; Joseph Lyon, merchant of handkerchiefs: all four convinced to make the trade money, were arrested and questioned in Nivôse and meadow. But the information obtained on their account contrasted so much with those provided by the police, that they were immediately enlarged, the seals - affixed

“scandalous traffic”, so laboriously constructed by the Chaton woman, nothing remained, not even a suspicion!.

However, if, with regard to the Jews, the indictment stock trading was ill-founded, and a report from the Minister of police under the empire is quite significant in this regard?, it is obvious that all money dealers, speculators lators, who abounded in Paris, drained cash and put France in a precarious situation. It was so true that a newspaper ends up exclaiming: “The Revolution would not have it was therefore only a financial plan, only a speculation of bankers 3? »

We speculated on everything: The stock market carried its combinations even on religious ideas. It was said that a few people, taking advantage of the decree on freedom of religion, had formed a company to buy churches 4 and there have masses said to so many per head. “We don’t miss him

4.Arch. nat., F7 4775/23.

2. See. page 332.

3. The Journal of Free Men, No. 241, of 42 Messidor Year IV.

4. Political News, National and Foreign, No. 158, February 26 April 1795.

312 FROM 1794 TO 1809

more, said another, than a company of letters for Lent which makes us insensitive to the excessive cost meat and eggs. »

As pleasant as this project may seem, it responded to the secret thoughts of the clergy and the monarchist party whose active . propaganda was undeniable. It was a fact known to all that, in the midst of general religious indifference, the cult Catholic, “the only one to fear”, was champing at the bit and hoping always “revenge without neglecting to prepare it. For this purpose he tries, as much as he can, to denigrate the republican titles 2...” For their part, aristocrats, whose audacity increased day by day, attacked with persevering obstinacy to all the decrees of the Convention, on worship particularly, while waiting to be able, in joint action with the Church, overthrow the Republic even. – | E

it was getting agitated. Would we see a dominant cult again? THE publicists, politicians made it a daily object of controversy; public places, cafes "resounded" with discussions on this subject... "There are cries from all sides that we must a religion. » The royalists tried to ridicule the decade, and made a violent campaign so that France returned to the observance of the Roman apostolic cult.

The Church had lacked measure. She noticed it too much. late. The whole people were indignant. Had he not done the Revolution only to reconstitute the "cul-de-sac of Blacks" and encourage the return of priests? It was really – too bold a challenge to freedom. Moreover, his feeling of

1. The Universal Abbreviator, No. 158, of 8 Ventose year III.
2. Paintings of the French Revolution.

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 313

disdain for all these "mummies" had not changed Clearly the time had not come to re-establish the predominance of the Church. u |

Either out of personal conviction or out of fear of the people, the Convention & also understood. She once again proclaimed the freedom of religion, and, on the proposal of Boissy d'Anglas, _ she issued, on 3 Ventôse year III, a decree which confirmed her previous decrees and assured all citizens the most broad religious tolerance.

Royalism seemed for a time to abandon its projects. However, a general relaxation occurred in the republican aspirations of the kingdom, and we feel was that if, openly, the Church had renounced the struggle, she did not despair of reaching her goal by the necessary means. lands. In 4797, the situation in this regard had to be resolved. very troubled, because the council of Five Hundred had to take care of question again.

"The Jews, it was said, celebrate the Sabbath, and the drink is scrupulously observed; Christians celebrate Sunday and Sunday is religiously observed: the Republic wants us to celebrate the decadi, and the decadi is put everywhere the gap... Why is this day not observed? It is that passions, stronger than reason, never cease to fight against republican institutions. » The representative Duhot therefore presented a motion of order ten- regarding the abolition of the Sabbath for the Jews, of Sunday for

under penalty of punishment, ten-year rest. |

Lucien Bonaparte showed himself to be more skillful in politics in 1798 when, in a circular of 7 Thermidor year XIII, he declared

-

4. Le Journal de France, n° 749 and 150, from 4 and 5 Frimaire Year VI.

314 FROM 179% TO 1809

that only civil servants had to observe the timetable drier decadent and that this institution had nothing of common with the particular actions of citizens, who were free to work or rest on such day as they wished. would be suitable!. te |

All these discussions had revived religious passions gious and provoked once again cantankerous polemics between followers of different cults. Attacks on Jews which had ceased for several years, soon resumed With violence. An aristocratic newspaper, among others, proposed a tax on Jews?; and this state of mind even manifested itself at the Council of the Five Hundred where, in 1797, regarding a discussion sion on the debt of the Jews of Metz and Avignon, the representative as Darrac showed himself to be so unjustly passionate against the Jews that he aroused the indignation of the council. And, to have "uttered political blasphemies while persisting in not considering treat Jews only as Jews, while we should only look at them der than as French? », he was called to order.

However, nothing in the existence of the Jews explained this new resentment, nothing, if it was, as always, the political interest of the Church. Never, in fact, had the Jews so little is talked about; they were not an obstacle to the projects of the clergy who must have thought, now that its ancient credit was reborn, to take revenge on the part that the Jews had been able to take part in the Revolution.

The regular operation of the country's institutions once restored, the Jews had to, like all citizens, think about their own interests. The factions had gradually disappeared; THE

1. The Mercury of France, n° VI, 46 fructidor year VIII.

2. L'Amides Lois, de Poulthier, n° 801, 4 brumaire year VI.

3. Le Journal de France, by Chaigneau, n° 754 and 752, from 6 and 7 frimayor year VI.

AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR 315

parties were silenced. Political life was losing its acuity. The people as a whole were excluded from the functions of government. No Jews appear in the assemblies of the primary, national, departmental or primary. Barely so one of them appears either as an assessor of a judge of the peace, as a court clerk, or in a court administration of police. A name stuck here and there, in the newspapers, attracts attention: manufacturer's announcement, advertising made to a artist, opening of a lecturer's course, invention of a industrial, etc.

The country is healing its wounds. The entire population went back to work, despite the disorder that reigns in finances, in the State, in the kingdom. She needs to calm, tranquility, rest. Industrial wealth and commercial France needs to be rebuilt, its prosperity reconstitute.

To sketch the life of the Jews at this time, we must see and follow them in the "brotherhoods" that they created since 1777 to come to the aid of their co-religionists in need of food or diseased; in the modest synagogues that they had preserved despite the darkest days of the Revolution ; in the two small schools they now had held during the Terror. Paris then contained three thousand Jews barely, of whom about half were born in the capital *.

The 19th century arrives, and its first radiant years of greatness go, otherwise bring oblivion to the bloody days which have stained the work of the Revolution, at least attenuate pain and mourning. The Empire, in the splendor of its nascent glory, will first rally all intelligences,

4. Léon Kahn, The History of the Israeli Community of Paris (Paris, Durlacher, 1884-1894). 3

316 FROM 1794 TO 1809

all the will, all the effort. The military brilliance of blind kingdom of the most clairvoyant, and, to impose on them

thanks to the strength of political institutions, 4 ensure the power of France.

Let's take one last look at the existence of the Jews that time. |

CHAPTER II

"NAPOLEON I° AND THE JEWS

It is today a fact acquired by impartial history that the animosity of Napoleon I against the Jews was suggested to him by a veritable religious cabal of which Mr. de Bonald was one of the most passionate. Napoleon did not have had no reason to complain about the Jews. The reports of his ministers and his police had always, on the contrary, given him the best information about their account; they had noted that the Jews, "retaining the name of French", had "made themselves worthy to wear it!" ", and that their conduct did not give rise to "any kind of discontent?" »:

Where did it come from that in 1808, barely a year after these im-bearing seats where the decisions of the first Jews of the Empire could have been a glory for Napoleon as they were an honor for Judaism, where that came from. the emperor himself compromised the work of regeneration _ that he had conceived, and suddenly outlawed them? Had they therefore, since the Revolution, given rise to some

4. Le Mercure de France, n° 319, of August 25, 1807: "Exposure of the situation of the Empire presented by the Minister of the Interior".

2. National Archives, S. Secr. AF Iv, 2.202. Rappers by Mr. Crétet, Minister of the Interior, to Napoleon.

318 | FROM 1794 TO 1809

complaint and, renouncing the benefits of emancipation civic, forgetting the lessons of the Revolution itself, had they, as they were accused, allowed themselves to be taken back by "only Jewish" interests and feelings?

It's hard to believe it. |

The Jews had breathed freedom with full lungs, and in the extreme limits of its excesses and its savagery greatness. There, they had learned to hate servitude, smoothing where social inequities can precipitate man defenseless; they were able to measure the abyss that separates the slave of the free man. And, disdainful of all this, they would have fallen back, willingly, of their own free will, into the state degradation from which the decree of 1794 had defined them really shot! They would have refused, of their own accord. to enjoy of the benefits of their political regeneration!

Who would want to think so? Who would like to admit that Jews of France, the Jews of Paris, would have committed an act as crazy, while the Jews abroad, shaken by the powerful breath of the Revolution, envied their coreligionnaires, were enthusiastic about the great and generous ideas that the Republic sowed on its path, wished to see their heavy chains fall and freedom raise them to the rank of men?

It was especially in Germany that the influence of the Revolution was felt. Already, when Custine had led there triumphantly, phally the French weapons, the Jews had requested to be treated as free men. "Great hero!" wrote to him them, have pity on us, poor Jews, who are so oppressed that my heart groans... See how on all the roads we read on the posts: bodily toll of Jews. If I travel by water, it is called water toll, and for that a Jew can cross the country of Mainz, it costs him certainly a florin per day... When the clergy would have bought the world in hard cash from the Lord, we must not For this reason, we should not be treated more harshly than others. men, because we are not made differently from them!. » And Custine, "French citizen and general of the armies of the Republic blique," replied from Mainz on November 4, 1792: "... For a long time a vile servitude has overwhelmed the people Israelite... Have a little more patience, and soon, all where the sacred standards of freedom will float, no one will no longer cry except the slaves and the tyrants. » This just ambition of the Jews increased as France, subject for so many centuries to a power arbitrary, broke the bonds which hindered its independence dance. In Mainz and Frankfurt, they proudly displayed the national cockade, demanded the abolition of distinctions humiliating conditions to which they were still subjected, and, when that in the year XI, the Senate of Frankfurt wanted to punish them for having demanded, in the name of equality, the enjoyment of the rights of cry of disapproval, protested energetically against the violence lation of the rights of humanity. No one wanted to believe then that "the 19th century would give birth to a sect of atrabiliary cutors who, confusing philosophy with furies of an insane demagogism that philosophy itself even has always disapproved, would present themselves for combat in brandishing the torches of fanaticism and making efforts ridiculous to raise the altars of superstition? ".

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 319

. 1. The Thermometer of the Day, n° 327, from Thursday November 22, 1792.

2. L'Ami des Lois, n° 974, of 27 germinal year VI. – The Journal of Paris, No. 365, December 31, 1806.

3. The Decade, philosophical, literary and political, n° 14, year XI, 2° tri-mestre, 20 pluviôse, p. 276–274: On the Jews and the rights they have to:

320 FROM 1794 TO 1809

The Jews of Brunswick, of Cassel, of Dresden, of Furth, of Hamburg, subject to toll duties, obligations
the most humiliating, felt the same steps born within them sions, the same desires, and, when, in 1806, Napoleon I* brought together the great Jewish Assembly in Paris, they took advantage of this extraordinary event to send deputies there whom they charged with being, near the emperor, the interpreters of their wishes and prayers!.

Finally, in Italy, the French brought with them the hope rancid. In Rome, it was a Jew who, in the year VI, was appointed
"colonel of all districts of the city?" ; later,
Mr. Morpurgo, a Jew from Ancona, was appointed member of the Tri-bunat, and we assured – we believe without difficulty – that "this choice had given the greatest pleasure to the individuals of this nation who had not been accustomed in Rome to such honor"; finally to Lucca, where they were formerly excluded from the Republic and deprived of the right to own property there.
property and even to stay there for more than three days, the Jews were able, in 1806, to become owners there 1.

While, under the influence of progress and civilization
tion that France shines on the world, the ghettos foreigners open up, French Jews rise up, become enlightened, moralized in contact with the grandeur of country. Bonaparte did not yet bear them the hatred that Napoleon was to display it later. He did not then against them these "strong prejudices" which are miserable

the protection of Europe, by Siauve. – La Revue, n° 15, 2nd quarter, May 21, 1807: New observations on the Jews and especially those from Amsterdam and Frankfurt.

1. Le Journal de Paris, n° 217 (year 1806) – 4 (year 1807) – 42 (year 1808).
2. L'Ami des Lois, n° 1002, dated 27 Floréal year VI.
3. Le Postillon de Calais, n° 1000, dated 20 Thermidor year IV; – Le Publicist, from 19 Thermidor; – L'Ami des Lois, n° 1002, dated 27 Floréal year VI.
4. Le Journal de Paris, n° 348, of December 14, 1806.

NAPOLÉON (°° AND THE JEWS 321

religious intrigues were to arise in his mind!.
The Jews were good for something. Still full of this idea that, "scattered throughout the earth by persecution which has lasted for eighteen centuries 2", they held to their "ancient homeland", the great general dreamed, at the time of his expedition to Egypt, to call them to Syria to raise greatness and prosperity. "They are still turning, it was said, their eyes towards Palestine", and, following "the invincible Bonaparte" who had just "proclaimed the deliverance of Jerusalem and Judea 3", they will perhaps – " who knows? » – see him as the Messiah. Newspapers caressed this chimera; Bonaparte believed in it too, and he issued a proclamation in which he invited all Jews to come and line up under its flags to re-establish the city of Jerusalem. No one doubted that his "signal" "the men and Vor" would flock "not only to make industry to flourish, but to suffice for the expenses of revolution of Syria and Egypt 4".

Haunted by this idea of reconstitution of the kingdom never fallen, this extraordinary man, who one day was to push his feelings of distrust against the Jewish soldiers 5, counted at that moment on the valor of the African Jews themselves to support his adventurous exploits; his predictions came true in part. Mixed with battalions of Copts and natives, full of enthusiasm for this:

.1. Opinion of Napoleon on various political and administrative subjects lion, Pelet de la Lozère. Paris, 1833; – Napoleon, his opinions and judgments on men and on things, Damas-Hinard, Paris; 1838.

. The Decade, year VI, 30 germinal, 3rd trimester.

Id., n° 25, year VII, prairial.

The Decade, from 30 germinal year VI.

. See 'Pelet de la Lozère and Damas-Hinard.

. The Publicist, from 2 prairial year VH. – Le Journal de Paris, n° 198, of 18 germinal year VII.

D OF & © PO

HAS

322 FROM 1794 TO 1809

hero that later they will venerate as a god, a great many of them put on a good show in this murderous expedition, which Bonaparte designed for the greatest glory of his name, in an hour of bitter disappointment or ambition unfulfilled.

There is more. The scientific body he led with him counted two Jews: one, a professor at the Special School of living oriental languages, was his interpreting secretary. IF was named Venture and died in front of Acre!. The other was Living Denon, distinguished draftsman, etching engraver?, who later became director of the Musée Napoléon 3. Bona-- | Parte at least liked Jewish artists. We remember that he had another Jew in Paris as engraver on fine stone, Henry Simon, who was attached to his cabinet and left consul and Josephine a large number of engraved images. on all types of stones 4.

All Jews were therefore not, for Bonaparte – gener- – ral, consul, emperor, – an object of aversion. He established. moreover ure distinction between the Portuguese Jews and the. German Jews, professing some consideration for them. some, and having only contempt for others'. And however many of them were for the French themselves a example and teaching. "Immediately," said a writer from the. time, that the Jews were able to devote themselves to the study of sciences and 'in the exercise of useful professions, they obtained in one-

. The Publicist, 11 Vendémiaire year VIII.

. The Courier of Egypt, No. 36, 3 Fructidor Year VII. .

. La Décade, n° 24, year XII, 30 Floréal.

. See. the Israeli Universe, n" 22 and 23, 51st year: A Jewish engraver in the 18th century. i

5. Israelite Archives, 51st year, p. 216. An audience with Napoleon I _ in 1800. – Directory of the Israelite Archives: Official visits and com-- usual folds (Paris, 1888–1889). – Le Mercure de France, n° 352, from:

April 16, 1808.

Æ © IN =

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS _ - 323

and the other careers of successes which victoriously deny the imputations of their enemies... They can enorrightly boast of a large number of distinged and commendable citizens for their virtues and their lights. » After quoting Mendelssohn and the doc-Bloch, famous for his Natural History of Fish, Justin Lamoureux, the author of this article, adds: "A Would a nation which produced such men be incapable to acquire lights? Would she be condemned to live far away of all social perfection in the schism that arises between men the difference in religion, morals and language pledge ? The ever-increasing progress does not allow not to admit this error'. »

And, to support his argument, the writer recalled that, if the neighboring nations had commendable Jews,
France had a large number of them which had shown themselves especially worthy of enjoying full civil rights
that a generous law had granted them. _

Such Furtado, "literator", who had been carried "on the national list and proposed to the Legislative Body"; Berr-Isaac Berr, member of the Nancy Municipal Council, manufacturer and author of several esteemed writings; Worms of Romilly, deputy mayor of the 3rd arrondissement, in Paris; Terquem,

Prominent mathematician; Michel Berr, lawyer, member of several learned societies, author of the Appeal to Justice of Nations and Kings; Isaïe-Berr-Bing, member of the Council municipal of Metz, 'director of the Salines, who had been informed mentally linked during the Revolution with Grégoire, La Fayette, Roederer, Emery... |

. 4. La Revue, n° 20 of July 11, 1806: On the definitive regeneration of Jews, by Justin Lamoureux.

How many more! J. Rodrigues son who, in the Philosophical Review, had just responded with a real eloquence to the venomous attacks of Mr. de Bonald against the Jews! ; the famous Zalkind Hourwitz; Einsheim, author of work on differential and integral calculus which deserved the suffrage of Lagrange and Laplace; Élie Lévy, Lipmann Moses and Mayer, all three known through poetry German and Hebrew; Anschel, physics professor and chemistry; David Sintzheim, learned rabbi of Alsace, that his high virtues and his erudition designated him to the presidency of the Great Sanhedrin. |

In the industry there were manufacturers of merit, in the arts of distinguished workers, enamellers, painters on porcelain, carvers, engravers, painters – in miniature, goldsmiths; we quoted Oppenheim who, “by order of SM”, had obtained a patent for an | means of engraving on fine stones and inlaying on mosaic; Oliveira, goldsmith, and Héymann, tinsmith, whose works had been noticed at the exhibition of industrial products sorts in 4806; talented musicians like Dacosta, Joseph Lambert, Isaac Franco; finally others, like Mandel, pharmacien, and doctors of medicine Lallemand, Friedlander, Terquem, Lemonier, who had acquired one. honorable reputation through their scientific work...

: Such a set of merits, talents, virtues, cannot should he not give rise to “a favorable prevention” for the Jews? rable that the voice of prejudice and hatred will strive in vain to suffocate”? We could assume so. However neither these distinguished men, neither their devotion to the homeland, nor the

4. Le Mercure de France, n° 238, of February 8, 1806: On the Jews, by Mr. de Bonald; – La Revue Philosophique, No. 8, of March 11, 1806: Observations on an article by Mr. Bonuld, by Mr. Rodrigues fils. |

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 325

»

glory that their character and genius could contribute to to reflect on France, did not find favor before the . hero whom Providence showered with its favors.

And, once again, all of a sudden, on March 17, 1808, Napoléon outlawed most Jews; he rejected them both their financial transactions, surrounding their trading of the most restrictive forms, by prohibiting non-Jews domiciled in Haut and Bas-Rhin to take up residence there, by not admitting to settle in other departments than those who would acquire a rural property; by subjecting every Jew conscripted to personal service.

. With a stroke of his pen, the great Napoleon had just violated constitutional law, human law! |

What, in the eyes of the emperor, had motivated these abominable decisions? Alsace! Jewish Alsace which, since 1789, served as a scarecrow for those who opposed the emancipation of the Jews; Alsace that, for fear of deliverance of the Jews, the Church accused of all misdeeds, thefts, fraud, hoarding, usury; Alsace, which had given during the Revolution so much proof of his patriotism, of his dedication to the nation. The emancipation of the Jews Alsations then appeared to their adversaries as a ghost full of threats and must have been the signal of the most bloody reprisals. Already at that moment they were accused to own two-thirds of the province; free them-ment was to bring about the total ruin of the Christians; and the Christians, to take revenge on their usurious practices, would unleash their anger and hatred on them. The me-supporters of this odious campaign increased, with the years, the figure of this wear. They claimed, in 1806, that Jewish debts, from 12 to 15 million in 1789, then amounted to

326 FROM 179% TO 1809

at 35 million. In reality, these debts, under the Empire, were far from reaching 10 million'; and that was just a number in itself insignificant, especially if we consider that mortgages registered are still far from representing the mortgages real, and that part of these mortgages were made in favor of Christian praetors of whom the Jews were only the intermediaries?

Napoleon wanted to hear nothing of the truth.

. On his return from the war against Austria, all covered still smoke from the battle of Austerlitz, where "several Jews had deserved the name of brave" and where "some even had received the decoration of the Legion of Honor", he while stopping in Strasbourg, lent a complacent ear to the interested complaints made to him against the Jews of Alsace. And, when he arrived in Paris, determined to chase them third of these imaginary misdeeds, he intended to encompass all the

We will not repeat here the history of the efforts that Napoleon attempted to completely overturn the equality of the Jews. Guizot gave a very exact account of it in the Revue des Deux Mondes, in 1867; another writer * published on this subject documents unpublished in 1884; finally Chancellor Pasquier in made, in his memoirs, a table which completes precisely, by new revelations, the conditions in which rose, grew, developed, was irritated by animosity of the great conqueror. "The clerical and reactionary clique, Bonald, Fontanes and Molé", had almost succeeded in compromising

1. Cf. Halphen, Legislation concerning the Israelites, p. 326.
2. Is. Lœb, Reflections on the Jews (Paris, 1884).
3. La Revue, No. 20, July 11, 1806.
4. Paul Fauchille, The Jewish question in France under the First Empire (Paris, 1884).
5. Memoirs of Chancellor Pasquier, t. I, 270 et seq. (Paris, 1893).
6. Graetz, History of the Jews. Leipzig, 1870, t. XI, no. 46, p. 620.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 327

carry out the work of justice and reparation of the Revolution.

The "flat-haired Corsican", forgetting his own origin, his miserable youth, the desire for power and greatness those who had gnawed at his heart so deeply, missed of leniency and humanity for the unfortunate. This such a broad mind had pettiness. He didn't understand that if the Jews had been chained to customs for so long of their ancestors, they could not, from one day to the next, "to bend them to the customs of the peoples among whom they lived when the tyranny of opinion and governments prohibited them from any participation in the benefit of national law. nale! ". i

But, if by examining their state from a general point of view he could criticize a certain number of people for not blending in quickly enough among the masses, did he imagine that laws exceptions would more easily overcome resistance encountered among those whom the progress of civilization had not yet been able to reach? If he had just waited the effects of the proposals made by the General Assembly

there is no doubt that he would soon have noticed a significant improvement. sible in their morals. But the tyrant's impatience does not understand meet deadlines. It seems to him that what is only the work of time must obey its orders. God even in his will is less inflexible, because he has goodness, rope. Napoleon, a subtle and cunning soul, hid under a apparent benevolence, perversity in design, cruelty in purpose. He had intended the destruction of the Jews? ; he focused his efforts there. |

1. La Revue (Décade), n° 20, of July 11, 1806. `
2. Correspondence of Napoleon I°. National Archives, No. 10.537.

328 FROM 1794 TO 1809

The summons of all deputies and rabbis to Paris made a deep impression. In public places, in the salons, in the gazettes, we only discussed Napoleon's designs and consequences: a meeting also important. "Never," says a Catholic newspaper At the time, there was so much talk about the Jews only at the time when we are. All of Europe seems to be in suspense on the reason which led to their summons, as well as on the result of their assembly, and she eagerly welcomes everything, who can, in this regard, shed some light!. »

In the newspapers, news, "interfilets" had appeared, gradually announcing the emperor's decisions. There column had added timid comments. The Publi- ciste particularly had provided some favorable notes to the Jews. Mr. Bonald then entered the fray. And immediately he stood out through an acrimonious and vehement study against the Jews where he accumulated the most false allegations against maintaining the rights that the Revolution had granted them. All his arguments were summed up in this sentence which sufficed- knows how to reveal the tendencies of the Catholic writer: "...The Jews-cannot be, and, even if we don't will never be citizens under Christianity, without becoming Christians? » 2 4

This attack could not go unanswered. At this time when, among the Jews, cultivated minds were not in large numbers, ot newspapers, placed under a regime rigorous, could no longer, as in the days of freedom, be approached by the first citizens to come, where the Jews

1. Mixtures of philosophy and history (continuation of the Annales catholiques),

2. Le Mercure de France, No. 238, February 8, 1806: On the Jews, by Mr. de Bonald.

NAPOLÉON 1st AND THE JEWS 329

„already felt the ground slipping away from under their feet, it was possible that – either insufficient talent, or lack of courage – no one dared to take up this challenge to acquired rights. However, it was necessary to defend the work of emancipation, and this was a woman who, with remarkable valor, was the first to quable, refuted Mr. Bonald's hateful indictment.

She was, according to the Publicist, “a Jewish woman of mind blow.” His response titled: “Some Thoughts on the article by M. de Bonald on the Jews”, was inserted in the Publiciste of February 27, 1806. The author, who signed his observations of the initial N, refuted with vigorous eleven glove the accusations of his adversary. “ How M. de Bonald – she said among other things – who honors himself so much of the title of Christian, was he not afraid of degrading his character while also professing principles. disowned by the religion and morality, and must it be me who reminds him what should be done? »

But, if she could not focus “on pointing out all the sophisms, false reasoning, random facts” of which the work of M. Bonald “swarmed”, another, MJ Rodrigues, charged with doing it, and he carried it out with the energy that proves to what extent the Jews were determined to face the enemy. Already Mr. Simon Mayer, deputy deputy of the party inspection of the Seine to the General Assembly of Jews, “inspection ector of the Government in the Military Administration”, had just published a pamphlet in which he did justice to blable charges, “which would be deemed very serious if they were made by people other than journalists.” This feeling of disdain expressed by the Journal de Paris! was shared by the Revue Philosophique which, by publishing the

1. Le Journal de Paris, n° 120, of August 8, 1806.

2

330 FROM 1794 TO 1809

refutation of MJ Rodrigues son, only did it to please to combat objections that have been destroyed for half a century less, paradoxes as inhuman as they are unreasonable, finally an article that surely few people in France will have taken the trouble to read. » Alas! isn't the story a perpetual new beginning, and the exordium of refutations of Mr. Rodrigues could it not still be written of our days ? "If we had to be surprised at anything here below," said it would be to see, in the 19th century, within free France and powerful, publish observations on the Jews which tend to deprive them of the civil and political rights that the laws, the reason granted to them. »

With rare vigor, with sound judgment and eloquence with great indignation, he straightened out these accusations which were become the current currency of the argument against Jews – slanders that become legends and spread so well through time that they end up taking the form of axioms and indisputable truths. – " The Jews

. form a class of their own in human nature. – Nor the examples nor the laws can do anything about them. – It's in vain that we would think of improving their morals by improving their political condition. – Slaves or free, despised or honored, they will always remain the same. » But to these common mistakes, important journals, such as the Revue Philosophique, the Journal de Paris, le Publiciste?, responded by recalling the secular virtues of the Jews, their patriarchal morals, their loyalty lity to the homeland, and, animated by the noblest ideas, they took _

1. La Revue historique (Décade), n° 8, of March 11, 1806: Observations on an article by M. de Bonald, on the Jews.

2. La Revue (Décade), n° 20, 3rd trim. of July 11, 1806. – No. 15, 2nd quarter, May 21, 1807. – Le Journal de Paris, No. 207, July 26, 1806.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 331

the defense of those whom the Church outraged again by stripping them of their rights and their civil conquests. _The discussion was no less passionate between the citizens themselves. We talked about the Jews, their aspirations tions, of the current danger of their state, and their defenders were neither less numerous nor less eloquent than their opponents. "The whole question," said Abbot Grégoire, "is reduced to knowing whether Jews are men. How many are despised Israelite, outrage the dignity of the human species! Christians your persecutors have therefore not read the Gospel, which would be a crime! But certainly they do not observe it, which is another'. » Passions were overexcited. It was a widely held belief that one meditates again new persecutions against the Jews, which were prepared there opinion, that people sought to mislead it, sometimes by unworthy jokes, sometimes by vexatious measures?. When the religious fanaticism is unleashed on a country, it produces the most deplorable effects: it postpones a nation to more than one century back. Woe to those who are the first to surrender guilty of such a bad deed! Shame on the people who becomes his accomplice! Nothing can stop him on this slope perilous situation which leads to civil war. Alone, the power absolute strength of a Napoleon could be large enough to prevent incalculable evils. But whatever he did, decision towards the Jews was strongly discussed. Gregory the observed: "Ignorance and malevolence were exercised for some time on this summons; they are disguised or slandered the motives 3..."

1. Grégoire, New Observations on the Jews. The Review, No. 15, of May 21, 1807.

2. The Philosophical Decade, n° 14, of 20 ptuvidse year XI.

3. Grégoire, New Observations.

332 FROM 1794 TO 1809

It is in the midst of these disturbing discussions that the Assembly general assembly of Jewish deputies met on July 26, 1806, at City Hall. The government's plans were made, its roles distributed, its questions decided, its opinions _ fixed, and the comedy took off. the forms of a drama all the more: more intense that the deputies were not allowed to ignore the rigor reuse will of the master. They held fate in their hands of their co-religionists. They knew it, and they showed it all the more concerned as they had no quality to command them obedience. |

The proceedings of the Jewish Assembly have been published many times; although known, it is useful to summarize them here. I we must know, in fact, that, in this assembly, which was closed on August 12, 1806, as in the Great Sanhedrin which followed her, and completed her work on February 43, 1807, the members of these meetings gave proof of piety more enlightened, of the highest feelings, of the most great self-sacrifice towards the homeland; they sacrificed to the most sacred ones that they had venerated since their childhood, and that. their fathers, miserable, oppressed, thought cute: had them learned to respect and love. |

Twelve questions were asked to them by order of the Government. nement'. Each was the object. with a special response. THE deputies had no difficulty in demonstrating: 1° that it was not not lawful for Jews to marry several wives; 2 that the divorce was only permitted by the Jewish religion as long as it was previously pronounced by the courts under the French code; 3° that the marriage of Jews with Christians could no more be blessed by the rabbis than he would be by Catholic priests; 4° and that the rabbis, become citizens and comply with the laws of the State, do not exercise there were, since the Revolution, no jurisdiction among the Jews.

1. Halphen, Legislation concerning the Israelites, notes M, p. 239.

NAPOLÉON I^{er} AND THE JEWS | 333

Other questions, which were particularly close to the heart of Napoleon, were not resolved with less sincerity, with less loyal dignity. |

"In the eyes of the Jews," people asked, "are the French their brothers or are they strangers? »

In the eyes of the Jews, the Assembly loudly declared, the French are their brothers and are not foreigners. " And how could they look at them otherwise, she added, when they live on the same soil, when they are governed and protected by the same government and by the same laws, that they enjoy the same rights and fulfill the same: homework?... Yes, France is our homeland, the French are our brothers, and this glorious title, honoring us to our own eyes, is a sure guarantee that we will never cease | to deserve it. » |

"In either case, what are the relationships that their law prescribes them with the French who are not of their religion? »

The Assembly replied: "These reports are the same than those which exist between a Jew and another Jew; We let us admit no other difference than that of adoring Being supremacy each in his own way... Today the Jews do not born into the great nation, what they regard as a political redemption, it is not possible for a Jew to treat a Frenchman who is not of his religion otherwise than he treats one of his co-religionists. »

It was to be expected that the charge of usury would find-

334 FROM 1794 TO 1809

would have its place in the questionnaire where doubt was cast the purest feelings of the Jews. This is what happened. Many times already, and again since the Revolution, the rabbins or the trustees had recalled, in response to slander denying assertions, that the interest loan had never been allowed not only between Jew and Jew, but also between a Jew and a compatriot, without distinction of religion. THE deputies renewed these solemn protests.

"What was the aim of the legislator," they said, "in forbidding a Hebrew to take interest in another? It was to strengthen the bonds of fraternity between them, of prescribe to them reciprocal benevolence and to engage them

'ger to help each other selflessly. There first thought had been to establish between them the equality of goods and the mediocrity of private fortunes..." But day when the Jews were dispossessed from "Palestine, where they were scattered among all the peoples of the earth, they inhabited killed the practices of the nations in the midst of which they lived. Without scruple they lent interest to the Jews traders as well as men of a different religion. But this is a legitimate loan and not usury, a word which does not exist was no more than the thing among the Hebrews. |

This is the quick summary of the ample and precise response what did the deputies do to the two questions asked on this subject: "Does the law of the Jews forbid them from making usury on their brothers? – Does it allow them or forbid them to make usury to strangers? » |

Many legends were thus established on the account of Jews, and the most upright explanations could not arrive to destroy them. Was it not also claimed that certain pro- Were their activities forbidden by Jewish law? that the Jews French people would never regard France as their homeland?

We will see later how the Jewish Assembly and the Jews themselves responded to this odious imputation. The first question was simply, dismissively almost, decided by this declaration: "The law of the Jews does not forbid them any profession; on the contrary the Talmud positively declares that the father of the family who does not teach a profession to his child educates him for the life of bandits. »

These clear declarations, which were converted by the Sanhedrin in doctrinal decisions, prove with what nobility the deputies fulfilled their delicate mission. This what is strange is the astonishment that caused Napoleon-Léon the proud firmness, the value, the lofty views of these humble and modest Jews. How little they were known, even from those who claimed to know them best! " We had generally assumed them only occupied with their pecuniary interests – said Chancellor Pasquier! – born holding to their religion only out of habit, and especially because of the conveniences that it granted to their conscience to live at the expense of all the countries that received them or were suffering. We found ourselves in the presence of very superior men. laughing at the peat with which general opinion con- was melting. Very carefully instructed in their religion and its principles, they were strengthened in the attachment they bore them by the animadversion which it attracted towards them; their very cultivated mind was not foreign to any knowledge human health. It was therefore no longer permitted to ignore the existence of a Jewish nation of which until then we had not noticed that the dregs, and which, by the care that had been given to the choice of members of which the Assembly was composed, spoke a language worth listening to. »

1. Memoirs of Chancellor Pasquier, t. I, p. 276.

336 FROM 1794 TO 1809

But Napoleon made light of the dignity of men. Nothing mattered but his inflexible will. And the deputies Jews had to bow with resignation to necessity, with courageous dignity facing the future. What opposition offers the spectacle of these modest servants of the country and of the powerful monarch who used the most arbitrary means milked to impose his hostile will on them and which turned them his back as soon as they had given him weapons against them what he hoped for? Their work completed, they asked audience with the emperor. Neither their efforts, nor their supplications, nor their entreaties were of any use: "the impetus ur did not deign to receive them; he. had nothing to do everything he wanted to be granted and their assistance was, useless to deduce from their deliberation measures of rigor against the Jewish nation. They then understood, but little later, which they themselves had, by their own resolutions, provided Napoleon with weapons against the race whose defended the cause. » Their right and pure conscience stood in the face of his hypocrisy.

The emperor's plans, let us never stop repeating it, were inspired by unjustified malice. The board of State had received the news "with disdain and smile" and called them absurd. However, the Council of State, it was public opinion, and Napoleon did not dare to collide head-on. It was necessary to take the advisors aside, weigh upon them with all the force of imperial power, and Mr. Molé, who had made himself the commissioner of the thought-of master, was responsible for obtaining the exceptional measures

1. The Jewish Question in France under the First Empire. Paul Fauchille (Paris, 1884). . ` |

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS := 337

that we were determined to take. Contempt and disdain for counselors who reared; insults and slander against Jews: the character of the Corsican was revealed here entirely, arrogance and deceit. E |

Everything had to bend before him. And it is, strong of consent glacial decision of the Council of State, which he delivered on March 17, 1808, decree with which he blasted the Revolution, to which he owed All. Only the Jews of Bordeaux, Gironde and Landes – then on April 26, the Jews of Paris in turn – were excepted from these shameful provisions. At the end of 1811, Napoleon had to free twenty-two departments ments!

Let's see what was happening in Paris.

Mr. Crétet, Minister of the Interior, who proposed to "make freedom" to the Jews, will inform us in this regard.

"The Capital," said Mr. Crétet, "contains a fairly large number of Jews who run banking houses, commerce or industrial establishments, at the head of which I could quote MM. Fould, regent of the Bank; Worms, deputy mayor of the 6th arrondissement; Rodrigues, Patto and co; their credit would be seriously compromised and the existence

that they are included in the application of the decree of March 17... |

"The exception made by Your Majesty in favor of Jews of the South being based on the fact that they did not give rise to no complaints, I wanted to make sure first if it was ` raised against the Jews who live in the city of Paris, and what- that there was no kind of claim against them my ministry, I consulted in this regard Mr. Advisor of State, prefect of police, and I engaged him to do the research the most severe to recognize what could have been the conduct of the Jews of Paris, either before the Revolution or during its course, either during the reign of Your Majesty.

1. National Archives, S. Secr., AF tv, 2, 208.

22

338 FROM 1794 TO #809

"I believe I must place before your Majesty's eyes the very text of the expressions contained in the report con- confidentiality of this magistrate. i

"Your Majesty will see that their conduct did not give rise to no kind of dissatisfaction. Mr. Police Prefect notes that, out of a population of 2,543 Jews living in the capital, there are only four which are noted for having delivered to usurious loans, and even then it is on notes and not pawned.

"Mr. State Councilor, prefect of the department, makes me with regard to them, and with more details, the same testimony; he made sure that no Jews took part during the class of the Revolution nor to the crowd of stockbrokers that it produced, nor to the black bands, nor even to the loan houses which have been trained in such large numbers.

"He notices, on the contrary, that we find a large number of Jews in Paris, during this interval, in the armies of the Republic or the Empire, in the administrations trations, courts, factories and factories, workshops that they train, direct, operate, where they give work for a large number of workers and where they work themselves. | |

"He adds that more than one hundred and fifty Jews from Paris serve at this moment in the armies of Your Majesty be as

that neither a deserter nor a refractor is known among them. to hush up; that several were even promoted to ranks officers, several decorated with the Cross of Honor; that almost two hundred Jewish children are currently in apprenticeship among various craftsmen; that we know of which apply to medicine, 4 jurisprudence, painting, engraving, watchmaking, etc. ; that the high schools of Paris, that of Versailles, the École Polytechnique, also contains Jewish students.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 339

e These, Sire, are the recognized facts '...', etc.

A note containing the "observations of the arch-chance-bind" was attached to this letter: |

"...[it is certain that the very large number of Jews who residents in the capital behave very well... Almost all early on expressed conforming opinions in the views of His Majesty. They come largely from Jews formerly called Portuguese and those who come from the Jews Germans or Avignon have lost the spirit of plunder which seemed to characterize their ancestors. »

Finally, an extract from a letter addressed to the minister was annexed of the Interior by State Councilor Du Bois, prefect of police, on April 2, 1808, and which undoubtedly constituted the "report" confidential port" including by Mr. Crétet: "...I can affirm- Wed to Your Excellency that the Paris police did not receive no more complaints, in serious matters, from the Jews of the capital, than it receives, in proportion, from other inhabitants, and that the crimes, of which some are sometimes accused, are not are not particular to them as Jews, but are equally committed by all Catholics, Protestants and others who may have the same inclinations, the same habits and the same occasions.

1, At the top and in the margin of the ministerial dispatch are these words:

"His Majesty is begged to make it known whether he has heard take the Jews of the capital into the exception provided by article 19,

"THE title of the decree of March 17 on the policing of Jews. " At the bottom of this summary, in the hand of the Emperor, the word: "Yes", and the signature -"N"; and next to: Bayonne, April 26, 1808. |

340' FROM 1794 TO 1809

"...I must add that among the many houses of loans, which the wisdom of the government removed in the capital, none was held by Jews.

"It cannot be disputed that the mass of the Israelites inhabitants of Paris has improved prodigiously, especially since 1790, when they enjoyed civil rights.

"We notice, in general, that the Jews of Paris followed with ardor the regenerative impulse which was impressed upon them.
mee. » | ;

Thus, from this time, and less than six months after the famous decree, the Minister of the Interior noted an improvement in the conduct of the Jews! the wear had decreased! the proceedings for forced expropriations were considered obviously slowed down! The regeneration of the Israelites was visible (1811)! they obeyed more the laws on conscription! They began to devote themselves to professions useful! The emperor could only congratulate himself on the miraculous their submission of the Jews. |

The truth is that the evil reported was particular to some individuals, and that it was not such as to require laws of circumstances, violation of the most basic rights of citizen. But Napoleon only spared men when his interest was at stake, and – that was the petty side of this powerful genius – he sacrificed everything to the pleasure of demolishing, organize, regulate, construct, carrying in all things of political and social life passion, ultimately harmful, conquests f. – | |

So, suddenly, it was recognized that corruption was not no longer as absolute, as general as we had needed proclaim it first of all; all the excesses reproached to the Jews

1. The Jewish Question, by Paul Fauchille.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 341

had almost everywhere disappeared; progress in their morals was obvious, manifest, from 1810. Only one of the imperial decisions remained in force: it was the one which subject all Jews to military service.

It is difficult to understand the obligation that the emperor imposed on them to serve personally in his armies. His complaints to especially in this regard were unfounded. Public opinion did not share his prejudices.

We saw this from the reports of Mr. de Champagny, of Mr. Crétet and the police chief. We were able to see this from the citations that we have made of the newspapers. What we are going to saying will prove even better that the Jews had not waited this rigorous constraint to do their duty.

We know what happened in 1806, during the General Assembly. rant of the Jews. When Mr. Molé, government commissioner ment, asked the following question:

,— Jews, born in France and treated by law as citizens, do they look at France as their homeland and do they believe they are obliged to defend it?

The members of the Assembly stood up with one movement unanimously and exclaimed:

— Who! until death !!

This feeling was so true that in 1807 the Great Sanhedrin noted that, in the last wars, French Jews had fought to the death against Jews from countries with that France was in struggle, that many were "covered" green with honorable scars", and that others had "obtained on the field of honor brilliant testimonies of their bravery.

Evidence abounds of their military value.

1. Collection of Acts, vol. I, p. 130.

342 FROM 179% TO 1809

Already, in 1809, several Jews had left the École polytechnique', and immediately, among the defenders of the country, they had taken rank in the weapon to which they were assigned. Lists of Jewish officers and soldiers that the Israeli Consistory lite of Paris published at this time ?, in response to false indictments of Napoleon I", contain their names and the names of those who, in Paris, had not hesitated "to pay their blood for the glory of the nation.

Had they waited until they were forced to? Let us give each other the great deeds that a few have accomplished, that more of one was already serving France at an age when so many others remain would be calm and indifferent to the maternal home.

_ Lion Ravel, captain in the 3rd light infantry regiment, aged thirty-four years old. Twenty years of service under the draskins in Catalonia. i Élie Devalabrègue, brigadier in the artillery train. East discharged after five years of service due to illness.

Jacob Nathan, soldier of the 4th company of the 4th colonial battalion, in Bell-en-Mer. In service for three years.

Francois Nathan, from Paris. In the army for twelve years.

Lion Lévy, sergeant major. In the army for twenty years. |

Jacob Lévy, soldier at the 54th line, in Spain. In the army since six years. | | i Abraham Lévy, quartermaster at 85th line. In the army since four years.

Isracl Jacob, quartermaster at the 117th line, 3rd battalion, 2nd compagnie, in Spain. In service for two and a half years.

Moses Ephraim, soldier in the 6th regiment of gunners, in Madrid. In service for two and a half years.

1. Cf. Léon Kahn, History of the Jewish Community of Paris:

Manual Professions and Patronage Institutions (Paris, 1885).

2. Id.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 343

Auger Baccara, soldier in the 4th hussars. Serving for six years. Aged twenty-four.

Salomon David, soldier in the 9th line. Left depts three years.

Abraham Rouef, from Paris, soldier in the 6th artillery regiment imperial. In service for two and a half years.

Lion Lion, soldier at the 17th line, for three years.

Jacob Weill, quartermaster in the 1st Regiment of the Imperial Army Corps marine tillage, 4th battalion, 3rd company, 4 Concarneau. At service for four and a half years. Left voluntarily.

Mathis Dalmbert, second lieutenant in the 23rd hunter regiment on horseback. He left the École Polytechnique three years ago.

Abraham Lévy, soldier in the 9th line. In the army for six years.

Benedit Vidal, captain in the Issembourg regiment. At service for fifteen years.

David-Éliézer Vidal, deputy captain at the general staff of the Grande Army, knight of the Empire. Serving for eight years.

Jacob Picard, soldier in the 6th gunner regiment, 21st company. In service for three years.

Meyer Lévy, soldier in the 108th line, in Vienna, for three years.

Joseph Bodenheim, brigadier, 22nd regiment of hunters horse, for three years. | have

D. Weill, voltigeur officer in the 119th regiment, division of General Bonnet, in Spain, for four years.

Chaillot Weill, soldier in the colonies. In the army since two and a half years.

Moise Weill, soldier in the colonies. In the army for two years and a half.

Moise Philippe, musician in the naval gunners, Brest, for four and a half years.

Abraham Philippe, in the 2nd regiment of the Paris Guard, in Spain. Soldier for two years. |

Leman Mordochée, soldier in the 3rd line regiment. In the Army Is two years old.

L.-Alexandre Hyman, second lieutenant at the 81st line, 2nd battalion. lon, 4th company. He signed up voluntarily.

Moïse-Nathan Jourdan, in the army for three years. Fife in the 1st battalion of voltigeurs. |

Lazard Bernard, sergeant in the 3rd colonial battalion, on the Ile de Ré, for six years.

Jean Bernard, pension of 250 francs, for having been injured & lena. |

Abraham-Cerf Worms, gunner in the imperial artillery corps, 1st Corps of the Grand Army, for six years.

J. Gomper, hunter in the 5th line infantry regiment. HAS the army for six years.

Lion-Cerf Calman, who left as a soldier for eight years, for Ile-de-France, with Admiral Linois.

Leman Joseph, servant of Mr. Darcantelle (in Zaragoza), colonel of the 1st rifle regiment. In the army for ten years. –

Bernard Joseph, soldier in the 1st line regiment, 4th corps, . 5th battalion. In the army for four years.

Jacob' Aron, he left two and a half years ago. He is a soldier in 119° line, in Spain.

Isaac Simon, hunter with the 28th light infantry. Engaged himself voluntarily.

Lion Isaac, rifleman of the 94th regiment, 4th battalion, 4th company. In the Army of the Rhine for a year and a half.

Isaac Joseph, soldier in the 3rd Imperial Artillery Regiment. HAS the army for two years.

Lion Créhange, soldier in the 2nd line regiment. In the army since seven years. He was injured. has

David Polonais, in the army for eight years. Don't know in which body.

Samuel Dorville, captain in the 5th regiment of hunters, cs eighteen years. Retirement pension of 600 francs.

Isaac Gaissmar, he left in the 9th line, two years ago years. He is believed to be under the orders of the Duke of Ragusa.

Daniel Lévy, gunner in the 4th Marine Artillery Corps. In the army for five years.

Max Wolff, captain of the bodyguards, in Cassel. Knight of the Legion of Honor.

Emmanuel Wolff, dragoon officer. Knight of the Legion of honor.

Bernard-Joseph Caen, sergeant in the 44th light. In the Army for seventeen years. i:

Isaac Lion, soldier in the 17th line for two years.

Philippe Geoffroy, prisoner in England. Soldier since five years.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 345

Théodore Gaffré, captain aboard the corvette Colibri, at Haven. Soldier for four years.

Moïse-Henri Seeligmann, lieutenant of carabiniers in the Hanoverian Legion. Serving for eleven years.

In these authentic lists of citizens who gave themselves in the homeland, sailors or soldiers, do not appear all those who were wounded or who remained lying in the fields of battle. Should we cite Philippe Blum, captain of the 48th regiment? cavalry, killed on the field of honor! and whose son, by decree of 24 Thermidor year IX, was appointed student at the Pry-tanned French? Should we mention Baumgarten trumpet major 'to the 22nd regiment of horse hunters, and who, in the year receives "arms of honor" as a reward for actions of brilliance that he accomplished?? How many deserve to see their name carried on this golden book of patriotism, since the humble and modest conscript "in the army for twenty years" and of whom the father has not heard for ten years, until that in Ravel, son of Salomon Ravel, "leader of squadrons, great provost of Italy, died on the field of honor?»? Can we say that he was a rebel against military laws, this "Jewish people" who had in the army valiant children of eighteen, eighteen seven, sixteen and fifteen years old! Can we say that some or all others spared their blood for the glory of the nation! Let us read the following list again: we will see if these are men who seek to evade their military duties shut up! who flee from danger! who sacrifice the interest of the homeland to their personal interests!

1. The Journal des Débats, 24 Thermidor Year IX.

2. Le Journal de Paris, n° 276, of 6 Messidor year X.

January 10, 1806, and n°199, of July 18, 1809.

346 FROM 1794 TO 1809

Weil, son of Moyse, sergeant in the 1st artillery regiment Marine. Serving for seven years. Aged twenty-five.

Charles Moyse, soldier in the 4th Hussars for two years. Age nineteen years old. |

Cerf Jacob, soldier in the 6th auxiliary battalion, for five years.

Lazard Oulif, soldier in the 3rd line, for six years. Aged twenty-seven years.

Léon Abraham, -soldier in the 17th line, for six years. old twenty five years. - |

Jacob Picard, soldier in the 6th dos cing anse artillery regiment Aged twenty-four.

Michel Ondel, hunter at 24° light. Serving for twenty month. Twenty years old. , |

Abraham Rouf, soldier in the 6th artillery corps, since five years. SUMMER ae

Gustave Mordecai, lieutenant in the 3rd Imperial artillery corps

rial. Aged eighteen. In service for two years.

Eugène Mordochée, lieutenant in the 3rd Imperial Artillery Corps rial. Aged seventeen. In service for two years.

Charles-Auguste Prague, quartermaster of the 26th dragoons. Aged twenty-two. Serving for five years.

Léon Hayman, lieutenant at the 18th line. Twenty years old. At service for three years.

Alphonse-Théodore Cerf-Berr, lieutenant in the 4th artillery. Twenty years old. Serving for four years.

Max-Théodore Cerf-Berr, second lieutenant in the 52nd infantry, Genoa. Nineteen years old. In service for fifteen months.

Abraham Mordecai, soldier in the 1st rifle regiment. Age sixteen years old. In service for four months. |

Aaron Simon, soldier at the 119th line. Nineteen years old. At service for six years. |

Mayer Lévy, soldier at the 108th line, for six years.

Salomon Abraham, soldier in the 22nd line. Aged twenty-two years. In service for three years.

Abraham Goval, corporal of the marine artillery. In the service for thirteen years. Thirty years old.

Mayer Hourwitz-Lévy" soldier in the 3rd artillery regiment Marine. Nineteen years old. In service for two years.

Morange Seligman, soldier in the 4th line, for eight years.

NAPOLÉON I^{er} AND THE JEWS 347

Caen Lazare, soldier in the 3rd marine battalion. Aged twenty years. In service for three years.

Marix Lévy, sergeant major at the 93rd line. Serving since four years. Aged twenty-three.

Hayman Lévi, soldier at the 58th line. Aged eighteen. At service for six months.

Édouard-David Weil, aide-de-camp to General Verdier.

Jacob Weil, in the guard of the King of Rome. Aged fifteen.

Bloum, soldier in the 25th dragoons, for sixteen months. old nineteen years old. ,

David Weil, chief quartermaster of the artillery train. Aged twenty-two. Serving for four years.

Moise Vielle, soldier in the 6th artillery. Serving for five years. |

Moyse, musician in the naval artillery in Brest, since seven years. |

Abraham Moyse, soldier in the 2nd regiment of the Paris Guard, since five years. |

Abraham Worms, soldier in the 1st artillery regiment, since nine years.

Gaspard Lévy, soldier in the 3rd colonial battalion. Aged eighteen years. In service for eight months.

thirty years later – glorious for military annals of the country, given as examples to the young sons of France, jealous of so much honor and valor!.

The newspapers of the time still provide us with testimony of many patriotic dedications which honored the Jews. But, in order not to prolong further measure these enumerations, we will cite one last one.

Little is known of the sacrifices of all kinds that the Bacri brothers, from Marseille, to defend the interests of loans and credit of France. It is good that we know in

1. Carmoly, Revue Orientale, t. I, p. 43 (Paris, 1841).

348 FROM 1794 TO 1809

under what circumstances they came to the aid of the Republic.

On 1st Pluviôse year VII, war was declared on the France by the dey of Algiers, who had without further delay made arrest and put on chain the Consul of France and all French which he had been able to seize. Their property had been *confiscated.

While, in retaliation, the government arrest, in Paris, Aboucaya, extraordinary envoy of the head of barbarians!, the Bacri Jews, who enjoyed great favor with the dey, obtained for the French who had become slaves "relief from the chain" and restitution of their belongings; then they die of rest that the captives do not were released. |

. `The newspapers of the time were filled with details of this case. Le Journal de France?, Le Postillon de Calais?, le Publiciste', the Journal de Paris®, recount the efforts that did the Bacri to tear French citizens from the hands of the dey.

At the same time they recounted the considerable service which these same Jews returned to France.

During his Egyptian expedition, Bonaparte, as we know, had captured Malta. But, closely pressed by the fleet English, he barely took the time to organize this island, and had to hasten the departure of the fleet which carried it to the East. Soon the English ships appeared and in turn searched to take "the impregnable islet". They did not succeed. They

4. A Jewish ambassador in Paris under the Directory, by H. Prague.
Directory of Israeli Archives (Paris 1888–1889).

2. No. 302, of 5 Germinal Year VII.

3. No. 1184, of 14 Pluviôse year VII.

4 No. of 13 Pluviôse year VII.

5. No. 134, from 14–16 Pluviôse year VII.

6. The Postillon of Calais, n° 214 and 215, from 14 and 16 Ventôse year VII.
– Le Journal de France, n° 286 and 288, dated 13th and 15th Ventôse.

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 349

wanted to at least starve the inhabitants and did so blockade of the island. Resupply was only done with the more extreme difficulty.

The Bacri brothers took it upon themselves to provide the unfortunate islanders everything they needed. They achieved it, not without sacrifices and without pain. Of five buildings they shipped there, one was taken by the English, another was forced by bad weather to release in a French port, the others reached Malta with a cargo of wheat, vinegar, wine, – flour, meats, preserves, etc., etc., and their arrival caused inexpressible joy on the island. “The whole garni-
The son of Malta appreciated the importance of such a service. »
On the other hand, the agent of the Coen-Bacri house, of Marseille, who had provided the general commanding the garrison
_ from the island “all the sums he needed”, wrote of Malta, Pluviôse 4: “I cannot describe to you all the satisfaction shown by all French people to our arrival, and among others the agent of the Republic. »

Thus, wherever they are able to contribute to the defense of the homeland, the Jews rise ready to accomplishment of their duty. Thus, in industry, in science, in the arts, modest but zealous servants of the country, they pay, through their dedication and their work, their tribute of gratitude to France. Thus, they are faithful citizens, worthy of the act of humanity and justice that the Constituent accomplished towards the Jews and which honors the Revolution.

By seeking to reach them in their dignity, to understand them promise in the esteem of their fellow citizens, hoping
– if only for one day, if only for one hour – let him would reject beyond the solemn day of emancipation

age: he had not understood that no one could henceforth retrace the course of the Revolution. His omnipotence broke against public opinion.

350 FROM 1794 TO 1809

Strange thing! the prestige he enjoyed, the action he exercised on the imagination of men were such that, despite her harmful feelings for the Jews, the splendor of his reign and his glory inspired among them the songs the most enthusiastic, the purest. He awakened ancient poetry from the Hebrews, he gave birth to poets, and Jewish poets, in dithyrambic pieces celebrated the master of world, the "star of the day", the "greatest of mortals", the "greatest of monarchs", "the invincible Napoleon".

Twenty-five years ago, the Jews already granted their lyre, trying out religious odes on the coronation of Louis XVI, "our young Louis!" », and later on the holidays civic, singing the awakening of Israel "to the accents of freedom? ". The Hebrew muses were ready now, and the emperor 'was going to breathe the incense which rose to his nostrils quivering.

In Avignon, in Bordeaux, in Metz, in Nancy, in Paris, in the Hanseatic provinces, "from the gates of the East to the dear of the sun", in Hebrew, French, German, Italian, rabbis, lay people, rhyme carvers, worshipers of God greeted with lyrical odes "the incomparable eagle", his birth, its battles, its victories, its peace treaties, its alliances. Colonna, Elie Lévi, G.-J. Scheller, from Strasbourg, J. Meyer, from Bergheim in Alsace, Bernard Zay, from Metz, Gerson Lévy, Aaron Cahen, Moïse Milliaud, Wittersheim, to name just a few, competed for grace,

1. Odes pronounced by the Jews of Avignon and Bordeaux residing in Paris (Paris, 1715). |

2. Hymn on the occasion of the civic festival celebrated in Metz (Metz, year I of the R.).

NAPOLÉON 1^{er} AND THE JEWS 351

'elegance, talent, and, let's say it, also crazy reading in the exaltation of Napoleon I^{er}.

They forgot the shameful measures he had taken against them to only remember his rare genius. Yielding to the irresistible movement which carried the people towards "the star of France", they were no longer masters of their lyre. By singing his exploits, his successes, his triumphs, they praised his greatness of soul! and its fairness! and his goodness! and its always equal sweetness! they who had been, like their brothers, the innocent victims of his pre-ventions and his hatred!

But in the long eternity of peoples, alone, justice and humanity remain: all else is in vain. And the colossus was going. will soon collapse, dragging France into his miserable fall... What remained in 1813, then in 1815, of so much glory, splendor, magnificence?...

Nothing of what used to be called the "Jewish nation" had only lost its strength and vitality until Napoleon was nothing more than a memory, a legend.

4. Oriental Review, Carmoly, t. IT, p, 25 (Paris, 1841).

~ CONCLUSION

Every work needs a conclusion.

But is it necessary here? |

We have simply stated the facts, and these facts are pass comments. They are eloquent, like the his-yourself. | L

The pages we have just written are similar to wax tablets that record sounds: the life of the Jews Paris during the Revolution was faithfully there, almost day by day. day, recorded. The demonstration is thus made of this that they were at the end of the 18th century, from what they were thought to be during the Revolution. |

Under the influence of an arbitrary and tyrannical regime, under the empire of humiliating and repressive laws, the Jews bowed his head. In Paris, under Louis XV and under Louis XVI, . their lot had become better without ceasing to be deplorable. Tolerance prevented them from being burned as by means . age. But exposed to the contempt of all, reviled by some, hit by others, forced to hide so as not to draw attention to them, they were, as we have already said, civilian deaths. A police inspector had every right to conthat they do not make an express declaration to their supervisor.

CONCLUSION 353

Communal prayer was even forbidden to them. Groups.
silently in a hostel room during the days

on holidays, they were accused of keeping a synagogue; and the house was invaded, desecrated by. the commissioners at Châtelet who confiscated, broke, burned sacred objects.

However, little by little the profound action of thinkers and of philosophers makes itself felt and wins over all classes of society: the bourgeoisie that it first seduced, the nobility which finds a certain charm, in its grace scept-tick and disdainful, to adopt the ideas of humanity
the fashion ; it finally penetrates the suffering people. And then the future has darkened. The court is a center of scandals and of releases. Morals are there for the nation deplorable example. They have an immediate influence and disastrous for the kingdom. Corruption is everywhere. There monarchy is crumbling on all sides. A people is not mistaken not to the warning signs of collapse. While in high a chill of the storm brushes the heads, there is no longer any only a faint glimmer of respect for power, for the magistrates; it is the superstitious fear which surrounds the dead at the moment he has just breathed his last.

In the fear that we still feel for the authority that crumbles, rebellion forms, revolt strengthens. II seems that individuals are gaining confidence in their worth personal, in their strength; the disinherited in political life and social then raise their heads. The serfs and the villeins straighten. Freedom will be born, mastering tyranny.
The oppressed class will soon have its day of splendor and revenge. _

This is how the Jews gradually move with the people in an atmosphere of humanity, law, justice. They imperceptibly strip of their humility, their attitude

hold in the shallows where for so many centuries they have lived, and here they are who, under the harsh light which already illuminates the world, rise, rise, requesting a modest place in the sun that warms the wretched.

Suddenly the Revolution breaks out, dispels the darkness, sweeps away inequities, corruptions, abuses, injustices, and grants to everyone the right that the nobility and the clergy had arrogated to themselves for them alone. Privileges, favors, inequalities, everything has soon disappeared. The citizen alone finally has sovereignty that a caste had attributed to itself for so long, and of which it had made a detestable use. The States General were create a sort of level beyond which no one can rise, if not through his intelligence, his genius, his dedication to the homeland. Civil power is the only one in front to which citizens must bow, The State within the State would be a crime, a crime of national injustice. The Church itself resists in vain. The wind that blows carries it away.

As soon as the tyrannical regime was succeeded by freedom, the Jews emerge from the torpor into which persecution plunged them and oppressive authority. Great gods! They will therefore be able to be men! dare to look up! move without hunch your shoulders! They would be the equals of their semen blables! What hopes! What future! But the days passes, time flies, and they remain among the French foreigners that were tolerated in the middle of the 18th century. The wait does not cool their feelings and their ardor. For the homeland found", according to the beautiful expression of James Darmesteter, they are ready for all duties, for all dedication ments, to all the sacrifices. With what joy they make each other admit into clubs, into patriotic societies, into the national militia, in the armies! With what joy the poorest contribute to the burdens that weigh on all citizens ! Offerings for the homeland, mite for its greatness or its recovery, charitable contributions, with what joy they give and spend themselves!

CONCLUSION 355

Finally Emancipation is proclaimed. The Jews, who from first glimmers of the Revolution were keen to give to France many proofs of their filial love, follow the course of events with the passion of faithful subjects, associate themselves with its hopes, its glories, its disappointments, threw themselves into the republican movement with a generous ardor. But at the same time events are moving forward. The monarchy is tearing itself apart, a shred of fabric ravaged by wear and tear first claiming all freedoms, then full of energy and audacity in his superb sovereignty.

Times then get troubled. An era of bloody license opens. Everyone is master, everyone is king. The Jews, grouped first for their emancipation, separate, scatter according to the wishes of the parties, obeying their convictions, their interests, to their feelings. Some, following the traditions of prudent reserve bequeathed to them by their ancestors, remain attached to the secular monarchy; the others kiss revolutionary ideas. But no one stands out among those who are not stopped by the sight or smell of human blood. No one is guilty of the excesses which, for long months, weigh so cruelly on the nation.

And, when the reaction, logical continuation of concussions also great, such deep troubles, occurred, they were able to continue to call themselves worthy and noble sons of the Revolution. To France which was nursing its wounds, they brought their pure morals, their intelligence, their work, their activity. The Thermidorian period, the Directory, the Consulate had neither reproaches to address to them, nor complaints to make to their regard. The Empire alone murmured against them, with immediate effect. diat of despotism and arbitrariness. Freedom had been stifled, religious tolerance compromised, and power civilian, despite his haughty exterior, had allowed himself to be corrupted by the Church. The Jews felt threatened. Small minority and laborious, they went, although far from all the social passions, of all political competitions, to be held responsible and complicit in the vexations that the Revolution had done to the Church. We know how many were painful for them the consequences of the policy skill of the clergy. But the Republic had penetrated their soul of a feeling of pride which helped them to valiantly endure ment these new tests. And Napoleon, by decrees successive, retracting his cruel measures, implicitly admitted—lies his unjust prejudices.

356 CONCLUSION

Two lessons emerge from this conclusion.

The first is that the dignity of man is in relation to direct port with the independence of the citizen. The oppression lowers it; freedom elevates his soul. Depressed, his qualities natural qualities of mind and heart were obliterated; the moral sense darkens. There is no room left in him except for hypocrisy, cowardice, vice. But then comes the idea of freedom, of equality, of

under the purity of the restorative breath. What teaching for the people! What a lesson for kings! What revenge for those who, for so many centuries, have so horribly suffered!

The second thought that these pages give rise to is that, when a people sacrifices its strength, its energy, its life, for progress, for civilization, for freedom, no one nothing can turn back the tide but so much effort and wills produce in a century of reflection or in a hour of heroic enthusiasm. The horizon may darken, the sun hides under the passing cloud." Soon the fog bacon dissipates, falls, and beyond the dark curtain formed through the cloud, the sky appears in all its serenity.

CONCLUSION 357

So are the conquests of the Revolution. High souls were, certainly, saddened by the spectacle of social villainies, religious and political passions that dishonor our century. They cannot despair nor, even for a minute, give in to discouragement. Human rights can, on certain days, be violated; but annihilated, never. They are indestructible, like the very work of the Revolution. lution.

May the Jews, and with them all the victims of iniquity of this century, rest assured.

CONTENTS

FIRST PART EMANCIPATION

FIRST CHAPTER

A GLANCE AT THE STATE OF THE JEWS IN PARIS BEFORE THE REVOLUTION

The situation of the Jews under Louis XV. – Awakening of consciousness public. – The philosophers. – Looks of pity on the Jews. – The projects of Louis XVI. – Abolition of the body toll. – Competition established by the Royal Society of Metz: "Is there any

- The competitors: attorney and Benedictine; Cornu Desmarais and the abbot of la Louze; a king's prosecutor and Mr. Vatiaud; Abbot Grégoire, Thiéry and Zalkind Hourwitz. – The Mercury of . France. – Justice for the Jews. – The mission of Malesherbes.
- Memories of Roederer. – Gradis and Cerf-Berr. – Improvement of the fate of the Jews. – The claims of the Church. – From the establishment-commercial ment of the Jews. – The revolution. – The Jews of Paris continues to be placed under police surveillance.
- Searches and night visits. – The arrival of the Jews in Paris.
- Duties of the municipal police. – The Jews, the vagabonds etles crooks nr LS ati

CHAPTER II

JEWS DEMAND CIVIL STATUS

State of mind at the time of the Revolution. – What do they think the Jews ? – Discussion of the Declaration of the Rights of Man. –
No one should be harassed for their religious opinions. –Mira-

360 TABLE OF CONTENTS

beau and Rabaut-Saint-Étienne. – German Jews and Portuguese Jews gay, – What is meant by that. – Request from the Jews of Paris to the States-General, to demand the rights of citizens.
– Abbot Grégoire. – His motion. – Opinion of the newspapers. – “It is time to address the fate of the Jews. » – Postponement.
– Affairs of Alsace. – Uprising against the Jews. – Everywhere victims. – In Avignon, in Livorno, 4 Rome, in the Comtat. – In Alsace, their situation is serious. – Causes of effervescence. – Attacks against individuals and properties. – emotional session boasts to the Legislative Assembly. – The Jews are placed under the protection of the law. – Deputation of the Jews of Metz, of the Three Bishoprics of Alsace and Lorraine. – It is introduced, the October 44, at the evening session. – Speech by Berr-Isaac-Berr.
– The deputies are admitted to the bar. – Vague hopes.....

CHAPTER IH

THE JEWS, THE ACTORS AND THE EXECUTIONER

- The clergy and the “deicide nation”. – Opposition to the freedman sowing of the Jews – Painful uncertainty. – Villette is getting impatient.
- His ideas on emancipation. – Eligibility for jobs civilians and military. – Mr. Brunet de Latuque proposes to extend it confused. – The actors and the executioner. – The Jews. – Motion from the Count of Clermont-Tonnerre. – The parties in presence. – The republicans and the clergy. – Attacks against Jews. – Rewbell and Abbot Maury. – The Sabbath, a “territorial institution” laughable.” – Le Journal de Paris and its advocacy in favor of Jews. – Public opinion. – What the newspapers said. –

Motion by Duport. – The vote on priority. – Four days of discussing. – The actors and the executioner, active citizens.

– Postponement regarding the Jews. – Appreciation of religious gazettes. – The Republican Papers. – What thinks Marat. – Camille Desmoulins...,.....,.....,.....,....

CHAPTER IV

“THE INFLUENCE OF THE JEWS

The persecuted Church. – She turns against the Protestants

and the Jews. – The newspapers she uses for this task. –
– Dark conspiracy of the Protestants. – The property of the clergy.

The priest. – Acquisitions made by the Jews. – “ Anger of the people and the vengeance of heaven. » – An apologue. – “Intruder. »
– Opening of synagogues. – The clapboard of the Palais Royal.

– More churches: synagogues, temples, mosques. –

Pages.

14

30

CONTENTS

“It is only with the Jews that we must pray to Jesus. » – Abbot Couturier. – Consecration of bishops in synagogues. – Joke on the Duport representative. – The Jewish bishops. – Attacks against the protectors of the Jews. – Jewish money. – The Assembly National wheat sold. – Lameth; Barnave; Mirabeau; the bishop

Leyrand-Périgord and the Jews. – Emery, deputy of the bailiwick of Metz. – Abbot Grégoire. – Violent attacks against him. – “Jew. » – “Rabbi. » – “Servant of Israel. » – Gobel, from Jewish race. – Louis XVI, king of the Jews. – The Revolution accompanies
DHL SOW OPEN 42 o aa aeeuhda eaak Yaseen eens manda eeues

CHAPTER V

THE “PORTUGUESE, SPANISH AND AVIGNONNAIS JEWS

Portuguese Jews and German Jews. – Distinction made between them. – The explanation given by the Journal de Paris. – Character of the Portuguese Jews. – Their Address & the Convention. – The Constitution Committee calls for citizens' rights assets. – Again Rewbell and Maury. – Rewbell cannot be done hear. – Maury's imprudent words. – Defenders of Portuguese Jews. – “Natural law speaks. ” – Proposal, intions, amendments, sub-amendments. -- Roll call. – A scandalous session. – “The image of the synagogue. ” – THE ecclesiastics leave the room. – The Assembly ignores this. – The vote. – Portuguese Jews are declared active citizens. – The spirit of the Journal de la Cour et de la Ville. – The Gazette Paris. – Republican newspapers. – Reservation regarding the Jews of Alsace. – The enemies of the Revolution seek to raise the provinces.– Effect produced in Bordeaux by the vote of the Assembly. – Movement hostile to Jews. – Acclamations patriots. – Garat the eldest on the platform. – “Eternal law. ”...

CHAPTER VI

GENERAL EMANCIPATION

Hesitations of the Constituent. – The causes of the postponement. – “Heaven opposes the projects of the Jews. » – Tear up the Declaration of Rights! – Reason, humanity, justice. – THE German Jews do not abandon themselves.–Petition of January 28. – Godard, the Jews of Paris and the Commune. – The abbot Field mouse. – Notebook of Gerville and the Carmelite district. – Report from Father Bertolio. – Second speech by Father Mulot to the Jews of Paris. – District consultation. – Their vote. – Unanimously, minus one. – Orders taken by the Commune. – There Commune before the National Assembly. – The case is adjourned

)

)

46

66

362 TABLE OF CONTENTS

born. – Second adjournment. – Third adjournment:
referral to the Constitution Committee. – New disorders in Alsace. – Under the protection of the law. – The naturalization of foreigners and Jews. – Always Rewbell. – The Gazette Paris: christicoles and deicides. – Map of the Municipality. – THE Jews of Paris and the petition of May 10. – Letter from M. de Bourges.
– Condorcet, Brissot and Robin. – Brissot's report to the Commune. – Suppression of the right of tolerance: Brancas affair. – Judicial organization. – Decision of the Constitution Committee in favor of the Jews. -- Clergy protest. -- "The members of Alsace. » – Fourth postponement. – Sale of non-parish churches. – Religious freedom. – News requests from the Jews of Paris. – Distinction between German Jews mands and the Jews of the capital. – Return of their Address to Constitution and Reports Committees. – The Student Commune again the voice in their favor. – Order of May 26 for support their request to the National Assembly. – Three months of silence. – September 27, 1791. – Motion by Duport. – THE
Mr. Rewbell's "squalls." – General emancipation. – The opipublic denial. – Disappointment of the clergy and its members. – THE Republican newspapers applaud the decree.....

SECOND PART

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

FIRST CHAPTER

THE JEWS OF PARIS IN SOCIETIES, CLUBS AND THE SECTIONS

The Jews, the Church and the people. – The action of the trustees of the Jews.
– A news item in 1789. – Nervousness of the population. – At Jews in clubs. – In the sections. – Voters of the party

ment. – In the councils of commune, justice, government
ment. – Arts, letters, industry. – Commercial advertising
cial. – Freedom of press. – Jews and newspapers. – Frequent communications. – The Paris Journal. – The lesson-laugh at Gorsas. – Judith M. and the Theaters.– “A good Israelite”

Pages,

CONTENTS

and Duport du Tertre.– “L...Jew” and the Journal de la Montagne.

– “You are only a Jew!” » – Letter from Samuel Lévi, “prince of CODEVILG D ss insu di session

CHAPTER II

ZALKIND HOURWITZ

His origin. – His candidacy for the King's Library. – His competitors: Lefevre; Ensheim; David Silveyra. – He is named secretary-interpreter to the king. – His works. – His letters to newspapers. – For the Jews. – Letters to the Chronique de Paris. –
. Lafayette. – On the policing of Jews. – Against the clergy. – Hourwitz and Abbot Maury. – The Bulletin Board. – The property of the Church.
– Indiscreet questions. – Bedeau and procession. – Polished letters ticks. – On Louis XVI. – The watchword in patrols.
– About the duel. – On games. – Way to escape the fire.
Highwaymen. – Rumford soup. – Hour-
witz, master of languages. – His death..... ns

CHAPTER III

THE CIVISM OF THE JEWS

Treasury shortage. – Bankruptcy.– The nation flies to the se-state course. – Patriotic donations. – Offerings made by the Jews.– Trénel; Zalkind Hourwitz; Berr Deer; “a few poor people Jews.” – The Swiss of Chateau-Vieux. – Subscription in their favor. – Contributions of the Jews. – War against kings. – Offerings to provide for it. – Patriotic donations from Jews. –
–Isaac; Zalkind Hourwitz; Marx Berr; Trénel in the section of Sans-Culottes. – In Strasbourg. – The Jews of the section of the Meeting. – Threats of invasion. – Mass uprising. – Register

363

Pages.

113

430

minutes of revolutionary committees. – Patriotic donations– –

Jewish ticks. – Hesse; Morhange, Jacob Bodenheim young; Jacob Benjamin. – “Salpetre Service. ” – The Jews
defurbish their synagogues for the benefit of national defense.
In Alsace. – Marx Berr in Strasbourg. – Catholics, Protestants and Jews in Bischwiller and Bischheim. – A Jew
president of the Primary Assembly in Fort-Louis. – The Jews
Paris. – In the National Guard. – The Little Red Table
Fathers and Calman. – State of Jews in the citizen guard. –
In the army. – Acts of bravery and heroism.– Jean-Henry Simon. –Lang. –Henriquez. – Astruc.....

364 TABLE OF CONTENTS

THIRD PART
TERROR

FIRST CHAPTER

THE CULT OF REASON

Jews in the Revolution. – Oath of loyalty to the Constitution
titution. – Live free or die! – In Alsace. – In Paris. – Civics certificates. – The purge vote. – The Jews get “in step”. – The Church does not disarm. – Hopes of counter-revolution. – National measures against the clergy. – Abbot Maury saved from the lantern by a Jew. – The Church and synagogue. – The Church or the law? – Religious indifference. – There Paris Commune and the Church. – The decade. – The rebellion Catholics and the submission of the Jews. – Parallel. – Lice-see civil and cults. – Closure of temples. – The cult of Abjurations. – Neither priests nor kings. – No more churches. – The “bouticks of lies” are stripped of their wealth. – Scenes grotesques at the Convention. – Protestants and Jews. – Pastor Maron in front of the Commune. – The Jews in Avignon, in Alsace, Metz, Nancy, Rochefort, Saint-Jean-d'Angély, etc.

In Paris, “the Jews also became reasonable”. – Devotions at the Temple of Reason. – Offerings from the synagogues. –
The Synagogue on rue des Boucheries. – The Jews of the section of the Meeting in front of the Commune. – Solomon Hesse. – THE Pages.

Jews of Paris do not abandon the practices of their worship. --

“The tocsin against abuse. » – Circumcision. – Matzos. – Letter from Moise Pimentel to the Commune. – Robespierre and Being SUPLE ING) Sears NE He Me sea i wind wane el MU

CHAPTER II

JUSTICE

Scarcity of cash. – The discredit of assignats. – Chaeveryone hides their gold. – Mosaic funerals in Avignon.
– Deads sent to the Mint. – Disorder in the finances.
– The Purchasing Directorate and Marx Berr. – Providers
army. – Worms and Jacob Benjamin. – Anarchy in the districts. – Disorder in the street. – The theft of the Garde-Meuble.

173

CONTENTS

The September massacres. – Rolandists and Brissotins. –
The thieves from the Garde-Meuble. – Louis Lyre. – Aaron Homberg.
– Lyon Rouef and Leiden, his wife. – Jacques Lévy and the city Dandreda. – “Table to be completed by the Supervisory Committee...”
– Jews help discover thieves. – Mentions civic and national awards. – Homberg. – Anselm Lyon. – “Another Jew.” » – Deer Berr.....,.....

TERROR

Exceptional laws: stockbrokers, foreigners, aristocrats. – THE Revolutionary committees. – Laws relating to foreigners. – “Record-registered in the old police book. ” – The suspects. – Simon Simon, decorator. – Salomon David, engraver. – A inmate who doesn't know why. – Vauber's bewilderment-trand, concierge of the Madelonnettes. – Fernandez, merchant of cloth. – “Almost alone in his section...” – Disobedience to the constituted authorities. – Moses Brunswick. – “ ... Of what Judea...” – Alexandre Guastalla. – The price of shoes. – “Citizen Guastalla was born Jewish; it's not a shame. » – Inmate information. – The Commune of Franciade on claims.– Memory of a patriot.– His civic-mindedness. – His offerings patriotic. – Arrest of Mosès, his father-in-law. – A man of means. – Forced loan. – Agiotage and trade of cash. – The law of September 5, 1793. – The Jews of the rue des Prêcheurs. – “ We told me... ”. – “Some rich people come Jews...” – Big deal in cash. – Nine Jews indicted. – Deer Lyon. – “Are you Jewish?” » – Moses Wahl. – “ Her Judaic slang. » – In the rue Martin district. – THE hostels. –The Jewish Café. – Visits and searches. –Mayer Denner. – The integrity of an agent of the Committee of General Security. – Philippe Moyse's wife and the Revolutionary Committee. – , Among the bankers. – B.-L. Fould. –Manus Polak Junior. –

CHAPTER IV

THE GUILLOTINE

The role of the Jews during the Revolution.–Common action. –

A word about the Jew Ephraim. – His mission to Paris. – The warm-up fourée of July 17, 1791. – After emancipation. – During the Terror. – In the departments. – In Bordeaux. – In Paris.

– The Freys. – Calm them down. – Pereyra.....,.....

366 TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER V

JACOB PEREYRA

His origin. – His arrival in Paris. – Tobacco factory.
 – At the Saint-Roch club. – His political relations. – Next to Louis XVI. – Assessor of justice of the peace and vice-president of the section of the Good Council. – Mission to Dumouriez. – Civic mention. – At the Jacobins club. – The removal of Kellermann. – “In the kingdom of the Jacobins...” – Pereyra and Gobel. – Pereyra denounced by Robespierre. — It is removed from Jacobins. – In Sainte-Pélagie. – “Three hundred pounds of tobacco...” – In Saint-Lazare. – His supporting letter to the Safety Committee general. – What he has done since the Revolution. – A real sans-cheeky. – In criminal court. – His interrogation. – Her connection with Beaumarchais. – At the Brandon synagogue. – The accusation. – Pereyra and the Hébertists. – The guillotine. – Rachel widow Pereyra vesener seenen dote ves eee

CHAPTER VI

THE FREYS AND THE WIFE OF CHABOT

Robespierre and Danton. – “The wiles of the Incorruptible. » – Denunciation of Chabot, Bazire, Fabre d'Eglantine and both Frey. – J.-G. Frey in Strasbourg. – Medal to Laveaux. – Patriotic offerings. – Frey and Chairoux. – Arrival of the Freys in Paris. – The Jacobins. – Civil acts. – Frey, publicist. – Frey, sans-culottes. – Léopoldine Frey. – She marries Chabot. – The Capuchin's indiscretions. – The Jacobins are invited to the wedding. – Sculpin in danger. – “Is it we who have you married ? ”. – Foreign fabric. – Chabot is rejected from the Society. – The Freys are rejected in their turn. – Arrest of Chabot. – His brothers-in-law were taken to Port-Libre. – What are Frey? – The Chronicle. – General Trenck. – Inquire-police actions. – Léopoldine Frey to the English. – Sculpin pro-testifies to the Convention against the detention of his wife. – Setting at liberty from Léopoldine. – Conspiracy of the Dantonists. – Amar finally establishes the accusation. – Chabot's guilt and of the Freys. – Chabot seeks to poison himself, – Help! – The Freys at the revolutionary tribunal. – Interrogation of Danish Diderichsen, Junius and Emmanuel Frey. – The guillotine. –

Mt SCINE PANS oiled vedi desde cadn lau eee EA eesacer T ss

CHAPTER VII

LIEFMANN'S FAMILY CALM DOWN

Origin of Liefmann Calmer. – Its opulence. – Acquisition of barony of Picquigny and vidamé of Amiens. – 1] becomes baron

Pages.

236

248

CONTENTS

French. – His trial with the bishop of Amiens and the archbishop of Sens. – His death. – The heirs of Calmer before the Convention and before the Courts. – During the revolutionary turmoil lutionary,..... Re

CHAPTER VII

ANTOINE-LOUIS-ISAAC CALMER

His birth. – His wedding. – Their children. – Letter from his son, gunner of the Paris Observatory. – Acquisition of the land of Planchette. – A beautiful estate. – Calm down, farmer. – Before the Revolution. – On the Stock Exchange. – Its debtors. – The ins-creation of a sans-culotte. – To the Revolutionary Committee of Clichy. – His civic-mindedness. – Services rendered. – Denunciations against Cal-Wed. – "In six six tills. » – A strange commissioner. – Arrest of Calmer. – Longueville report. – Clémentière. – Serious charges. – Searches at La Planchette. – Remains of feudalism and despotism. – Memoirs of Calmer in response to the accusations against him. – Patriotic dedication. – Calmer and Cazaubon, national agent of the commune of Clichy. – In the Luxembourg prison. – In criminal court. – There PASIE e Le Ade pussy giceieda iets E sa ee egy esd

CHAPTER IX

LOUIS-BENJAMIN CALM

Lord of the land of Ailly. –Royalist and counter-revolutionary. – To the battalion of Grenadiers of Filles-Saint-Thomas. – Calmer and the creditors of Louis-Philippe Egalité. – Charges serious. – Calmer defends himself with weakness. – His civic-mindedness. – Secretary of his section. – A Certificate of Honor. – Denon-formal statements. – The indictment. – “Adorer of the vile Lafayette.” – The Marseillais dinner. – Interview with the wife of Capet. – Judgement. – Calmer is sentenced to death. – His property is confiscated for the benefit of the Republic.....

CHAPTER X

SARA CALM

From prison to prison. – Point of order of nut. – How she was arrested. – A denunciatory portrait. – Melpomene! – “I sting, but I tie. » – Search at Sara’s house. – A suspicious package. – The testament of the first king of arms of the Golden Fleece of the Emperor of Austria. – The life of Sara Calmer.

367

Pages.

267

270

281

368 TABLE OF CONTENTS

– The defendant proclaims her civic feelings. – Fall of Robespierre. – Sara asks to be released. – Attestation of the Revolutionary Committee of the William Tell Section. – Out of prison. – Visit “from an individual”. – The Trumpets of

Congratulations to the bride and groom, lottery winners. – The chances of LIFE M RE N eat

CHAPTER XI

The survivors of the Calmer family..... ia

FOURTH PART FROM 1794 TO 1809

FIRST CHAPTER AFTER THE NEW THERMIDOR

The Republican parties are torn apart. – The scenes of the Convention. – “Jews! » – Bumblebee; Moyse Bayle; “the Israelites by Robespierre. » – Anxiety of responsibilities. – The scaffold; there life imprisonment; exile. – Against the Revolution. – Prestolets, Patrigots and Jacoquins.– The youth of Fréron and the giants of the Republic. – Jacobinism is being destroyed. – Denunciations against the Republicans. – New suspects. – Henry Simon. – Jacob Simon. –Abraham Joseph. – Samuel Simon, engraver of Posts, Couriers and National Treasuries. – The royalists. – The ruin of the kingdom. – Exorbitant prices of all things. –

Happiness of life. – We rush to pleasure. – Providers. – The Jew Mayer. – Unbridled passion for money. – Stock trading. – The people murmur. – The revolutionary newspapers. – Sus to the stockbrokers! – The Maillard café. – Spying on women. – At the Hôtel de Châlons, rue Martin, 91. – The Chaton woman and the hostel boy. – How police reports are made. – Vast conspiracy of money merchants. – Alkan father and son; Elijah; Sale... – “A young Jew. » – Relieved of all charge. – We speculate on everything. – Religious practices. – The Catholics are champing at the bit. – The dominant cult. –

Pages.

TABLE OF CONTENTS ~ 369

Pages.

Lucien Bonaparte and religious freedom. – New attacks against the Jews. – Their existence at that time. – Brotherhoods, synagogues, schools, cemeteries.....,.....,..... 295

CHAPTER II

NAPOLÉON I^{er} AND THE JEWS

Religious cabal against the Jews. – M. de Bonaldet Napoléon.
– Police reports. – The Jews and their social regeneration. –
Influence of the Revolution on Jews abroad. – The Jews
French. – Bonaparte and the Jews. – In Egypt. – In France. –
Nomenclature to read. – In letters, industry, the arts. – Napoleon I*. – His animosity against the Jews. – The decrees of 4808. – Alsace again! – Slander. – The braves of Aus-terlitz. – The situation of the Jews is threatened. – “The clique clerical. » – The Church takes revenge. – Exceptional laws. – Convocation of a General Assembly of Jews. – Opinion public. – Newspapers. – An article by M. de Bonald. – Replicas. – “A Jewish woman of great spirit. » –
MJ Rodrigues son. – Adversaries and defenders of the Jews. – Passionate discussions. – Beautiful attitude of the Jewish deputies to the General Assembly and the Grand Sanhedrin. – Hypocrisy of Napoleon I'. – What the Council of State thought of its projects.
– Guizot. – Chancellor Pasquier. – Mr. de Champagny,
Mr. Crétet and the Jews of Paris. – Military service. – Accu-unfair treatment. – Jews in the army. – Their patriotism. –
Their bravery. – Died on the field of honor! – Table to read.
– The genius of Napoleon I*. – His prestige among the Jews. – He brings to life the ancient poetry of the Hebrews. – The fall of Napoleon.
€ The Jewish nation. Ds iin dun Mesa eens ee een ele 317

CONCLUSION... ccc cc ceccecccccececetecceccuceuceuceptucentes 352

23

Digitized by Google

TOURS

DESLIS FRÈRES PRINTING HOUSE

6, rue Gambetta, 6

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

French

English

Full text of " Jewish France; an essay in contemporary history "

See other formats

= 00

= CN

^Mf.^

-jw^?-

^ *:/-î.

. :C^^\

\.

V

/îfi^^i

0'

^^

JEWISH FRANCE

ESSAY OF CONTEMPORARY UISTOIBE

WORKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR

BASCHET BOOKSTORE

The National Holidays of France, 1 vol. in-f" with engravings.

CHARPENTIER BOOKSTORE

My old Paris, 1 vol. in-18.

PALMÉ BOOKSTORE

The Last of the Trémolins, 1 vol. in-18.

yi'^ QUANTIN BOOKSTORE

W- Unpublished papers of the Duke of Saint-Simon.

^, ' (Letters and dispatches from the Spanish Embassy), I vol. in-
The death of Louis XIV (Journal des Anthoinc).
1 vol., deluxe edition, small octavo.

TO APPEAR PROGHALXEMENT:

Zephyrine Mondray known as Convenience.

(Scenes of contemporary morals).

IN PREPARATION:
JEWISH EUROPE

All reproduction rights reserved. For translation, contact the author.

EDOUARD DRUMONT

Jewish France

ESSAY IN CONTEMPORARY HISTORY

FIRST VOLUME

Thirteenth Edition

PARIS

G. MARPOX & E. FLAMMARION

EDITORS
26, RUE R.VC1XE, NEAR THE ODEON

INTRODUCTION

Forion ex nobit tzoriaiur ttltur l

TAiNE wrote The Jacobin Conquest. I want to write the Jewish Conquest.

At present, the Jacobin, as we have it describes Taine, is a character from the past lost in middle of our time; he has ceased to be in the move- tively, as they say. Time is no longer just us depicted the Concourts, where "what architecture has wonders, what the earth has magnificences, the palace and its splendors, the land and its riches, the forest and its shadows were the tokens of this Blood Academy: – the Convention. »

When he wants to secure himself, the Jacobin today fails miserably. See Cazot, see Marins Poulet and Brutus Bouchet; these pure shaggy and unkempt did not have the lightness of touch that was needed to succeed. Imagine a pickpocket who would bruise those he searched- would step on the dogs' tails or break- would have tiles at the time of operation, all the eyes would be on him and the crowd would chase him- would shout: "hoo! hoo!"

The Jacobin's only resource, apart from this

VI INTRODUCTION

that he extorts from us through the budget, is proud to put himself in condition in Israel, to enter as adminis- trader in some Jewish company where he will be made his share.

The only one who benefited from the Revolution was the Jew. Everything comes from the Jew; everything returns to the Jew.

There is a real conquest there, a putting to the the land of an entire nation by a tiny minority but cohesive, comparable to the putting into the soil of Saxons by the sixty thousand Normans of Guil- praise the Conqueror.

The processes are different, the result is the same. We find what characterizes the conquest: a whole people working for another who ap- owned, by a vast financial exploitation system- the benefit of the work of others. The immense Jewish fortunes, castles, Jewish hotels are not the fruit of no effective labor, of no production, enslaved race.

It is certain, for example, that the family of Rothschild, who ostensibly owns three milliards just for the French branch, had not had them not when she arrived in France; she did not do no invention, she discovered no mine, she did not clear any land; so she took

INTRODUCTION VII

these three billion on the French without their anything give in exchange.

This enormous fortune increases by a progression in some way fatal.

Dr. Ratzinger said it very rightly:

"The expropriation of society by mobile is carried out with as much regularity as if it were This was a law of nature. If we do nothing to stop it, within 60 years, or, at most, in a century, the whole of European society will be delivered, bound hand and foot, a few hundred ban-Jewish quiers.

All Jewish fortunes were made from in the same way by a levy on the work of others.

"Speculation," says Schœffle, "which was part of the conservative ministry of Hohenwarth, Austria che, received, thanks to the speculation, two billion six one hundred and twenty-six million francs in addition to the price of-mission on the actions of the six major roads of French iron. These actions were together numbered of three million and the total price of their issue does not amounted to only 1,529,000,000. *

To this fabulous gain, but which is only a detail in all, add the countless cases financial and industrial companies that attracted money from shareholders with pompous promises; dream/

VIII INTRODUCTION

to what hundreds of companies have brought to these companies of thousands of small rentiers, thrifty workers and you will have a faint idea of what the Jew, master

ten years of this hard-working France, which is starting again always a new honey, when we have stripped it previous.

The loan from Honduras, to take another example of the Rothschilds, is one of these typical facts that the Taine of the future do not tire of-will not be studying. This is not a spec-attractive culture, at first sight, and which has failed; never was the situation clearer. The Honduras is a tiny country of 500,000 inhabitants-tants, of which at most a third belong to the race white; he has no resources of any kind, and when these large loans were issued, it was for fifty years unable to pay a penny interest on a debt amounting to 400,000 francs.

It is in such conditions that the Bischoffsheim, the Scheyers, the Dreyfuses were able to take away from the Savings, in England and France, a sum of 157 million, one hundred and fifty-seven million, of which Honduras always claimed to have received absolutely nothing. (1)

(1) "Honduras," says the Gazette of the Courts of March 6, 1880, claims to have received nothing of all this money and his government

INTRODUCTION TX

The men involved in this enterprise have never They were not subject to any condemnation, they continued to live in luxury. One of them was for the left-of our Assemblies, in the last Chamber, the representative of republican austerity opposed to the corruption of the Courts. It is in the villa that he pos-sits on the shores of the Mediterranean that Léon Say goes with his family to spend his holidays.

What a man like Erlanger was able to do in the same conditions, draw on Savings either directly-either by the financial companies of which he has was the instigator, is unheard of. I had the idea to summarize this financial life in a table of rigorous accuracy, reducing losses to proportions the most modest. It is a document of great importance-considerable philosophical influence.

is conducting an investigation today to find out what has become of the subscribed to and thus release, if possible, its responsibility before the European nations, reserving the right to pursue

"You know," Mr. Sourigues said to the House, "during the session of February 1, 1881, that in the issue of loans from Honduras, the launchers and concessionaires of the business shared among themselves and their auxiliaries, or have wasted 90 percent of the sum requested—given to subscribers: 140 million out of 157.

You must read this speech by Mr. Sourigues in its entirety. The speaker made proof of true courage in continuing, despite the interruptions—incessant speeches of the sold deputies, the cries: to the votes ' of TDnion Republican, the president's jibes. The speech was brought together in brochure under this title: Truths that everyone thinks and that no one dares to say.

INTRODUCTION

TOTAL

He

poured

LOSS

NATURE OF SECURITIES

NOMBUE

by Title.

i 1

approiisatiTe

French General Credit (act.)

240,000

dimeears 20' »

50,701,000

Rhine coal mines (obi.)

4,500

266' 50

IG 50

1,125,000

Northern Coal Mines (obi.)

9,000

265 »

15 »

2,250,000

Villaguttiérrez. . (bonds)

10,200

diaries courses

» »

3,192,000

Alfortville Steelworks (shares)

3,100

500 »

» »

1,550,000

Jessieppes Auvelais (actions)

7,050

500 »

» »

3,525,000

Bourne Canal. (actions)

2,000

500 »

50 y

900,000

Haiti (bonds)

73,000

430 »

125 »

22,265,000

Forges of the Seine. . (required)

3,530

230 »

» »

811,000

Departmental Trams
from the North . . . (bonds)

9,000

600 »

40 >.

5,040,000

Bourges to Gien . . . (actions)

25,000

500 >>

» 1)

12,500,000

Villaguttiérez. . . . (actions)

500

510 »

» n

255,000

2,000

205 ->

15 »

380,000

Land-Fire, (actions)

27,500

375 »

70 »

8,387,500

Bourges to Gien. (bonds)

22,730

242 50

150 »

2,102,500

Little Lyonnais (parts)

3,000

550 »

15 »

1,605,000

Horse markets. . (act.)

4,000

500 ..

» »

2,000,000

Alais to the Rhône . . . (actions)

500 »

" has

11,000.080

General reinsurance (act)

51,700

300 »

» »

15,510,000

Sun-Hail (actions)

11,500

400 »

75 .

3,537,000

Paris Plasterers. (actions)

•i4,000

650 "

30 ..

14,880,000

Accident Relief. . . . (actions)

8,000

350 »

20 ..

2,640,000

Bordeaux na- company
vigilance (actions)

4,000

500 "

70 "

1,720,000

Platrières, Paris basin

14,110

650 »

30 ..

8,748,000

Established, from Biarritz, .(required)

7,000

475 »

60 ..

2,905,000

Time-Life (actions)

1,600

810 »

20 »

1,261,000

Havre-Paris-Lyon, .(actions)

10,000

515 ..

200 »

3,150,000

Comp. Gen. Franc, and Comp.
lighting. . . . (actions)

11,500

145 »

5,232,500

Corbeil Mills. (shares)

12,000

750 »

165 »

7,020,000

Alais to the Rhône (bonds)

25,660

297 50

75 »

5,709,000

St-Etienne Tramways. .(act.)j

500

500 .

200 "

150,000

Total loss. . .

20 ,',055, 000 1

INTRODUCTION H

Some of these cases, whose shares are worth today zero, and which could only be launched by fraudulent means, are obviously pure and simple scams.

This enormous embezzlement of money acquired by the workers have not been less accomplished with "absolute impunity.

Undoubtedly, it is very understandable that ministers

like the Gazots, the Humberts, the Martin Feuillées, the Brissons do not find these facts reprehensible. But the judiciary had at its head, before them, men of indisputable integrity, like the Tailhand, the Ernouls, the Depeyres; they did not act—more than the Freemason ministers.

Look at the Duke of La Rochefoucauld-Bisaccia that I take here, without any particular animosity, as a representative character, as well as ex-prevail over the English, as the representative of aristocracy. He perfectly welcomes Erlanger into his home, the Baroness Erlanger is part of the society in Deauville sjïected of the Duchess of Bisaccia. The Duke of La Rochefoucauld does not even suspect that there is a commandment of God which says:

You shall not take other people's property,
Which you will remember wisely.

XII INTRODUCTION

Don't pay yourself with words, don't stop to appearances, and you will find that the Duke of La Rochefoucauld and Prince Kropotkin have little almost the same ideas on property, and that the The notion of Good and Evil is also obliterated at both. "Pick from the pile, grab of whatever suits you!" said the chief Anarchists. Basically, that's exactly what Erlanger made with the tacit approval of the high French society. The revolutionary has at least as an excuse for being deeply moved by suffering the disinherited, and to want to give them the neces— The French aristocracy admits, on the contrary, that one man should plunder thousands for his own benefit of human beings to ensure the superfluous.

This symptom is serious and we can say that what The immorality of today is not so much the number of rogues who steal than the number of honest people who find it quite simple that we steal.

If this is so, it is because most Catholics—that they themselves are absolutely foreign to eco-Christian social economy. They do not suspect that if man has been condemned by God to work, the duty of society, its reason for being is to prevent that he is not stripped, either by violence or by the cunning, of the fruit of this work.

INTRODUCTION XIII

If the old society could live peacefully and happily—reuse without knowing the social wars, the insurrections, strikes, it was because it was based on this principle: "No profit without work." The nobles had to fight for those who worked; every member of a corporation was required to work himself and he was forbidden to exploit, through any capital, other creatures human, to perceive on the work of the companion and the apprentice no illicit gain.

This is one of the foolish pretensions of our time. than to believe that he invented political economy. Those who were then dealing with these matters did not—were not, without doubt, as today, members—members of the Institute, hypocritical and lecherous Malthusians ques, public meeting speakers irritated by the spectacle of misery and concerned with attracting applause from the crowd by flattering its passions. It was the saints themselves who sought to put harmony on earth, kings like Saint Louis, discussing at the Palace, with Etienne Boileau, the organization of work, monks like Saint Thomas Aquinas trying to define the character of credit. Saint Thomas Aquinas wanted this credit to be Christian. and not Jewish, he intended that it be a given help by a brother to his brother and not an exploitation, a means of cruelly oppressing those who have nothing and to rob those who have little and want to have more without bothering to earn it. He would gladly have called for the money, which is made into a misuse of the name that the people give it today—today he would have called it Vinfâme capital.

XIV INTRODUCTION

Before him, Saint John Chrysostom had risen against the lazy and greedy agent at h. times who, without work, wants to make odious gains. "What more unreasonable, he had said, than to sow without land, without rain, without plow? Also all those who indulge in this damnable agriculture in no less—They are only weeds that will be thrown into the eternal flames. Let us therefore cut off these children—monstrous gold and silver, let us stifle this execrable fertility!"

The disciples of Saint Francis of Assisi, the sublime beggar who loved the poor so much that he wanted to be even poorer than them, had, with the sure instinct that gives love, understanding very clear about these problems.

Today, thanks to the Jew, the money to which the '^ Christian world attached only secondary importance- daire and assigned only a subordinate role became all-powerful. Concentrated capitalist power in a few hands governs at will

INTRODUCTION XV

the entire economic life of the people, enslaves the work and feeds on unjust gains acquired without labor.

These questions, familiar to all those who think in Europe, are almost unknown in France. The reason is simple. The Jew Lassalle himself has noted how thin the intellectual background of the bourgeoisie whose opinions are manufactured by the newspapers. "Whoever reads his newspaper today, he wrote, no longer needs to think, to learn, to study. He is ready on all subjects and considers himself- as if dominating them all." Sixty years ago that Fichte, in a kind of prophetic vision who omitted no detail, painted these readers "who no longer read books, but only what the newspapers say books, and to whom this reading narcotic ends up making you lose all will, all intelligence, all thought and even the faculty of to understand. "

Now, almost all newspapers and all organs:^ advertising in France being in the hands of the Jews or dependent on them indirectly, it is not surprising while the meaning is carefully hidden from us- cation and the scope of the immense anti-Semitic which is organized everywhere.

While every Jewish character is overrated,

XVI INTRODUCTION

drummed, celebrated in all tones, real greats men, patriots with ardent hearts like Simony, Istold, Onody, Stæcker, are, absolutely of these magnificent individuals, having spoken with one of those austere thinkers illuminated by genius to understand what this still has in store admirable Aryan race which has already rendered so much service-vices to Humanity.

The soul saddened, dried up, atrophied by the bass slander, the ignoble denunciations which fuel only our intellectual life today so foreign-gently lowered, expands and breathes before the vast horizons that these noble spirits unfold, before the grandiose conception that they have of Christian Europe-yours.

In any case, it seemed interesting and useful to me to describe the successive phases of this Conquest /Mîve, to indicate how, little by little, under the action Jewish, old France dissolved, decomposed, how to this selfless, happy, loving people, a hateful people, hungry for gold and soon dying of hunger.

My book is related to all the work attempted under different forms, by psychologists and novelists, by critics and columnists at

INTRODUCTION XVII

day by day, by the Daudets, the Concourts, the Zolas, the Bourgets, the Clareties, the Platels, the Scholls, the Maupassant, the Uzannes, the Bonnières, the Fournels, to paint this world which is changing in some ma-at a glance.

Everyone has a presentiment of a huge collapse-ment and tries to fix a trait of what has been, It's time to note what tomorrow will be nothing more than a memory.

What is not said is the part that the invader has-sowing of the Jewish element, in the painful agony of such a generous nation, this is the role that has played, in the destruction of France, the introduction of a foreign body in a previously healthy organism there. Many see it, talk about it at the table, are indignant to meet everywhere Semites holding the top of the paved, but they love peace and, for causes' multiple, avoid putting their impressions on the paper.

dence, but I remember that Saint John puts away the timid among those who populate the infernal abyss and I don't regret publishing this book. How much many times it happened to me, after some session in a library", to think of a writer whose the work, often unknown, had given me the revelation-

XVIII INTRODUCTION

tion of the past, well shown, well explained a point of enigmatic history! This guide really brought to life for me he was immortal; the image I had of this contemporary of vanished days walked some time with me through the streets of Paris. My book, poorly appreciated in the present, will earn me later some friend who will also think of me; he will be grateful to me for having made him understand how this France, the land of lilies, the kingdom with a blue coat like the azure of the sky, has let himself to Jew, to dress in yellow rags.

However, I do not hide the imperfections-tions of my work, imperfections which are due to several causes.

First of all the latent work of the Jew is very difficult to analyze, there is a whole underground action there, whose thread is almost impossible to grasp. Henri Heine said it very rightly: "The deeds and actions of the Jews, as well as their customs, are unknown things of the world. We think we know them because we have saw their beards, but that's all we saw of them, and, as in the Middle Ages, they are still a mystery ambulant.

Furthermore, history written in this way in the presence of the events have disadvantages if they have advantages tages; it gives the precise accent and like the rhythm of events; it constitutes the most precious of testimonies for the future. On the other hand, he lacked-that the documents that the chancelleries do not deliver that when time has made dust into men and passions of an era. Similar to these seal sticks which each contained a fragment of a document or letter, and which, in joining, served as an irrefutable witness-the reconciliation of documents from a country, with the documents from another country.

INTRODUCTION XIX

It's a simple preparatory classification, I repeat, that I wanted to try. Let no one seek in this work the secret Memoirs of the third th Republic; although Jewish writers have constantly penetrated everyone's private life to dishonor her, and that everything be permitted against them, I am not organized to imitate them; I took simply, for the past, historical documents—risks; for the present, the news, the facts public, obvious, told in all the newspapers. It is in the street that I suggest you look, by only bringing to this examination the reflection which helps to learn from the smallest detail, the common sense of the patriot who seeks to realize of the lamentable state into which his country has fallen.

XX INTRODUCTION

By bringing together in this study reasons and causes all the effort of our work and our good will, we will deserve that those who come—will say about us afterward: "They have nothing could have prevented it, no doubt, but they discerned well the sources of evil, and they pointed them out with intelligence and courage, they were not traitors neither towards To God, nor to the Fatherland, they were neither fools, nor cowards.

How many people, today in a good situation, including Posterity will not be able to say as much 1

December 8, 18⁵.

BOOK ONE

THE JEW

Lat UU •(gMtas in JmUi, aiati ^« Imn mumtt.
Mat «kMW iaeoniws da aoada. Oo believes l«ae— atUa
pHW V^ * "> «■r beard, nait on o'a ▼■ d*eBX fa« «h at •aama u moTea Iga Os tont (oujoars m mt—itMa

Banri Hoke.

Common bonds about the Jew. – The true type. – The Aryans and the Semites. – Absence of any ideal and any spirit of invention. – The variations of Renan. – A conference before Alphonse de Rothschild. – The oppression of the Jew. – The contempt of the goi/. – The civilized Jew and the natural Jew. – The Scillossberg. – The Jew's inability to understand the elevated part. – The ignorance of the Jews in the Middle Ages. – Physical constitution. – The Portuguese Jew gays and the German Jew. – The voice of race. – Daniel Deronda.

– The Lost Tribes. – Claudius's Wife. – The Jews of Sahara. – The Chinese Jews. – The Falacbas. – Coniwjsby. – The Jewish solidarity. – The Jew's squawks. – Pacifico, Levy of Enfida, little Mortara, Victor Noir, Lipmann, Selikuwitch, The Duchess of Berry and Deutz. – In a case of conscience judged by Crémieux. – Jewish espionage. – Jewish criminality. – A pas-wise man of Maxime du Camp. – The celebrities of flight. – The aces.<o- ciations of Jewish thieves. – The Peschard affair. – Impunity press- that absolute granted to the Jews today. – The great acca- adornments. – The Jewish kings. – The rehabilitations. – Levy Bing.

– The spelling revolutionaries. – The Jews and punishment of death. – Jewish prostitution. – The hierodulet. – The Jewesses.

– Influence of religious prescriptions. – The figure of the po- Jewish population. Contradictory figures and documents. – The Jew in nosological point of view. – The immunities of the Jew before the plague. – The Jewish smell and Victor Hugo. – Jewish neurosis. – Its particular character. – Romantic existences. – M"* de Païva. – MiJhat pacha. – Naquet. – Politics and regeneration- lion of the cbevelu leather. – Article 1965. – The Jewish drama. – The de- degeneration of the race. – Jewish sadness. – The religious crises- gious of Judaism. – The question of the Messiah. – Israel, beacon of nations. – The modern Jew according to Renan. – The anti-campaign Eemilicus. – What must be done will be done.

At the beginning of this study we must try to analyze this particular era, so vivid, so completely different other beings: the Jew.

The task, at first glance, seems easy. No guy has a more energetically characterized physiognomy, no one has preserved more faithfully the clarity of the effigy. In reality, what is bothering us to understand it well and to paint it well these are our own ideas, the point of view where we place ourselves and which is absolutely distinct from the his.

"The Jew is a coward," says the vulgar. Eighteen centuries of persecutions borne with endurance incredible testified that, if the Jew does not have the fighting spirit,

When we see some men who are rich.
who had honored names, serve a government that outrage all their beliefs, can we seriously to treat people who have suffered everything as cowards rather than to renounce their faith?

"The Jew has a cult of wealth," This observation of a obvious fact is still a declamatory sentence in the mouths of most of those who pronounce it.

Here are great lords, pious women,
regulars of Sainte-Clotilde and Saint-Tnomas-d'Aquin who leave the church to go and make greetings to a Rothschild who regards as the vilest of impostors the Christ they worship. Who forces them to go there*

4 THE JEWISH FRINGE

Does the host who attracts them have an extraordinary mind?
Is he an incomparable conversationalist? Has he rendered services to France? Not at all. He is a foreigner, a German, not talkative, quixotic and often makes people pay with rudeness to his aristocratic guests the hospitality he gives them by vanity.

What motive brings these representatives of the nobility? – Respect for money. What are they going to do there?
– Kneel before the Golden Calf.

What we said about the Duke of Larochefoucauld Bisaccia, in our introduction, can be applied to the Duke of Aumale.
When the Duke of Aumale arrives, with a humble expression, to do his reverence to Rothschild, who calls him the old under-o/f, then that it would be so convenient for him to stay at home rereading the glolaughing story of his race, the descendant of the Condés admits implicitly that the action of having won a lot of crowns in more or less clean speculations is equivalent to the action of having won the battle of Rocroy, since we do not goes to his peers and goes to these people.

Deep down, all these money-scorners are quite happy.
when those who picked it up want to make them profit.

After their fall they are the first to mock each other themselves ;

– Do you want to know what the voice of blood is?
asked his friends a French duke who, despite the tears

look...

He calls his little boy, takes a louis out of his pocket and shows it to him. The child's eyes blaze...

—See, resumes the duke, the Semitic instinct reveals itself following. . .

THE JEW 5

So let's leave these commonplaces aside. Let's ask a more careful and serious examination of the essential features which differentiate the Jew from other men and let us begin our work through ethnographic, physiological comparison—gic and psychological of the Semite and the Aryan, these two personifications of distinct races irretrievably hostile to each other whose antagonism has filled the world in the past and will trouble it even more in the future.

The generic name of Aryans or Aryas, from a word without-crit which means noble, illustrious, generous, designates, we know, the superior family of the white race, the family Indo-European which had its cradle on the vast plain of Iran. The Aryan race shone on the world by successive migrations. The Ario-Pelasgians (the Greeks and the Romans) stopped on the banks of the Hellespont and the Mediterranean, while the Celts, the Ario-Slavs themselves Ario Germans headed towards the West, bypassing the Caspian Sea and crossing the Danube.

Nothing, says LiUré, can dispute the Aryan character of the Romans; the Latin they spoke is the sure sign of this. It is not without surprise, but with full certainty that modern scholarship recognized the kinship of Latin with Greek, of both with the Persian and Sanskrit, and arranged all these brothers, astonished at their brotherhood, in the same group.

Western Christians are the direct heirs of the Romans and, as such, they enter into all the rights of their authors. But there is more; when, in the light of linguistics, we examine their titles we see that they have their own. The Italians, as Latins, are, it goes without saying. Aryans; the Celts of Gaul and Albion are also; Celtic is a dialect of this speaking whose peoples have spread to the depths of the West. It is also from one of these emigrant peoples that Germany sticks out its tongue, and from then on it is called Aryan, like the others. For Spain alone there would be grounds for dispute; they are Iberians who do not hold to the Aryans neither by the language

nor by race; but the government of Rome, by a long-possession and by a superior civilization, made them speak Latin, and despite the primordial diversity, it is no longer possible to separate them from the Italians and the Gauls, whose brothers they had become through education.

All the nations of Europe, as we see, are connected—thus by the closest links to the Aryan race from where all the great civilizations emerged.

The Semites, represented by various families: the Aranean family, the Hebrew family and the Arab family, seem to have originally come from the plains of Mesopotamia.

Doubtless Tyre, Sidon, Carthage reached at one moment a high degree of commercial prosperity; the empire Arab, later, had a passing splendor, but nothing, in these ephemeral establishments, does not resemble these civil-fruitful and lasting relations between Greece and Rome, the admirable Christian society of the Middle Ages.

The Aryan or Indo-European race alone possesses the notion of justice, the feeling of freedom, the conception of Beauty.

Civilizations, Semitic as brilliant as they appear, said very well. Gellion-I?inf,!ar (I), are only vain images, parodies more or less perfect, painted cardboard sets where some people have the complacency to take for works of marble and bronze. In these artificial societies, caprice and the good pleasure are all and are only covered in the name prostitute of justice who is nothing. The bizarre, the monstrous hold the place of beauty and profusion has banished taste from art and decency. The Semite is not made for civilization and for the sedentary state. In the desert, under the tent, it has its beauty, its grand-own soul; it follows its own path; it forms harmony with the rest of

(1) The Semites and the Semitic.

LK JEWISH 'I

humanity. Elsewhere, it is displaced, all its qualities disappear—sent: his vices resurface. The Semite, man of prey in the sands of Arabia, heroic in a certain sense, becomes a vile intriguer; in the social life.

From the earliest days of history we see the Aryan and the duel between two races explains the repercussions particular that the Trojan War had (1).

The conflict continued through the ages and almost all-days it was the Semite who was the provocateur before being the defeated.

The Semite's dream, indeed, his fixed thought has been consistent in particular to reduce Taryon's serfdom, to put it at the soil. He tried to achieve this goal through war, and Liltré (2) showed, with his usual lucidity, the character of these great thrusts which almost gave the Semites world hegemony. Hannibal who camped under the walls! Rome came very close to success. Abderame, who, master of rE.<;pagne, arrived as far as Poitiers, could hope that Europe

I) The Semites at Ilion or the truth about the Trojan War, by Louis Beu'ixw.

^àrià was one of those Semitic outlaws who constantly grumbled around the shores of Greece. Not content with having abducted Helen, what after all curait could do uti Aryan in the training of the passion, he also said that the jewel box was removed. Herodotus tells us man forced by a storm to land in Egypt and denounced to the Pharaoh as guilty not only of having dishonored the host who had accused him, but also of having stolen his treasures. Pha'aon did not want to violate the laws of hospitality towards the Semite. which he himself had so little respected and only ordered him to immediately leave its stalls.

The St^mite Hdl^vy did not show all this in the Beile Hélène.

(8] How, in two historical situations, the Semites entered in competition with the Aryans for world hegemony, and how they failed.

8 FRANCE JI'IVE

was going to be his. The ruins of Carihage, the bones of Saracens whom the plow sometimes meets in the fields where Charles Martel triumphed, tell what lesson was given to these presumptuous people.

Today Semitism believes itself sure of victory. This It is no longer the Carthaginian or the Saracen who leads the movement, it is the Jew; he replaced violence with rise. The noisy invasion was followed by the si-

—■ lenoieux, progressive, slow. No more armed hordes annonrée.s^ gradually aggregating into small groups, putting themselves in a sporadic state, taking possession without fanfare of all places, of all the functions of a country since the most low to high. Instead of attacking Europe opposite, the Semites attacked it from behind: they turned it; in the vicinity of Wilna, this Vagina Judeorum (1), is exodus were organized which occupied Germany,

1 crossed the Vosges and conquered France.

1^ Nothing brutal, I repeat, but a sort of taking of

t gentle possession, an insinuating way of chasing away natives of their homes, of their jobs, a soft way—to strip them of their possessions first, then of their

(1)Wniia is the great reservoir that pours the Jews into Europe. This are the Jews of Vilna and the surrounding area who, after the campaign of Russia, HssasbinaieDt our wounded. Thiers recounted this episode in his story of the Consulate and the Empire, volume XIV. "Thing horrible to say, he writes, the miserable Polish Jews that we had (ordained to receive our wounded, as soon as they saw the enemy in retreat, began to throw the wounded out of the windows and sometimes even to slit their throats, thus getting rid of them after having skinned them—Sad tribute offered to the Russians of whom they were the parti—without. " tradition?;, of their customs and finally of their religion. This last point, I believe, will be the stumbling block.

THE JEW 9

By their qualities as by their defects both races are doomed to clash.

The Semite is mercantile, greedy, intriguing, subtle, cunning; the Aryan is enthusiastic, heroic, chivalrous, selfless, frank, trusting to the point of naivety. The Semite is an earthling who sees little beyond pre-life sent; the Aryan is a son of heaven constantly preoccupied with as—higher aspirations; one lives in reality, the other in the ideal.

The Semite is a merchant by instinct, he has the vocation of traffic, the genius of everything that is exchange, of everything that is an opportunity to put one's fellow man in it. The Aryan is a farmer, poet, monk and above all a soldier; the war is his true element, he goes joyfully to meet the danger, he braves death.

The Semite has no creative faculty; on the contrary the Aryan invents; not the slightest invention has been made by a Semite (1). This one on the other hand exploits, organizes, makes produce the invention of the Aryan creator of profits which he naturally keeps to himself.

(1) It is difficult to say that there is no real word in this stereotypical phrase: "The Jews invented the bill of exchange, i The bill of exchange, letter of credit, check was in use current in Athens four centuries before our era; the symbolon, the kolluhieslika tymbola were real bills of exchange. The bankers, the Trapezites did not just exchange the beautiful staters with the head of a woman from Cyzicus against the tetradragmas with the owl of Ibenes, the darics in the image of a sagittarius of the Persia against the Aegina coins marked with the turtle; they used constantly credit instruments in use today.

1.

10 JEWISH FRANCE

I The Aryan performs the adventure journeys and discovers the A-America; the Semite, who would have had such a wonderful opportunity to to tear oneself away proudly from Europe, from persecution and demon-, to believe that he was likely to do something by himself even, wait until we have explored everything, cleared everything, to to get rich at the expense of others.

In a word, everything that is a human excursion in ignored regions, an effort to enlarge the do-earthly maine is absolutely outside the Semite and especially of the Jewish Semite; he can only live on the commun, in the middle of a civilization that he did not make.

The misfortune of the Semite, – remember this observation well fundamental in memory of me, – is that it surpasses all–

fiufffit, ponr be couvainca of this truth, to travel the Trapéziti– that of Iiocrale, which makes us witness the story of a bank house– that it can be more than a century.

Listen to what the son of Sopeos says: "Stalocles had to embark– quer for the Bridge, and I wanted to bring from this country the most of possible money. I begged Statocles to leave me all the gold I had he was a porter; upon his arrival in the Bridge he would be paid by mou father on the sums that he had for me. I looked in effect as a great advantage of not exposing my money to perils of the journey especially since at that time the Lacedaemonians

Endorsement of the bill of exchange, aval, second signature
all this was peacefully known; open the Trapezium again:
"Stalotlè.-f me detcauda who would reimburse him for his advances if my father did not comply with the instructions given in the letter and if he did not find me when he returned from his trip. I presented him then Paoion who undertook to return to him the capital and the interests
due. »

In one of his letters to Atticus, Gicère, at the time of "voyer son 61s in Athens, wonders if he should be given money or give him a letter of credit.

See on this subject an interesting work by Mr. Caillemer: Studies on read legal antiquities of Athens: bill of exchange and ussw contract

THE JLIF 1 1

days an almost imperceptible point that should not be franchir with the Aryan.

The Aryan is a good-natured giant. He is happy provided that he be told one of those legends which his imageneration in love with the marvelous. What pleases him are not not adventures in the genre of the Semitic Thousand and a Night, where enchanters discover treasures, where fishermen, casting their nets into the sea, pull them in full of diamonds. It is necessary, so that it is always-ché, that on the plot of all these fictions stands out a 4fre who devotes himself, who fights for a cause, who sacrifice, who goes like Parsifal through a thousand dangers to the conquest of the Holy Grail: the cup filled with the blood of a God,

The Aryan remained Icm. .. .uàî^.o {n ^e pâmait au moyen age listening to the songs of gesture^ the adventures of Garain le Loherain, by Olivier de Béthune or Gilbert de Roussillon who, after refusing to marry the daughter of a Sultan, pierced five thousand unbelievers with a single blow spear. He listened for a long time to the legend of 89 as he would have listened to the story of a chivalric cycle. A little more and the editors of the French Republic would have made it believe that members of the Defense Government national, mounted on fiery horses, like the former valiant men, had braved the most terrible perils for win the Morgan loan battle. While he is naively interested in these feats, nothing is more fa-than to take away his purse and even to take away his boots on the pretext that they would hinder his walking on the path of progress.

To the Aryan, I repeat, one can do everything; only he
You must avoid annoying him. He will let you steal everything he wants.

11 JEWISH FRANCE

sede and suddenly will enter into a fury for a rose that one will vomit him. Then suddenly awake, he understands everything, grabs the sword that was lying in a corner, hits like a deaf and inflicts on the Semite who exploited him, plundered him, played, one of those terrible punishments, of which the other bears the trace for three hundred years.

The Semite, moreover, is not at all surprised. He is in his temperament of being oppressive, and in his habits to be punished. He almost finds a certain satisfaction when everything is back to normal; it disappears, e-vanishes into a fog, hides in a hole where he ruminates on a new combination to start again
a few centuries later. When he is calm and happy on the contrary, he experiences what an academic of many of mind called: \sl nostalgia of the Scin Benilo...

The intelligence of the Semite, so perceptive and so subtle, had at limited background; he has neither the ability to foresee nor to see beyond his nose curved on the earth, nor the gift of com-take certain small delicate nuances as flowers and which are the only things in this world that deserve-that man exposes his life without regret.

Renan distinguished many of these points. "Race Semitic, according to him, is recognized almost exclusively by negative characters; it has neither mythology, nor epic, nor science, nor philosophy, nor fiction, nor plastic arts, nor life civil; in all, absence of complexity of nuances, senti-exclusive use of the unit (1).

Morality itself, he said, was always understood by Celts race in a very different way from ours. The Semite does not con-

(1) General history of the Neinian languages.

THE JEW 13

hardly arises from duties that one envoys himself. To pursue one's life-rage, claiming what he believes to be his right, is in his eyes a kind of obligation. On the contrary, asking him to keep his word, to render justice in a disinterested manner, it is him to ask for an impossible thing. Nothing therefore holds in these souls passionate against the untamed feeling of the m'A. The religion of ailthat a very distant link with everyday morality.

Elsewhere he adds:

The minds of the Semitic peoples generally lack breadth and of delicacy. Interest is never banished from their morality. The ideal woman, of which the book of Proverbs xxxi, 100 and following paints a portrait of us, is a thrifty, interested, profitable woman-ble to her husband: but of very low morality. The holiest man among the Jews and among the Muslims is not for lack of commit atrocious crimes to achieve his ends. The poe-Semitic society offers us hardly a page that has a charm of sentimentality. When love is expressed there, it is in the form of a lascivious and burning voluptuousness, as in the Song of Hymns, or in the form of a harem courtesy as in the Moultakar [t].

All this, it is true, was written before the incredible successes of the Semitic in recent years. Nothing is curious to study as the way in which this man, so well gifted in artistic point of view, so low from the point of view of character, He lies flat on his stomach before these triumphant people.

(1) On this subject, examine Jewish Moocfnsme, a posthumous work by Gustave Tridori, the former member of the Commune who, despite errors and blasphemies, contains some correct points of view. Gustave Trijon is the only one among the revolutionaries who dared to attack-to ask the Semites whom he calls Tombredaus the picture of civilization-lion, the evil genius of the earth." All their gifts, he said, are plagues. To fight the Semitic spirit and ideas is the job of the Indo-Aryan race, t It is good to note that he has not forgotten this book during his lifetime.

14 THE JEWISH FRINGE

He acknowledged, in 1862, in his opening speech of the Hebrew courses at the Collège de France, which the Jews trained everywhere a race apart. In his lecture at the Saint-Simon, in 1883, he asserts against all evidence that the Judaism is not a race, but simply a religion.

It must be added that if the Jews have any interest in the present time to be publicly supported by Renan this thesis which is absolutely false, they declare the con-to treat each other in the most precise and for-melle. Nothing could be less equivocal than this passage from Archives (1).

"Israel is a nationality. We are born Jews," natu, "

lites is l;raélite. Birth / had fallen to him all the duties of an Isiaelite. It is not by circumcision that we receive the quality of Israelite. ,

No, circumcision has no analogy with Christian baptism. yours. We are not Israelites because we are circum-concise, but we circumcise our children because we are Israelites. We acquire the character of Israelite by our birth and we can never lose this character nor to resign ourselves from it; even the Israelite who denies his religion, even he who is baptized does not cease to be an Israelite- All duties of an Israelite continue to fall upon him.

Let us add that the Israelite fulfills these duties almost completely. always, he serves his race in another camp and is not that is more useful to Israel. It is generally to him, in fact, that Christians abandon themselves with the most ardor, it is to him they confide their most secret hopes.

In his desire to please the Jews, Renan is not moved , for so little. After having noted in the past that the so-called

(1) Israeli Archives, year ISC*.

THE JEW 10

services rendered to civilization by the Jews of Spain reduced to nothing, that the philosophical role of the Jews in The Middle Ages had been that of simple infertiles, he declares suddenly, in a conference organized by the Society of Jewish Studies, that the Jews are our benefactors.

The conclusion of the speech of the learned speaker, d>sent I- Archices israéliler oa May 31, 1883, is that the future epparlieut to Judaism. It is to this purified religion, freed from fes dross, that humanity will rally, because it alone will ensure the reign of justice, this ideal so superbly described by the great prophets of Israel.-

The modern spirit, adds Renan, the world in s<>converts to the ideas of freedom, equality, tolerance, the Jew remained silent.

Peadant who speaks thus holding his hand closed.
We see the gold sequin that milks between his fingers.

Alphonse de Rothschild, in fact, chairs the meeting, this which explains a lot of things; he drinks milk, he acts fat back learning that true equality is that he owns three billion while so many French people die of hungry. He smiled at the speaker prostrate before Ati with a smile both protective and contemptuous.

What a valet! he seems to say. What a wretch! we will say we (I). Is he not to be pitied? All of you, young and old who defend as you can the victim of Calvary, the

(1) We see, on Saturday, April 12, 1884, Renan taking part in the company of a Jew, named Armand Lévy, one of the organizers-tors of the Anti-clerical Congress, at this ceremony made borlesque by the presence of this character, the inauguration of the great island Mickiewicz, from the Collège de France. This Armand Lévy has absolutely no literary title. According to the Gaul, it is an ancient man of affairs who today occupies his leisure time in devoting himself to politics clubs. It is found in all public and social meetings. list among the socialists, marcliaad of via ches the luarcbaadi

J6 JEWISH FRANCE

God to whom your fathers prayed, do you not feel more happy that this apostate who kisses the hand of the executioner of the Christ for a handful of crowns that we throw at him with disgust? Do you believe that the old pastor robbed by Goblet, the poor priest of Savoy to whom the miserable Isaiah Levaliant stole his little salary, who say their benedicted in front of a piece of black bread, do not have the soul anymore calm at heart that this rich academician, well-paid and friend of the Rothschilds?

The Semite's defects explain that- the antagonism natural that exists between the Aryan and him is perpetuated through the centuries.

If you want to understand the history of the Middle Ages re-keep what's happening with us.'

France, thanks to the principles of 89 skillfully exploited by the Jews, fell into dissolution. The Jews had monopolized all public wealth, invaded everything, apart from the army. The representatives of the old families, gentlemen or bourgeois, had divided into two classes: some indulged in pleasure, had as master-braids of Jewish girls who corrupted or ruined them-were born, horse traders and usurers?, Jews also, who helped the girls. The others obeyed this attraction of the Aryan race towards infinity, towards the Hindu Nirwana, Odin's paradise; they were uninterested almost of the contemporary movement, they were lost in ecstasy; they had almost no footing in real life.

of wines. The most astonished must have been poor Mickiewicz who, in Grzjmâ has withered "the sordid soul of the Jews and their vile spirit."

In this book, we will see Renan fall even lower.

7

THE JEW 47

If the Semites had had a few years of patience they were getting close to the goal. One of the few truly wise men that they count among them a disciple of Philo, a representative feeling of the Jewish school of Alexandria, Jules Simon, their would say what should be done: occupy the land very slowly—cement and let the Aryans emigrate to heaven.

The Jews never wanted to hear it that way; to the Semite Simon they preferred the Semite Gambetta. Under pretext that this Fontanarose had made the French swallow the most enormous blunders, they supported it, com—said, supported; they believed that he was going to rid them of this Christ whom they hate as on the day they crucified him. Freemasonry gave, Jewish newspapers rose the opinion, we lavished gold, we paid lavishly the com—police commissioners who, until the last moment, refused—knew of being guilty of a crime.

What happened? What we were saying above. The Aryan annoyed, troubled, hurt in the feelings of nobility and of generosity innate in him, felt the red rise in his face before the spectacle of unfortunate old people being dragged out of their cells by guards. It took him a little time to think, to gather one's ideas, to collect oneself.

— Finally, in the name of what principle are we acting? Does he have to—sent.

— In the name of the principle of freedom, they responded in chorus the newspapers of the Porgvís, the Reinachs, the Dreyfuses, the Eugène Mayer, Camille Sée, Naquet.

— What does this principle consist of?

— In this: any Jew comes out of Hamburg, from Frankfurt, from Wilna, from anywhere, he amassed a certain number of millions at the expense of the goym, he can pro—unless there is a warrant to arrest, which naturally cannot be de-never surrounds. On the contrary, a native Frenchman, a Frenchman natural, to use Saint-Simon's word, is stripped of all that he possesses to give to the poor; he marbarefoot, he lives in a narrow, whitewashed room with lime which the servant of the servant would not want-that Rothschild, that one is outside the law; we can throw him out in the street like a dog.

The Aryan, awakened from his drowsiness, judged, not without reason, that from the moment when we understood this famous tolerance, which had been talked about so much for a hundred years, it was necessary
even better to give blows than to receive them; it felt that it was high time 'to free the country from masters as little enduring. "Since the sackcloth robe of the monk, bother your frock coat, we will give you the rag yellow, my old Seni." Such was the conclusion of these meditations. It is from this period that in France dates the first constitution of the anti-Semitic committee or, for
to be more precise, anti-Jewish.

What is happening in France happened in Germany.
Jews had helped as much as they could at the Kulturcampft,
pushed with all their energy to vexations against the ca-
The Kulturcampft is over and the anti-war
Semitic is just beginning.

El) reading this work to the end you will see moreover the same fact reproduces itself in almost identical conditions identical in all eras and in all countries:».

It seems that the Jew, always returning to the methods which always make him hunt, truly obeys an impulse-irresistible attraction. The idea of conforming to habits, to

to HIre

who has ii
tidduiti eu Fr

JULY 19

traditions, to the religion of others does not enter into these brains. It is you who must be a friend to the Jew, you bend to his customs, remove everything that bothers him.

From this society of the past, mind you. They want to accept everything that flatters their vanity; they seek with a grotesque eagerness the military titles of harons and woman's hat to a monkey. It is not dahject tripomanufacturer or dealer of safety chains belonging to near or by law." to Israel, who is not at least "knight of the Legion of Honor (1). But that's where the condescension ends; as soon as one of our customs shocks them it must disappear-raise (2).

The right of the Jew to oppress others is spoken of as a matter of fact. religion, it is for him an article of faith, it is announced to "* every line in the Bible and in the Talmud.

(1) The Jews' avowal for crosses is matched only by their insolence. via-Svis of the goiiferuementj who had granted them to them. In 18C3, the Archives Israelites g'aitoyaient on the grief that the Israelis to wear decorations like Isabelle ia Calholique, Saint Nicholas of Russia, Saints Maurice and Izare and dear that the name of these decorations was made more secular.

(2) The oppression of the Jew, the nuance, I believe, is good to point out, is not the n niiri>e in some way unconscious of the superior being-laughing, it is the oppression of the inferior which is imposed on the chosen one by I know what Greek obstinacy, what tenacious and deaf contempt for the freedom of others, what a persistent desire in the most details tiny. Who hasn't experienced this type at one time or another? rannie from below who stumbles a little at the reluctance of the cook who, if the master is weak, made him eat everything he did not can't suffer? ^.

The Concourts have mcTreilleosemeot depicted this invasion:! gradual of the Jew in .Ui'wk S i/o'^ion, where we see a great artist who gradually comes to be. incapacitated, reduced to nothing, thrown to the feet by an irregular right which has been carried out in his workshop, as the Jews got drunk when they were brought to France, by the police.

20 JEWISH FRANCE

You will govern, say the Psalms of David (ps. 2), you will govern-you will subdue the other peoples with a rod of iron,
You will break them like a potter breaks a vessel.

He will consume the nations before you little by little,
says Deuteronomy, for you could not exterminate them all en-seems, for fear that the beasts of the earth should multiply too much.

He will deliver their kings into your hands. You will destroy even-only in their name. Good will not be able to resist you.

Against the Christian, the gentile, the goy (in the singular goy, in the plural goym), all means are good.

The Talmud contains, in this respect, assertions that our deputies, so touchy in theology, would be careful good to bring to the podium under penalty of being closed to the nose the counters of the Jewish banks where they draw their money.

We can and must kill the best of the goym.

The money of the goyim is vested in the Jew; therefore it is permissible to steal and deceive them (i). ■- . ^s^tn^^ " rvJ^^iA/tt,

The social evolution of the Semite itself is absolutely different from ours. The type of the Aryan family in the state of civilization is the gens, Roman which became the house feudal. For long generations the vital force, the genius saves itself, then the tree whose roots plunge in the ground carries at the top an illustrious man who is as the summary of the qualities of all his own. The being * predestined sometimes takes a century to develop, but the most humble extraction comes out one of these figures complete, charming and valiant, heroic and learned, as our history has so many.

In the Semitic race things happen differently.

(1) Gilalions of the Talmud reproduced by the journal of the Studies Jewish.

THE JEW r" ;

In the East, a camel driver, a water carrier, a barbiei is distinguished by the sovereign. Suddenly he is a pasha, vizier, confidant of the prince, like this Mustapha-ben-Ismaïl who entered Eardo selling small cakes and who, according to the ribald expression of Mr. Dauphin, prosecutor general, "rendered his master day and night services night," which earned him from our unscrupulous government as we know, the cross of grand officer of the Lé-Legion of Honor.

It is the same with the Jew Outside of families priestly bodies which constitute a true nobility, the no-wounds do not exist; there are no illustrious families; some are passed down from father to son, in none of them do we bequeath glory.

In less than twenty years, if circumstances are favorable to him-ables, the Jew reaches his full development; he is born in at the bottom of a Judengasse, he earns a few pennies in a first operation, he launches himself in Paiis, is decorated by through any Dreyfus, buys a title of the appearance of someone who has always been rich. At home the transformation is in some way instantaneous; it does not feel any astonishment. He is absolutely ignorant of certain things? shyness.

Take a Russian Jew at home, under his thoullope filthy, with her corkscrews and her earrings and, After a month of baths, he will move into a lodge at the Opera with the aplomb of a Stern or a Gunzburg.

Take as your opposition a brave entrepreneur from French building, very honorably enriched, he will always have days looking a little awkward and embarrassed, he will flee from the circles too elegant. His son, born in better conditions,

"2^ THE JEWISH FRANCH

i tied to the refinements of life, will be quite different. The Your little son, if the family continues to rise and remain honest and Christian, will represent the true gentleman, he will have a delicacy of thought and a nobility of feeling that you will never have.

On the other hand, if the Jew arrives straight away, he will not never achieves distinction. Apart from some Jews wearing turgais who, young, have beautiful eyes, old, a certain oriental majesty, you will never find in any of them that I don't know what of calm, of easy, of courteous, of worthy which makes a great authentic French lord, a Frenchman of race, even if he had a threadbare garment, would reconsider everywhere. The Jew is insolent, never proud; he never exceeds never this first degree to which, moreover, he reaches very easily. The Rothschilds, despite their billions, seem / of clothing dealers. Their wives, with all the diamonds of Golconda, will always resemble mar-candles at the toilet, not in their Sunday best, but eiuah-hastened.

The Jew will always lack this in relation to the Christian

It is the attraction of social relations: equality. The Jew –

/u'ou still take into account this observation – ne

/will never be the equal of a man of Christian race. He / ' crawls to your knees, or he crushes you under his heel; he is below or above, never beside.

Whoever this book falls upon will only have to recall their memories.
Even in a ten-minute conversation with a Jew
This phenomenon appears. As soon as you surrender
:ivec him to this familiarity, to this bonhomie, to this freedom which makes the charm of worldly commerce, it molds you immediately on his back, he lies down ^ or even sees, he

THE JEW 2.i

YOU remove it; you have to hold it in your hand carefully.
Whether you talk to a millionaire or a needy person, you must remind him at every moment who you are and who he is...

Another cause makes the Jew unsuitable for relations where one sets oneself a goal other than interest, it is the monotony of the type; he does not have this mGuée culture, this intellectual superfluity, something so necessary, which is the salt of any maintenance; one only very rarely encounters at his place these brilliant and chimerical heoiies, these piquant glimpses, these amusing paradoxes that certain talkers sow in chance in their words. If he were provided with these ideas the
A Jew would be careful not to waste them among his comrades and he would try to make money from it, but in reality he lives on the mass. It is a monotonous, and the longest conversation don't offer any surprises with him.

While the Aryan race has a variety of
of organizations and temperaments, the Jew, himself, resembles always to another Jew; he has no faculties, but a unique ability, which applies to everything; the Thebouna, this practical sublimity so vaunted by the Moschlim, this gift mer-old and unanalyzable which is the same in man j)o-lilic that at the broker and which serves him so admirably in life.

It is the natural Jew that must be seen to understand the Civilized Jew. The Schlossberg in Pressburg in particular gives a good idea of the intermediate state between the Jew sordid of Gallicia and the almost elegant Jew of the capi-tales.

Imagine a causeway on the side of a mountain which climbs arid, dusty, whitish. Skillful and

2i THE JEWISH BRIDE

left, shops or small low houses like those of the East, decorated with bars as in the Middle Ages.

cast-offs of all kinds, old scrap metal, furniture disparate, piles of vegetables, mounds of garbage, a population of seven to eight thousand Jews.

There are some surprisingly ugly old people there next to the young ones.
adorably beautiful girls draped in rags; the frock coat nevertheless dominates among men who connected to the present by the top hat, and in the past by the bare feet which contrast with the hair-fury.

The general appearance, however, rather arouses the feeling of modern life than an impression of the past. To tell the truth.
he seems to recognize idiot figures at every moment • birth, and this corner of the ghetto looks like a little Paris. These two clever-looking urchins dismantling the scenery of a theater, isn't it Dreyfus and Lockroy? This man sprawled on a rep sofa exposed in the street and on which cabbages have been placed, does it not have a striking resemblance to Stern, from the circle of rue Royale?
Look at this bony girl, walking barefoot, covered only with a dirty camisole and a petticoat which only goes up to the knees, it's Sarah Bernhardt as a child.
Here is Mr. Isaac who bites at the mouth what do you want at a bunch of raw corn. Examine this woman who struts on his doorstep, his appearance doesn't remind you-Doesn't she have the insolent and silly neck movement at the same time?
of a famous baroness, this proud goose neck which has not no relation to the graceful and supple undulation of the The swan-necked Lagide that Gautier sang? Put some velvet, diamonds, decent clothes on everything

THE JEW 20

people of dealers, receivers, moneylenders on gajjes
and you will have a first-class room.

They themselves seem to have an idea of this situation.
Both arrogant and humble they seem to be waiting for philosophically the tidal surge which will carry them to the city; to fortune, to honors. They are not in a hurry and do not are not unhappy.

In the center of this neighborhood full of rags stands a synagogue in the oriental style which is a marvel;
the watch with complacency abroad; we even take sometimes the curious goij for some arrived brother who wants realize the position of the late brothers. I have gave twenty kreutzers to a woman wearing boots huge ones who absolutely wanted to kiss my hand.

pleasant; your (they will probably be my mayor and I would be very happy to win a piece of bread in sticking strips in his journal.

A Christ, bending under the painful burden of the cross, whose the expression brings tears to your eyes, indicates the place where ends this free ghetto where the Jews remain voluntarily. Cautious in this country, and for good reason, the Israelites did not although slightly mutilated this Christ before which a lamp burns all night; they will make up for it when they will be ministers, senators, deputies, municipal councilors-paux, prefects in France by throwing in the cart to trash the crucifixes in our churches after those in our schools.

At the end of the climb we are in front of the Schloss-mountain where the kings of Hungary were crowned for a long time and that Marie Thérèse lived Nothing is as striking as ceburg where the fire left only the walls; open to all wind, gaping, formidable still, it stands out with a strange

2

26 JEWISH FRANCE

relief on the horizon. Below the Danube, no longer inpelt as it was when leaving Vienna, as it will be a few

- leagues further, but sleepy, gloomy, seeming to oppose ^like an inert resistance to the steamboats which climb back up painfully. On the left, the island of Au with its guin-watch, in front of you sandbanks, in the distance the large islands called the Golden Garden.

In foggy weather, as it was when I went visit what was once a royal residence, the place is of a /deep melancholy. The feudal world with its glories, its heroic memories, its triumphant pomp is in ruins like this abandoned castle; the new world is stirring a few steps from you in this Jewish city from which will come, until the time of a Christian renaissance, the millions-naries adored by a servile society, the acclaimed artists on the strength of advertisements by the stupid and onlooker crowd.

Indeed, one should not judge artistic merit or literary heritage of the Jews by everything they print today. They would gladly say of all their scholars what they say of Rabbi Eliezer in the Rahinic Library of Bar-lolocci; "When the firmament were of vellum and when the sea water would turn into ink, it would not be enough are left in the shadows, we beat the bass drum to the con-milk for everything that bears the Jewish mark; it is awarded the epithet of honor, the epithet çliover, to the least pen-pusher or to the most horrible dauber who belongs closely or from afar to the brotherhood.

The truth is that the Jew is incapable of overcoming a very low degree. The Semites have no man of genius of the stature of Dante, Shakespeare, Bossuet,

THE JEW 'Ji

of Victor Hugo, of Raphael, of Michelangelo, of Newlon, and we would not understand why they had any. The man of genius, almost always unrecognized and persecuted, is nn superior being who gives something to humanity; or, the very essence of the Jew is to give nothing. Nothing surprisingnant that they stick to a flow talent easy. Their Corneille is Adolphe d'Ennery, and their Raphael is Worms (1).

In art, they did not create any original, powerful figures.
or touching, no masterpiece; they do not admit that this<jui sells, they make the sublime when necessary, the false sublime of course, but they prefer the bottom, which allows them to enrich themselves by flattering appetites coarse of the multitude and to serve their cause by turning into ridicule the enthusiasms, the pious memories, the tradiaugust tions of the people at whose expense they live.

(1) What more striking example of this creative impotence of the Semile than that of Carthage which, after having been the masterbraid of the moii.le, did not leave a work of art? When the Semites all-powerful at the present time, the Rolls^childs, the Camondos, the Stem, sovereigns of U Tunisia, thanks to Gambetta, decided to sacrifice a few pennies from their profits to question the ruins of Carlhage, they found only a few insignificant objects, tan-say that the most built village in Greece we deliver every day new treasures. There was more art in the making of a potter living in a hamlet of Boeotia, Tauagra, which daaA Carthage whole.

As we mjulreal Messrs Georges Perrot and Charles Chipiez
in their History of Art in Ranliquilé, the Phoenicians regularly for centuries on the Mediterranean, without inspiring the people with which they were constantly in contact with other feelings that distrust and fear for their greed for gain, for their perfi-die, for their misdeeds, or We knew that, by rush or by force, they took what was not sold to them, that they traded to steal, by force or by cunning, a beautiful girl or a child. Or

28 JEWISH FRANCE

Is it about unleashing with crossroads music?
screaming band of tramps? Strauss, the conductor, raises his bow. Do we want to ridicule the army?
time when a terrible war is brewing? Here is Ludovic Halévy who invents General Boum. Is it appropriate for our enemies that all a people respect: heroism, honest love, immortal masterpieces be mocked to excess? Offenbach, the Prussian agent, is all ready. E[^]tit serves to dishonor the theater of Racine and Molière, to put the guillotine on the boards, and to introduce on our scene which was glorious a character who says: sn
d. D? The Jew Busnach offers himself to this task (1).

Do you wish that the dance halls, where the youth of other-formerly took his frolics with honest enthusiasm become a bad place? The Jew Markoswki is your man. Simia the Jewess, the androgynous Wolf is there to advocate all these turpitudes and to bring people of the world (2).

The blow is double, gemmed as they say. During that German Jews come to commit these infamies in France, other Jews write to Germany: "This is where could do without them and we feared them, we hated them. We called 7ro).yirx'.Tra).o\, the "very fine" men, "those who sa-were going to deceive" to Tzazril'iy. eiSotéc, "those who exploited, who de-would eat, » Tf u)XTa\, and « who did a host of evils to men-

my. "

(1) Petit Jacque,' drama in 5 acts, performed at the Ambigu on November 12-November 1881.

(2) Note again that the Jew does not even create in this order; he limited to corrupting what exists, it debases something that is still decent and clean as long as he hasn't messed up. From the old French dance, good-natured and laughing, he makes the ignoble gossip, the roguish racket;
of the song, naive aria or joyful nofil that our fathers intone-were at dessert, he makes the op4rette to the raucous Evohés, to the under-obscene lendiis, with lewd rhyme; journalism sometimes a

THE JEW ^

This is France, this is its literature, this is what it product ! "

When did the ancestors of these men pray with the ours? In which part of the village or town are we? their family tombs? In which old register of parish do you find the names of these newcomers who, less than a century ago, were not allowed to live on this land from which they want to drive us out now? What do they have to do with the traditions of the black race?

This is how we respond to real Germans, to our compatriots. of Goethe and Schiller, by repudiating all these porno-graphics and all these operettas. They then tell you: "So much worse for you, you shouldn't have received these people, you you had to assume that they only came to your house to dishonor and betray you."

As well as a certain tiny theatre, painting and music (a certain painting and a certain music always), succeed with the Jews; they assimilate themselves all the more more easily the procedures than, in the current lowering from the artistic level, the mode of expression, the exclusi-formality prevails over the essence of the idea.

Let us note this new point again that you will not be able to quote a Jew who is a great French writer.

The Jew captures Parisian jargon admirably. Heine, iVIbert WoliT, Halévy, whom we were talking about earlier, many of our Albmand colleagues are more Parisian than we who were born in Paris. There is indeed not very lively, biting, aggressive of our fathers, he makes the chronicle to cba»-lage; only playful, light, slightly low-cut engraving 18th century, he makes the engraving; of the .aicalure of Gavarui, of Daumier, de Travics, he does the same dirty work as Strauss, worthy of the same name. of the musician, sells on rue du Croissaut.

2.

30 JEWISH FRANCE

a chic, an artificial allure, a conventional verve and artificial that the Jew immediately appropriates as soon as it is demonstrated that these chronicles, these operettas, these articles Paris are of advantageous flow. In addition, his hatred for everything that is beautiful and glorious in our past inspires him in this work of demolition by the mockery to which The French applaud with a stupid smile.

To speak French is something else. To speak a language we must first think in this language; there is between Tex-

not to address some Leven or some Reinach for to naturalize one's style as one naturalizes one's no one; one must have sucked the wine of the fatherland at birth, to have really come out of the ground, Alcfrs only, whether it is to attack like Voltaire, Paul Louis, or Proudhon, defend like Louis Veuillot, your sentence has a taste of terroir drawn from a common fund of feelings and ideas.

What more convincing proof of this fact than Ganibella, whose astonishment we will have the opportunity to appreciate later nantt phraseology?

Other, more cautious Jews partly avoided this ridiculous and make up their own language, the strange language
now used in almost all newspapers, and which dilute in insipid and gray periods a certain ' number of banalities.

Noting this invasion of our literature
one involuntarily thinks of the story of Rabbi Denjamin of Tudela who, visiting Greece in the Middle Ages, met hordes of Jews camped on Parnassus. The contrast Isn't it moving? Sordid bands of these circumcised that Aristophanes despised, installed among these laurels

THE JEW 31

roses which saw, in the radiant hours of Hellas, the god with the silver bow, Smynthaeus Apollo guides the sacred choir good sisters!

This inability to assimilate into its very substance
the language of a country extends to pronunciation. The Jew, who speaks all languages so easily, always keeps
I don't know what guttural accent that reveals it to an observer-attentive reader. Richard Andrée noted this fact in s(> Interesting observations about the Jewish people: "Quelqi:
skillful, he said, that the Jews are in appropriating everywhere the language of the country, and although they look at it long as their mother tongue, they only arrive rarely speak it correctly enough so that it does not cannot distinguish them from the natives. Most of our Educated Jews themselves have a particular accent that makes you recognize them without looking at them. It is a mark of race which is found among the Jews of all nations, Rohep {First stay in Morocco) was struck by the same phenomenon. "

The Jews, he writes, cannot in any way learn completely-

German Jew with his strange pronunciation; the same is true of the North African Jew. The Jew is recognizable among a hundred Arabs in his accent, although he does not differ in his physiognomy and his costume. Nothing is more laughable than hearing a Jew speak—to read Arabic and the language of the Bartaresque States.

Unable to venture out into the regions of art, the Semite did not question the fields any more unknown to science. Anything that is an exploration of infinity by man, an effort to enlarge the world earthly is absolutely outside its nature. It sells spyglasses or makes spectacle lenses, such as

32 JEWISH FRANCE

Spinoza, but he does not discover stars in the immensity two heavens like Leverrier; he does not sense any more continent on the horizon like Columbus (1), that he does not guess the laws of gravity in space like Newton.

Now that they are the arbiters of opinion, that they dominate in the academies thanks to the cowardice of the Christians, Jews tell us stories of the other world: they kept the deposit of science in the middle. At that age, they passed on to us the discoveries of the Arabs. Nothing could be further from the truth; the Jews appeared to be learned in using—some scraps from Aristotle's books, but from that we went to the source we realized that nothing came of them; despite their horror for relics, they played simply the role of the donkey in the fable.

For centuries they monopolized the exercise of medicine which gave them back Tacile espionage in their per-trying to get in everywhere, and they didn't suspect a minute of blood circulation. Lease (2), which is theirs yet very favorable, recognizes that they were a thousand times even more ignorant than their contemporaries under the scientific report; they believed that the heavens were

(1) Like Saint Louis, like Dante, Christopher Columbus was a tertiary of the order of Saul-l'Yançois. It now appears—having demonstrated that Joan of Arc also belonged to the Third Order; She was encouraged and supported in her mission by Brother Richard, the famous preacher of the ôpofjie. The Franciscans played a great role in the liberation of France and the war against the An-German Jewish agents disguised as Republicans knew well what they were doing by hunting down our religious people.

See, on this subject, an article by Mr. Siméou Luce in the Revue des çois (/■ .4 .ssise published by the Capuchin Fathers under the direction of Father Arsene of Cliulel and P. de Porreniruy.

(2) Euit dei Ju'f's.

THE JL'IF ;J3

solid, the firmament, vakiak, was pierced with openings by which the rain was falling. They looked at the bone Luz, as the root of the body where all the viscera ended, and which could not be broken or ground; they formulated axes like these: a little wine and bread taken on fasting "preserves the liver from sixty diseases;" • it is a symbol certain of blood plethora when dreaming of a crest of rooster. •

This does not prevent Mr. Darmesteter (1), deputy director at the School of Advanced Studies, to affirm to us that the means "age has gone to the ghetto to seek its science and its philosophy-« phy. •

Let Mr. Darmesteter tell us about • the deaf action él invisible • Jews against the Church; <« of the controversy religious which, for centuries, obscurely gnaws at the Christianity," good. But to pretend that the Jews have rendered some service to science, that is to say mock the candor of young Christian people that Ferry commissioned this Jew to instruct.

It is to the Aryan that we owe all the small discoveries or large, printing, gunpowder, America, steam, the pneumatic machine, blood circulation, laws of gravity. All progress has occurred through the natural development of Christian civilization. The Semite, we must not tire of repeating it, has done nothing but ex- to exploit what the genius or work of another had conceived. The true emblem of the Jew is the ugly bird which cynically settles into the nest built by others.

Now that we have indicated the main features

(1) A look at the history of the little jui*

:34 FRANCE JULY

, which are common to almost all Semites, let us examine closer to race and species.

curious to do the physiology of the Jew. Unfortunately the elements are few in number. With their eniregent habilingual, their ordinary activity, the Jews got involved in all anthropological societies, in all associations that allow you to write a title on a business card-site; once there, they do everything to prevent that we do not deal with them in too precise a way.

The main signs by which one can recognize the Jewish remain *long: this famous curved nose, the blinking eyes-gnawing, clenched teeth, protruding ears, nails square instead of rounded, almond-shaped, the torso too long, flat foot, round knees, extraordinary ankle-narily had outside, the soft and melting hand of Ihy-pocrile and traitor. They quite often have a larger arm shorter than the other (1).

It is certain that the tribes have preserved almost intact the features that once distinguished them and many of which are indicated in the Bible. Gambetta, with his curved nose so pronounced, was attached to the tribe of Ephraim. It is

(i) Lavalier observes that Jews, in general, have a pale face, hooked nose, deep-set eyes, prominent nose, cons-strongly pronounced mouth ticks, frizzy, red hair or brown, with a sparse beard, the usual mark of effeminate temperaments-born. "Physical degradation," he adds, "always follows degradation-moral tion; it is more strongly noticed among the Hebrews, It is the result of complete depravity.

The portrait is a bit loaded. The Jews among themselves are not depraved; the harm they do to the yoyin is only the exercise of war, too bad for you if you are too vile to defend or even God is too stupid to protect your money.

THE JL'IF 35

the same applies to Reinach and Porgès, which explains their mutual sympathy. Black and hairy Caraondo is from the tribe of Jacob. Henn-Aron, with his eyes streaked with filaments red, claimed to be from the tribe of Zebulun. The KauUa white and thin is from the tribe of Judah. Lockroy, with his little grumpy head, is from Asser. The countless Lévy's, despite apparent differences, belong to \at tribe of this name. The tribes smell each other, feel each other, rap-close to each other, but in the current state of this science embryonic, no precise rule can be formulated.-

Apart from these still poorly defined tribal nuances,-

Imcts: the Jew of the South and the Jew of the North, the Portuguese Jew and the German Jew.

The Jews of the Portuguese rite, as we know, claim to be estranged-settled in Spain since ancient times: they reject: They refuse with horror any solidarity with the deicides, they pre» even tend that the Jews living in Toledo wrote then to their brothers in Jerusalem to turn them away from committing-to be such a great crime. Many historians, the Jew Emma-Nuel Aboab among others, in his Notenology, admit the authenticity of this missive in which Levi, head of the synagogue, Samuel and Joseph, Jews of Toledo, address to the great priest Eleazar, to the wise men, Samuel Canute, Anne and Gaiaphas, Jews of the Holy Land. Graetz, on the contrary, declares all these assertions erroneous, but It should be noted that it is German, that is to say animated of hostile feelings against the Portuguese (1).

(1) See: Historical, political and literary studies /« Jvåft iC Spain, by AmaJor de Loa Bios, Ira.luciiou de M. Magnabal and the Jews of Spain, by Graaiz, tradiiclioû of U. Georif es Sieoo. ■

36 JEWISH FRANCE

In any case, the difference is very considerable between these two specimens of Jews.

Warmed by the Eastern sun, the Jew of the South is sometimes physically beautiful; it is not rare to find in him the Arab type preserved almost in all its purity. Some make you dream with their soft velvet eyes and caressing, always a little false, their ebony hair, to some companion of the Moorish kings and even to some Castilian hidalgo; it is necessary, for example, that they preserve their gloved hands, the greedy and low race quickly appears in these hooked fingers, in these ever-agitated fingers by lust, always contracted for the rapine.

The German Jew has none of these looks. The chas-the ones do not look, the complexion is yellowish, the hair fish glue color. The beard almost always of a indefinable reddish is sometimes black, but a black Unpleasant Tert. and which has reflections of a faded frock coat. He is the type of the old merchant of men, the usurer low-class, one-eyed innkeeper. Fortune, I said, Don't change them by touching them with your wand. When we see certain Parisian characters passing by, only pure ones blood carried to the woods in a pram decorated with a tortilla of baron, we have reminiscences of figures glimpsed of needles. These were described by a coreligionist belonging to a well-known and almost considered family—Mr. Cerfbeer of Medelsheim, who was a Jew, was a resident of the Jewish Quarter.

The German Jew, he says, is morally vain, ignorant, greedy, ungrateful, low, crawling, insolent; physically he is dirty, mangy and ragged. Jewish women are imperious, credulous, slanderous, acaritious and very questionable in matters of marital faith (I).

(1) The Jews, their history, their customs.

THE JEW 37

The author then makes accusations against the rabbis that we do not reproduce, because never a writer Christian does not attack a priest, whatever religion he belongs to—Well, he leaves that to the writers of the Jewish press.

Among German Jews, connoisseurs distinguish another variety: the Polish Jew with a big nose and hair frizzy (1).

To his financial companies the Jew of the South denies a grain of poetry; it takes your purse, — it is the race that wants this, — but with the help of conceptions that do not do not lack a certain grandeur. Like Mirés, like Millaud, like Péreire, he willingly rubs shoulders with literate, there are newspapers where people sometimes write in French—English, he seeks the man of letters and is honored to have him at his table; at most, if the writer had made him win one hundred thousand francs, he put five hundred francs under his towel.

(1) There were formerly four rites: the Sephardic rite, the Atke-Nazi, the pulten rite she French rite. The French rite disappeared in U following the expulsion of the Jews from France.

The Karaite sect has 500 members in the Wilna and Wolbynie, 200 in Odessa and almost 4,000 in Crimea.

The Karaites do not recognize the antithesis of the Talmud and do not admit that the rule of Scripture. Orthodox rabbis qualify the Karaites of Samaritans, Sadducees, Epicureans. This sect, according to them, it was founded by a rabbi of the 8th century, Anna Ben David who had presented himself in Babylon as caudidatà the high dignity of Gaon or Rescb Gloulba. Furious at having been rejected, he would have constituted a dissident sect.

The Karaites, for their part, claim that their sect already existed said to Emperor Nicholas, who was ignoring him as he passed through this city: "We cannot be blamed for having crucified Jesus Shiist, because we were no longer in Jerusalem since the destruction of the first church. "

S

38 JEWISH FRANCE

The Jew of the North does not even have the genius for commerce; he is the cutter of ducats from elsewhere, the one who, as we say said it to Franciort, made the ecus sigh the operation of circumcision. His southern counterpart is agitated, stirred, he is ingenious; he does not move; motionless and stagnant he waits the moment behind his counter; he depreciates the titles as he depreciated the currencies; he enriched himself without pro-never drive. One is the hopping, cheerful flea, the other is the slimy and sticky louse, living in inertia at expense of the human body.

The religious Semite, the one who still remembers the days when he opened his tent to pray in the rays of the sun rising, the relatively tolerant Semite too, is the man of the Noon. The hater, the maker of obscene caricatures, the one who spits on the crucifix, is the man of the North.

The Jews of the South, however, suffered much more. than the Jews of the North, but they were less despised. The martyrdom, as it happens, grew up the descendants of the vic-times, while the hibitude of living in humiliations public has plunged the sons of the Jews into degradation Germans.

Make no mistake though, the strongest, the true Jew is the Jew of the North. Pereire, poet and artist until a certain point, tried in vain to fight against Rothschild, he was forced to give up the fight from which he had emerged strong bruised. The Jewish press and bank did not take Gambetta under their protection, and have worked to make almost pass great man the little secretary of Crémieux that because that despite his Italian nickname, he was a German Jew original.

It seems that, by a fairly natural logic, the triumph The momentary aspect of the Jew must be embodied in the complete Jew.

LB JEWISH 39

in the true Jew, in the most groveling, the longest-civilized, humanized.

We should not attach more importance to it that it is not suitable for these divisions. Portuguese or Germanmands (1), Askenazim or Sephardim (2), as we say in Jerusalem, all, apart from passing disagreements, hold tightly united against the foe, the stranger, the Christian.

The religious question itself plays only a secondary role. aside from the question of race which takes precedence over all

(f) Portuguese and Germans are waiting, to be completely reconciled-ment, that common Penutini, Clutianism, is strait. Nothing is more idslrncUr in this respect than the beginning of a published brochure in 18C5 when there was talk of merging the two rites. We can clearly see here that hatred of the Christian is still very much alive among the Jews, that she is their rallying point, that she anioM; also both practicing Jews and so-called free-thinking Jews.

Here is the preamble to this brochure addressed to "Gentlemen merger commissioners:

c Ueasiears, before changing anything to the forms of ourrd worship, a question, a serious question must be presented to you.

c Can the divinity of Jesus Christ withstand the light that our era has made us rejoice over it

(If this divinity were to retain its prestige, if the unity of God, the adoration of Jesus, the Holy Trinity and the adoration of the Virgin Mary. wind again eire united in the same cult without reason human being is offended, if the time has not come, keep us. Gentlemen, let us be patient with the spirit of modification or reform, resigned and let us keep intact the worship of our fathers to your generation. who will have the glory of making the just religious idea triumph, of the Oieo unique. "

{On the Fusion of Portuguese and German Rites. – Michel Lévt.)

(2) Aschkeoezest, <'f 'after Genesis, the name of one of the sons of Gomer son of Japheth. According to Mr. Théodore Reinach he is considered by the rabbis like the pore of the Germans. Sefarad is the biblical name* than from Spain.

40 JEWISH FRANCE

others. In those who have abandoned Judaism for two or three generations, the Jew knows how to find the Jewishness runs through their veins; sometimes even, – which is very well, – he spares an enemy because he recognized that he was a brother who had lost his way.

In Daniel Deronda (1), this marvelous study of Hebraism for which the Jew Lewes had made his companion, Georges Elliot, the greatest novelist of England after Dickens, two or three hundred volumes of history, this point is admirably highlighted.

Daniel Deronda is a true hero of a novel, a handsome, young, intelligent, eloquent patrician who does not suspect certainly not that he is of the family of Jacob; the attraction of the race pushes him to fall in love with a Jewish woman. Then Mordecai intervenes, one of these enlightened ones, one of these seers who are leading the world today for the benefit of the Semitic cause. He recognized the co-religionist under the gentleman, he lifts in front of him a corner of the veil which hides this policy of the century incomprehensible to the superficial and naive.

Daniel doesn't delay in knowing the whole truth. He is the son of a famous singer, the Alcharisi. The Alcharisia prayed one of her lovers, Lord Mallinger, to adopt her son and raise him as a future peer of England. While the child grows up, the actress continues her studies success, she marries a German prince, and when Daniel at the age of man, she decides to reveal this truth to him

(1) Two volumes, published by Calmann Lévy.

THE JEW -'»l

that she believes she must sadden him: "My mother," she replies simply– Daniel, I am happy and proud to be Jewish.

Mordecai completes his initiation; he lists to Daniel the services he can render to his own, the action he can exercise; it shows him that it is necessary to reestablish the nationality of Israel. You would never guess why?

- To serve as a model for liberated Europe » Deronda understood, he found according to his expression or his direction social." He leaves for the East where all Semitism is stirring at this moment. He will probably have seen Gambetta before his death, he will have spoken with Jewish bankers and politicians influential Jews and said to them: "Come on, old brothers, try to have some killed on the distant shores thousands of these French idiots, it will do good to Israel, to England, and to your purse.

We understand the enthusiasm that inspired in Alexander VVeill this work is so powerful and touches so many things. No novelist in France would be able to write a book of this depth. All of Judaism moderne is there with his interloping, his hammy manners represented by the Alcharisi, its permanent conspiracy, its socialist propaganda personified in Mordecai and, dominant everything, the ardent faith in the mission of the race.

So from one end of the universe to the other, in America as in Abyssinia, Israel sends emissaries to discover the remains of the lost tribes among which Cad and loaded have completely disappeared, while others do not are represented by only a small number of members. We seek them with understandable impatience, because As long as they are lost the family will be incomplete and we cannot think of rebuilding the Temple despite all the good will of the Freemasons.

42 JEWISH FRANCE

To find them, the Jew Benjamin, born in Moldova in Folscherry and died in London on May 4, 1864, had visited for many years Egypt, Syria, Diabekes, Kurdistan, Mosul, Baghdad, Persia. We had sur-named Benjamin in memory of Benjamin de Tuièle, the famous traveler of the 12th century. Rabbi Marcché had thought he saw them in the Sahara, but it was not not yet clarified. Another Jew, Mr. Wiener, professor at the Bonaparte high school, went to look for them in America South, and the funds of the Ministry of Public Education are used to pay for missions that pursue this goal patriotic. After having made the Jews of Algeria and Tunisia, we take care of those of Morocco and those of China. That's always something to find again waiting for some new Flatters to die to go announce to the lost that their coreligionists are the masters in Europe (1).

No Parisian has yet forgotten the premiere of La Femme by Claude, the only play by Dumas that has been successfully performed fall completely. "It's too soon! It's too soon!" murmured the freshly gloved Jews, both delighted and frightened by Daniel's insolent declaration that Dumas makes speak as Cagliostro spoke when he came to announce the future (2). Alphonse de Rothschild, who never shone

(1) Flatters was Jewish by origin and he is certainly a death victim of a religious idea as much as of his devotion to science, the

(2) In a very secondary order, it is also necessary to cite as a warning a conference by a daughter Delaville, at the boulevard des Capucines, October 30, 1883: the Israelites of Paris, their talents, their minds, their money, their power.

K The Jews, the conference said verbatim, are quite rich

THE JEW 43

by bravery, already saw himself locked up and forced to return the three or four billion he borrowed from us. Alas, France has ears not to hear and Dumas could say anything and be sure that he would not be understood.

Daniel's tirade is superb, by the way, and without to fully confess everything that Israel hopes for, sums up admirably the Semitic action (1).

When Cyrus allowed the Israelites to return to Palestine, only the tribe of Judah reappeared, because we must not count some—The remains of the tribe of Benjamin. The eleven tribes of Ephraim were not reconstituted. What happened to them? Where are they? them? Some want them in Asia, others speak of Abyssinia or an oasis in central Africa; and now the Moroccans claim to have come from it, asserting that they approached in mass to this continent. Well! I believe, after long research, that I finally know the truth on this subject and that I am perhaps—be called to reconquer our homeland. We are in a time when each person resolved to claim and have their own to buy In France and they will buy it maybe when the dynamite will have done its work, o

The Jews nodded their heads and moved their skulls. bald men that I still see. Not a single Frenchman stood up to shout: "Tittle down, you impudent girl, France is not yet for sale!"

The representative of the German Anti-Semitic Committee, who follows here all Jewish mass festivals, not from the point of view of France which he has no mission to defend, but from the point of view of race Arrenie that he suffers from seeing so humiliated in certain countries, said on leaving: a If the Jews allowed themselves to abuse public—ment in Germany, what a massacre we would make the day after these cheeky I »

(1) M. Emile Montégut, in his Ecrits modernes de Voltaire—ten-e, has indicated the influence that Claude's Wife had had on the composition of Daniel Deronda. o The neo-prophet, he writes, pres-appearance, the character of Uordecal, like Claude's wife, by a similar transformation, became Gweadolen Harletb. •

44 JEWISH FRANCE

his soil, his home, his language and his temple. 11 long enough ago that we Israelites have been dispossessed of all this.
We were forced to slip into the gaps of the nations, from where we have penetrated into the interests of governments-ments, societies, individuals. It's a lot, it's not enough. We still believe that persecution has dispersed us, it has spread; and holding hands we form today, a net in which the world might well find itself caught one day where it would occur to him to become hostile to us again, or to declare ungrateful. In the meantime we no longer want to be a group, we want to be a people, more than a people, a nation.
ideal homeland is no longer enough for us; the fixed and territorial homeland is has become necessary and I leave to search and lift our act legalized birth certificate. So I have the chance to see the country and go from China to the Salt Lake and from the Salt Lake to the great Sahara. Each his ideal and his madness, that He who is leads us, and as we have been saying for centuries on our feast days: the pro- year Jerusalem chain!

There are, however, some inaccuracies here; all the tribes are found except, as we have said, Gad and loaded, we still believe we are on the trail of Gad who is finds itself mixed up with the Nestorians and the Af|^dians(l). It is for

(1) Consult, on this subject, a curious work, the Nestorism or the Lost Tribes, by Asahel Grant. Also read a book published about twenty years ago in England: Table of Indians Americans, their general character, their customs, their lan-gue and their public festivals, religious rites and traditions showing them as- the descendants of the ten tribes of Israel, with the language of the Prophecies about them and the path they had to follow to pass from Media to the new continent, by A^raël Worsley.

In 1846, deputies were sent to search for the tribes,
but they returned without having accomplished their mission. They found, only, says the Jewish Chronicle of the time, "the presence of qua-three million Jews in the East Indies, twenty days from Sangala. » It is likely that in some time we will do still have to feed those.

THE JEW 40

this that Disraeli had England undertake, under never existed, the war in Afghanistan which cost so much of men and so much money. Mr. Gladstone, in the great meeting held on October 8, 1881, in Leeds, energetically withered—only this disastrous expedition which "had for result of alienating friendly Afghans from the English, and of de-break down the moral barrier that existed between England and the Russian Empire. "I have the pleasure to announce to you, add—he was, that we almost completely withdrew—res of this crazy and criminal enterprise and that we were able to erase some of the most unhappy memories and the most scandalous recorded in the annals of our history."

The events of 1885 when England, in retreat in front of Russia, lost all its prestige in India, and prepared the coming fall of his domination prove to how right Mr. Gladstone was in that question (I).

(1) In the month of April 1883, the Judhche tress gave some deliU interesting about the Jews of these districts. a Or signal, she said, a significant Jewish population in Merv, Turkhestan and Saraksqui is one of the support forces of the Russian army. Most are originally from Persia and Afghanistan. The Schocker of Merv est)iatif of Mercbed, in Kborassan. We follow that the Israelites of this country were forced by arms, forty-five years ago years, to embrace Islamism. Five hundred families thus crowned the turban, but this conversion, like that of the Marauas of Spain, was only apparent Officially they practice the Muslim religion—mane, but their feelings remained Israelites, and internally in their homes they scrupulously observe the worship of their —ancestors. Every family has its own shock that bleeds clandestinely slaughter animals. These Israelites marry exclusively among e.g., young girls, — they get married around 9 or 10 years old — far from receiving a dowry, they compensate their parents with a 3.

4C JEWISH FRANCE

The existence of Chinese Jews has only been known since the the 18th century.

Father Ricci, the Jesuit, known as Mr. d'Escayrac de Lauture, the pre-first and greatest missionary of his order in China, was also the first to mention the Chinese Israelites. Fr. Alexi visited them later. Fr. Goyani copied the Hebrew inscriptions from their synagogue, they were lost, but later copied by Father Gambit. The Edifying Letters published in the 18th century by the Jesuits make known to us what these eminent men less flourishing; the Protestant missionaries themselves have more written than seen, more discussed than risky.

It was during the Khar dynasty (that is, two thousand years ago) years at least), that the Israelites appeared in China in the number of 70 families or groups bearing the same name. Their number appears have shrunk, perhaps because many of them embrace—were Islamism a few centuries ago.

The Israelites first occupied several cities among the—which Beijing. Today we only find them in Kai-Fou, capital of the department of the same name Khai-Fou-Fou, as well as of the province and government of Khouan, a city once im—large and very populated, greatly reduced after a flood occurred in 1642, located to the south and about two leagues from the Yellow River, at 32°02' north latitude and 1°00'where" west longitude Beijing County.

The Cliniois Israelites have a special respect for the book of Esther which they call Ipethu marna {the great mother). Their scrolls of the Thor have neither periods nor commas, under the pretext that God dictated the Law so vile to Moses:}that he could not put the punctuation.

contribution paid by the husband. The religious leader of these Israelites is a certain Rabbi Mordecai, who is at the same time one of the largest silk manufacturers in the country. He is said to be rich in several miliious. »

THE JEW 47

Sometimes these dispersed members of the family of Israel, the Falashas are perhaps the most interesting.

They live, says Joseph Halévy in his report on his mission—sion in Abyssinia, in the provinces of Chiré, Adubo, Asgue—dié, in the north; their complexion is black without being negro, they wear or Hebrew names pronounced according to Abyssian custom, or names of circumstance, according to the custom of the ancient Hebrews and the Queez race. They claim to be descendants of the dele—Jewish fords who formed a procession of honor for Maqueda, the famous queen of Sheba and for her son Menilek who would be king Solomon for father.

The Abyssinians talk incessantly about Jerusalem and comp—try well on the restoration of Jewish nationality.

Although the Jews are not very tender towards us,
The story of a failed exodus of these poor people has left me in awe.

Falashas. Terrified, the unfortunates suddenly decide-to set out for this Jerusalem whose name comes up continually in their interviews. They abandon their huts, the old people take the lead of the caravan singing hymns and waving tree branches. No one in the troop suspects what the vast Universe is, they all expect to ren-to cross the Red Sea and cross it on foot.*:ecs as did their fathers. Soon they succumb to fatigue, they see the space ever expanding before them; exhausted they stop in Axum, in Tigray, and take the side of go back.

Alas, the hyenas and scorpions have taken possession abandoned huts. To punish the fugitives, we want tear away their Pentateuch and they are forced to sacriproudly display their last cow to save their precious book.

48 THE FIFTH JEWISH FRANCE

Human wickedness is everywhere the same. From whatever Whichever side we look at, we encounter sadness and perse-
At the end of the world, people we suspect barely existence suffer, and die victims of the me-luck of men which is found identical under all latitudes.

But let us leave these distant Jews and return to our Jews.
of Europe.

Jews of race more than of observance, like Deronda, are almost as numerous as the others. If there is no of short-robed Jesuit, there is what one could call Jews in short robes. Disraeli, who knew about them, admirably painted many times working mysterieslaughingly to the common work.

Who does not remember this passage from Coningshy or the New new generation?

This mysterious, cunning diplomacy, which causes so much worry to Western Europe, is organized and carried out principally only by the Jews; the formidable revolution which, at this moment-here, is being prepared in Germany and which, in fact, will only be a second, more important Reform, and which we still doubt if little in England, develops its blossoming fully under the auspices of Jews' who have almost monopolized the professorat in Germany. Neander, the founder of spiritual Christianity tuel and royal professor of theology at the University of Berlin, is Jew. Benary, no less illustrious, attached to the same University, is

As for the German professors of this race, their name is legion: I think there are more than ten in Berlin alone.

A few years ago, Rugio addressed us. However, there is no never had any friendship between the court of St. Petersburg and my family. She has Dutch relations who generally have provided for its needs, and our claims on behalf of the Polish Jews-born, – a numerous race and the most degraded of all the tribes, –

THE JEW

49

had not been to the tsar's taste. Nevertheless, the circumstances brought about a rapprochement between the Romanoffs and the Sidonians. I resolved to go to St. Petersburg myself. During Upon my arrival I had an interview with the Minister of Finance Russian, Count Cancrin: I had to deal with the son of a Lithuanian Jew. The loan was connected with business in Spain where I resolved to surrender when leaving Russia.

I had an audience with the Spanish prince, Senor Mendizaball: I found myself facing one of my peers, the son of a NuevoChristiano, a Jew from Aragon. Following the revelations that transpired in Madrid, I went directly to Paris to consult the President of the French Council of Ministers. I found the son of a French Jew, a hero, a marshal of the Empire and it is only fair, because who do you want to be heroes, if not those who worship the God of armies?

–And is Soult Jewish?

– Yes, as well as other marshals of France and not the least famous: Masséna for example; – his real name was Manasseh; – but let's get back to my anecdote. The consequence of our consultations was that one of the Northern powers would be addressed as friendly and mediative. Our choice fell on Prussia, and the president The Council member made a request to the Prussian minister who, A few days later, came to attend our conference. The Count d'Arnim entered the living room and I recognized a Prussian Jew. You See then, my dear Coningsby, that the world is governed by very different characters... from what those who imagine are not behind the scenes.

The table is interesting and shows well how, under various forms and different disguises, the Jew is actually everywhere. Masséna's proverbial greed, the atrocities he committed in all his tendenci campaigns although the baptismal certificate of the minister was published in the weekly (No. 25 November 1882). Ney seems also have belonged to the race. As for Soult, the opinion seems very risky to me.

50 JEWISH FRANCE

Another assertion of Disraeli, who elsewhere claims that many members of the Society of Jesus were Jewish is absolutely unsustainable. The Jesuits, to whom their opponents themselves have never refused a certain intelligence, have always distrusted the Jews as well as the plague. The rules of the illustrious Society are formal on this regard; they absolutely forbid receiving in the Company someone who is descended from Jewish or Saracen race going up to the fifth degree. It is an impediment—absolute, indisDeusaôî^is, for which Father General îui-Meraene can grant dispensation. Congregatio declared 'lives and status hoc decretum non essentialis sed indispensable impedimenti vim obtinere, sic scilicet ut nullus omnino superior ac ne ipse quidem Præpositus generalis in 60 dispensare possit atque ila deinceps integre inviolateque servandum esse [\].

The only Jew who ever entered the order following completely exceptional circumstances could not have occurred stay (2).

These prescriptions are not surprising. Formerly, in Eltit, we didn't talk about sociology all the time, but there existed a social science based on experience, observation of facts, the study of types, we knew perfectly well how powerful heredity was.

The precautions taken against the Maranes, the Judaeans,

(1) Institutum societatis Jesu. Roma, typis civitatis catholice, 1869, volume V. Decreed V »« congregalionis geueralis. Decrelum LU.

(2) At the school on rue des Postes where he had received as a tutor Dacosta senior, who found himself in a precarious position. Who knows? role his son played in the execution of the hostages. The trial had not nen d'encouraseanl.

THE JEW 51

the Semites in a word, who seem incomprehensible to a people in full decadence like ours, respond—

social. Do we not see, moreover, the only nation which is still strong, still standing, Germany to take up the question in exactly the same form and, without in any way concerning the religious point of view, try to react against the Semitic invasion?

It was on this ground that the Society of Jesus placed itself, for it did not exclude converted infidels from its midst, of Aryan origin. "Poftr the Tarlares and the other Mahometans who are, either in Poland or in other countries, we leaves it to N. Pi. P. General to be able to dispense in the cases of degrees of kinship referred to above, because one cannot allege the same reason against them" ("1).

The Jesuit, moreover, is the complete opposite of the Jew. Ignatius of Loyola is a pure Aryan. The hero of the siege of Pamplona^ the knight of the Holy Virgin, is the last of the paladins. There is something of Don Quixote in this saint, who looks very modern. however, who later came to sit on the benches of the University of Poris, as if he personified in him the movement taking place in the world where the feather would now play the role that the sword played in earlier ages.

Whatever this error, which proves that Disraeli knew the Jews better than the Jesuits, the English statesman is no less interesting to consult.

In Endyynioiif Disraeli returns again to this diplo-

(1) Decree VI coogregatiouU. Decretum XX.VlIi.

.)3 JEWISH FRANCE

occult malie which for a century has made sense of the world upside down.

The Semites today exert a vast influence on the business by their smallest, but most original branch: the Jews. There is no race that is endowed with such tenacity and as many organizational qualities. These gifts have given him a unprecedented empire over property and unlimited credit. as you advance in life and gain experience in business, the Jews will thwart you in everything. For a long time, they have been sneaking into our se- diplomacy Crete, which they almost took over; in a quarter of a century, they will demand their open share of government. Or. CL-lles-là are races whose men and corporations, influenced to enter into all the calculations of a statesman...

The Jews in short robes, one understands, render services all the more reported to the cause as they are less prominently. In administration, in diplomacy, in the offices of conservative newspapers^ under the dress of the priest himself, they live without being suspected. 'The Jewish army therefore has three army corps at its disposal:

The real Jews, the Notoh^es Jews, as they are called the Archives, which officially venerate Abraham and Jacob and who are content to demand the possibility of doing their fortune by remaining faithful to their God;

Jews disguised as free thinkers (Gametta type, Dreyfus, Raynalj, who put their Jewish quality in their pocket, and persecute Christians in the name of the glorieux principles of tolerance and the sacred rights of the freedom ;

Conservative Jews who, apparently Christian, united to the two preceding ones by the closest links, deliver to their comrades the secrets that can be useful to them.

THE JEW 53

In these conditions, the incredible success of the Jew, something incredible as it may seem, the incredible way in which it pulule can be easily explained.

The strength of the Jew is solidarity. All Jews are so-linked to each other as proclaimed by the Alliance Israelite who took as his emblem two hands which meet-join and intertwine under a halo.

This principle is observed from one end of the universes with truly touching accuracy.

We can guess what advantage, from a human point of view, this principle of solidarity given to the Jew over the Christian who, admirable in charity, is foreign to any feeling of solidarity.

No one, you might think, admires this flower more than I do. sublime that Christianity has brought forth in the soul human, this tireless, inexhaustible, ardent charity who always gives, who gives without ceasing, who gives not only money, but the heart itself, time, intelligence.

a work of rigorous analysis, that is the difference which exists between the solidarity of the Jew and the charity of the Christian—here.

Christians open their arms wide to all misfortunes; they respond to all calls, but they do not don't hold on to each other. Accustomed, which is quite natural, to consider themselves at home in a country which belongs, they have no idea of forming ranks tight to resist the Jew.

The Jew was therefore quite easily right in hitting them. in isolation. Today, he is a merchant whose Jew desires the fund and that all Israeli trade is understood to drive everything slowly to bankruptcy. Tomorrow is a writer who is a nuisance and whom the Jews reduce to despair—and lead to drunkenness or madness. Another time he is a great lord with a beautiful name and who will have bullied a suspicious baron at the races; arrangements are made for to procure for the unfortunate a Jewish mistress; a runner affiliated with the gang comes to offer him an advantageous deal, the victim is sometimes started with a first gain and finally—She finds herself both ruined and noted for infamy.

THE JEWISH FRANCE

If the merchant, the writer, the great lord had heard, if they had united, they would have escaped, they would be mutually defended; each would have brought a support to the other, but I repeat, they succumb without see, and without even suspecting who their real enemy was.

Thanks to this solidarity, everything that happens to a Jew, in the most remote corner of a desert, takes on the proportions of an event. The Jew, in fact, has a way of squealing which is only his. It is not in vain that he was told: a Croasmultiply, you countless descendants of Abraham."

The Jew's shouting always recalls these tumults of the Middle Ages, where an unfortunate wearer of yellow rags, beaten for some misdeed, would utter dreadful lamentations—that stirred up the whole ghetto.

Unfortunately for delicate ears there is always in the world a Jew who cries out and demands something thing. — What does he demand? What was taken from him, what was could have taken from him and finally what he could have gained.

Very often the Englishman, who smells something, starts shouting the dreadful cacophony.

Who does not remember the Jew Pacifico as Thouvenel, then our representative in Greece, at a time when our representa-

THE JEW 53

tanls were neither Jews nor servants of Jews, threatened, if he did not *keep quiet, to hang from the mainmast of one of our warships?

Who does not remember the Jew Levy of Enfidha?

Who has forgotten Mortara, this Jewish pelt about whom all the press sold to Israel overwhelmed a holy pontiff with insults who simply said to the kid with his augéli smile- that: "Dear enAmt, you will never know what your soul will have cost me!"

Father Momolo Mortara was a guy; he exploited his son as Raphael Felix exploited Rachel that he had reserved the right, in his treaty with the American impresario, to show her dead and dressed in the peplum in her coffin. Whenever Father Mortara needed money, he felt his pain would be renewed and he would find Cavour. Gavour^ who claimed that the Mortara affair had affected him as much helped to make Italy that Garibaldi, gave some ducats to the grieving father; the French liberal newspapers which applauded- were committed to Italian unity, as they should have been, with their ordinary patriotism, applauding German unity, intoning- showed their great air of bravery against eternal fanaticism- nel, the Holy Ofllée, papal despotism, they poured tears over this father whom they called "a priestly victim- tale. D

The death of Cavour and the occupation of Rome by the Italties ruined this poor Mortara who was put aside from that he was no longer needed; accused of murder, he passed before the Assize Court of Bologna on October 28, 1871, and he was lucky enough to be acquitted, thanks to the support of the Franks- Masons.

The Victor Noir affair is still present in all the memoirs. Victor Salmon, known as Victor Noir, was, according to V Elbf-

5o JEWISH FRANCE

Zeitung, the little son of a Jew from the Palatinate called Salme or Solomon, who was in his youth and until 1789 minister-became a French province this Salomon engaged, I do not know as a result of what vicissitudes, in the Italian army, there became an officer, left the army to get married, undertook a small business, did not succeed and came to settle in Paris where He lived by giving lessons.

Like all these descendants of cosmopolitan adventurers Victor Salomon joined the Revolutionary Party. Report-twenty-fifth order, he one day bowls his boulevard and comes to insult and hit at his home a prince of the imperial family The other, a little less softened by the well-be that his parents, uses the right of self-defense and shoot

If the dead man had been a Christian, he would have been buried and everything. would have ended up there. The dead man's name was Solomon and to get to touch thirty thousand francs (since Judas the number thirty is favorable to his descendants), the Jews put all of Paris on their feet and are about to make a revolution.

An upset painter exposed a charge of dubious taste. The mocked character, undisputed master of contemporary theatre contemporary, academician, author of twenty masterpieces, strong above such jokes, shrugs his shoulders and at most, on the advice of those whom Girardin named of "mortal friends," peacefully prepares to initiate a trial. A Jew finds himself there, feels the need to par-ler of him and he allows himself, him incapable of producing a work of art, to come and brutally damage a creation artistic. All the sympathies, which were for the veteran of French letters, immediately turn around-ment towards the painter.

THE JEW 57

Suppose a student of our religious people is indignant at the sight of these ignoble caricatures, where the masters who raised so many generations of eminent men are represented in obscene attitudes, abruptly tearing an image filthy. You can hear the police commissioner from here:

– Sir, property is sacred, no one has the right to make justice itself. 11 There is nothing left for you in the way in which you commit, only to violate homes and to pickpocket locks. It's the penal colony then Flat as a pin in front of Lipmann, because he was Jewish, the police commissioner, – a Lévy or a to put this shameless Jew who had destroyed to sleep in the police station voluntarily an object that did not belong to him and on which a trial was initiated.

As soon as the Jew intervenes in a matter, you are sure that a terrible uproar will occur.

How did Olivier Pain die? No one knows. people regret it, but the public doesn't care. adventure, it turns out that Prince Bismarck, who wants to approach the Tories who have just come back to power and isolate France from England, he said to himself that he would not be. bad fair to insult a little Lord Lyons who is since ambassador to France for many years.

The Jew Goëdschel Selikowitch then enters the scene. It is a former student of this school of higher studies which has become little by little a kind of Jewish seminary where one raises to the skewer of revolutionary agents; he published a bro- book entitled: the Sheol of the Hebrews and the East of the Egyptians

o8 JEWISH FRANCE

Well. That's all we know about him; on the other hand, he knows the most hidden things; he saw Olivier shot Pain, he affirms on his honor, he declares that this attack cannot go unpunished.

We believe it, we organize meetings of indignation, we grossly insults England, the Queen, the Prince of Wales; diplomatic notes are sent, Rochefort swears that he will avenge Pain's death on Lord Lyons. The Parisians know that the pamphleteer will limit himself to going bet a few louis at the races the next day, but the The naive are terrified, the English embassy closes its doors...

One damned Jew was enough to organize this charivari. How does the Jew fail to change the world like this? Don't ask; I don't know. It's his secret, It's a special gift for him. "It comes naturally to him," like the drummer of Niana Roumestan.

To whatever country he belongs, the Jew is sure to find the same support. The peerage, in the sense that we attach to this word, has no meaning for the Semite. The Jew, - to em- to give an energetic expression to the Israelite Alliance, - is of an inexorable iDuversalism.

I don't really see why we would blame the Jews to think like this. What does Homeland mean? Land of the fathers.

names written on a tree and that each year that passes digs and pushes deeper into the bark as the tree ages so that the tree and the name become one. You don't improvise as a patriot; you ballast in the blood, in the marrow.

Can the Semite, perpetually nomadic, experience
such lasting impressions?

THE JEW 51)

'No doubt we can change the palne like some Italians did it at the time of the arrival in France of Catherine de Medici^ like the French Protestants in time of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. But for For these transplants to be successful, the soil must moral is roughly the same as the one we leave, it is necessary that under the surface humus there is the Christian fund-
here.

The first condition, in addition, to adopt another homeland is to renounce one's own. Now, the Jew has a homeland which he never renounces, it is Jerusalem, the holy e» mysterious city, Jerusalem, which triumphant or persecuted, happy or sad, serves as a link to all her children who Every year on Rosh Hashanah they say to themselves: "Next year to Jerusalem!"

Outside of Jerusalem, any country, whether France, Germany or England, is simply for the Jew a stay, any place, a social agglomeration^ at environment in which he can find himself well, in which he can even to be able to serve the interests of the moment, but of which he is only a member as a free associate,
temporary member.

Here we touch on a point that we have already indicated and which we will have to come back to again: subsidence indisputable of French intelligence, the softening partial which translates both into a vague sympathy which consists of loving everyone and by a kind of hatred envious that pushes us to hate each other. It is the case of certain demented people who disinherit their children and overwhelm foreigners with good practices.

If the brains of our fellow citizens worked in this way fathers they would quickly be convinced that the Jew has absolutely no reason to be patriotic.

Think for a minute and ask yourself why a Reynal, a Bichot, a Leven would be attached to the France of the Crusades, of Bouvines, of Marignan, of Fontenoy, of Saint Louis, of Henri IV and of Louis XIV.

By its traditions, by its beliefs, by its memories that France is the absolute negation of all temperament Jew. That France, when it did not burn the Jew, stubbornly closed its doors, covered it with contempt, did of his name the cruelest of insults.

I know very well that, according to them, a new France would have been born. in the September massacres, that she would have purified herself of its old glories with the blood dripping from the heads cut off from old men and women, that the revolution would have been, in the words of the Jew Salvador, "a new Sinai.")

These are sonorous but meaningless words. A country remains what he was at birth, like a child who grows up keeping its original nature. France, Germany, England will never be a homeland for Jews and these are perfectly right, in my opinion, not to be zero patriotic part and to follow in all latitudes a poor-distinct, personal, Jewish politics.

Our ancestors, who were sensible people, knew perfectly—ment this and they defended themselves. Do the same if there is still time, but don't be surprised; leave it to Victor Hugo, who ended up entrusting his grandchildren to the care of a Jew, the indignant tirades against Deulz.

How charming, let's say it in parentheses, this episode! How well all the actors are in their places!

LK JEW 61

Here is the descendant of the Bourbons, intrepid Aryan, chivalrous, convinced that everyone is like she, breathing in the smell of powder with her fine nostrils, ready to take off when the bugle of La Pénissière sounds

Who will she confide in? Some craftsman's son from the Noon, to some child of the Rey enclosure, to some brother of this Merault of whom Daudet described to us, in his Fiots en exile, enthusiastic and generous blade? No, a head of linnet leads this being without fear. It is the oily Jew, slimy, creeping, lippy that takes hold of this confidence.

of her king: "Do you think about it, princess, the fathers of this unfortunate people were burned, severely cut off, chased away by the kings; your august ancestors; he hates you and he is right, >

The other one is also very natural, very interesting, very typical. He promises, without laughing, to restore the throne of Saint Louis who expelled his own, the altar of this Christ that he considers himself the most contemptible of deceivers. He even turns green like a simple Bauër. He sells the princess because it is in the interest of his religion and seeks by addition in the operation – without this trait the race would not be not complete – a whole bedit penefisse.

The boos burst out, he lets the storm pass with the tranquillity that his fellows show when some pouf-pouf, some theft more shameless than the others attract exasperated curses. Crémeux takes his altitude of the big days of hearing and declares that he refuses to defend this unworthy person who dishonors the known Jewish people by his proverbial loyalty. Deutz does not move; then, when the noise has died down a little, he goes to find Crémieux: "Brother," he said to him, "the insults from all over Europe move me little, but I value your esteem and I am aware of always deserved it by acting in the best interests of Israel.

4

62 THE JEWISH FRINGE

Crémieux naturally nods and delivers to the good Judas the requested certificate.

It would be a shame not to give the harangue that the two Gaspards address to each other.

Deutz speaks like a brave deputy of the Union Republicaine; like his co-religionist Gambetta he would say willingly: "4th clericalism is the enemy, s

This writing, he says (1), is not a justification that he presents to his judges; he has no need of them and his conscience, the most upright and the most severe of judges, told him enough that by stifling the war civil near to rekindle more active and more devouring; in sparing-shedding the blood of so many generous citizens, by striking with death this party, irreconcilable enemy of our liberties, has returned to country a huge service, (2)

I have sacrificed, he concludes, to my convictions as a citizen my in-

(1) Deutz: Arrest of Madame. Read also in the Mémoires of M. de Viel-Gastel, volume II, the story of a strange conversation about Deutz, between Marshal Bugeaud and Romieu.

(2) Note that the guy is no more French than SpuHer who was born of Baden parents, or Leveu who was born in Frankfurt, and that he has no reason to interfere in our affairs.

This Deulz is interesting, in the sense that he is in some way the precursor of all business intermediaries across the Rhine; Spuller, the Levens, the Reioachs, the Strausses, the Bauôrs, the Meyers, the Wolff, the Blowitz who fell upon our unfortunate country at the end of the empire, and which have taken such a place since the Republic.

This whole Deutz family seems to have come out of a Disraeli novel.

Drack, the brother-in-law of the wretch who delivered Madame, the husband of Sara, abjures Judaism and is appointed librarian to the Duke of Bordeaux^ his wife runs away with her children, he does penance in the synagogue of Mainz, joined his wife in England, returned returned to Catholicism and was named Knight of the Golden Spur
"t Propaganda Librarian 1

THE JEW 63

Ciémieux, the future boss of Gambelta, finds this strong beautiful. The definition of intention by this perfect republic-Cain would fill with joy this loyal Paul Bert with whom this Poor Escobar is just a child.

The intention, says the red casuist, is undoubtedly what constitutes innocence or crime; but Vincent-tion does not happen immediately in broad daylight and when the acts are at first sight of a nature to su-raising awareness is not the intention we are looking for. che, these are the acts that we see and judge.

To Crémieux's ambiguities and quibbles, we are happy to be able to oppose the letter addressed by Mr. Aie-sandre Dumas to Mr. Nauroy, March 13, 1883.

The scene that Dumas describes is truly dramatic and beautiful.

Here, moreover, is the letter in full.

MoNsiKin,

Here is the fact:

I had as a college friend, and as a close friend ever since, Henri Didier, deputy of Ariège under the Empire, died in 1868. He was the grandson of Didier, shot in Grenoble under the Restoration, following a Bonapartist conspiracy, and BLs of Didier who was secretary general at the Ministry of the Interior, when he had the arrest of the Duchess of Berry took place on the denunciation of Deutz. It was this Didier who was charged with paying the denunciation—the 500,060 francs he had asked for. My friend told me.—one day, making me promise not to make the fact public that after his death, that his father, on the day of payment, had done so hide, him, a child aged ten at that time, behind a tapestry of his cabinet, and said to him: "Look carefully at what will happen and never forget it. You must know the good "What is a coward and how do you pay for it!" Henri hid, Deutz was brought in. Mr. Didier was standing in front of his desk on which were the 300,000 francs in two pa—

6i JEWISH FRANCE

which are 250,000 francs each. As Deutz approaches Mr. Didier signaled to him with his hand to stop, then, taking the tweezers, he used them to hold the two packages together. after another in Deutz, after which he showed him the door. Not a not a word was spoken during this scene that I am telling you as it is that it was told to me by my friend, the most honest man of the earth. Here, sir, is all the information I can give you about this. I also don't know the date of death of Deutz.

Please accept, Sir, the assurance of my best regards.
more distinguished.

A. Dumas.

According to a fairly accredited opinion, the very interesting pieces ressassantes which made up the Deutz file in the Archives nationales would have disappeared, *

In any case, the communication of these documents was formal—simply refused by the Freemason Ferry to Mr. Nauroy, as evidenced by a letter published by him in the Figaro of March 19, 1883 (1). The pretext alleged by Ferry, in a letter signed by him, was reasons for high propriety. Isn't this word pretty under the pen of one of the members of this government of September 4—September, which emptied the drawers of the Tuileries with a lackey's embarrassment, and delivered to the curiosity of all papers of a very intimate nature? For documents that date to history, the question, it seems, is quite different. It is true that it is Deutz, the co-religionist of Rothschild.

A little suffocated by such a response coming from Ferry,

(1) See also the Curkux of December 1, 1883.

THE JL'tl' t»»

Mr. Nauroy Ct request in V Intermediary of information-information on Deutz. But a new complication arises produced. Mr. Faucou, director of ri/ifermédttaire, received excessively curious information; but, either by a scruple which can be explained either by the fear of falling out with Israel and to lose his small position in Carnavalet, he refused to communicate this information to Mr. Nauroy. He had the intention for a moment of telling him a trial he would naturally have lost.

What is certain is that Deutz did not die ruined. 3n America. The thirty denarii multiplied by five hundred a thousand francs prospered in his hands.

Deutz left two sons who took the name Goldsmidt. The eldest perished in a shipwreck; the second is fixed at London.

Deutz's brother is called Mr. Du... He doesn't seem have asked for permission to change name at least there is no trace of this authorization in the Bul-letter of the laws; it is more likely that he will have followed Texem-many German Jews and that it will have been done naturalize under a new name (1). M Du... has a enormous fortune earned on the stock market; he is a regular our theaters, he lives in a splendid apartment in the Opera district.

Deutz's sister still exists and is called Ms. S.

(1) We will return later to this question of civil status which allows many German Jews to enter society French, and to play an important role in politics, eu dissimulating their first identity, thus giving it a new look to say. Mr. Guy de Charnacé incidentally touched upon this important point-as much in the Vampire Baron.

CO LA Fi; \^(:e juivr

Children are not responsible for the mistakes of their parents. rents, such is the thesis invoked by Mr. Faucou, for refuse to provide Mr. Nauroy with the communication of documents question. This thesis would be correct if the children had renounced the money of crime; in this case they would be worthy of all sympathies; but wanting to enjoy well-being conquered by the infamy of the father and not wanting to bear the The contempt deserved by this infamy is contrary to all morality. In these conditions the brave man, who would resist all the temptations to leave an honorable name to his own, would be a simple dupe, a complete fool. The level of the public morality is so low that the conduct of Mr. Faucou will seem praiseworthy to many.

Once again, we must not judge the Jews according to our ideas. It is indisputable that every Jew betrays the one who em-bends. Cavour said of his secretary the Jew Artom: "This man is precious to me to make known what I have to say, I don't know how he does it, but I don't have rather pronounced a word that he betrayed me before even being came out of my office." ((Why would God have created the Jew, said Prince Bismarck in his turn, if it were not for ser-of spies.

Sedecias poisons Charles the Bald. LeJewMeïre poisons Henry III of Caslilia, the Council of Ten discusses, On July 9, 1477, the proposal of the Jew Salomoncini and his brothers who offer to have Mohammed II poisoned by the Jewish doctor Valcho(l). The Jewish Lopez, Elizabeth's doctor,

(1) See the Revue des Eludes juives which, in front of the note presented to the Academy of Inscriptions by Mr. de Masialrip, is well forced to confess the Salomoncini brothers; for Lopez, riliA7#/re of F/ti'ippe U

iv JEW the-

is hanged for having sold himself to Philip II I Jew Lewis Goldsmilh served as a spy for Talleyrand in England during during the First Empire; the Jew Michel was guillotined for having delivered military documents to Russia. Another Three years ago, Goldsmith stole the plans of the great State-Prussian major. We know the role that Païva played before the war Who does not remember the attempts made by the Jewish woman Kaulla to surprise our mobilization plans? Who has Forgotten Esther Guimontelson's famous political salon? . The Jew Gustave Kloodtz. whose parents or homo - judicial in Paris around 1869, betrayed General Hicks, who is slaughtered with his troops by the Mahdi's soldiers. Klootz receives a large sum of money and is appointed general, Krajewski confides in the Jew Adler who sells him to Prussia and the old Polish poet is thrown into a fortress.

Faced with these facts which it would be easy to multiply to infinity, It is clear that this is not an isolated case which does not prove nothing against a community, but a special vocation to a race, the vocation of Abraham.

For the Jews, does this constitute espionage or Treason? No way. They don't betray a homeland. that they do not have, they do the business of diplomacy, of politics, that's all. The real traitors to their country are the ones who natives who let foreigners poke their noses into what don't look at them. The Republican ministers who, no happy to be named an officer of the Legion of Honor Oppert von Blowitz, German by birth and English by occupation, by M Forneron; for Goldsmith, the Département de la France; managed during the Révolution, by Mr. Frédéric Maison; for Kaolla and elsewhere in the newspapers of the time.

G8 JEWISH FRANCE

case, take him as a confidant, deliver to him the secret of our arsenals are worthy of all contempt. But what right would you prevent this Jew oscillating between two homelands to favor with its information the one of the two who pays the best?

This or that makes the study of the Jew very difficult. point of view of crime. As this excellent Gré- better, it is the intention that is everything. The harm that the Jews, terrible evil, unfathomable, unknown, enter the category of crimes committed in the name of state reasons. To murder, ruin, and despoil a Christian constitutes for them a crime pleasing to God. As Eisenstein explains- to get in unveiled Judaism, that's what they call doing a Korhan.

Such a Jew who, in the midst of his coreligionists, will have reduced to despair or suicide a Christian merchant whom he wants take the place, will be the most charitable towards his own, the most helpful, the most selfless of friends.

The absence of any serious statistical document, the skill

they hide their actions, surround, I repeat, all re-looking for this kind of almost insurmountable difficulties.

In 1817, Mr. Cerfbeer of Medelshein (1) had given some-some interesting figures, although very much in the air.

(i) This Cerfbeer really appears to have been an upright and sensible man.
In 1847, he addressed the Orleans dynasty, which was absolutely dominated by by the Rothschilds, these lines which seem from yesterday, with this exception close to those who, five years ago, expelled French people from home, were neither blind nor mad, but paid by the Franc-Jewish Masonry.

"Two years ago, some religious people were dispersed and driven out, and

THE JEW 69

There are, he said, in the twenty-two main prisons of the kingdom, about 18,000 condemned to various sentences.

Of these 18,000 condemned, the number of Jews is approximately
of 110.

Now the total population of the kingdom being 34,000,000 of inhabitants, the proportion of a condemned person is approximately one half a percent out of a thousand individuals.

The Jews, on the contrary, being about 100,000, the proportion-tion of the condemned Israelites is therefore more than one in a thousand their coreligionists.

It should be added that Jews rarely commit crimes.
violent crimes and that, moreover, they are supported by Freemasonry.
particular brand that Bismarck calls the Fifth International golden, international Goldene, they almost always escape-days to the law.

In the issue of the Revue des Deux-Mondes, dated 15
July 1867, Maxime Du Camp published some information-events which took place later, with certain modifications, in the beautiful book Paris, its organs^ se» fondions and its t'i>, doubly interesting information in the sense that the Jews not having yet invaded all places, we can assume that these facts have a fairly solid basis exact. Today that French-Masonry has taken possession of the Prefecture, we put all the crimes committed by the Jews on the backs of those who are reported as Catholics. If you were to ask for some documents on Israel, brother .-.Caubet, who is a soldier/iWiAjice, under oath, that they saw you murder your father.

In this way, a stupid feeling of popular hatred was satisfied. Blind or mad who persecuted them! It is not denying them Poites was the danger, but rather rue Luffite.

70 JEWISH FRANCE

It is easy to understand that the countless Lévy's, Salomon, Mayer, who populate the police headquarters from the police stations to the last job of ins-safety inspectors, will not stop one of their coreligionists-naries only at the last extremity (1).

This is what Maxime Du Camp wrote at one time already far removed from us less by the years gone by than by the changes made.

The condemnations that affected Nathan father, mother, brothers and sons-in-law, in all fourteen people, represented a total of two hundred years in prison (2). These are the main Jews-who, engaging in humble but incessant misdeeds, perform these kinds of hereditary functions. They are at fear not for their audacity, for they frequently murder, but by their persistence in evil, by the inviolable secret that they keep among themselves, by the patience they display and the ease

(1) In his book The Security Service⁴ by his former chief, Mr. Macé showed us "the agents signing their reports with the Masonic .'. , and making signals everywhere, even on duty, of that company. >

(2) The dean of the Nathans was a true patriarch, he made remount his first conviction for theft on 11 Germinal Year XIII; he suffered the last one at the age of seventy, on May 0, 1852. At that time, He worked as a timber merchant and enjoyed a great consideration in his neighborhood; friend of the arts he was the well-maker of the artists of the Boulevard du Temple, to whom he lent fifty percent money.

"The Nalhan clan," say the Famous Causes, "had its illustrations: Miurette or Eslher Nalhan, woman Mayer, thief of wo«^e5 (shopfronts), pickpocket, and especially her sister, Rosine Nalhan, elegant and fertile in disguises- Twice, in Saiot-Ger-but in Bicêtre, she was able to escape under her sister's rich clothes, because Rosine Nathan has, for many years, deceived her vic-times and the police, in the most diverse disguises. Woman of the her lace, her diamonds. She has the language of a great lady.

THE JEW TL

that they find to hide among their co-religionists. Jewish thieves rarely engage in open struggle against the society, but they are always in a state of silent and cunning struggle. It seems like they are taking revenge, that they are in their own right and that after all they are only resuming, when opportunity presents itself, a good which their ancestors were so often and so violently stripped by our own.

Sometimes they gather in groups and make a large-scale flight, as one does business [i]. They have their correspondents, their

as she has the exterior. It is a female Collet, comedian at least as much as a thief."

She was a bit like the Schumacher type, this coachman's daughter, who was one of the elegant women of Paris and who married the Marquis de Maubreuil. The brother was at the big game, where naturally he did not stay long, while the sister received the most distinguished people of Paris.

(1) These Jewish criminal associations seem to have continued. In October 1888, a man named Meyer was arrested in Strasbourg. He said Leitem, who specialized in centralizing titles and values from you.

A batch of 400,000 francs of stolen shares was found at his home. In Brussels, a batch of a million values subtracted, a few years ago, to Mr. Bural, stockbroker, 200,000 francs of stolen securities to Madame Boulemps, widow, owner of the café du théâtre Uoutmarle.

It seems difficult to understand how Meyer would have put himself in relation to all these different thieves if there was not an organized cosmopolitan station operating regularly.

What could be more significant, moreover, than the letters addressed to the Financial Company, following a famous vul and signed Michael Abrahams? Any comment, I think, would be superfluous in view of the quiet effrontery of these people, who serve as intermediaries for thieves, who treat this publicly as an ordinary matter:

Telegraph address London, September 27, 8 a.m.

Mabrim, London.

Today we received a visit from Mr. O^ciuels, the agent of the holders of yos Utxes. 11 informs you that the latter will want warehouses, their buyers. This is how the Nathan, of whom I have just spoken, the Kleins, the Blums, the Cerfs, the Levy. Everything is good for them, the lead shot detached from the gutters as well as handkerchiefs removed from a pocket. The leader takes generally the title of commission agent in goods and made shipments to North America, Germany and k Russia. The Hebrew-Germanic jargon they speak among themselves is incomprehensible and still serves to mislead research. They are the world's leading receivers and hide their theft behind-behind a profession ostentatiously practiced.

72 JEWISH FRANCE \

An old Jew named Cornu, a former chauffeur, was walking a sunny day on the Champs-Élysées. He is met by two thieves who were great admirers of his exploits say:

- Well, Father Cornu, what are you doing now?

"Always very drunk," he replies good-naturedly, "always-
days of great drunkenness. ^>

The great drunkenness is murder followed by theft (I) I return the N... values due to a 35 percent payment. And, as for other values. City of Brussels, etc., etc., you must-asks that you make them an offer of a sum (per hundred)

to obtain recovery.

We believe they will make the N... fear less actions well 35 percent- Please write to us what amount your customers want-will sacrifice to obtain recovery.

Signed: Michael Abrah.vms, son and C».

Here is another letter written by the same, while the stolen pro-
were following the talks, hoping to obtain conditions best:

Since receiving your letter of October 25, we received a visit from the person responsible for the holders of the values of negotiation. He paid us a visit today, and he tells us that his friends do not want to accept the 100.00U francs that you offer; so there is nothing more to do.

Please accept, gentlemen, our sincere greetings.

MICHAEL AT BAKERS. SON AND G°,

(I) It is regrettable that Maxime Du Camp, in his Conyicferaji'onî philosophical on the Commune, did not think of indicating the part enormous that the Jewish element had in it. Renan who risked it

THE JEW 73

All this is of little more than retrospective interest. Cornu would no longer need a great soldier now, he would be like minister of public works instead of being to forced labor and would draw from Vaerarium.

Nathan would teach France how to play the Monsignor; he would be an officer of the Legion of Honor like Clement, and would thus become the colleague of old soldiers were honored by such proximity. Cerf would have resumed his German name; he would have a magnificent hunt for surroundings of Paris and, as someone you know- sez, he would receive the elite of the Jockey. Coming into the world thirty years before, Hendlé, Cohn, Schnerb, Isaïe Levaillant au- would have been rioters deported to one of the Hebrew-speaking gangs Germans of whom Maxime Du Camp speaks; They are prefects today. You might tell me that this doesn't don't change occupation much hardly when it comes to alleging the powerful, wrote cepeiidaut: H in the French evolutionary movements, Jewish movement has crucial role." Du Camp left this hair in the shadows. Perhaps Are there any documents on this point regarding all the notes relating to tives to his book which he deposited in Uea 6Ûr - > in which he has ea reason - and which must be moved to the availability or the public that has - after his death.

He was told that an arrest warrant had been issued against him. by the Gomuiue, the author of Paru ue parait pas se avoir bien reported the reasons for this measure. At that time Ia- The former Garibaldian did not yet have the reputation of being a reactionary which he owed to the publication of SQU's work on U Gomiuuae. Evidem- ment, the order came from a ûacosta or some JJayer who wanted to punish the outrage (act against the Jews. The apparition, in the HevueUe^ Qeux Mondçn, of these few pages which tended to strip the The halo of saul that suits them so well had outraged Uraél. We find traces of these angers in the Alliance Bulletin where fious rogue that a speaker, to calm the agitation, declares that "we will take the necessary measures.

74 JEWISH FRANCE

After writing this, Du Camp was lucky to enter to the Academy. Whoever attacked the Jews, Coughnel, the scholar-poet, Capefigue, the author of fifty excellent lights, even Goncourt which is just beginning to come out of the shadows, was kept out of success; on a The Jewish press silenced him.

In the event that the thing is possible, where the enemy writer does not already have a reputation that protects him, we offer him simply a trap in a neighborhood where a Jewish commissioner is on duty and that's it.

The case, which makes it easiest to study the Jew, is the murder of the watchmaker Peschard in Gaen, which is inter-as resonant as a novel. There, all the accused are Jewish Germans. Minder says Graft, Gugenheim says Mayer. Louise Mayer all have a characteristic physiognomy. Salomon Ulmo, the forger, an honest merchant in appearance, actually affiliated with a gang of assassins, is particularly full of relief.

The word of the trial, the word of Jewish politics in all countries and in all ranks of society, is said almost naively by M⁵ Ulmo who responds verbatim to the president: "In our religion, whenever you We can make a Catholic again, it's a godsend.

Nothing is more regular than these ban-said; the assassination is only a speculation like a other and does not exclude domestic virtues. The The Ulmo family was admirably settled in Chaulmont, a town which contains quite a few Jews. The son, say the witnesses, was very dedicated to business, he did not did not associate with young people of his age and never went at the cafe; he had the most blind submission to his father. The most incredible parsimony reigned in this household, the expenditure hardly amounted to more than 35 or 45 francs. per month.

THE JEW 75

The Peschard affair dates back to August 30, 1857, it would be immediately stifled today. Jews are no longer pursued, under the current government, that on very special occasions rare and when it is absolutely impossible to do otherwise-ment (1).

It's to help them. Two years ago, a group-of shareholders summons Baron d'Erlanger and the debates are know many facts that are far from clean. What does the Minister of Justice to prevent the case from proceeding his course? He has a substitute declare that an instruction-tion is opened against Baron d'Erlanger and the court is forced to postpone the continuation of the debates.
Needless to say, no one has ever heard of the

(1) The banker Hirscli, who had failed to change his bank accounts, knew wrong, was condemned, it is true, by the 8th Chamber,
May 8, 188>, to a fine of 7,500 francs, but this fine relatively light had the character of a disciplinary punishment, of a family reunion. The banker was struck because he had addressed to Mr. Monleaux, that he had wanted to deceive a coreligiouoary.

Do you see me showing up at Rothschild with a banknote?
false 1 I am arrested, put in the police station, then from there to Mizas.
secret, I am questioned, I am asked about my accomplices, and where I am sentenced to a prison sentence.

In August 1885, two criminals convicted of the murder
•a trunk maker from rue d'Wngoulème, Gaspard et Meyer, are together at La Roquette. Eulraiué by his accomplice.
Gaspard was only an unconscious instrument, it was Meyer who had the idea of the crime and who coldly proposed its execution. It was Meyer who is pardoned and Gaspard who is executed.

76 JEWISH FRANCE

result of this instruction which ended with an order-dismissal of proceedings.

The evidence of this almost complete impunity of the Jews accumulate every day before our eyes.

Is it necessary to remind Parisians of the history of this poor little Spanish courtesan, overflowing with gaiety and vitality, having for the very idea of suicide a insurmountable horror which still seems to have happened thrown out of the window while she was thrown from above from the balcony by a Jew who had barbarian blood in him
the veins and who dreamed of a princely marriage? – To the simple inspection of the premises a child would have recognized the improbabilitywhite of this story.

In 1882, a woman, a Smyrniot, was arrested in a department store caught red-handed stealing. This woman

he himself married a Jewish actress who tires Paris from the noise of his advertisements. A relative of a Jewess, that's enough; one states that the thief suffers from cletomania, perhaps because she came from the land of the Kleptēs.

I am delighted, moreover, for her with this declaration-tion and I am not far from admitting with Dr. Lassègue that all female shoplifters are sick. Ima-Yet, you are a woman from a Christian family.
holding and stealing a ten-cent object from a store
Jewish and you will see if she will be a clelomane.

Sarah Bernhardt outraged by Marie Colombier's book
invades his rival's apartment with three companions, armed with a riding crop which was, as Wolff says, "the pre-of an illustrious warrior." She breaks everything in her path-wise. There is clearly a violation of domicile. Have we pursued?

THE JEW 77

If the General Ney affair has never been clarified, it is that there was a Jewess involved, and that it was feared above all the consequences of a big:friend lawsuit. The most bankruptcies of merchandise brokers Jews, who are nothing but scams of the kind the one Du Camp speaks of, are arranged. The goy is made to be robbed.

To cite only very recent facts, have we not not seen two Jews from Nfayence, the Bloch brothers settled in 1882, rue d'Aboukir, have goods delivered from all sorts and run away in September 1883, on the eve with a due date of three hundred thousand francs? In August 1884 - another German Jew, Mendel, established rue d'Enghien, disappears, taking it to the manufacturers of the Paris market for six hundred thousand francs worth of diamonds. Try to do this in Germany.

The countless Jewish money changers who take their foot off the gas with the savings of the poor devils who worked all their life to amass four pennies goes quietly like Baptiste. They are probably agents of police who carry their bags to the station, take their place at the ticket office and recommend to the train conductor not to not wake them up on the way (1).

(1) The robbery of the Post Office proves what can be said allow without being disturbed. This theft is committed in the elbows-everyone names the culprit; a journalist declares that he will designate the court if he is sued; it is indicated with details of when the annuity securities were traded Italian sent by a banker from Palermo. The high function, The accused person is not deprived of his liberty for a minute. It is said to the magistrate in charge of the inspection: "Don't push." Celtic

78 JEWISH FRANCE

The Jew Jean David, director of Crédit National, kidnaps more than three million to the unfortunate people who entrusted him their funds. Twelve hundred people accuse him of abuse of confidence and our incorruptible magistrates, who refused a three-day deadline to hold an action meeting—to the directors of the General Union against whom My only complaint, an absolutely unjustifiable complaint, had been filed, quietly let David leave. It is not that by default he is condemned by the eleventh Chamber correctional to ten years in prison, to 3,000 francs of amende and 5 years of surveillance which, you can tell me believe, he doesn't care.

When a search was made of this David's house, there was found affair" (textual) We obviously feared having to strike someone who had been an accomplice of Isidore Levaillant and Girerd and which had given an appearance of authenticity to the famous Petit Paper found in a wagon by affixing the stamp of the job.

The Jew Edouard Millaud, to put Gochery at ease, kindly to ask him a question in the Finance Committee Senate, in March 1884. Gochery replied that the loss was barely rises to 9.414 francs. "Very well," said Compère Millaud, "that must be all the more true since at the time of the theft you published a very detailed note according to which the amount of the values subtracted amounted to a million." This Jew is truly of a squinting discretion. In his place I wouldn't have been able to help ask the Postmaster General clearly how he explained himself that a thief could have known that the bag where the values, declared or recommended, to be distributed the next day, was placed, on the night of April 16 to 17, 1882, in a special cabinet, how we were able, without breaking this armored cabinet, to open, for take the bag, two locks with different keys.

The Post Office administration has become a veritable forest of Bondy. Some of the employees seize the correspondence for the black cabinet whose debates of the Saiul-Elme affair at the Cliambre have officially revealed the existence; the act opens what two hundred letters from deputies. An honest magistrate, who took it upon himself to stop him for the first time when he was going to flee, seized forty thousand francs from him; ten thousand francs, through excessive kindness again, were handed over to the wife of the wretch, who bears an illustrious name in the history of the arts, thirty thousand francs deposited with the registry. The Domaine refused to take the opportunity to return to the fines owed to him and, thanks to the steps of politicians, David was able to go and enjoy himself in peace abroad from the proceeds of its flights.

No doubt we still encounter, here and there, some naive substitutes who take their mission seriously and who do not hesitate to brand the groopers, even when they are Jews. Mr. Substitute Bulot had this courage in the affair of Brelay and a second Jean David who had been one of the aco-Gambelta's lytes (1).

(1} Mr. Paul de Caàsagnac, in joar de verve, traced this Jean David, who recently died and who was the leader of the Republican Party-biicaia in the Gers, a portrait already from the fantastic pencil of Callot.

"He is a tall, thin, gaunt, bossa-clad man with a face grimacing, resembling these Mephistophélès in oxidized green bronze which serve as fantastic candlesticks."

m At rest, he looks like a hanged man dried on the gallows.

"When he walks stooped, dislocated, we think we hear noises pirates, parchment rustling of the skin that fonten-read the old manuscripts, and it seems that his shin cast agnette on his fibula.

"Or is afraid that it will break, like a badly numbered skeleton and poorly assembled by 61s of iron that are too loose.

€ Morally, it is the result of electoral theft.

o He directed three times the invalidation of his competitor, my excellent friend Pejrusse, and by a sleight of hand which he himself declared inexplicable and unexplainable, he changed in one night, being mayor of the city of Auch, the attendance sheets, the bags of

_i\I. Jean David, he said, has a great political position. that, which required him to be all the more circumspect. When one has the honor to represent an electoral college, one is invested with divinity [which does not belong to you alone; we do not have the right to it to compromise in such promiscuities, and to be an oven to in turn the colleague of a Philippart or a Giros.

However bitter I feel in expressing myself thus, I am obliged to note that Mr. Jean David and Mr. Brelay have too much long ignored these duties. Mr. Jean David was at the Comptoir industrialist, at the Forges de Champagne, and chairman of the board .administration of the River Messageries.

At the counter, he directed the Press; he is also one of the members of the council who acknowledged at the hearing that we had paid the Prswe a fancy price. He saw the Euro-Bank finished European and create the Comptoir, he followed his fortune to the end; he has incurred a heavy responsibility, which you will appreciate.

These passages from a letter I received will make him understand-dream; it comes from a very humble shareholder: "If a poor person devil, like me and many of my comrades, had not seen on the issue prospectuses the known names of the deputies of his own district, Mr. Jean David, and especially Mr. Brelay, would he have subscribed? Certainly not. Giros and Adam that you continue as a scam, that is good I But don't forget I beg you, those who lend their names to attract the poor gogo! Jean David and Brelay. Here are the culprits! They kidnapped me! the 5,000 francs I had saved.

What's the point? Do you think David will control? head under this deserved stigma? Come on! he sneers ballots, and declared himself elected, three days after the vote which had pro-Peyrusse proclaimed.

"Besides, it's the custom in Âuch. In broad daylight, we fly the" dead, the absent, the unworthy, and we complete the work in faUlBatil the votes of conservative voters.

"As for monitoring the poll, don't try it, there are three hundred of them thugs who make a barrier between the ballot box and you, and (which serve as a screen for the electoral fraud, highly avowed and known to everyone there."

as Rayoal will snigger later when we tell him about the dead of Tonkin, he seems to say: "My religion or— give what you condemn; I have no use for yours appreciations. * He is sure, moreover, of impunity and con— defeated by acts punishable by hard labor, he gets out of trouble with a fine of five hundred francs, which he will probably not pay— no more than its namesake at Crédit National has paid his own.

You have to hear Macé tell you how the n.andats, that the prosecution gave him to execute them immediately. ment, were taken up by Caubet. "This man is Frank— Mason, you will not carry out this mandate!"

How could Caubet refuse anything to the Mason— nerie? What prosecutions would he not stop for the brothers? What infamies would he not slip into the file of the adver— saires? 11 years ago, sitting behind his poor small stationery counter on rue de Seine, he watched anxiously the noise of the shrill doorbell that was making ring a child who came to buy a pencil or a penny picture sheet. Today he squints fabulous salary, he is an officer of the Legion of Honour— and, in defiance of the regulations, he has, in his private service, a whole domesticity of agents diverted from their em— ploy; he said: "François, have our horses harnessed to our car to drive our house. •

This tacitly guaranteed impunity not only allows the Jews to tear the unfortunates' savings, she explains by hoarding this high cost of everything which weighs heavily on the poor.

Article 4'2D of the Penal Code, however, is formal, it punishes hoarding with a two-year prison sentence.

5.

82 JEWISH FRANCE

How is it then that Biedermann was allowed, who committed suicide in April 1883, at his partner's house, Mr. Carlin, to monopolize the oils of the whole world. It was the case or never to apply existing laws.

All the newspapers gave details of this operation— gigantic tion.

The commercial event of the week, said the Journal des

Rapeseed oil which had been holding everyone in suspense for several months European markets. A union had formed and, supported by major financial powers, had purchased quantities considerable quantities of oil in Paris, Berlin, Cologne, Hamburg and had, through its continual purchases, pushed the prices from 75 francs to 105 and 1 10 fr. The operation had thus acquired 45,000,000 kilos of oil. In recent times, the situation had become very tense.

These formidable hoardings, which so profoundly disturb—denies the economic balance and which gives to some individuals a frightening power, are one of the seized sides—leaders of the reign of the Jews. There are kings like the call—slow the Israelite Archives. Ephrussi, owner of the 9 marks, is now the roiduhlé as was Moses Friendlender, born in Oldenburg in 1822 and died in 1878 in San Francisco. Moses Ranger was the king of cotton, he in 1883, in Liverpool, went bankrupt for 750,000 pounds, 18,000,750 francs, Strousberg, real name Baruch Hirsch Sfraûesberg was the king of the railways (1).

(1) The Jews even have a king of baccarat, that's the nickname under which was known WR Deulch, a character still the fantastic existence which, after having been director for some time of theater, gagua peudaul twenty days in a row at the Washington Club and at the Press Club, all baccarat games. The total of sou gaiu amounted to 1,100,000 francs, which he lost again with the girl speed.

THE JEW 83

The audacity with which these people handle these operations huge, which are mere parts of play for them. is incredible. In one session Michel Ephrussi buys or sells for ten or fifteen million worth of oils or wheat. No find—ble; sitting for two hours near a column at the Purse and phlegmatically holding his beard in his hand jrauche, he distributes orders to thirty brokers who are busy—press around him the outstretched pencil. Sometimes Mr. de Gontaut—Biron, who is a regular at the Stock Exchange, comes to distract him by telling him the little scandals of the world. In the morning he is already gone to Chantilly to monitor his stable and make sure that Cunnington gave a good work to Serenade in the Lions Road; he had lunch at the Café Anglais until a hour 3/4; after the Stock Exchange he goes for a walk in the woods and the evening led the cotillion to the Faubourg Saint-Germain where, despite the sordidness of his birth, he is the best seen of Jews of Paris and truly />ersortna grata.

head to go up or down, which depends on the question of bread for thousands of human beings.

At present, it is unnecessary to insist on this point, no serious research is possible on statistics criminal of the Jews.

They even invented, for the Jews who had chagrins in less prosperous times for Israel, a kind special rehabilitation, ministerial rehabilitation, which is about as legal as trespassing by decrees. Formerly, a bankrupt was only rehabilitated when he had paid his creditors in full. Mr. David Raynal has changed all this in favor of Mr. Levy Bing.

This time it is one of the bankrupt's coreligionists, Mr. Aie-

84 JEWISH FRANCE

xandre Weill, who protested in a letter published by The event in June 1883, with all the more indignity that the writer, a fanatic Jew, but character right, is not fiddling with Jewry... and then he had lost 36,000 francs which, according to his picturesque expression, "had not been rehabilitated," any more than the twelve million from other shareholders,

"What I know," said Mr. Weill in closing, "is that Mr. Raynal, Lévy Bing's son-in-law, the linchpin of this unfortunate bank, is the brother of Mr. Raynal, who

at this moment is minister of I do not remember

more of what. »

This David Raynal, one of Gambetta's cronies, is himself even an extraordinary character. He appears in the Directory of Bordeaux from 1883 with a man named Astruc under the following tion:

Astruc (Fernand) and Raynal (David), shipping and transport agents stiaries, commissions, consignments, transit agency of the Suez Canal Company and vice versa, sardines in oil and tomatoes for export, rue Vauban, 10.

We can guess what independence this minister has, who is goods broker, had to bring in the negotiations with railway companies and others.

One day I received a visit from this Bing, a strong man old man. He too wanted to carry out his own little revolution; This was the language he was aiming for and he had published a large volume entitled Linguistics Unveiled, the conclusion of which was this one: "The use of the Phoenician language is essential necessarily." Don't believe in a fantasy. The need is such among the Semites to disturb everything, to take possession of everything, to impose on the defeated Christians their idiom, their customs, their way of seeing, that the project has many members.

THE JEW

85

A Mr. de Malberg sponsored this idea in the Moniteur Universel^ he proposes to found a polyglot academy-tes, 0 who will take care of the preparation of the grammar and of the dictionary of a future universal language, as simple, as intelligible to all peoples, and as re-as close as possible to Phoenician, the original language.

Before Lévy Bing, the Jew Alexandre Jacob, the author of the Maudity known under the pseudonym of Erdan, and who was long-corresponding time of TempSy had tried to demonstrate to enter the Revolutionaries of VA. B. C, that the orthograph was a prejudice and that one had to write as one spoke. This apostle of fonography, as he said, wrote according to his neo-graphic system an anti-Christian pamphlet; "Mystical France or a picture of religious eccentricities-gieuses of this time, " which earned him a year in prison. "Our spelling, he said in his preface, has serious faults, This is what all the people who do not deny it will recognize. do not split only out of stubbornness and bias.

This irresistible tendency to turn words upside down after ideas is an absolutely Jewish trait.

The Jews, - Jules Simon at the head, - are the most determined opponents of the death penalty, not for the pain itself, since it was frequently applied in the kingdom of Israel, but because the religious formalities-his necessities for the execution of a Jew would be lre?i difficult to observe in our time.

The body of a condemned man, in fact, is considered, before execution, like a corpse, according to the prescriptions

I law, a Jewish corpse must not be touched by Christians.

The execution in 1817, in a town in Alsace, of a Jew named Isaac, was probably the last to be passed according to the rules.

The ten main Israeli inhabitants of the city demand—were to go up on the scaffold to form the minyan, the public prayers to be made by old men over thirteen years old.

The culprit, freed from all ties, walked with a step firm, and was dressed in the sarguenesse, a white shroud in form of long blouse, in which the dead are buried (a similar shroud is always given as a gift of marriage to a husband by his wife). He wore the taleth, the veil linen that is worn during prayer and tefillin, phylacteries that are applied to the forehead and left arm. The chief rabbi of Winzenheim assisted him.

Isaac recited the vidoui one last time, the prayer that say the dying and that we recite on the day of the Great Pardon, and was tied to the plank by his coreligionists—res themselves.

Note that in reproducing these details, I am not obeying any ulterior motive of mockery. This assistance given to a unhappy by his brothers seems absolutely touching to me although we do not see Rothschild or Camondo coming to attack—dear one of their comrades on the board.

Let us add that the brotherhoods of penitents which have survived almost until our days were constituted precisely to help a poor devil gently take a step difficult. Under the empire, when an execution had to have instead, a service was sent to Wolff, as for a first; all the representatives were warned on the boulevards feeling the cosmopolitan interlopia, all the commies and ton—your hens. In the director's apartment, illuminated in giorno, we drank and ate in all the corners until—that at the time when the head of security came to tell the condemned—born: "Come on, old lady, now is the time." The arch—The Bishop of Paris never protested against these scandals. Did Darboy remember this when he was in turn

THE JEW 87

Today, Grévygracie jumbled together, between two caram-bolages, parricides, poisoners, assassins of old women and children. He is right. A society that supports the infamies that we have been witnessing for six years is deprived even of the right to punish.

In any case, it is appropriate to bring the respect shown closer by the Restoration government for the uses of a religion which is the very negation of ours, of the ignoble conduct that took place at Roche-sur-Yon, on September 22- In 1882, a public prosecutor affiliated with the Franc-Jewish Masonry. These scandalous scenes have not been forgotten, the magistrate drunk on the morning white wine he drank with the tellers, insulting, mocking, jeering at this man who will die, outraging the priest who wants to console this evil-happy, refusing the quarter of an hour that is asked of him for celebrate Mass. With its spelling mistakes, the letter written to his parents by Barbier to announce that we are not did not allow him to receive the Holy Viaticum before his torture, is one of the most poignant documents I have seen.

The poor priest, who had tried to do his duty and stood up to this unworthy magistrate, was naturally dismissed by Prefect Calvel, The public prosecutor was reward.

Do you want another example of Celtic tolerance?

88 JEWISH FRANCE

times almost exaggerated, Christians towards Jews? The February 6, 4875, that is, when the conservatives were again the masters, we learned that the Israeli students, named-many at the Lycee Charlemagne, were scrupulous about attending to the banquet because the meat was not kosher. The principal ordered the entire meal from a restaurant. Israelite taurateur, everyone ate kascjier and "the sons of rabbis, say the A7xhives, were able to take part in Saint Charlemagne's Day, which is the first of all powerful that it takes place at the high school whose patron is the great emperor himself.

Today, when we happen to be skinny on Fri-Holy Friday in a state-run establishment, the entire Jewish press opens its floodgates of blasphemy and of insults. "Paint a villain, he will anoint you; anoint a villain, he will appear to you.

The largest contingent is provided by Jewish women.

deniable and the Israelite Archives themselves recognized it.
same:

For a quarter of a century, they write, and we cannot choose a more distant date, moralists wonder with reason: why is it that in all the big cities of Europe we notice, among the women of ill repute, a greater one number of Jewish women than Christian women? This question is unfortunately highly motivated, because, in Paris, in London, in Berlin, in Hamtown, in Vienna, in Warsaw and in Krakow, in what we are agreed to call the demi-monde, in your public squares and even in brothels, we meet more Jewish women than Christian women, taking into account the proportion that exists between the two populations (1).

(1) Inraeli Archives, dated 1867.

►

THE JEW 59

The vice prevailing among Jewish women has a particular character-particular.

Without knowing whether the fact is true or not for Rappaporl, he is certain that a Jewish father and mother sell perfect-lie to their daughters when they are poor, while in our great cities, our poor, alas! are content, for want surveillance, to let them give themselves up to the first person who comes along. Jewish courtesans prostitute themselves for money, but coldly, without a shadow of drunkenness, with the intention of stopped getting married when they had accumulated a nest egg; They then marry an actor, a merchant, a financier-steel.

Last year, a band was judged in Vienna (Austria) of swindlers who, in association with girls, had made countless great ravages.

During the debates, the lawyer, responsible for the defense of a of the accused, the Jew Glaser says: • Every woman has the right to sell one's body and let go of it to get the best out of it possible party. ■

The revolted audience began to cheer.
President expressed his indignation, Glaser was however in the pure Semitic tradition. The Itierodules, the prostitutes tutions in the temples of Cyprus and Paphos are not rela-did not in any way affect the religion of Greece, they were

The prostitute, moreover, serves Israel in her own way; she accomplishes a kind of mission by ruining, by pushing dishonor the sons of our aristocracy; she is a mer-old instrument of information for Jewish politics.

The Jewish woman of the upper class lives in an oriental way, even in Paris, takes a nap in the afternoon, keeps I don't know what closed and sleepy She is a stranger to violent passions-

90 JEWISH FRANCE

slow, which so often trouble the heart of the Christian, that faith no longer keeps; it is preserved precisely by this absence of any ideal, which is the characteristic of Semites (1).

What is the great for women and for men? because of the faults of the Aryan, this eternal escapee from the world real? It is the aspiration towards the ideal that takes the wrong path, the dream of a being superior to all others, the chimerical hope of meeting a soul mate of ours, the need to live, even if only for a few hours, in the region of pure feelings, ardent loves, ten-infinite dresses. Neither the Semite, nor the Semite, has these exaltations.

You will never see a Jewish woman discussing the issues religious matters about which they are absolutely ignorant. read. The Jew perfectly understood the danger that I would have presented an instruction where Israel's blindness is would be quickly revealed and which, by comparison, would have allowed to the woman to see that the fulfillment of the prophecies-ties and the coming of Christlne may be the subject of doubt for upright souls. The heart of the woman not having the hateful stubbornness of the human brain would be went to the true God in a spontaneous impulse. The Talmud in-formally forbids women from any study of this kind: "He who teaches his daughter the holy law is also cut-

(1) What I say about the passions of love can be applied to drunkenness is rarer among Jews than among the Jews. The need to split, to excite, to violently stir up our whole organization-nism, is a basic form of the feeling of the ideal, it is the ideal fallen iusliaci.... The Jew is a stranger to these troubles of the soul. From that it is demonstrated to him that drunkenness brings nothing, he does not feel any not the desire.

ble as if he taught him indecencies." Thus speaks the Sota treatise (fol. 20 recto).

If she knows her religion only very superficially, the Jewess does not practice it less faithfully, even in the most hectic existence. See Miss Ada-Isaac Menken, that Rothschild, the Jewish Archives tell us, called the inspired Dehorah of his race and who had a moment the vogue that Sarah Bernhardt was to have later; she remained faithful to her faith. After playing thirty nights of following San Francisco, she suddenly stopped to celebrate the night of Kol nidre and to spend it in a miiiiian Polish. As soon as one attacked his coreligionists somewhere abroad, she sent an article to defend them to the Israelite from Cincinnati.

Here again we must praise the respect with which the Jews surround a child of their race, whatever path she takes. Follows she an actress, the world has never contemplated with such beauty; we swoon, we faint, we scream of admiration as soon as she appears. Does she return to life? Normally, all doors are open to him.

The rehabilitation of women, which appears at every step in the work of Dumas, since the Ideas of Affinity at Auhray until Denise, proceeds much less from Catholic forgiveness which blots out sin before God and leaves its remains effects before men, that of the Jewish theory infinite-kill more accommodating and which, on the condition above all that his sinner is a daughter of Zion, restores her all her rights in society. Even after the priest had pronounced, the words of absolution, the woman who had almost clashed in the civilization of yesteryear with the jealous susceptible Aryan's flexibility on the point of honor, to his need innate ideal that included only the immaculate flower.

JEWISH FRANCE

According to Dumas's expression which renders it very well, as always, what he means, virginity is only a capital which must be defended, but which can be reconstituted when it is lost; the fall is only a bad deal which we must wipe the slate clean without feeling obliged to grieve all his life.

you will always find this admirable solidarity which is the dominant virtue of the Jewish race which explains, which justifies, which almost legitimizes its success.

Let a filthy leaf bring an accusation against a Catholic, all other Catholics run away doing desperate gestures and saying: I don't know him.

On the bench of infamy, at the foot of the scaffold, the Jews do not abandon their own and do not allow anyone to insult about this "the big family." What more magnificent a good example of this intellectual courage than this Peschard affair that we mentioned earlier?

Mr. Bertauld, then professor at the Faculty of Law of Caen and lawyer of the Peschard family, had let himself go, in the face of the horror of the crime, to indignations which no longer rent not, he had energetically withered the ordinal practices—res to Israel.

This disappearance will compromise them, he had cried, but no matter, they are Jews, and they say all is lost except the capital. Also UImo father is offered to you in need as a holocaust for the salvation of the son, for the saved son will gather into hands always faithful... between Jews, the deposit of this fortune in lethargy—This precaution is natural to the race of these liomraes.

Ah! Without my great ideas of general liberalism, I would have tried to excuse our ancestors who hunted this race by means age.

THE JEW 93

Immediately a general madness arises, everyone gets involved; the Central Consistory and the Paris Consistory meet, we decide to contact the attorney general of Caen to have the offensive paioles removed; several members—members of the Consistory go to the Keeper of the Seals to complain about the presiding judge who let it go through without protest against horrific remarks, remarks that tended to imply that Jews love money.

This poor Mr. Berlauld, as we know, has never been considered a model of firmness of character; he was not made of wood of which we make the de Harlay and the Mathieu Mole, he was of the wax from which the Dolphins are made; we remember that after having declared in the past that the right of congregations was inalienable to criticism, he hastened to declare the opposite, in return for a well-paid position as attorney general at the Court of Cassation. Terrified by the outcry that was being leveled at him, claimed that it was the unfortunate watchmaker who had murdered the Jews.

In all things the Jews bring this beautiful zeal to the cause commune (1). The aristocratic public of Tuesdays applauds—

(1) I was telling you about Lévy Bing above. Read what the Israeli archives wrote about him in the wake of his misfortunes, during the celebration of Peçach.

The feast of deliverance was not an annual delirium, and for regions where the dawn of freedom of conscience has not him again, and for those whom misfortune overwhelms. And among these individuals, how could we not have a thought for the one who comes to succumb, author, we do not know, but in any case first victim of a major financial disaster which strikes at the same time and Paris and the Eastern region? It's outside of society from his orches and even separated from the society of his fellow men by knows how to break jokes at the French Theatre against religion. On the contrary, is a play performed where a Jew in an unpleasant position is shown, it is prevented by all means of representing it or we make it fall. This It is not only the Consistory that intervenes; everyone in his small sphere defends the race as best he can.

94 JEWISH FRANCE

A little after 1830, a performance was to be performed at the Gaieté play entitled The Pawnbroker where the usurer was a Jewish. A 17-year-old child goes to find the director who was silors \e virtuous Marty, the one who did not consent to play in a drama only on condition of giving his blessing at the end; he explains it to him. Marty cries hotly tears, blesses the young man, and the usurer becomes a chre— here.

Under the empire, a comic opera Don Pedro, where a Jew Spanish had a nasty role, unleashes a real tem— fart.

The Jew Fould went so far as to absolutely forbid the putting a Jew in the theater. In his remarkable work, the Cen— dramatic and theatre, Mr. Hallays—Dabot makes note the ridiculousness of this measure.

too rigorous judicial requirements, which Easter celebrated, the author of these Religious Meditations published ten years ago.

How gallantly these things are put!

How tender and Gn is all this? Is it possible to indicate pjus delicately that a coreligionist has a run-in with Tliémis? Suppose that he was convicted, not for wanting to take the money of others, but for having defended the Truth, I celebrate Peçach in a prison, what Catholic newspaper would think of sending me a memory? What confidante would speak of me in such affectionate terms?

THE JEW 95

The theatre, he writes, has its habits, its customs, its conventions. tions which are difficult to ignore; history has its types that cannot be deleted with the stroke of a pen... If the per-religious personality has the right to respect, a fundamental condition of freedom of conscience, the first of all freedoms, he had could not be the same as the essentially human type of a race which, as a race, belongs to criticism, to the novel, to the drama by its eminent qualities as by its natural defects-rels.

The ministerial instructions were nevertheless carried out-
The Jews disappeared from all the rooms. We went further far away, Shakespeare was castrated, so as not to hurt circumcised 1

The theater of the Ambigu-oomic, Mr. Hallays continues:
Dabot wanted to revive a drama, The Jew of Venice, performed in 1854.
The drama was an arrangement of Shakespeare's work.
What would become of Shylock, the immortal creation that revives
the centuries of oppression that the Jewish race had to go through, its struggles-your deaf against the Christian, his joys, his triumphs, his humi-connections, Shylock the striking figure whose sarcastic laugh and cries of despair illuminate a whole dark side of the life of the Middle Ages? The old Jew had to submit to the common law. The sov-Shakespeare's origins, the legendary side of the character, the era and the scene of the action, nothing saved Shylock. The fierce circumcised had to shed his characteristic physiognomy to become a common Venetian usurer. The play was revived under the title: Shylock or the Merchant of Venice.

Imagine that such mutilation to the work of one of the greatest geniuses of humanity, so as not to offend the Christians, and you can hear from here the protests of Paul Meurice and Lockroy.

But isn't all this Jewish? Isn't race and entirely in this contrast: now that they are the masters vomit all the excrement on us which Ezekiel had swallowed; when they were still only a tiny minority, they could not bear to be praised clait to them and immediately sang the great aria of the principles of 89.

I am not far from believing, with Mr. Alexandre Weill, that the religious and hygienic prescriptions of both the law of Moses exerts a favorable influence on the moral and physical health of the Semite. Circumcision is obviously a condom against premature debauchery
which dull the senses by awakening them prematurely.
Nothing is as wise and tender at the same time as the prevery faithfully observed cautions with which the Jews surround at certain times their companion:

The woman thrice holy and twelve times impure,

as Alfred de Vigny says.

Disturb the* physiology of women at certain times
more painful for the soul than for the body, it is to disturb the source of life, it is to harm generafuture tions.

While recognizing with what scrupulously the Jews observe these precepts, it must nevertheless be noted that all the religions have dealt with these questions. Books written especially for the ministers of the priesthood ini-holds to these mysterious secrets the priests who, by state, must be chaste, and allow them to respond to cer-certain questions of a very intimate nature. These manuals of the confessor, these books of moral medicine remained ge-generally hidden from view like medical books-ordinary cinema. It took a funny, dirty guy like Paul Beit, a bastard - to use an expression from Groncourt in Faustin - to translate one of these

THE JEW 97

manuals and take advantage of his time at the ministry to flood the countryside '^1).

Not pi as çu'exi pç'LtdcîvW* of crime, we cannot give no credence to the statistical figures on the i'clat civil war of the Jews. The figure of 45,000 Jews in France is de-finally adopted, absolutely nothing can be changed, it is reproduced in all the statistics. Paris would be absolutely full of Jews, which you would always be told ably to an examiner a student who, to this question: How-Well, are there any Jews in France? would not answer:

c 45,000, sir. >

The Jews themselves took the right step in cutting short of any embarrassing investigation: they had it decided by the government they run than in the censuses
we would no longer ask pei'soone for the cult to which he belongs.

We understand the interest of the Jews to stay as long as possible in a vague state in order to be able to argue their infer-numerical priority when it is proven that in any insurdirection, in any newspaper which insults Christians, in every bad deal, there is a Jew. 11 will be allowed to us nevertheless to say that they lie shamelessly in this circumstance as in many others.

(1) If I quoted what ben Belhera oa rabbi Yokanan said in iTaiiéYoiï/imu, or certain passages from the treatise Berakhoth relating to the moments where the woman is Nid'ah, Jewish journalists or those of Our colleagues who married Jewish women would tell me: "11 ja là uo a point of very intimate casuistry that is not discussed in public.
They applauded like the deaf when, in his book on the Jesuits, Paul Berl, the grand master of the University, raised all the questions.
these qiie?lion«.

6.

98 JEWISH FRANCE

As early as 1830, in a speech delivered in the House, the
On December 4th, Mr. André affirmed that distinguished men-fords among the Israelites brought the number of their French co-religionists.

In 1847, Mr. Gerfbeer, one of their former coreligionists-naries, admitted 100,000 French Jews; in 1867 or 1869, a speaker declared, in a meeting of the V Alliance, that There were 150,000 Jews in France (1).

The figure of 100 to 120,000 is given to us by the minutes of the audience granted by the Shah of Perse to the Committee of the V Israelite Alliance (2); minutes which has the character of authenticity, since it is signed,
in addition to President Adolphe Grémieux, Mr. Isidor, Chief Rabbi of France, Honorary President of S. -H, Goldschmidt, vice-president, of Mr. Leven, secretary, of
B. Allegri, G. Bedarride, Count of Camondo, Jules Car-

Michel Erlanger, Zadoc Kahn, chief rabbi of Paris, Léonce Lehmann, Jules Rosenfeld.

(1) The last census gives for Algeria, where the cult was
.mentioned, the figure of 33,663 naturalized Israelites, namely:

Department of Algiers: civil territory, Israelites naturalized by
'fi decree of 1870: 10,414; military territory, 610.

Department of Oran: civil territory, naturalized Israelites, 11,370; i military territory, 188.

Department of Gousianline: civil territory, naturalized Israelites,
10,006; military territory, 69.

(2) These close relations between the Israelite Alliance and the Siiali of Persia did not continue. On March 3, 1883, the Jew Isaac Davisch was found owner of the jewels stolen from Mirza Ali Klian, son of the late Grand Vizier.
In France he would have been decorated, but the Persians took it badly.
Isaac, put to torture, confessed that he had received the jewels from the Juit Haim Isaac. Or also arrested Barchi, son of Simon, chief of U

THE JEW 99

The Shah says: How many Jews are there in France?

– Si'-e, from 100,000 to 150,000.

– In England?

– A little less.

– In other European countries?

Mr. Albert Cohn, member of the central committee, replies: Sire, in Germany 500,000; in the States of Austria, 1,200,000: in Russia 2,400,000.

Faced with such a formal statement, it is difficult for us to...
to admit Mr. Franck's figure, which is moreover a of the few men of value of the Israelite party who are worthy of respect, since he never sought, nor direct-nor indirectly, to harm Christians, either in attacking their religion, either by stealing their money or by pushing them into speculation wars.

Mr. Franck writes, in an article in the Annales de philo-
Christian Sophie, reproduced in the Israelite Archives
Thursday, November 2, 1882.

In the current population of France estimated in figures round to 37 and a half million souls, are included sixty a thousand Israelites. That makes, if I am not mistaken, one Israelite out of six one hundred and thirty Christians or non-Israelites.

Although the emigration of Jews from Russia must have increased considerably increase the figure given by Crémieux, Mr. Théodore Reinach boldly asserts, in 1881, that the France contains only 63,000 Jews (1). h'Anjiuaire des Jewish community of Tehran and Chief Rabbi Abraham Hadji Baba. I managed to get them to give back 123,000 francs. Naturally. The Israelite Alliance cried out against persecution and could foresee the moment where we were going to declare war on Persia.

•'■') History of the Istac'tles, from their dispersion to our joun.

100 JEWISH FRANCE

Israelite Archives for 1885 says the figure fluctuates between 80,000 and 85,000, of which 50,000 live in Paris.

As we have already said, the removal of the indication of religion in censuses has made all difficult research. We only give, for information—very approximate statements, the statement of apple products—funeral pes of the Israeli cult, as it appears in the Statistics of Paris drawn up by Doctor Bertillon. In 1872, the proceeds from funeral services were 18,776 francs. 46 c. for a figure of 23,434. In 1880, it was 42,288 fr. 95 c. Which would tend to prove that the figure of Jews have more than doubled in Paris.

If there are already so many Israelites in Paris, judge for yourself. as it is likely that there is in all, as the aff— According to statistics, there are 45,000 Israelites in France (1).

In reality, this number of Israelites indicated by the product funeral directors represent only a third of the total

(i) One of the most comprehensive books published so far on the Jews: Zur Vohkunde der Juden, by Richard Audré (Leipzig, 1881), (there is a total of 6,139,662 Jews for the whole world; there is no still the visible errors are numerous, since the author accepts as exact the assertions of Davon, which we have demonstrated—the falsehood, and sticks to the figure of 24,319 Israelites for the department of the Seine, which is absolutely derisory for us

Malte-Brun estimates the number of Jews at 5,000,000, the Biblithat at 2,500,000, the Catholic Magazine h 3,260,000, Græberg and Pinkenton at 5,000,000, Hassel at 3,930,000, Hørchelman at 6,598,000.

The Masonic Universe gives a figure of 9 million Jews.
{Outline of Masonry, by César Moreau}.

Mr. Théodore Reinach, the author of the latest work published on the Celtic question, fixes the total figure of the Israelite population at 6,300,000, distributed as follows: 5,400,000 in Europe, 300,000 in Asia, 330,000 in Africa that, i2,000 in Oceania. It indicates 40,000 Jews in Paris, which is clearly below reality.

THE JEW! 01

to the most prominent Jewish element in Paris; it does not apply than to Jews who remained faithful to the practices of their religion.

The Jews who have retained all the vices of their race without even order those religious principles which are always a brake for evil, numbering in Paris at least 120 or 150,000 individuals; in the provinces, by 400,000 individuals at least also, which, connected to each other by the Façonnerie, settle in all the committees, lead the electoral body and create this artificial opinion that Ton takes for the true opinion.

It's the eternal story of the five or six hundred wretches, which were enough to impose the Commune of 93 on Paris, the Com-municipality of Hébert and Chaumette, the story of the delegates of the Jacobin Society, who came, at the time of the Terror, found a club in each city. These bandits, that nobody knew in the country, guillotined tran-quilling, to seize their property, old people,
young girls, old knights of Saint-Louis, cou-green with wounds, people that everyone loved and respected in the region.

According to the observations made in Germany by the Jew
Meyer, naturally very suspicious, the average life would be 37 years for Jews and 26 for Christians, which would give a difference of 11 years.

Let us also quote, if you wish, for information purposes,
some figures noted by Doctor Legoyt, from 1855
at 59,

According to him, at birth, the average life of the population general is higher than that of the population to the latter.

102 JEWISH FRANCE

As for Jewish women, their average life does not reach that of the entire population of the same sex up to the age of 60; but from this limit, it gives them becomes superior.

In the session of April 1, 1882, Doctor Lagneau presented to the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences a rather curious memoir on the movement of the population among the Jews, compared to that which is observed among Catholics and Protestants.

According to him, the increases in Catholics, Protestants and Jews are among themselves like 1, 2, 3.

Except in the Duchy of Baden, in Hesse and in Tuscany, the Jews, in all countries, in Russia, in Poland, in Prussia, in Austria, in France, present the fastest growing. In these last two countries, it is four times and seven times faster than that of the Catholic population.

* M, Lagneau, after having noted the continuous acceleration of the upward movement of the Jews, when a phenomenon opposite accuses himself on the side of the Catholics and the Protestants, goes into details.

The birth rate of the Jews, he says, is lower than that of the Protestants, Catholics and most other inhabitants in Russia, France, the Duchy of Baden, Tuscany and in many other countries. Equal to that of the Protestants in Prussia, it is higher than that of other inhabitants in Austria, in Hungary, Romania.

In all countries, in Russia, in Prussia, in France, in the Duchy of Baden, in Verona, in Austria, except in the Bukovina and in Galicia, the illegitimate birth rate of Jews is much lower than that of other inhabitants.

The Israelite Archives which have reproduced some of these figures naturally rave about the virtue of

THE JEW 103

Jews who have so few illegitimate children. It is permissible however to ask oneself . sui* what bases the doctor among the 500,000 Jews who certainly exist among us, since the Republic made our country a cow milk for the Semites, we persist in not accusing any of them days than a paltry figure.

Absolutely different from the Christian in his evolution
as a race and as an individual, the Jew is in conditions that are also very different in terms of health.

He is subject to all the diseases that corruption indicates blood: perifula, scurvy, scabies, flux. Almost all Polish Jews have the ploy and say so; many of elegant and well-dressed French Jews, to whom we will serve-have it too, but don't say it. All are careful not to resort to doctors who do not are not of their religion, - example that Christians should imitate well.

Among these insolent bankers, how many Authemans are eaten away,
like Daudet's character, "by filthy evil,
the spider with long, gripping legs, still alive, relentless on its prey." It's the evil of gold, one would think,
and to cure hereditary leprosy, they will immerse themselves in spending entire days in the mud of Saint-Amant.
Jewish gold thus returns to its source.

On the other hand, the Jew has a mei-veilleuse aptitude to get used to all climates. "There are Jews in all degrees of latitude, from the 33rd degree of the Southern Hemisphere, up to the 60th degree of latitude North, from Montevideo to Que-beak, from Gibraltar to the coasts of Norway, from Algiers to the Cape of Good Hope, from JafTa to Beijing!" Thus

10-4 LA. JEWISH FRANCE

cries one of them, seized with a transport of admiration.

By a phenomenon that Ion has observed a hundred times in Middle Ages and which reasserted itself at the time of the cholera, the Jew seems to enjoy immunity from epidemics particular units. It seems that there is in him a kind of permanent plague, which protects him from the ordinary plague; he is its own vaccine and, in a way, an antidote alive. The scourge retreats when it feels it (1)!'

The Jew, indeed, smells bad. Among the most wealthy, he there is a smell, feior judaïca, a whiff, -Zola would say, which indicates the race and helps them recognize each other.
The most charming woman, by the very perfumes of which she covers herself, justifies Martial's words: qui bene olet

This fact has been noted a hundred times. "Every Jew stinks," said Victor Hugo who died surrounded by Jews.

In 1266, the great poet (2) recounts a memorable confer-

(1) See on this subject two excellent articles from the Scientific Review-than April 23 and May 14, 1881.

During the epidemic of 1884, while in Marseille he was living there
1,800 deaths in a population of 360,000, the population Israelite, amounting to about 4.00C iuduvidus, provided only one cliiilVe of*? deaths. Of these 7, 2 people had been ill for a very long time a long time, and another aged 99.

In England, this singular immunity was also observed.
Mr. Jidles' report, addressed to the English Parliament at the time of cholera of 1853, contained this: "I have every reason to affirm that the" Jews have suffered much less, proportionally speaking, than the very class beyond the population; they only presented thirteen cases per twenty thousand people, or three quarters per thousand, slums that by mid-September the death toll had risen to twelve one thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven for the Metropolis, which makes six out of thousand; from one district to another the proportion varies from one to twenty-nine per thousand.

(2) Literature and philosophy mixed.

THE JEW 100

rence ►*took place before the king and queen of Aragon between the scholar Rabbi Zéckhiel and Brother Paul Cyriaque, a very learned Dominican.
jiiand the Jewish doctor had quoted the Toldos Jechut, the Targum, the Archives of the Sanhedrin, the clothed Nissachon, the Talmud, the queen ended up asking him why Jews stank.

The question of why Jews stink has longtime preoccupied many good minds (1). By means At that age, it was believed that they could be purified of this smell by baptizing. Bail claims that this fact is due to natural causes-real and that there are still blacks in Guinea who exhale-slow an unbearable smell. Banazzini, in his Treatise of the Craftsmen, attributes the stench of the Jews to their uncleannesslent and their immoderate taste for goat meat and 2 goose hair.

Nephritis, such is the relentless disease of the Jews.
this long-persecuted people, still living in the middle of perpetual trances and incessant plots, shaken

besides, that professions where brain activity is alone in play, the nervous system ended up being altered.

In Prussia the proportion of the insane is much higher strong among the Israelites than among the Catholics (2\ while that we only encounter 24.4 out of 40,000 Protestants, 23.7 on the same number of Catholics, the Israelites accus- sent, out of 40,000 inhabitants, 38.9.

(1) Martial compares the breath of the observers of the Sabbath fast- that "ax jrniasLQes which exhale the sulphurous vapors of the Aibula to the CHsaque of an old soldier, to the smoke of the extinguished candle 'the la Leda's lamp, to the corruption of the viper's bed, to the smell that clear the fox.

(2) In Germany, there are special establishments for treating Jewish neuroses. We find in the Archives the following announcement- boasts, where the Talmud, singularly mixing with all the allure of the

-10H THE JEWISH FR/VNCE

In Italy, there is one lunatic for every 384 Jews and one for every 778 Catholics.

Dr. Charcot made a statement on this subject in his course at the Sal- Petrier, the most curious revelations about the Jews Russians, the only ones we can talk about, because the others carefully hide their illnesses in their palaces. The Israelite Archives, by noting (this territorial detail- Lie, declare that this fact can be said without comment. and increases still further, if possible, the pity which inspires- rent the unfortunate Israelites of Russia. » So be it! That the ^^Brain sick people should get treatment! But for- 'what to trouble constantly by the trouble of their own es- took people who lived peacefully and happily so much that the race of Israel did not actively mix with their existence. Whether it is Hertzen in Russia, Karl Marx or Lassalle in Germany, we always find as in France a Jew preaching communism or socialism, asking that the property of the former inhabitants be shared while their coreligionists, who arrived barefoot, get rich and are not willing to share anything whatever it is.

This neurosis seems to be transmitted even to those whose only the mother is Jewish. Dumas, at the age of thirty, has gone through a terrible crisis in this respect.

there are all these millionaires tortured by illness.

Bockenheim – Frankfurt am Main

Health Center

for neurotic hraeiies.

“Hydrotherapy establishment, electrotherapy, at the foot of the faanus, near a charming forest, arranged with co.ifort and according to the doctrine of the Talnuid.

THE JEW 107

Who does not still remember Feghyne, this foreigner received at the Théâtre-Français because she was of Jewish origin, tan-say that a French woman and a Christian who would not have had more talent that she would not have been even admitted in the concierge's lodge? Wasn't she devoured by the neurosis, long before the attack broke out, the bizarre creature that Turgenev painted under the name of Clara Militch?

Sarah Bernhardt, with her macabre imaginations, her white satin coffin in his room, is obviously a sick person (i).

(1) Regarding Sarah Bernhardt's mortuary tastes, let us recall a story that is pretty. At the time of the first representation of Fædora, one of our colleagues, Mr. Félicien Cbampsaur had imaginé to give in his newspaper a reproduction of the famous photograph of the actress lying in her coffin. The idea did not please Sarah, and she ordered the seizure that a friend was char<!c to have the operation. Boiling with ardor, he rushes to the clerk-saire who was precisely the one who found charming that the day from Mi-Carôme a caricature of the Christ on the cross.

– Commissioner, a cartoon has just appeared infamous.

– What are you singing to me? A poor old priest that we will have turned into ridicule, a religious person represented in a indecent attitude. That's freedom, sir. Long live freedom!

– Do you think about it? Do you know who we dare to attack? Jewess, to Sarah!

– Attacking a Jewess, Sarah! What are you telling me? I understand, I grasp everything, I am grasped myself....

And abandoning the prisoner he had to interrogate, he rushed to crack down on all seditious specimens.

This brings to mind the no less amusing adventure of Camescasse.

When the Jews of Russia settled in the Golden City, They immediately thought of opening an oratory, and certainly it was

108 JEWISH FRANCE

Do not lose sight of the fact, however, that even in the con- the most delirious ideas of the Jew, there is always a ulterior motive of personal interest, of lucre; even when he loses his mind, he saves the car, Sarali Bernhardt with his eccentricities are advertised. Gambetta, even in the most bizarre expeditions, such as Tonkin, has always aimed to make money, to walk with a syndicat.

This neurosis, the Jew ended, strangely enough, by the corn – communicate to our entire generation. Jewish neurosis will have played its role in the destinies of the world. For twenty years that the Semites hold, as Disraeli said, the ills of secret diplomacy, and that they have reduced the embassies – real people in the state of parade characters, for twenty years that they have been leading European policy, this policy has become truly unreasonable and insane. The

I will not blame them. Whatever God you pray to, he is always good to pray.

Unfortunately Camescasse was not warned, and when he read But the file: Opening of an oratory, he read taken by an in 'Jigualioi» that I conceive an oratory... a chapel, he cried in dismay! Caubet who had just entered had a congestion at this word of cappell. "Uue 'Capelle! A capelle!' he crooned between two copses. 'We'll give them one.' quickly close their cap and put seals on it!"

The employee who had brought the folder tried to place it in a word.

– Allow me, gentlemen, he stammered.

' – Allow this!' Caubet shouted, 'what would Clémentine say to the ami-tié and the Aiyiis of Si?iaï f the employee.

—Jews, murmured Camille, Russian Jews again, friends of Mr. Baron de Rothschild! Ah! the good people! that they pray at their ease, wherever they want, however they want! I had believed that he sat with citizens and French people....

THE JEW {09

Bismarck's words: "Paris is an inhabited madhouse by monkeys" applies perfectly to the Power and Europe. There is no longer any trace in the councils of sovereigns of a conscience, nor even of a reason of State law.

The story of the last few years is the world produced by madmen reasoning, ratiocinating, having, as it arrives on the eve of the supreme crisis, an apparent logic which is disconcerting at first glance.

Neurosis, by the very fact that it takes away from the Jew everything feeling of modesty, any reflection, any notion even of the enormity of what he dares, puts into circulation types who are nothing like those we have seen before.

There are in this order improvisations of unheard-of fortune, extravagant destinies, wagers won against common sense before which we literally remain confused. The Jew always goes forward, confident in the Mazzini

What is Mazzini? It is neither the ancient Fatum, nor Christian Providence, it is good fate, luck, the star; all Jewish life seems a realized novel.

Take Ms. de Paiva; she was born into a Jewish family. Polish, the Lachmanns (1), she marries a poor little

(1) Lamarquise de Noailles, in first Dukes, Countess St. Hilaire, was also a Lachmann without us knowing if the family is the same. This marriage alone explains that a man who carries an illustrious name serves the government of decrees.

In this family again what terrible indication there would be to collect, from the point of view of heredity and transmission of Jewish neurosis!

The death of Marshal de Mouchy-Noailles, one of the ancestors of this republican, is one of the most moving episodes of the Revolution.

li0 ^ JEWISH FRANCE

tailor from Moscow, and leaves him to come on foot to Paris seeks adventure. She knows the Parisian streets all the extremities of misery, all the horrors of venal love; exhausted, she falls one day from starvation in the Champs-Élysées and swears to herself that it will be lacquer will rise its hotel when the fate, in which it faith, will finally have favored her.

She married a Jewish pianist with her left hand, the famous-Bre Herz, who presents her at the Tuileries as his wife legitimate; she is rejected, she promises to take revenge. Herz, ruined and driven out by her, fled to America; she married so, this time regularly, the Marquis de Paiva who burns his brains out shortly after. Mistress of Count Henkel,

The marshal was nearly eighty years old, he was guillotined with his wife who was sixty-six and didn't even have a face !in the indictment. "When the marshal was called, says a witness, in the History of Prisoners, to lead him to the Gonc-ergerie, he prayed to the one who told him that he had to go down to the registry not to make any noise, so that the marshal does not notice-didn't know about his departure. She had been ill the previous days, and "she was, in the remedies. - She must come too, to answer him-they say, she's on the list, I'll warn her to come down. - No, the marshal replied; since she must live, it is I who I will warn her. * He immediately goes into the kitchen and says to her: "Madam, he must descend; God wills it; ad. will go his designs. You are Christian. I am going with you and I will not leave you." The new The news that Mr. de Mouchy and his wife were going to court was repeated in a few moments in all the rooms. The rest of the day was for the prisoners a time of mourning. Some moved away from their passage, not feeling the strength to bear this spectacle; others, on the contrary, lined up in a hedge, wanting to show them a last-their respect and their pain for the last time. Someone raised the veil and said: "Courage, Marshal!" He replied, "Where did your iron come from?" me: "At fifteen, I went on the attack for my king; at almost eighty, I will go up to the scaffold for my God!"

THE JEW 1 1 l

she handles the wine with both hands; she receives men politicians, writers, artists of a certain order in this magical residence on the Champs-Élysées whose splendours are only equaled by those of the seigneurial land of Pontchartrain. With the intelligence of his race that doubles before the war, Prussian espionage against us, what make it easy for him to have relationships with many celebrities politicians who came to tell us about our affairs while having dinner. She has prepared the ruin of the Empire, she rises up in the slums that collapses, there she is, Countess Henkel of Donnesmarck, buying the diamonds of this empress who rejected him-sée, having it rebuilt in the depths of Silesia, by Lefuel, the architect of the imperial palaces, this Tuileries Palace from which she was expelled.

An artist to her fingertips, this peasant girl has the instinct of all elegances, the intuition of art in this that he has most refined. Eaten away by neurosis, she does not does not taste a moment of rest in the midst of all these enchantments; she is obsessed with the idea that we want to as-murder her to steal her diamonds; she forbids it under penalty of immediate dismissal that no gardener is in his park when she walks there. This woman who was hungry and which belonged to all, is more despotic, more severe than a Archduchess; she reigns over the immense staff of her domesticity the most rigorous discipline, she One day he chases away an unfortunate butler who had gotten lost started to smile when he heard a witty word at the table. Then She died at the age of 56, in her Tuileries de Silésie, from a brain congestion.

Gather all these hastily thrown traits, try to establish-bring some order to the twists and turns of this career

i\2 THE JEWISH FR.VNCR

strange, and from this whole will emerge a figure of a very special essence: a Jewess.

What novel is there, even that of this son of an hon-grois, who was Midhat Pasha! Pasha, he begins, according to the use, to serve his own, and organizes with Camondo and Sassoon, the Jewish schools of the Orient, then he strives to ac-climater revolutionary doctrines in the country of stillness, and finds a way to disturb even these Turks motionless and impassive, undisturbed by anything; he creates the party of Young Türkiye, and he has as confidant and for agent in Europe named Simon Deutch (1), orienta-list, political broker, standard bearer in 1848 of the Legion academic from Vienna, involved in the Arnim affair, living at the both in the chancelleries and in the brasseries of the district Latin. It is under the eyes of. Midhat in, his konak of banks of the Bosphorus, that the bloody drama takes place in which Abdul-Azis is assassinated; he is disgraced, recalled, sentenced to death, and finally relegated to Jeddah near,

which*decided the sultan to have him poisoned.

There are thousands of similar existences among the Jews.

If you want to see a fine specimen of a Jewish statesman, Take Naquet and study him. He is a restless man; young, he gives the method of a fulmi-cotton to blow up the cities, he published his book Religion^ Property, Family, in which he claims community of property and wives-

(1) Another Deuleh is one of the important leaders of the nihilist party. Arrested in the Grand Duchy of Baden, he appeared in court in October 1884 before the Odessa Court Martial, which sentenced him to thirteen years of forced labor.

THE JEW 113

my (1); in his mature age, he converted to opportunism, and puts himself, under the leadership of a Barnum who directs the tours, going from town to town preaching divorce. Today today he turns to Prince Napoleon (2).

Even having arrived, the Jew always remains in some way mercanti, trickster, trickster. Naqnet ne si; Not content with turning society upside down, he invents a pomade to make the hair shine, which he made stand on end the heads. In the same issue of the newspaper that contains a speech of the politician, we see - singular mixture and which would have surprised Guizot - an announcement of the regenerator of the hair, which follows in the footsteps of Sarah Félix, "the sister of the great Rachel," as the pros say-pectus.

CHANGE OF HOME

KACASSAR XAQUET

THE ONLY VEGETABLE OIL RECOGNIZED AS INFALLIBLE

TO BEAUTIFY AND REGENERATE HAIR

1, PLACE DE l'opéra, FORMERLY PALAIS-ROYAL, 132

(1) "We recommend this work," says editor Ki^leiiiat kers, the bookseller who is both ranc-maçoanic and pornogr.iphiriue, in tuules people who want to know in depth the philosophical opinions-ques of the famous promoter of divorce in France. This book has J uuais or his equal in this kind of ideas; he is of a boldness and of a

laughter and in the family, and defends ideas that he never dared to bring to the French tribe... »

(2) "Whatever happens," Naquet declared to a reporter, "a month from November 1885, the Republic will live; if necessary, to save it, We would take the Bonapartists with us... Oh! there is Bonapartists and Bonapartistes, and not all of them are of the same wood as Mr. de Cassagnac.

"I am not saying," he added, "that Prince Napoleon is easy to be swallowed by all the republicans; but if it comes to that: War is like war! Anything rather than the monarchy!

, ■114 LK JEWISH FRANCE

This apparently baroque life, and which certainly does not hardly resembles the life of public men of old, has its unity, however. Chemist, lecturer, deputy, Senator, Naquet nonetheless remains the Bulwark of Israel.

Divorce, for example, the guUtin, is an absolute idea-Jewish language. Only one Catholic speaker dared to declare it, This is Ms. Freppel; in the session of July 19, 1884, it was cried: "The movement which will lead to the law of divorce is, in the true sense of the words, a semi-movement tick, a movement which began at Mr. Crémieux, for finish Mr. Naquet. " He said to this dishonored left: "Go, if you wish, to the side of Israel, go to the Jews! |_We remain on the side of the Church and of France.

Ms. Freppel perhaps did not know how to say it so completely-lie the truth. To be sure to have the law that suited him, which adapted to its institutions, Israel had the project prepared by the rabbis.

It was the former rabbi of Brussels, Astruc, who wrote the provisions of the law and dictated them, in a way, to the Chamber of Deputies.

"The divorce commission," Naquet wrote to Astruc on this subject, accepted your amendment, she admitted that (article 29o) "the divorced spouses, for whatever reason, will not be able to no longer meet if, since the divorce, one or the other has contracted a new marriage (1). »

(1) Brussels Review cited by the Archives Israélites, volume 41.

For all this question, consult the rabbinical code: "Ehen the jurisprudence of the Court of Algiers, and comparative notes of French law, Muslim law by E. Sarilajjra, president of the

THE JEW 115

If honest, eloquent, believing men like Mr. Lucien Brun or Mr. de Ravignan were aware of these questions (1), or if they had the courage to treat them frankly, they could have placed the debate on its proper ground-rain. They wouldn't have changed the vote obviously, but trtbaral of Mostaganem, and Mr. Charleville, grand rabbio of the pro-Vince d'Oran.

The book Eben Haezer includes five treatises: SW0//1, allions; Kidushim, of marriage; Ketubot, of fraud; Guiltin, of divorce; Ytboum, of the levirate.

Mr. Schwab, who has undertaken a very considerable work, the tra- The complete duclioiii of the Talmud^ has arrived at the tractate Guittin, but it has only published the beginning of it.

According to the Tract Ketubot, one can divorce a wife without him to return her dowry: if she gives her husband forbidden food; if she deceives him about the time of her menstruation; if she does not duty in relation to the Hallah; if she walks naked outside; if she runs into the street. Aba Saiil also says if "lie insults the parents of her husband in her presence. R. Tatfon adds if she is shrill. We understands by it, according to Samuel, the one who, speaking in her house, raises his voice so much that his neighbors hear him. According to Rab, it's only the woman we hear from another room in his marital relations.

(1) M. de Gavardie, a contagious caihotique:^ however, had a excellent opportunity to note the invasion of the Jew among us, during the discussion of the Freedom of Money Act, a law Jewish again and which is the legalization of usury. In his speech of December 1, 1885, he spoke of Moses, but he did not say a word of the Rothschilds and the Jewish banks; also this speech which would have could have been interesting, from the point of view of the social question, did it not no meaning; it answers nothing.

Mr. de l.areinly who is, I believe, at odds with the Rothschilds after having been very good to them, did not say a word about them either. No Catholic has discussed this law in a lively and current way. which closes with the triumph of Israel a struggle which has lasted since fourteen hundred years between the Church and the Jew who wants to despoil the Christian; none recalled the courageous campaign undertaken formerly against the Jewish bankers by the Franciscans, the blessed

H 6 LA FRANCE JLIIVE

they would have shown the action of this race which, not satisfied to make a prominent place for itself in a society that it did not create, wants to modify all the customs and all the laws from his personal point of view; they would have pronounced one of those speeches that make thinkers think, that pre-parent public opinion to the measures that France will be obliged to take to take under penalty of perishing. Instead, they contain in pious generalities, which have no effective because they do not apply to any reality. understands the disdain felt for opponents as cloudy as men like Naquet.

Not content with having introduced divorce into the Code Jewish, Naquet intervenes to defend the interests of the tri-potters in the discussion on transport companies maritime, by opposing Raspail's proposal to request as long as members of Parliament are not part boards of directors.

Finally Naquet serves Jewry in the question which concerns him he holds most dear, he has the House vote to repeal-tion of article 1965 of the Civil Code.

Until now, when an unfortunate man had acquired the proof obvious that it had been stolen from the Stock Exchange as in a wood, loaded like in a gambling den by Israeli financiers-lites, he had the resource of taking refuge behind the exception of play; he sometimes saved a piece of his heritage, his daughter's dowry, the bread of his old age. Thanks to the law passed at Naquet's instigation, the unfortunate goy will have to give Shyllock his last penny. Everything will go through it. |

Before 1883, French law had at least the modesty to not to interfere in the turpitudes of the Stock Exchange, she said to the Nucingen who wanted to finish off their victims^

tE JEW in what she said to the girls who were after them prey: "We don't know of such jobs! Come on! debate your nasty affairs away from the courtroom." From now on she will take the thief's side and lend him a hand to strip naked the robbed person who had kept his hair-bet (1).

has considerable authority for it: It is approved by Mr. Dollfus, who says the Gaul (2), "has a head sui generis, » by M. de Verneuil, successor of Mr. Moreau, "very brown skin, with a well-defined line made in the middle of the head," by Mr. Alfassa, "a gentleman with blue eyes and a blond mustache whose words retain a slight exotic accent. » It is not less than the most basic probity of buying only

(1) In every question the Jew is guided by exclusive thought to be useful to his own. See what happens for the booklets of our French industry, ruined by foreign competition, let out a long moan. Our French workers cannot find more work, because 100,000 German workers, 200,000 workers Italians also give them terrible competition; our chefs 'industry is stripped, not only of its processes, but even their trademarks by people they have welcomed and employed in their homes.

What is the Jew Edouard Miilaud doing? This false cosmopolitan who, at .fund, is only concerned with the interests of his race, has only one desire, that of making invasion easier for foreign Jews; in the Senate session of July 19, 1883. he requests the suppression of this hvrel which is a guarantee for the French worker as well as for the boss, who allows any director of the establishment to go taking into account nationality, origin, work history—whom he will admit into his home, initiate into the secrets of his work and mind his business.

(2) Gaulish of July 10, 1884.

7.

as JEWISH FRANCE

what we can pay and to sell only what we can—sede (1).

As soon as there is a game, the settlement of bets is a matter of appreciation. What would be, for example, the appreciation of Mr. de Verneuil, the successor of Mr. Moreau who had a moment of fame, in the following case. I do an operation in good faith, calculating all the probabilities; the stockbroker's trustee receives from a minister, official title, news that his duties oblige him to bring it immediately to the attention of the public, he keeps it graciously hidden during part of the Stock Exchange and communicates it only to Mr. de Rosthchild. Mr. de Verneuil would he believe he was legally obliged to fulfill his obligations

I add that it is difficult to explain that agents exchange rates complain about the losses they suffer from the gambling operations since they cannot lend themselves to it. The law is formal, indeed.

(1) There is, in everything that the Jew does or says, a kind of greed lateute, of imperceptible mystification of an indefinable character which is not summed up by the burst of loud laughter, nor by the joke-harshness, but rather by a light irony gently drowned in the look, that something certain women have who seem blent whisper: "Don't I, darling, lie well? I bet that you believe what I say?" The "gentleman with the blue eye and the "blonde mustache" must have looked like that when he spoke of the need to keep one's eugagemuis. What is certain is that In April 1885, Camoudo's son-in-law and accomplice chose precisely the day when the law was promulgated to ease the pressure on leaving for twelve million differences, that the father-in-law refused energetically to pay for any invitations that might be made to him not to let the spotless coat of arms of such a noble woman be tarnished family.

THE JEW 419

■ a It is forbidden for exchange agents to lend»* their ministry for stock market games on any effects whatsoever. » ^Law of year IV and year X.)

"The stockbroker must have the bills delivered to him in advance that he is responsible for selling or the sums required to pay those that he is obliged to buy. • (Summer from 27 Prairial to X, article \3.)

Suppose, under these conditions, that the exchange agents may lose something, would be to admit that they brazenly violates an existing law. It is a thought malicious that it is forbidden to have towards such hon-some people.

These modern existences that have nothing in common with our past existences, these strange destinies led bridle-dejected in the midst of excesses and noise with a a kind of half-crazy, half-cynical audacity ends almost always in drama.

The Jew attracts drama, he carries it with him into the countries that it invades and into the houses where it slips.

Mixed marriages, which are called in the world:

good results.

By a singular law, there are few families who have allied to the Jews in an exclusive and more or less crudely confessed greed, on which has not fallen a catastrophe. A Moskowa marries a Heine and you are not unaware of the gloomy conditions in which unfortunate perished. A Duke of Richelieu also marries a Heine and will die prematurely in the East. The daughter the Duke of Persigny marries a Jewish brewer from Prague, Friedman and sits with him on the police benches. correctional. Oil enters Poli's house-

120 JEWISH FRANCE

gnac, one of whose members married a Mires. The dishon- neur and ruin enter the Panouse with M'^^ Heil-bronn. A Crémieux, relative of the president of V Alliance Israelite, is murdered after a monstrous scene debauchery by two barrier prowlers. The lawyer Bernays is struck by the Peltzer brothers. The son Fould publishes under the Empire of libels against his father, and sadly ends a brilliantly begun life. The Jew Merton kills himself after to have won millions.

Count Batthyani marries the daughter of the Jew Schossberger, he was killed in a duel by Rosemberg and his wife remarried a few months later.

Count Wimpfen, whose mother is a Sina, burns his brains in Paris where you know, after having written to the Jew Hirsch a letter more dishonorable perhaps than a such death.

In February 1883, a relative of Naquetqui rege- nère the scalp, Daniel Naquet, one of the most opulent of the South, throws itself from the second floor of the house that he lived in Carpentras, with his brother and broke the skull. As he breathes his last, his brother, Justin Naquet hangs himself.

In October 1885, the wealthy Hamburg banker geois Primsel, the associate of the Dreyfus of the guanos, throws himself into the Seine from the top of the Pecq bridge.

Sudden death is, however, more common among Jews that suicide although it increases in astonishment- Nantes proportions which attest to the progress made at them neurosis.

Paradol, also of Jewish origin, praised, overrated, praised great man by Freemasonry and going to kill himself at

THE JEW 12f

Washington, ending tragically, at forty-one years old, a noisy, artificial existence which, by its hollow side, makes think of that of Gambetta, with less natural noise—really!

Here again, the fatality peculiar to the race falls impainfully on this family, annihilates it, uproots it sort of. The son kills himself at twenty, the daughter to whom Ms. de Rothschild, who was very good in this circumstance, since it was one of his own, had offered a hundred thousand francs for her dowry, did not want to face life; she went seek refuge at the convent of the Ladies of the Retreat against so much pain.

We naturally only see events that happen pass up or who owe some circumstance a particular impact; to be complete, it would be necessary ^collect the countless bourgeois tragedies, the facts which occur in more modest spheres or everywhere the Jew, even when he does not do evil voluntarily, drags after him I don't know which Ananké.

The Jew who, in Hegel's words, "was thrown out of nature, "has had a beautiful, by prodigies of cunning and patience, to impose himself on social life, he is chased out of it every time instant as if by an invisible force.

The drama like this ancient Fate which, irresistible and veiled, advances under the porticoes of the palace of Mycenae, has already forced the door of this proud dwelling of Rothschilds, who believed they had made a pact with Fortune. All of Paris talked about the suicide of Baron James (Jacob) de Rothschild. Although they made him pay dearly for this death to Christians, the Rothschilds are not unaware that blood of a suicide brings bad luck to a house and that the curse—tion is upon them. They feel, in the midst of their celebrations, flitting—

122 JEWISH FRANCE

over them like a large black bird beating its wings before falling on its prey.

The characteristic of the drama that pursues the Jew is to be al—mysterious days. We almost never know why any Rothschild envoy comes to the magistrate responsible for instruction, appoints himself master, has the pieces to the fire, while the magistrate, if he is new bed, kiss the floor where the envoy of such a great monarch—who deigned to set foot. I defy you to find anything—see on the trial of Michael the assassin, who was tried under the Directory, or to know the truth about the Ney affair, on the Wimpfen affair, etc.

The race, moreover, although organized in conditions special for conservation, is no less old.

Legend has it that a Sicilian herdsman from the time of the King William found in the ground a flask which contained liquid gold, he drank it and returned to youth. Gold has not performed this miracle on the Jews. Examine the specimen which dominates in Paris, political intermediaries, stockbrokers, journalists, you will find them consumed by anemia. eyes, which roll feverishly in yellow-colored pupils grilled, denote liver diseases; the Jew, in fact, has on the liver the secretion produced by a hatred of eighteen hundred years.

There are some very curious and striking facts of atavism; the race, by refining itself, returns to the first type, to the pure oriental. Look at the young Isidore Schiller, the father is German, fat, blond, chubby; the son, hunched over himself—even, with a very small head, looks like two drops of water to these squat captives of the bas-reliefs of Nineveh; it is a true contemporary of Menashe and the Yoyaquim.

THE JEW

123

Most, I repeat, are anemic at last degree In Paris, they live in airtight apartments—closed where a sur- atmosphere always reigns heated; in the huge hotels of Vienna, we see them search for corners, gaslit crypts even in broad daylight. Press these little fingers between your fingers. born in spindle, they still denote certain inclinations of the breed, but they no longer have the strong, hooked claw of their fathers. Not a drop of blood; the waxy complexion has taken on the color of the fine Sèvres porcelain imperceptibly blue; they tremble under our sky, they flee shiveringly towards Nice while poor devils work to make their

The day when Catholics, tired of defending this society become exclusively Jewish, will leave the hungry marketplace on banking houses as we walked on the convents, we will crush these beggars of yesterday who have become the tyrants of today, without their sagging making a stain*^ redder than the kosher meat they eat.

This physical state can partly explain sadness which forms the basis of the Jewish character, but is not its unique pattern.

This melancholy is due to causes that I must indicate. to complete this study, whatever my desire not to not to address the religious question itself, as long as My respect for all beliefs is great.

To succeed in their attack on civilization] Christian, the Jews in France had to be cunning, lie, take-dress up as freethinkers. If they had said frankly: *c We want to destroy this France of other-once which was so glorious and so beautiful to replace it by the domination of a handful of Hebrews of all country, "our fathers, who were less softened than we, did not would not have let themselves be done. They remained in the state for a long time wave, acting with Freemasonry, sheltering behind-behind sound phrases: emancipation, emancipation, fight against superstitions and prejudices of another age.

124 JEWISH FRANCE

They first celebrated their worship at home, then little by little little, while keeping the instincts of their race, they lost this that there is good in all religion; they were invaded by this kind of dreadful depression which takes hold of man who no longer believes in anything.

Apart from religious festivals which brought together the whole family, meals of precepts, Circumcision, Purim, Bar Mitzvah, there were once a thousand occasions for strengthen the bonds of brotherhood, to exchange sive loneliness, gifts. A Sioim, that is to say the end of a treatise of the Talmud studied either by a society or by a particular, gave rise to a meal. When it was announced that there was Zocher at someone's house, that is to say that a child male was born, people went to his house to congratulate him. Sabbath which precedes the wedding, Spinholuz, and which continued until the following Saturday, was a pretext for long rejoicings-sessions and the table was then overloaded with these sweets and times an enthusiastic enumeration. All this for many is now barely more than a memory.

Undoubtedly, the Jews are more faithful than one thinks. their religious practices. Such a writer who, in a Republican newspaper, has just written a violent article for to wrest from the disinherited this faith which consoles for everything, which has just crudely mocked our Sacraments, our Lent, our children led to the first Communion, runs to the synagogue to fulfill his duties. During Passover, They meet at Van der Ham's, 2-i 6is, rue de Maubeuge. where the Seder service is admirably organized, the traders and employees of the central district. This is where restaurant that all the Dutch and the Germans.

THE JEW 12")

This is where one of our colleagues, a free thinker, was told apparent, who is only a fervent Jew, that is to say, fanati- that against Christ, this charming word which the Uraeli Archives. He had come for lunch on the first day of Easter and when it was time to leave, he asked for the bill to the young girl who served him.

– Sir, replied the young Dutch woman, we do not pre- We have no money today, a holiday.

– But, Mademoiselle, you don't know me; and if I wasn't coming back?

– Oh, sir, when we celebrate Easter, we come back...

It is undeniable, however, that indifference has penetrated- among many Israelites. It is not -one of the first- first crises that the Jewish religion is going through.

Without going into the heart of certain questions, what the Jews even having become Christians, the Léman abbots rarely do, Converted Israelites, once summed up with infinite clarity the successive phases through which the Judaism (1).

In the period of waiting and excitement that precedes the coming of Christ is followed by a violent, agitated period, during which Israel persists in seeking the Messiah,

(t) The Quotation of the Council and the Vatican Council.

JEWISH FRANCE

without wanting to admit to himself that he had crucified himself (1).

Soon, even giving to messianic prophecies the most singular interpretations, by supposing a thousand ways Daniel's prediction about the period of seventy weeks of years, one comes to despair. The aloi's rabbis condemn to the anathema anyone who henceforth would speak of the appearance of the Messiah. "All times that were set for the coming of the Messiah have passed away," he said. Rabbi Rava. "Cursed be those who calculate the times of the Messiah," declares the Babylonian Talmud. "May their bones break,)) adds Rabbi Lochanan.

If the Jews of Romania maintain, at great expense, in Sada-Gora, the family of Isrolska, the sacred family from where the Messiah must be born; if the Jews of Poland leave their open window when it thunders so he can come in, civilized Jews no longer believe in the coming of the Redeemer; they no longer admit anything but what they call the mythical Messiah that; rather the Messiah, the future king of the world, is Israel.

(1) The Lemau abbots have 25 false Messiahs: Theudas in Palestine, the year 40, Simon the Magician in Pulesline, from the year 34 to the year 37, Méuaadre, same period, Dosilee in Palestine, from the year 50 to the year 60, Bar-Kochhas in Pale, in the year 138, Moses in the island of Hail, i'aa 434, Julian in Palestine, in 530, a Syrian under the reign of Leo Risaurian, the year 721, Sereuus in Spain, the year 724, another in France, in the year 1137, another in Persia, in 1138, another in Cordoba, in the year 1157, another in Ftz, in the year 117, another in Arabia and another towards the Euphrates, around the same year 1167, another in Persia, the year 1174, David Almasser in Moravia, the year 1176, another, the year 1280, David Eldavid in Persia, in the year 1199 or 1200, Ishmael Sophie in Mesopotamia, 1497, Rabbi Lemben in Austria, 1500, another in Spain, the 15th, another in the East Indies, in the year 1615, another in Holland, in the year 1624, Zabalhai Tzevi in Turquie, the year 1616.

THE JEW 127

Michel AVeil, chief rabbi, expressly says that the prophecies never mentioned a descendant of

The true Redeemer, according to him, would be, "no longer a personality, but Israel transformed into a beacon of nations, raised to the noble functions of preceptor of Humanity that he will instruct by his books as by his history, by constancy in his trials no less than by fidelity to the doctrine!"

I will not point out once again what is impudent-pretension of this band of handlers of ecus to be the beacon of nations which had Claimarmagne, Saint Louis, Charles V, Napoleon, the greatest saints, the most powerful thinkers, the highest geniuses, the most admirably organized societies. There are obviously- there is a real collective madness, a sort of delusions of grandeur no longer affecting an individual isolated, but on an entire race to which successes sudden came to the head.

These successes, in any case, did not bring Israel the happiness of the soul.

As their dream was fulfilled, the portion of ideal - very relative - of religious spiritualism which was in They were diminishing, their little shred of infinity was decreasing. These tNucingen also had their skin of sorrow of a new genre where the notion of the future life was narrowed and dried up while their present life became more brighter and wider.

Their romantic hope of possessing the land, of enjoy alone what countless generations of Christians- had founded, created, produced, had been realized against all likelihood. With such fantastic leaflets

128 JEWISH FRANCE

than those of Honduras, the Galleons of Vigo, or the Bons Ottomans, they had taken from the pockets of the poor, stockings wool, straw mattresses, touching savings, savings saint that the old woman wrapped in paper of silk and showed, with a proud smile, to the husband who feared- was unable to work anymore. On these remains con- taken by the deceitful on the naive they had bought sha- historic buildings, illustrious residences where the great men of old, at the time of retirement, had rested- sed after serving their country. The degenerate members of the aristocracy had stooped to come and admire these twists of baron and these smuggling badges drawn on the sand from the stables of Ferrières or Beauregard. Bs has not- had only one sign to make to the leaders of democracy-

té, like Raynal and Bischofifsheim.

Despite everything, a feeling of disappointment came over them: "This "Is that all it is?" they seemed to be saying.

On the balconies of the prosceniums paid for by the unfortunate whom they reduced to suicide; on the terraces of castles that they stole these triumphant, so little joyful, are assail" read by the arid thoughts that came to the bibli- Schelemo than on the terrace of his palace in Beth-yaar-ha-Lebanon or in the paths of his garden in Etham.

Man has no advantage over beast and both have the same end, both return to dust.

A living dog is better than a dead lion.

The best good for a man is to eat, to drink, and enjoy.

Thus speaks in Ecclesiastes, the Kohelet, faithful inter-ready for Sadducee morality.

THE JEW 129

The vision of this death which is coming with great strides and after which there is nothing, of this coffin that we assemble one day in this magnificent apartment whose mirrors will remain veiled for seven days, of this corpse which is taken to half rotten, puts a shadow on all these fronts (1).

If the Jews, in fact, have kept deep within themselves—even the notion of a single God, if their mission providential has been to maintain and spread this faith in the world, the belief in a future life is very strong among them confused and very wavering, although the funeral prayers in make mention. The Pharisees had spiritual tendencies—ritualists, but the Sadducees were absolutely materialists. There is hardly any question of the immortality of the soul in the Pentateuch and the only text that speaks clearly about it in the Old Testament is this verse from Daniel: a Blow of those who sleep in the dust wakes up—will, some to eternal life, some to shame eternal.

The Mishnah forbids probing these problems and the Agadah reports in support of this defense the story of four doctors Ben-Azai, Ben-Zoma, Akiba and Acher who dared venture "into the avenues of Paradise." One of them

(1) The Jews even edict to pronounce the name of death. We see in the treatise Ketanbtoh (8 6) that a rabbi was blamed for having said in a funeral oration: "Many men will empty the cup of life u "Many men have emptied the cup, is a "This expression is permitted," said Abayé, "but we must avoid saying: many men will empty the cup." In Berachoth (60 a), Abayé once again renews this prohibition against speaking of death.

The practice of emptying all the water from a house in which someone lifeat to expire is inspired by the same feeling. It was a way to announce the death to the neighborhood without using the harmful word.

130 JEWISH FRANCE

died, the second went mad, Acher apostatized, Akiba alone got out of the situation, thanks to his firm common sense.

Mr. Charles de Rémusat was perfectly right to write on this subject:

Judaism, at least Mosaic Judaism, if it does not keep not silence, about the future life speaks of it so rarely, so obscurely—that he almost realized the paradox of a religion that could—could do without dogma without which all religion is useless. sacred legislator of the Hebrews seems to have confined himself to this world all the interests of God's people. We cannot go so far far than Saint John Chrysostom and even Saint Thomas of Aquin who want the future life to have been hidden from them, but, at less in the Pentateuch, it is only hinted at in equi—evokes and susceptible to another interpretation and even in the later books of the Old Testament, it remains the most part of time assumed rather than professed. At least it is necessary recognize with Saint Augustine, with Grotius, Bossuet, Leibnitz, Fleury, whom the Jewish religion did not place in the first rank, like fundamental article the certainty of a life to come with all its consequences (1).

We can guess that in these conditions the horizon is narrow for the Jews closed to these beautiful hopes which are ours consolation and our joy (2).

(1) Review of the Two Worlds of July 13, tSG5.

(2) Swendenborg, illuminè who sometimes has worthy descriptions of the Lady, saw Jews in large numbers in the residence of the greedy, or in the excremental hell of those who have lived only for enjoyment.

u The greatest part of this hell, he says, is composed of Jews, smell of other spirits, manifests itself as a stench of rats.

"Erase the fault they have conceived in the life of the body and in which they have confirmed themselves does not allow them to know that by the new Jerusalem where the kingdom of the Lord is intended, in both and on earth, it was found that, when they come

THE JEW 131

It must be added that the Jews, always aware of this which happens, not only in the world of facts, but in the world of ideas, are very keenly concerned—of the anti-Semitic movement that is emerging in all of Europe. One cannot believe the fury in which plunged them into the creation in Paris of a very valiant little newspaper—slow, very modern, very aware of financial manipulations, Vaiti-Sénitiqxe who always repai-aît when we believe it disappeared.

In short, the Jews have a confused feeling about what is happening to them. tend. From 1870 to 1879, ik, "Bt went through a period of pride delirious. "What joy to have been born at such a time! exclaimed the Jew Wolff in the National-Zeitung; "ist eine lust zu leben ! y> while on the banks of the Spree the Laskers, the Bleichrøders, the Hansemans stripped of their billions the Prussians intoxicated by the laurels. What happiness! the band of cosmo—polite, seeing that the places, the people, the hotels, the princely carriages, hunts, boxes at the Opera, everything was theirs and that the good people were content with a speech felt good about the new diapers.

Today they have toned down a bit and they feel that something be concerted between Christians of all countries that could be stronger than the V Israelite Alliance universal.

in the other life he appears to them on the left side of Gehenna, a little in front, a city in which they hurry and press; but this city is muddy and filthy, so it is called the Jerusalem defiled. There they run through the streets in the mud and in the mud up to the top of the heel, complaining and lamenting—UqL" (Lei ArccMes Célestials, 939, 940).

135 JEWISH FRANCE

In his very essence, the Jew is sad. Enriched, he becomes insolent while remaining gloomy, he has morose arrogance:

Hypochondria, which is only one form of neurosis, is the only gift they gave to this France which was once so laughing, so playful, so fulfilled in her robust and healthy gaiety.

"The Jew is dark," said Shaftesbury in his Characteristics, big word and deeper word than she has the air. It is a mistake to believe that the Jew is having fun with his own, a mistake even to believe that he loves them. Christians never support each other, but they love each other. They enjoy seeing each other. The Jews, on the contrary, sustain themselves until death, but they cannot feel; they are horrified by themselves, and as soon as they do not are no longer in business, they run away from each other like the damned. They have little more agreement with Christians; a word from respect for Christ is enough to make them sick; a plea—The Judas sanctuary, which they greet with a bitter laugh, puts them in outside of themselves. Deep down it is still relevant, the word written on the doors of the ghettos of Italy.

JVe populo regni cœlestis hæredi usus cum exhærede sit.

"Let the people who inherit the heavenly kingdom have nothing in common with the one who is excluded from it.

Sometimes there is a faint smile on those faces at the thought (the some good trick played on the Christian. The fox, in effect, is the allegorical beast of the Jew; the Meschàbol schiia-lim, The Fox's Fables is the first book that we put into the hands of the little Hebrew. When he grew up, he takes pleasure in life in emphasizing the farce he has just to do to the Aryan. After having, for example, like Bleichneider, organized the Tunisian campaign which cost France the life of his children, the money of his finances, the alliance of Italy, he still mocks his victim by naming himself—sea commander of the Legion of Honor by some degraded minister.

THE JEW ^33

These fits of evil joy are sometimes followed by an expression—Naivety in the Jew! you will cry—You, you give it to us beautifully! Yes, there is a childish side. This representative of civilization in this that it contains more acute, more refined, more moribelly, has the cunning of the savage, he also has the naive vanity. His mouth sometimes opens with pleasure before certain triumphs—phes of glory, like the mouths of those Africans whose to make a piece of glass or a scrap of fabric clairvoyant.

At Louis Blanc's funeral, I looked into the rue de Rivoli the deputations were lined up and I examined with an unspeakable pleasure the way all these individuals at the yellowish and dirty beard was squared under the large cord blue of the Freemason. There was, in all these people with a mine low, a childish satisfaction of being there, in front of the Tuileries, respected by the guardians of the peace, having an im-bearing, a role in a quasi-official ceremony, pora costume that distinguished them from others. The Jew is more often than you think. When he tells you that he received some distinction, a medal of chocolate in an exhibition, it stares at you well to see if you don't mock him, which is his fear perpetual; then his pale and bloodless face lights up with a ray of happiness like that which often illuminates the children.

The only feeling that survives in these corrupt and 8

134 THE JEWISH FRINGE

jaded it is hatred against the Church, against priests, against especially religious people.

Let us recognize it, how natural this hatred is! This man born intelligent, rich, often bearing a name that sounds different from that of all these nobles of Gerolstein and who leaves everything to become like the poorest,
—doesn't that negate, does it not remove everything that makes the Jew proud: money? This vow of poverty of the monk does not seem a permanent mockery of the vow
of the Jew's wealth?

This woman who preferred a sackcloth dress, of which wouldn't want servants, in silk and lace, would they?
she point, despite the sweetness of her angelic physiognomy-
mie, as a living and perpetual offense to this Jew unable to buy with all his gold what this woman has indigent: Faith, Hope and Charity (1)?

Here is one to whom death is quite equal and to whom a cer-
A pick, even if it is made of white wood, is not scary.

Simon called Lockroy (2) may insult this monk, ask-

(1) Faith, this extra-human, euthiastic, expansive feeling, which transports the being above himself, and which translates into the proselytism, that is to say by the ardent desire to share with the pro-chain the noble joys that the oia experiences, is absolutely unknown to the Jews, even the most religious. Religion among them is a form of loyalty. to a tradition, and an attachment to the race* to which one belongs.

"A remarkable fact, among all," said Mr. Franck in a conference-reference made to the Society of Jewish Studies, under this title: Religion and Science in Judaism is that the Hebrew language, I want to say the language of the Bible and the Prophets, does not have a word equivalent to that of faith. The one that later, in some works of theological controversy, it has been translated in this way {Emouna) means constancy, firmness, fidelity, truth.

(2) EJouard-Eienne-Antoia Simon dit Lockroy, thus expresses himself Vapereau. The greatest witty act of this clown, who wears a that he be expelled from his cell. Dreyfus will be able to propose to our honest republicans to tear away from these Sisters of charity the piece of bread which is enough for them not to move-laugh. They will always have the crucifix around their necks; it is made of copper and the baronesses of the Jewry only like which brings control of the currency.

THE JEW izô

The mere fact that these sublime virtues, these disinterestedments of all that is material, these self-denials superb may exist, stands like a thorn in my the bed of the coarse Jewish sybarite who, master of all, feels that he can do nothing to these souls.

On this state of mind of the Jew, Renan is still valuable to consult. His portrait of the modern Jew in Ecclesiastes is a delicious piece. We see at work the painter who has mysterious complaisances for Judas; he is preoc-always put a caressing touch next to a a bit harsh truth; he erases the line that would hurt for add whatever epithet pleases. He admires this parasite "so quickly free from dynastic prejudice who knows how to enjoy a world that he did not do, to pick the fruits of a field that he did not not plowed, supplant the onlooker who persecutes him, meet-"to be necessary to the fool who disdains it."

It is for him, you would believe, that Clovis and his Franks have struck with such heavy sword blows that the race of the Capets rolled his thousand-year policy, which Philippe-^uguste defeated at Bou-vines and Condé at Rocroi. Vanity of vanities! Oh the good con-

1 We all knew him, this wise man according to the earth, that au-gobriquet like his father, is to mock the poor Brothers who take the noui of the salut that Ton fêlé the day when is pronounced their wishes. I give him a taste of his own medicine. Admit that this is not difficult.

136 JEWISH FRANCE

There is no supernatural chimera that would give all the dreams from another world to the realities of an hour of this one: very opposed to abuses, and yet as undemocratic as possible; with power both supple and proud; aristocrat by his skin fine, his nervous susceptibility and his attitude of a man who knew how to remove from him the tiring work, bourgeois by his low esteem for warrior bravery and by a feeling of humiliation secular from which its distinction does not save it. He who has upset the world, through its faith in the kingdom of God, no longer believes in anything but wealth. This is because wealth is in fact his true reward. He knows how to work—brave, he knows how to enjoy. No foolish chivalry will make him exchange his luxurious home against the perilously acquired glory; no one stoic asceticism will not make him leave the prey for the shadow. The stakes of life is according to him entirely here below. He has arrived at the perfect wisdom: to enjoy in peace, amidst the works of a delicate and images of the pleasure one has exhausted, of the fruits of one's labor.

Surprising confirmation of the philosophy of vanity I Go so trouble the world, make God die on the cross, endure all the tortures, set fire to your homeland three or four times, in—to sult all tyrants, to overthrow all idols, to end with one spinal cord disease, deep in a well-padded hotel from the Champs-Élysées district, regretting that life is so short and the pleasure so fleeting. Vanity of vanities!

No, amateur, it is not for a Jew to die of it. spinal cord in a hotel in the Champs-Élysées district Elysées that Clovis fought at Tolbiac and Philippe-Auguste at Bouvines. If our fathers devoted themselves, if they fell on the battlefields it is so that there is a France as there is an England and a Germany, so that our children pray as their fathers prayed, have a faith that sustains them in life.

It pleased the Semites, those perpetually agitated, to destroy the foundations of the old society, the money they stole will be used to found a new one; they created a social question, we will solve it on their backs. We will distribute all these goods ill-gotten gains to all those who will take part in the great struggle which is being prepared, as land was once distributed and from fiefdoms to the bravest.

In Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Romania, in France itself where the movement is still latent, great lords, bourgeois, intelligent workers, everything of Christian origin in a word – without often observe religious practices – agrees on this point. V Universal Anti-Semitic Alliance is constituted and the Universal Israelite Alliance will not prevail point against her.

In some countries, the Committees may show more or less activity, propaganda may be more or less long, the century will not end without history seeing renew this fact which has been constantly renewed: the Jew taking advantage of the divisions he creates to become master by the cunning of an entire country, wanting to violently modify the ideas, customs, traditional beliefs of this country and bringing, by dint of teasing and insolence, the people who hated each other the day before to reconcile for him fall upon it with prodigious enthusiasm.

As for me, I am only the modest announcer of the curious events approaching. Insulted, defamed, unknown, perhaps I would say, although I do not believe it, before having witnessed the things that I announce as some. What does it matter! I will have fulfilled my duty and accomplished my work. Every fact now will confirm the correctness of my forecasts, this In all matters, said Bossuet, it there is what prepares them, what determines them to undertake them and what makes them successful. The true science of history is to notice in each time the secret dispositions who prepared the great changes and the conjunctures important things that made them happen, i 8.

BOOK TWO

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE

Lm »iè«- ibU toat bMneoap aoia* boasts sb* M b uppoifl caos fai ■• «MaaùiaBt pM
e&a fai IbùcM Im Us.

PEOPLE TIMES TO EXPLODE DEFTSUKE EX 1394

The Jews in Gaul. – Delicate religious feelings and Mr. Reuan. – The Jews in Brittany. – De anoyantia Judeorum.

– The Jews in the Middle Ages. – Accredited lies. – The schools, the rabbis and the poets. – The Jews driven out of Spain.

– Abou Ukak, the patriotic poet. – L/i Kacida in noun. – THE Jaiveries of the South. – The Albigensian War. – The Yellow Wheel,

– Measures of social salvation. – The trial of the Talmud. – The elegies. – The auto-da-fé of Troyes la Lanterne. – The Jew of the Apar< Michlet. – The Templars and the Jews. – The Order of the Temple, corrupt-powered by money, becomes an instrument of the Jews. – The sacri-legers. – The Templars and Masonry. – The lepers. – The social war of the 12th century. – The Semitic movement. – The t:x Definitive impulse of J394. – The greatness of France.

PEEiHERS TIME TO DEFECTIVE EXPULSION IN 13W

The Jews came to Gaul following the
–J Romans. In the 4th century, around the year 353, they assassinated, on the banks of the Durance, an officer who, after having gov-Verné lEgj'pte, returned to Gaul by order of the em-Father Constance. The unfortunate man's epitaph was found and described by Pierre Béranger, a Provençal doctor. Tillemont, in volume IV of his History of the fnj/)erei«rs, mentions also this fact which Dom Liron questions, however,
in Historical and Literary Singularities.

If the presence of some Jews, who came at the same time that the Romans is not disputed, it is difficult to ad-agree with Renan that the Jews made conversions
among people "animated by deli- religious feelings cats," to use the writer's particular style (1).
The claim that the Synagogue remained alongside the Church
"as a dissident minority" does not rest absolutely on no testimony (2).

(1) Judaism as a race and as a religion.

(1) This is a softened variant of the famous thesis supported by Disraeli in his Essay on the Political Life of Lord George Dentinck.

The truth is that the Jews, more concerned than they realize say about the account they will have to give of the role played by them in the last religious persecutions and fearing that what they call "the second stay of the Jews in France » does not end like the first, would like to argue from an old title of habitation in this France, on whose soil they have always lived as nomads, without contributing anything to the development of civilization general.

It was only in Brittany * where the Jews were quite numerous until the 8th century, that the existence of a colo-Semitic nation, who came there in very remote times, for-would support itself. The signs carved in the caves "of Gavrinis present more than one analogy with the sym-axe bolic engraved on Egyptian monuments. The souve-still alive in the traditions of the country, of a fabulous city called Is, of a king surrounded by luxury all oriental, who was called Solomon, sometimes return to the mind before these fountains shaded by the biblical fig tree civilized immense races on their own, like the Teulonique, the Slavic race. In a few years this will be taught in our colleges and it will be an article of faith in all academies where the Jews will impose it; it is still permissible to "affirm that this Thesis is absolutely insane.

Here is the main passage from Disraeli.

"The relations existing between this race of Bedouins, who, under the name of Jews, are found in all parts of Europe and the Teutonic, Slavic and Celtic races which occupy that part of the world, will one day form one of the most remarkable chapters of a philosophical history of man.

"The Saxons, Slavs and Celts had adopted most of the customs of these Arab tribes, as well as their literature and religion-entire region; they are therefore indebted to them for the greatest part of what regulates, charms and softens morals.

and which make one think of Siloë. Alphonse de Rothschild, who seeks-always trying to bring together all the scattered brothers for his future kingdom, came to take a look around Camac, lation where faith is rooted in the hearts of the inhabitants, had to convince him that if there was a tribe there it was good lost to him (1).

In Gaul, the Jews found the contempt for which they were overwhelmed in Rome. While Christianity, completely separated from any alliance with Judaism considered as the expression of a distinct race, was everywhere rapid progress and rallied all the donkeys to him and all intelligences, the Jews saw peoples absolutely foreign to the Roman prejudices redouble spon- degree of severity towards them. The Burgondes and the Visi- Goths are also hard on them. The Council of Vannes, held in 465, forbids clergymen from frequenting the Jews and eat with them. Clotaire II rereads them, in 615, the right to bring an action against a Christian, in 633, Dagobert II expelled them from the states.

Always repressed in their wear and tear, they always return- days in the chain and in the beginning of the period Carolingian we find them more powerful than ever. Charlemagne sends a Jew to the ambassadors he sends to Haroun-al-Raschid. Under weak monarchs like Louis the Pious, they give free rein to their nature

(1) We have a testimony of the concern of the Jews "to connect to the ceitique element in Hoâlradamus, Jewish by origin, qni, in seà curieuaea Centuries, predicted the reign of a monarch which would be called the Great Celtiqut,

144 JEWISH FRANCE

invasive. Then, as today, they do not content themselves- do not attempt to obtain the free exercise of their religion, they want- slow that others bother so that they are not embarrassed themselves; they decree that the markets will not will not hold on Saturday; they demand exemption from rights that weigh on other traders.

As today, their audacity revolts everyone and the ar- Bishop of Lyon Agobard writes his treatise: De Insolentia Judeorum. Put a modern translation and even bet- his own to this protest, write a book entitled: of Vaplohm or the nerve of the Jews and you will have a bro- of the most immediate news.

So as today they sneak into the gou- government. Zedekiah has the full confidence of Charles the Bald that he poisons.

Perpetually drawn towards the East by the attraction of race, the Jews are constantly in negotiations with the Saracens to whom they deliver Béziers, Narbonne and Toulouse. It is from this last misdeed that each year On Easter Day, a Jew received three slaps on the door of the cathedral and paid thirteen pounds for wax.

Until the twelfth century their condition still seems keep improving. In 1131, when Pope Innocent II comes to France and celebrates in this illustrious abbey of Saint-Denis, of which Suger is the abbot, the feast of Easter, the Synagogue, as Suger notes in his Life of Louis the Fat, figures in the immense procession which parades in front the holy Pontiff on Holy Wednesday.

Troops lined up in battle formation, writes Mr. Adolphe Vétault in Suger, formed the hedge and barely contained the floods pressed by the crowd who saw reproduced before his eyes, in a striking image, the entry of Jesus Christ into Jerusalem whose ce-

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 145

Liturgical monikers celebrated the commemoration on this day. The analogy was even more striking when, in the midst of these bundles of blood, came to pass the Synagogue of Paris which wanted, milk to give honor to the representative of the One whom the leaders of the Ancient synagogues had, in similar circumstances, dedicated to the mottled. Receiving from the hands of the rabbis! the text of the old law written on a parchment roll that envelop-paints a precious veil.x, the apostle of the new law tells them with a fraternal sweetness: "May the almighty God tear off the veil that covers your hearts ^1)! »

As we can see, the Synagogue had its place marked in the organisation of the society of aloi-s. Unless you have learned the story in lc Manuel by Paul Berl, any good reader faith could be easily convinced, by the little that we we have said, of the improbability of the dark novel that we tells the naive. Very wicked priests, friends of kings very greedy, enjoying persecuting poor Jews because of their religion, – such is the legend. The truth, in On the contrary, is that the Jews, as long as they did not put the pajs beside himself with their financial manipulations, their betrayals and their murders of Christian children, remained relative-mént'piTis^-anquines than the Christians of the same period. Faith was, however, also alive at the beginning of the 11th century, when monasteries were rising up everywhere parts, when King Robert the Pious himself was going to sing at the lectern, only a hundred years later. Religion therefore had no part in the measures to which the Jews were subjected later.

{!) Secetinm ipm JuffeorumPariiiensiumexrtPCfita rfffuit Si/nagoga, <fuæ /tgisiittexnu, rotuiam scUuet vetutnm offered,., a', re ejus hanc bet kordiæ and /ù^tatix obtinet !fu/,p>.iculio>ie,n: Au/e'ut Dcus onvii^.
Some velarnen a cordibus vestris. (Suger.odiliou Leci.y island la Alar.Le.)

146 JEWISH FRANCE

It is easy to realize this evidence in studying the Jewish society of the time. This era was uncon-testably for Israel the most brilliant he had known since the destruction of the Temple.

The Jews of France then reached the number of 800,000 that they do not yet reach us today (1). They were as rich as they are today and already possessed

(1) Regarding this figure, Mr. Albert Kolin pronounced, in a session of the Israelite Alliance, some words which deserve to be reproduced. "Where does it come from," he said in 1870, "where does it come from, we ask-let us say, that Russia and Poland have 3,000,000 Jews,
while Yanoe has at most 120,000, England 60,000, Italy 45,000 1 U must go back to the beginning of the twelfth century, in the sad times of the Crusades and in the time of hub age, to find the answer. Until the fourteenth century, the France alone contained 800,000 Jews, who fled, driven by the different and successive circumstances towards Germany and the edges of the Rhine first, and at the time of religious persecution towards the Poland, which at that time, united into a vast kingdom, granted
all freedom to our coreligionists hunted everywhere else like wild beasts.

"Their influence became so preponderant that once,
when the Palatines and nobles gathered to elect after death of their king, in accordance with the elective custom, another sousovereign, do not want to agree on this choice, they decided, on the proposal of one of them, Rabbi Bchaiiii Walil, a renowned Jew by his iulellii/euce and his prubite, as king p^LlVl«^olIe, with the faculty of nominating the one who was to be definitively king of Poland. And so it was that a Jew, ancestor of Samuel's light, of Lombes, was permlaiil one night king of I^ologne.

The answer to this kind of confusion is simple. It is because that France had 500,000 Jews that it burned them to exist.
It was because she chased them away that she became the greatest QHliou of Kurope. It is because the ologne has taken in these Jews, that, liviéc ans. coirpirulius and k lanarL-lne, she has ilicpaiu du rui;fi deit peupiea. It's a shame that the iancu has received these iuifa in turn l^oluuan» <^a ette eei eu Iruiiu de jCiU'.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 14"

half of Paris (1). In all the islands schools prospered, Everywhere eminent rabbis attracted crowds to them. It is Moses de Goucy, Léon de Paris, Jacob de Corbeil, Eliezer de Beaugency, Samuel de Falaise, Simon de Joinville.

A curious fact, moreover, and which reveals the incredible tenacity of that race, the persistence with which the tradition is transmitted among "the <rans \y.)\ir lesquels the centuries do not count, is the stubbornness of the Jews to return as masters in the places they once inhabited and from where they were driven out. The mills of Corbeil, which belonged formerly at the Jew Grescent, are now at Erlanjer; almost all the areas of Ile de France where Jews lived formerly belong to Camondo, to Ephrussi, to the Rothschilds, who experience a sense of individual enjoyment target to have for commensals and to flatter the lils degenerates of the nobility that once reigned over these countries. A whole band of Israelite bankers also shot down on Enghien and on Montimuey where their ancestors had houses in the past.

They own almost the entire Tem- district. place where there were Jewish quarters in the 12th and 13th centuries, as well as the Saint-Paul district, where the old Jewish street still recalls an old stay. Two or three people, all the houses in the Place Royale, Alphonse told me Daudet, who lived there for a long time, belonged to Jews. This beautiful place which was built by Henry IV, who saw the si>leudide Carrousel of 1613 where the fighters represented heroes of

(1) In tantuin dtluti sttnl quod fei'e mtdietutem totiui civitalis siùì united vindicaiei. Rigid: from Gestis Philippi Aag. Tôoie xvai des Risto- come from France.

^48 JEWISH FRANCE

Vastree, who witnessed the heroic duels of the refined, who heard the talk of the great lords and men of mind from the beginning of the 12th century, is possessed now []by some usurers or some remittance dealers crooked. -Sic transit gloria mundi! Thus accuses oneself once moreover the character of the Jew who is not content to invade everything in the present, but who wants to dishonor even the past.

Let us also mention a significant fact: the Church of Saint-Jacques-de-la-Boucherie was built or at least restored com-

mel which passes, with enough plausibility moreover, for to have appropriated the sums entrusted to him by fugitive Jews during the expulsion of 1394. In 1797, a Jew, who later became a member of the Consistory of Metz, bought the Church, had it demolished and threw the bones to the wind-seeds of the enemy of Israel who, as we know, had made himself bury there; the tower alone resisted the demolition crews.

Isn't it curious this hatred faithfully transmitted from fathers to children through oral tradition and which is wakes up after four hundred years as lively as the first day?

In the South especially the Jews were almost masters.

The Jewish and Arab pemilic element, says Michelct, was strong in Lanj^uc'doc, Naibonne had long been the capital of the Sarra-sins in France. The Jiiifa were innumerable. Mistreated, but yet suffered, they flourished in Garcassonne, in Montpellier, Nîmes; their rabbis held public schools there. They believed"- the link between Christians and Mohammedans, between the France and Spain, Sciences applicable to material needs-riels, medicine and mathematics were the common study of the men of three religions. Montpellier was closely linked with Salerno and Cordoba than with Rome. Since the Crusades, read

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 149

Upper Lansuedoc everywhere was as if inclined to the Mediterranean. and turned towards the East: the counts of Toulouse were counts of Tripoli.

While around Paris, on the banks of the Seine where near the Ix>is, they owned pleasant villas like that of the Jewish Crescent, of Corleil, which was sold 520 pounds Parisian, or that of Josson, of CouIommiers,doil the building backing onto the castle was worth 400 livres tournois, they were sometimes lords in the South. They showed with orception, in Narbonne, the famous Cortada belonging to the family of the Knlonymes whose head took hereditary the title of Nazi or King of the Jews. At the time of the de-final banishment, the little sovereign of the Cortada to which the Jews were very attached to, because it was land of freehold and thus implied for them the right to pos-seder of the fiefs, was Kalonymus ben Todras, called in the documents of the Moi^mel-Tauros time. The Cortada was sold to the consuls of Narljonne for the price of eight hundred sixty-two leagues\Your tournaments.

to use Michelet's expression, the Jews had names vulgaris, Astruc, Bougodas, Crescas, Dileral, Estori, but by mingling with the population as much as they could, they remained faithful to the memory of the homeland, they gave names of biblical cities to those of the country: Lunel became Jericho; Montpellier, Hac; Carcassonne, Kirr.ilh Jearin; they became Frenchified to conquer, they Judaized what they believed they had conquered.

In the North, the rabbis were mainly tal-mudists. The Tosaphists were particularly attached to the Pentateuch. Maimonides' rival, Rabbi Solomon, son.s of Isaac of Troyes and better known under the name c\4iascln\

150 JEWISH FRANCE

founded the famous Champagne school of exegesis. Nicolas de Lire later borrowed many of his arguments against the Church and his arguments were passed on to Luther. "Raschi and the Tosaphists," says Renan, "made Nicolas de Read; Nicolas de Lire made Luther. » Renan himself drawn from the same arsenal and the few specious against Christianity which are found in his books were whispered to him by Neûbauer who provided almost entirely the materials for his study on the Rabbis of France at the beginning of the 14th century (1).

The rabbis, especially in the South, were also poets, and here we can see the dryness of genius Jewish once he was no longer inspired by the olive trees of the homeland and the cool valleys of the Jordan. Those we have called the Fathers of the Synagogue, the Provençal Rerakhia ben Natronai, the rabbi of Lunel Jehonhatan ben David,

(1) One will consult with profit on this subject, besides the work of Renan published in the lome xxvu, of France lit lé> aire: the Jews of Languedoc, by Mr. Gustave Saige. The work attests to serious research, but we regret the absence of any philosophical point of view-sophic, the comparison between the past and the present, which, alone give value and usefulness to the story that is otherwise not than a compilation of documents.

The author seems to accept this fable of the Jew, suddenly persecuted off by people he would have done nothing to. Or feels, in a word, on every page, the shyness of someone who does not dare to write a line that could harm him near the masters of the day. This fear perpetual appears in all our scholars concerned with their future, except for a few exceptions like Mr. Valois, who spoke clearly historical state of inferiority vis-à-vis foreigners, and particularly-ment of Germany, who dares to say to the Jew: "Here you are, here you are bad trick you wanted to play on the Christians who cul a-é of retaliation against you. >

JEWISH LK IN THE HISTORY OF FFLANCR 131

Zerakilia Halevi, Abniham Balersi from Béziers, as well as that Isaac of Corleil, Jechiel of Paris, who also tried in poetry were hardly more than second-rate fabulists order, of the Viennet of the Middle Ages.

These apologues are of several kinds, there are the Skhir-hat Dekalin or Tales of the Arbreit, like those that wrote lochanan, son of Zakhar; then the popular apologues and naive, the Meschelot Khohsem or Tales of the Blmichi^isevses.

The most successful of these short stories are the }feschelot Schuali'm or Fables of the Playing Foxes, we have it said, a great role in the education of little Israelites in '^- teaching them early to be smart and to put * inside the goy.

Some fables of Berakhia: the pike and the bull, the Two Deer, the Bull, the Lion and the Goat are pretty without having anything extraordinary. The Bundle of Wands of Isaac of Corbeil is more piquant; the morality sums up the entire Jewish movement and could be included in epi-graph under the clasped hands of the United Israelite Alliance verselle.

The oriental fable will be eternally true. If a man binds in a bundle several sticks, the strongest of the strong cannot break: on the contrary, if they are separated the weakest of the faibles will break them very easily.

Berakhia, the author of VHidoth Isopito Simililudes or Enigmas of Ysopet, sometimes makes one think of Florian. Joseph Ezobi of Perpignan, the author of the poem Qu\trath kesef, the Silver Bowl, which he composed for the wedding of his son Samuel and which he read at the wedding seems to have been a little the Gressol of the 13th century.

The Jews were especially looking for feats of strength,

m'ii JEWISH FRANCE

defeated rificnlties, acrostics. Al)raiiam Bedersi, au-author of the Flaming Sword and several short poems

Pèlilion des lamed, so called because in all the room did not feature a single letter that in the alphabet are beyond L, and that, moreover, each word of the room contained this last letter.

Without falling into subtlety, we can link this a kind of childishness in effect and poverty in inspiration. tion to the importance that words have taken at the expense of the idea, to the pretentious sterility that has reigned everywhere since the Jews are the masters of our literature.

We see that there is nothing there which has greatly advanced the history of civilization. We are far from the wide breath songs of gestures, improvisations full of color and naivety of the Troubadours and Minstrels, far of Jean Bôdel and Rutebœuf. If they had been allowed to do so, the Jews might have given us the operetta a few centuries earlier; that is the most eloquent thing that can be said-gieux on their literature.

The days of operetta had not yet arrived; it is the tragedy that was about to befall all these amiable poets.

It was through the South, where they appeared most solidly settled, that the misfortune of the Jews began.

Let us say first of all, going back a little, that the example of some of their coreligionists being driven out from Spain and forced to seek asylum in the florissant Jewish communities of Toulouse and Narbonne should have make cautious.

In the 11th century, the Jews were all-powerful in Spain. One of their number, Rabbi Samuel Ha Levi, a grocer,

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FINANCE 153

mixed with the civil wars which, by a singular coincidence-lière, have a particular intensity wherever there are Jews, and became a favorite of King Habous.

His son, Rabbi Joseph Ha Lévy, Nazi or Naghid, that is to say say king of the Jews, managed to become vizier of King Badis.

This grocer's son held the conduct that was to hold more later Gambetta, Jewish like him and son of a grocer like him. He revolted everyone with his insolence (insolentia Judeorum), he grossly insulted the religion of the country, and everyone soon had only one desire, that of being unloaded-fed up with him and the clique he dragged along behind him.

night lamp when the day has come.

A religious poet, the glorious Abu Iskak Al Elbiri, went from town to town, branding the failings, preaching devotion, reconciling the Cindhadjites and the Berbers, long enemies, reciting everywhere his famous Kacida rhymes in noun, to excite courage. Everywhere we repeated with him the refrain of his song: "The Jews^^

have become great lords they reign everywhere in the capital and in the provinces; they have inlaid palaces?

of marble, decorated with fountains, they are magnificently dressed and dine sumptuously, while you are poor-badly dressed and poorly fed.

Imagine a truly patriotic Déroulède instead of
to have joined Gambetta's party for love jwur the banal advertisement, a general not being afraid of the death, a few brave common men, all this
* kicking a smart one on the hotels of the gamblers and the financiers-Jewish elders, and you will have an idea of the scene that took place in Granada on the Sabbath, 9 Tebeth of the year 4827 (30 de-December 1066).

9.

154 - The fu.wck ,iLMvi>;

Gambetta, in the 11th century, had not had the idea of
to die in time, was massacred with four thousand of his own.

The legend has preserved the memory of selflessness superb than me)lra Abou Iskak. When in the gardens of the persecutor, the crowd came to bring to the poet in front
which the military leaders had respectfully lowered their bloody scimitars, the piles of gold, the precious stones sparkling, precious necklaces, shimmering fabrics, the thousands of art objects that littered the ground, Abu took a pomegranate hanging from a tree, opened it, moistened it his lips and said: "The heat is heavy today, I had thirst; share these treasures, my children, but do not forget not to say your prayers tonight, because God alone is great! >^

It was debris that escaped from this execution that had swelled the Jewish colony of Languedoc. Without being educated by the experience of what had just happened (what experinothing will ever instruct the Jews?), they started again their intrigues; they tried to corrupt the country where they were so well received, to tear away his beliefs;

Albigensian.

What were the doctrines of the Albigensians?

knows nothing about it; there was everything, Manicheans, Gnostics, x\theses; in any matter where the Jew figures, the confusion is such that a cat would no longer recognize his little ones. Now Judaism was at the bottom of all these troubles. "The Jews," says Michelet, "are a living image of the Orient in middle of Christianity, seemed there to maintain the hatred of religion. In times of natural disasters, political catastrophes, they corresponded, it was said, with the infidels and called them." Elsewhere, the historian notes

THE JEW IN THE DK FANTASY STORY

again to what extent the Jew had penetrated the idiV's of the Albigensian nobility.

The nobility of MiJi, which differed little from the bourgeoisie, was a joust composed of Jewish or Saracen children, people of a spirit very different from the ignorant and pious chivalry of North; she had to assist her and with great affection the mon-tagnards. Road bones badly frailed the priests as well as the pajvans, dressed their women in consecrated garments, bat-were the clerics and made them sing the mass in derision. It was still a great pleasure to dirty, to break the images of Christ. to break their arms and legs. They were expensive. to princes precisely because of their impiety which makes them-were insensitive to ecclesiastical censure. Impious as our modern and fierce like the barbarians, they weighed cruelly on the pavement, stealing, ransoming, slaughtering at random, waging a terrible war. The highest-ranking women had minds as corrupt as their husbands or their fathers*;;, and the poems of the troubadours were only amorous impieties-reuses (t).

Pieri-e the Venerable, abbot of Cluny who, at sixty years old before the Crusade, had been sent by the Sovereign-Pon-tife near the Albigensians with only the weapons of the per-suasion, to convert them, alludes to facts which seem to be from today: I have, he wrote to the bishops of Embrun, Die and Gap, by an infamous crime among Christians, desecrate churches, overturn altars, burn crosses, whip priests, imprison h*s monks, force them to take wives by the threats and torments." Then speaking to these herefi-

(t) Count Charles II of Provence banishes the Jews from his states because of the usury, island If ursscanaaies, » etquiu cum nntUitmulieri'

106 THE JEWISH FRINGE

ques themselves, he said to them: (c After having made a great }ùcher of piled up crosses, you set fire to them, you
If you cooked some meat and ate it on Friday-Baint, after publicly inviting the people to manger, »

These are, more or less, as we see, the scenes of Montceau-
Les Mines which, according to the Republican newspapers themselves, my, had been organized by the Austrian Jew Hendlé,
prefect of Saône-et-Loire who, cowardly like his peers,
then passed quietly into the Seine-Inférieure in leaving the poor workers, who had been his instruments unconscious, struggling with the courts.

It is through the schools on which Abbot Drouais has published some excellent pages in his book: The Albigensians, that the Jews had arrived at this result. It is by the same means that they pursue the same goal mainholding; only, more skillful than before, they succeeded to make Christians pay for the schools where people learn children to hate Christ.

Against the Semitism that all of Christianity felt threatening, Montfort, the man from the North, the Aryan at heart fearless and upright, marched, fought, was victorious.

This Semite, who thus appeared as a danger par-everything and who only got involved in social life to dis-
to solder and corrupt it, it was necessary at all costs to allow everyone to recognize it, it was necessary to know who we had affair, no longer be fooled by the lying mask that takes the Jew; it was necessary to guarantee the collectivity.

The decision taken in 1215 by the Lateran Council was the consequence of the Albigensian War which had just been ended by the defeat of Raymond V at Muret (1213).

THE JEW IN THE COUNTRY OF FRANCE 107

The obligation imposed on Jews to wear a scarf on their chest
a small piece of yellow cloth was not a humiliation
for them it was a measure of ordered preservation,
not by religious prejudices, - one never thought of it previously, - but by the imperative necessity of preserving-to others. If you now forced the Jews to wear-people who are easy to deceive and who, upon hearing them declaim against our religion, imagine that they support the cause of Progress while they represent only a grudge secular (1).

Things were going wrong for Israel everywhere in France. The Jews were unable to resist, at the time of the Crusades, the desire to establish relations with these Semites other countries that they saw threatened, to alert them what was being plotted against them, the preparations made, the path we had to follow.

I don't understand how anyone could have contested these

(I) All peoples have been obliged to adopt measures
Ptolemy Philopator had printed on the skin of Jews, an ivy leaf in the shape of Bacchus;
The Caliphs forced them to wear a piece of yellow cloth on their liab is; in other countries, it was required that they alone on the point of the simulacrum of a wheel, the long sleeves, the red hat or yellow with a horn for women.

There would be a lot to say about the yellow cockade. We see, for several royal ordinances, notably by the king's letters Jean at the battle of Moutpellier in 1213, that the Jews hid it under the folds of their clothes, wore it smaller than the dimensions, etc. Under King Louis in Provence, they obtained by dint of money to no longer wear anything but a small circle of wide thread omnivorous a large amount of money in the belt and only in the cities. This round became smaller and smaller, so that at last, we fled forced to restore the ancient costume.

158 FRANCE JULY:

actions attested by all contemporaries. He would have It was necessary, admit it, that the Israelites had an incredible not to be more interested in the peoples of their race than to these barons, to these knights whose all ideas absolutely shocked their feelings. They were going to naturally to the Sultan of Iconium or Tunis, as Disraeli went to Cyprus and Gambetta to Elias-Mussali, by the Roustan Canal, to the great joy of Bismarck who would prefer a Dutch cheese to all these watermelons oriental.

The Jews were going to more serious excesses, they did not did not mind martyring Christians and especially the children. Children, these candid and charming creatures in whose soul the purity of heaven is reflected, have to swear, Hérold and the Jewish Freemasons defile them by v'-?— their teaching; the Jews of the Middle Ages bled them dry —tA. and put them on the cross. Each age has its customs and its processes.

^i^n^ To say this, I know, is to disagree with L<*<j4^ the official science of the moment. All the testimonies, all memorials erected to celebrate a /^ event of which an entire city was a spectator, all the ,^ ^ authentic documents, in a word, on which it was based until now the certainty in history, no longer have any value ^,,^<^ today when they displease the Jews. For me, I have
'f^ infinitely more confidence in the story of an ancestor, who yiy^/ tells me what happened in his time, that in the
"A/ denials of a Darmesteter or a VVeil, even if he was a member ^ of the Academy of Inscriptions.

—^^é^y^ . We will, moreover, deal in depth with the question of sacribloody fice to the VPj book — what is certain is that tones

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 159

the chroniclers are unanimous in telling us of assassinations—Christian children's abductions by Jews.

The men of old were not like the French
degenerates of today, weak and spineless beings,
, patiently enduring all the infamies; they heard defend their children and the protests were energetic—ques.

The special ability of Jews to suck up all the wealth of a country as soon as they are left more or less alone was further developed in excessive proportions.
complaints rose up to the throne from all sides.

Supported by the people and the Church, summarizing consent—general ment all authority to them, the Capetians, not let us not forget, were family men as much as kings.

Philip Augustus, upon his accession to the throne, had to take care of
of this question and he resolved it in the sense of pity for all (•('< miilheiror.x stripped who were his people.

He confiscated part of the Jews' property and handed over to the debtors of all their debts. Which proves, what—that it has been said, that he was not guided, in taking this order—barely if he received for himself a fifth of the sums times.

Napoleon, as we will see later, was forced to act roughly the same; any sovereign having the notion of his total right and not just holding a kind of derisory management, should, whether he were emperor or king, "behave the same way today. He obviously said—ment to all these financial company organizers pins or less suspicious ones which have ruined the shareholders in enii—

160 JEWISH FRENCHNESS

chissanl the founders: "You have not acquired the mil-pennies that you possess by work, but by cunning, you have not created any capital, you have taken that which had been saved by others; return a few mil-pennies on the thirty or forty that you have indu-acquired." No one would find it wrong that MM. de Rothschild, for example, would be satisfied with five or six a hundred thousand pounds of income. We live on that, even in several-gentlemen.

Saint Louis, this fearless knight who unites in himself these two forms of the ideal: the Saint and the Paladin, seems to have wanted to judge the question from even higher. Designated by his enemies as judge in his own cause and condemn himself himself, the holy king had like an inextinguishable thirst for justice. An ancient hero, he had, like Hercules,

walked eternal justice

In a bloody coat carved from a lion.

A Christian hero, he throws over her the fleur-de-lis cloak with which the colors recall both the clear azure of the firmament and the purity of the unblemished flower.

He finally wanted to know what was the evil principle which determined the Jews to make themselves the object of hatred of all. At the request of Pope Gregory IX, whose attention had also been drawn to this point, he had the Talmud in a solemn assembly presided over by Guillaume of Auvergne, and to which the rabbis were invited to assist.

Mr. Noël Valois, former student of the École des Chartes and doctor of law, who published under this title: Guillaume d'Auvergne, a remarkable book, devoted a chapter very interesting in this discussion.

(.was in Piiri:s, he writes, at the beginning of summer (June 21, 1240). the court of Saint Louis, presided over that day by the Blanche family, ■it was the death of a considerable number of clerics or prelates belonging to neighboring dioceses. William had not had a long time missed the meeting. Some volumes covered in characters .•!ran:2cs attracted the attention of the curious and it was known of the convert Nicholas that these signs were Hebrew and these book* the Talmud. But soon a more interesting spectacle captivated the audience. The door of the sa had just given way to four rabbis, that a Jewish author, in his enthusiasm, decorates with the word "heritage" saint", "of his royal empire;" it was Jechiel of Paris, Judah son of David. Samuel, son of Solomon and Moses of Tucs, son of Jacob, the latter famous for his preaching both in France and in Spain gne. According to the Hebrew story, they entered "sad and worried in the palace of the infidel king, while the Jewish people disperse— knows on all sides, like a flock without a shepherd.

All facilities were left to the Jews to defend themselves. and they did it with skill and courage. They were not no less forced to recognize that the Talmud contained contrary prescriptions, not only to any society Christian, but to any civilized society.

In this book, carefully examined, we probably found, assertions even more serious than those cited Mr. Noël Valois. We saw there, not without horror, that Jesus Christ is plunged into hell, into the ever-boiling mud, that the holy Virgin engendered her divine Son following of an ad II, .ne committed with a soldier named Pandara, that churches are cesspools, preachers are dogs aljoycurs.

These amenities, which still cause controversy, Jewish press, no longer even shocks people of the world today, but it was different then.

Other passages were still made to worry at good right.

"It is ordered to kill the best goipn.

"The word given to the go}} is not binding (1).

"Every day in their prayers the Jews must launch three times curses against the ministers of the Church, the kings and enemies of Israel.

little, it was, after all, his subjects, his barons, it was him—even and the monarch was perhaps excusable "de voidoiii" to defend everything that was so violently attacked.

The holy king, however, showed extraordinary meekness—dinary. Like Jehiel, the rabbi of Paris, manifested fearing for his own people, one of the king's officers said to him:  Jehiel, who thinks of harming the Jews? » Blanche of Castile itself manifested the intention of protecting the Jews against all violence.

The Talmud alone was condemned, and all copies that could be seized were thrown into the flames.

The Jews did not lose heart. They corrupted money price a bad priest, as there are unfortunately—fortunately in all times, who became their advocate.

Names have their destiny. In 4880, it was a Clement who was the executor of the orders of the Jews by going to expel from their religious saints, in 1246, it was a Clé—also lies, Eudes Clément, archbishop of Sens, who sold himself to the enemies of Jesus Christ. A year later, day for day, after having signed this contract, he was seized with cruel—the bowel pains to which he immediately succumbed.

(i; Exier/ita Talntudica, Dibl. iiat. liij. laUu IGioS.
The Jewish People of Elect has covered the Jewish people of ea& cilalioiiiâ.

THE JL'YE IN THE niST0iaK OE FUAXCE, 163

The king, terrified, said Mr. Noël Valois, fled with all his family and this miraculous punishment was followed new poui-suites. »

In his paternal kindness, Saint Louis seems not to have decided on rigors against the Jews (|a law that the necessity of {guaranteeing its pn'">—ir^niio <<n\ 1'^ romnvind.i .iIko—lutely.

The ordinance of 1254 only forbids Jews from to wear down, to alter and blaspheme the beliefs of the back French people among whom they live, she urges them to to engage in honest work (1).

It is in this sense again that Napoleon will try to resolve the issue, and when they have them after them all of Europe exasperated, revolutionized, undermined by them, attempts not to find in France a "more severe watch" that Saint Louis.

Saint Louis even seems not to have held it against the rabbi. Jechiel of Paris for the energy with which he had defended the Talmud. Guedaliah in Jachim, in his Claiaine de la

(I, VIII--the original of the article concerning the Jews in the ordinance of 1154: "Ceterum ordinationem factam contra scribari •listhi-te precipimus, quae talis est: Impleat cessare blasphemias, sorlilegiis and caracleritibus; etiam Talmus (poor Talmudists; the printed copies bear the imprint and do not sell anything. quem alii libri in quibus inveniuntur blasphemie comburantur; And Judei qui hoc servare noluerint expelluntur, et irasores lesili-punishing me And living others In the law) orihu$ maiuum suarum vei de negociacionibus sine terminis vel usuria. "

The Jews were granted, or so it is seen, freedom of trade, but we leupiiéretidail ensure. The word niritcleribm denotes characters magical, witchcraft practices. This is found in the Arch. uat J.-J. 30 of 199. V.

16. JEWISH FRANCE

Tradition tells an anecdote on this subject which is not lacking no character.

This Jechiel who dabbled in Kabbalah and cultivated the occult sciences had a lamp at the top of his house which, it was said, burned without oil. In his home severely closed and defended against any aggression, he had placed a nail delighted that he only had to push to make the people into the ground as soon as they approached his house.

One evening there is a knock at the door. Jechiel hits the nail which, instead of going into the wall, will come into the room. Jechiel understands that all his magical prestige is without force against the visitor, he guesses that the one who comes to see is a saint; he immediately thinks of the one whom the people, anticipating the judgment of the Church, has already greeted the name of saint. "The king is here!" he said, and rushed to the door and kneels before the sovereign.

– What are you doing at my door? asks the rabbi. Don't you know that there is a genius who watches over my remains ?

– I am not afraid of demons, replies the king, and I come see your lamp that all of Paris is talking about.

Isn't it true that she has a certain color this arrival of the king who, walking through dark Paris nocturnal of the Middle Ages, comes to visit this scholar in the depths of his mysterious retreat.

The Jews, in fact, since Philip Augustus, had had to take new precautions; times were going to become— become increasingly bad for them. Their literature testifies to this state of mind. To the little verses, to the poems jokers, to the epithalamiums that one serves the écitcau, in the wedding steps are followed by the selichas, the lamentable elegies.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 165

The Jews everywhere are now murmuring the lamentations— tions of Zerachie Ha Levy, nicknamed Haisghari, the author of the Ruah hen. Spirit of Grace.

Kelas! The Glory of Judah is clothed in mourning because the evening shadows stretched out.

Hope in my goodness, O my dove. I will rise again as of old. yet my tabernacle: I will prepare a lamp there for David thy king. And when you are rebloacbie, I will repress these ferocious beasts which lay in wait to devour you, O my beautiful dove including the voik. is aj;reab!e.

Everywhere we must sell the small schools, scliolae inferiores, where people were taught with such joy to blaspheme religion L-lirétienne. In Narbonne, the school of the Saint-Félix parish sold for 35³ livres tournois; in Orléans, a small school fsl sold for 440 pounds paissis; another, larger, for 340 pounds.

For centuries, Jews have softened the world on these misfortunes and as soon as they had a semblance of self— They closed other people's schools.

I still remember an old priest forced into exile and who showed me, with tears in his eyes, his app;i— scientific links that had been broken during the crossing. So take, at the time of the expulsions, the collection of the French Republic of the Jew Gambetta, of Ruppel of the Jew Paul Meuric, from the Lanler)ie of the Jew Eugène Mayer, from the Paris of the Jew Weil-Picard, from the Débals where the Jew Ralfa-Jovich shares influence with Léon Say, the man of Rothschild; they shout with wild joy at the spectacle' of these poor religious forced to abandon their work started, to say goodbye to these students who are their only family in the world.

We must do justice to the Jews, so insolent and so

iC}Q JEWISH FRANCE

contemptible in prosperity, which they bear admirably-adversity. In persecutions they were supehes; mothers often threw their children themselves
in the flames for fear that they would be baptized.

The execution at Troyes left its mark in a poem elegiac which is one of the rare monuments in the vul-
that the Jews gave us in the Middle Ages.

Must are a mechief Israel, the lost people

E is ne poet mes s'is, se va enrayant;

Because between bones ferret ars meinz proz cors sage et gent

Ki por lor vivre n'oret doné nus rachel d'argent.

The* version is over. May God save us from the violent people!

The author of this play is Rabbi Jacob, son of Judah of Lotre (Lorraine) who also composed a selidia, in Hebrew, on the same subject.

The events of Troyes had indeed vividly-struck the Jews. On March 26, 1288, the day of Ven-
On Holy Friday, the Christians invaded the rich man's house.
Jew Isaac Châtelain, author of elegiac poems and the a-were arrested along with his entire family. The unfortunate offered to buy themselves out at a high price, but no one agreed to grant them life only if they recanted. They refused and the satoedi April 24, 1288, year 5048 of the Jewish era, they went up thirteen in number on the pyre. All went to their deaths with fearlessness intoning the scheme and encouraging each other-mutually giant. Isaac Châtelain's wife rushed forward herself in the flames; her two sons, her daughter-in-law and Sam-
Well, his son-in-law followed this example.

The victims were II. Isaac Châtelain, his wife, his two daughters, the wife of the eldest son << who was beautiful, «
bimsoii called the Kudtuou or the young Alalcadmenaili,

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 1977

Solomon, son of Phebus, receiver, Baruch Tob Elem of Aviley, Siraéon brother, scribe of Cbatillon, Jouah or Colon, Cljaource.

Mr. Darraesteter recounted this execution in the Ar-Israelites chives and naturally he disapproves of it. That he said of this kind note from his friend Mayer, which appears in the small Correspondence of the Lantern of the 4th bre 1853?

There is no cause for controversy here where Tcni gets excited, where expression goes beyond thought. A good man asks Mayer for his opinion on the associations born from the Rocket and this is what the Jew replies:

" : A', he. – And you conclude that Oit was wrong to shoot the poor scumbags in ibTii. We are of the opinion on the contrary; we even believe that too much has been used consideration towards them. They hadn't stolen it: that tie could make marlt/rs, all that e(lectivemeitt ueii did none. »

Undoubtedly, one cannot defend oneself from a feeling of pity for those who suffer, whoever they may be; it is impossible to run, without having a heavy heart, along maityrologist of Israel, VEmek habkha, Celtic Valley of tears where the victims of all countries are inscribed (l).ll It is good, however, to oppose the hypocritical phrases of Jews their true feeling towards Christians. The thing is all the more obvious, since for a hundred years not one of

(1) The Valley of Tears, chronicle of the sufferings of hraèi dt-puii Alt iii''j '. 'ifioit ju^ifu'à «('•»■ Days, pure vinitte Joicph Un-Cohen, méiit:iu iCAcfjnou {Xôl^i, published for the first time in French, pai Jul en S.ie.

168

THE JEWISH PHANCI-:

((these poor Calotius " did not say a word against the Jews, did not demanded a measure of violence against them.

There is some difference, we realize it once we are there more, between history as it is understood in academics-mies and in the salons of false Catholics, and the real story as truth-loving thinkers see it in fact.

The courage shown by the victims of Troyes is not this strength of soul, we must refer to the time when these scenes happened. Society was then absolutely religious; by placing himself outside general beliefs, the Jew does not did not only put himself in the law; to use the word of Hegel, whom we have already cited, he rushed into some- that sort "outside of nature." What hope of fighting con- so many forces united, had indeed this poor nation who, since the fall of the temple, had found his God deaf to all his prayers?

The energy of the Jews was once again wonderful. I does not speak of the courage shown in the face of insults, in the face the executioners, in front of the pyres, I speak of more energy rare that it takes to resist a current, the influence from the middle, to the feeling of implacable helplessness.

Compare this attitude to the baseness that is done in front of a government that they despise well-established people, rich, who only have to wait and judge...

Then, but only then, does the Jew become the character which Michelet painted in an incomparable page which u la vigor and the strange accent of life of an etching by Rem- brandt.

In the Middle Ages, he writes, he who knows where the gold is, the true alchemist, the viai sorcerer, or the Jew, or the deuu-Jew, the Lom-

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE d69

baid. The Jew, the filthy man, the man who cannot touch m commodity nor woman that one does not burn, the man of outrage, on the- what everyone is spitting on, it is to him that we must address ourselves.

Proliferating nation, which, above all others, had the strength multiphane, the force which engenders, which fertilizes at will the bre- Jacob's encore or Shylock's sequins. Throughout the middle age, persecuted, chased away, recalled, they made the essential in- intermediary between the tax authorities and the victim of the tax authorities, between th patient, pumping the gold from below, and returning it to the king from above with the ugly grimace... But they still had some left thing... Patient, indestructible, they have won through time. They have encountered the problem of evaporating wealth; aiïranchis by the letter do changes, they are now free, they are masters; from blows to slaps, here they are on the throne of the world.

For the poor man to address the Jew, for him to app- close to this little, disreputable house, so that he speak to this man who, they say, crucifies little children, he does not It takes no less than the horrible pressure of the taxman. Between the taxman, who will take the Jew as its middle.

When he had exhausted his last resource, when his bed was sold, when his wife and children, lying in ground, trembled with fever, crying: bread! head bowed and more bent than if he had been carrying his load of wood, he headed slowly towards the odious house of the Jew, and he remained for a long time at the door before knocking. The Jew having cautiously opened the small grid, a dialogue began, strange and difficult. What was the saying? Christian? "In the name of Uicu! – The Jew killed him, your God! – By pity! – What Christian ever had pity on the Jew? These are not the words that are needed. A pledge is needed. – What can he give who has no connection? The Jew will say to him gently: – Alon friend, in accordance to the orders of the King, our lord, I was neither on habit bloody nor on a plow iron... No, as a pledge, I only want yourself. I am not one of you, my right is not the Christian law. It is a more ancient law (in pattes secando); your flesh will respond. Blood for gold.

The Jews were treated more harshly by Philip the Beautiful than by any of his predecessors. The edict of 1300

read

170 LA FKA.VCK .HJIVK

expelled and at the same time ordered the confiscation of everything what we could grasp of their links.

The Jews, however, had not lost entirely courage.

The inexplicable Templar affair that has remained in history as an enigma whose solution has never been known word, like a kind of melodrama whose outcome is sinister but whose plot is not clear, is explained perfectly when we realize the way of proceed from the Jews.

Their way of acting varies little. They do not like to openly attack, they create or rather they corrupt when it is created, because there again they are not inventors, a powerful association that serves them as a machine of war for Lattre in breach of the social organization which bothers them. Order of the Templars, Freemasonry, Inter-Nationalism, Nihilism, everything is good for them. As soon as they are entered, they proceed there as in a financial company, where the efforts of all are solely employed to serve the cause or interests of Israel, without three-quarters of the time people have a sense of what they are doing.

The Knights Templar had been found on many occasions taken in connection with the Jews, for matters of af^ent. It was through the Templars, in fact, that all these the financial operations of the Crusades, including the mechanics is still so little known; they collected the money that the abbeys voted to help the Christian armies; they van- were money to the lords and expected effects- payable at Saint-Jean-d'Acre. Now every individual, every body? constituted, any people of Aryan origin who delight in handling of money is lost: money depraves him without that this depravity gives him no advantage,

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 171

As long as they were able to buy their land directly to the nobles who were leaving for the Holy Places, the Jews acted eiix-niôrnes, but when the royalty had begun to put an end to their usurious dealings, they were forced to use the Tem Plira as a pretext. From there the wealth of the order more apparent than real.

Ø)mly the knights of Christ, the heroes of Ptolemais and from Tiberias did they come to outrage the crucifix? Mr. Mignard tried to explain this progressive moral decomposition of order in a very learned work devoted to the description of a curious box belonging to the Duke of Blacas (t). This box, found in a house in the Temple in Essarois and all chained with cabalistic signs and of Arabic inscriptions, reproduced the main symbols of the Gnostics, the seven signs, the star with seven rays. The doctrines born in the Jewish School of Syria, spread more later by Manes, had entered the order of the Temple <•! Manichaeism defeated with the Albigensians. / found a asylum among these devoted servants of the Christian faith yours.

What is certain, what is noted by all the witnesses- reports, which emerges from each line of the trial documents. published by Michelet, in the Unpublished Documents of His-

(i) Monograph of the box set of M, the Duke of Blarat. – Continuation of the Monograph of the box or proofs of the Manichaeism of the Order of the Temple.

ReggbeliDi de Cbio, a zealous Mason, very hostile to realism, explains quite well also horned these candid souls of knights crusaders suffered the invasion of the East and left to take the caplieu.-e exepesis, to the perfidious arguments of the enemies -Ju (Christ. [Im. Masonry considered the result of Egyptian religions,

i'^i JEWISH FRANCE

tory of France, is that at the time of the suppression of the order, the outrage to the crucifix was part of the ceremonies of initiation. The knights spat three times on the crucifix by denying it: ter àbnegabant et horrihili crudelitate ter in faciemspuebant ejus. Brother Guillermy fled ohligé for his initiation to deny and spit three times on the cross as a sign of contempt for Our Lord Jesus-Christ who suffered on this cross: DespiciendoDominum Jhesuyn Christum qui passus Fuit in ea.

x(Spit on this cross, they said to the Templar Jean de Thounnes showing him a cross where the image of the Christ, spit on this in contempt of what this ohjet represents! Spuas super istum in despeclu ejus (1). »

According to the testimony of Geoffroid de Thutan of the diocese from Tours, the formula of denial was: "I reney Jhesu, I reney Jhesu, I reney Jhesu. »

The shameful kiss completed these initiation ceremonies-tion.

Osculatus fut recipientem in ore et postea in fine spinoe dorsi.

All societies that propose to debase being human by making him abjure his divine origin, by making him making us deny the Man-God, who died for us, feel the need to symbolize this degradation by a visible sign.

Nothing changes in this respect and we find the

i) Doc. in volume 11.

The knights also worshipped an oriental idol in figura Daffometi, a sort of monstrous island that seems a reminiscence-cence of strange Phoenician deities.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE {"iZ

shameful kiss from the 13th century to the 17th century in one of the Masonic orders, the Mopses.

The applicant was asked, as with the Templars, slightest contradiction; " he replied: "– Yes, great Mopse. » He was then asked what he preferred to kiss– serve the back of the great Mopse, the back of the Great Master or the Devil's behind." This option, we understands, left perplexed those to whom this was proposed unattractive choice.

A movement of indignation, writes the author to whom we refer let us borrow these details, which the recipient rarely fails to do at this moment, obliges the supervisor to pray him with all politeness and all possible instances of choosing one or the other. This forms between them the most original dispute that one can imagine. The recipient complains bitterly that takes the mockery too far and declares that he does not pretend to be came to serve as a toy for the company. The supervisor, after having uselessly exhausted his rhetoric, will take a doguin of wax, cloth or some other similar material which has the tail curled up like all the dogs of this species; he applies it to the recipient's mouth and makes it thus kiss by force. The dog destined to receive this respect– A slender tribute is always placed on the table of the master of the Lodge as a symbol of society and this is where the surveil– lant will take it [i).

This naturalistic symbolism is nothing but very natural.

(1) The Order of the Fi'nncs–Masons betrayed and the secret of the Mopses revealed, in Amsterdam, Mr. ccc Lvni.

The plaucbe saw reinsenle the reception of a lady in toilet of court, which bears a kiss on the eyes, and to which or presents the dog to kiss.

10.

174 JEWISH FRANCE

Is it not logical, as soon as one despises God, to render tribute to a dog (1)?

Philip the Fair had a rougher hand than our souve– modern rains, the Templars noticed it.

The great dream cherished by the Jews of a uni– verselle organized from above by a cosmopolitan order allied to almost all the noble families, below par lepers who from one to another transmitted the golden word– dre, outside by the Moors of Spain and the Semites from Tunis with whom their coreligionists from France months from the pyre of Jacques Molay.

A constant tradition in pre-Freemasonry tends that March 18, 1314, a date still celebrated in the lodges, some initiates disguised as masons came to collect-read the ashes of the great master on this Isle of Cows which is now the Place Dauphine, and there they served to exterminate the Capetians and avenge their victims. times.

(1) In the provinces, the author of the Three-Point Brothers tells us, the test of the Goat of Sa/omon is still practiced in the lodges. The Venerable said gravely to the recipient, who was taken care of to play no tricks until then: "Mother, we possess-dons the goat that served as nurse to King Solomon; this goat by a benefit as miraculous as it was providential, is still alive and the Masons drink with delight from its milk; it reminds them, in fact, a great monarch whose history is intertwined with that of the Freemasonry. You will kneel low, and you will have the honor of suckling from one of the sacred goat's names of Solomon. The profane, without suspicion, puts himself in the position wanted, and he opens his mouth, believing that he is going to be presented with a goat's udder properly adapted; or applies the lea to it lips to the dirty behind of a filthy goat.'•

THE JEW IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF FRANCE 175

They took time to keep their oath, but in all case it must be noted that it is at the Temple, the mother house of the Templars in France, that Louis XVI was imprisoned before the son of Saint Louis went to the scaffold, Temple also where the little Louis XVII was martyred speaks Jewish cobbler Simon (1).

We do not, I think, have to insist on the close correlation which exists between Freemasonry and the Templars who called themselves militia templi Salomonis, fratres rniliilix Salomonis. The fact is proven by the very name of certain lodges. The Manuel or Tuileui' states that "if the Templars have disappeared from the order They left traces in Freemasonry. >> Ragon, a Masonic authority, also admits Celt filiation (2).

Regghelini is particularly explicit on this subject.

several rites, he says, preserve the distribution of the ancients provincial masteries in their differences, and the commemoration-allegorical tion of the Templars in recognition of the do,;!me and crusaders. The high grades which, more particularly, commemorate

The Templars are the Knights of the Sun, the great Scottish,
Patriarch of the Crusaders, the Royal Secret, the Kadosch, all the elect-;

(1) Like all beings of fatality, Marie-Anloioctte had pressuliii.enls who did not deceive her; she felt for this Temple tower a uayeur iu»t.uclive. u I have always had uue such terror binds that light, she said, in the 6q of 1792, that I prayed thousand Tois the o nite of Arlois to have it brought down. It was a pressutiof all that we would have to suffer there."

(â) The ^niiiiiid chapter of Stockholm preludes to possession of the will author of Jacques Molay, in which he established the continuity the Knights Templar, under the patronage of the mystical coufieri-that lies Masons.

176 JEWISH FRANCE

who derived from it, the Scotsman of C'ermont and all those of this cha-clown, illustrious knight, sublime Templar, Knight of the Eagle of elected master, all high grades of strict observance as iEqnes professas^ the Knight of Charity or Mage, the Knight of Hope, the Grand Inquisitor, the Grand Commander.

In ancient and modern Masonic assemblies, we retains the same outfit and configuration of the crusader knights, of the Templars, and even of a large part of the old corporations. The Venerable represents the former magister calliédralis;
he is on a throne in the east from where dogma and doctrines. The two Overseers are the former procuratores placed at the ends of the columns as in the old chapters.
The Alienated Brothers on the two columns replace the Equities and the Ecclesiastical Brothers, as in the an- corporations
The oath of the recipient Mason is a similar oath of the one that the crusader knights, the Templars and other corporations made on the occasion of their wishes.

There is no doubt that the Jews, agreed with the king of Granada and the sultan of Tunis, have orgaorganized a conspiracy of lepers to poison the fountains and in this way throw the crowd everywhere, create one of those states of crisis, one of those periods of worry-vague and troubled study that made possible the immense upheaval of 93 which was so proQtable to Israel.

These facts abound. I know well, again once, that we have agreed today to declare apocrypts all documents that are not favorable to the watchword; he is allowed to use his reason, to judge past events in the light of present events contemporary situations.

The very existence of a general leper uprising is attested by all the authors of the time, by the continuator of Guillaume de Nangis in particular. "We ourselves,

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 177

he said, in a part of our vassalage, we have of our eyes saw one of these bags. A leper who was passing, fear- Annoyed at being caught, threw behind her a tied rag which was immediately brought to justice, and a head of a cow- work, toad legs, and like hair of women coated with a black and stinking liquor, a horrible difficult to see and feel. All put in a large fire, could not burn, sure proof that it was a violent poison.

There were many speeches, many opinions. The most probable, is that the king of the Moors of Granada, seeing himself with the pain so often beaten, imagined to take revenge by plotting with the Jews the loss of Christians. But the Jews too suspicious They themselves addressed the lepers... These, with the help of the devil, were persuaded by the Jews. The principal lepers held four councils, so to speak, and the devil, through the Jews, their made it understood that, since lepers were considered such people abject and counted for nothing, it would be good to ensure that all Christians died or became lepers. This pleased everyone; each one, upon returning, tells the others... A great number, lured by false promises of kingdom, counties and other temporal goods, said and firmly believed that the thing would do so [1].

The Lord of Arthenay, we read in Michelet, writes to the king that a great leper, seized in his land, confesses that a rich man Jew gave him money and some drugs. These drugs- were composed of human blood, urine, to which was added the body of Christ; the whole thing was dried and crushed, put in a bag with a weight, was thrown into fountains or wells.

What wonder that the lepers were excited by the Jews? Do we not find here the usual procedures, the way, the constant system of the Semite? For the Jews, the lepers, the unfortunate proletarians, these pariahs, these lepers of modern civilization, the mougicks of Russia are ready-made instruments that they mount, that they shake, that they deceive, that they unleash on society with great speeches against tyrants and which they abandon to the ruthless repressions, when Israel pulled from a revolution all the profit that could be made from it.

(1) Conl G. de Naag. anu. 1321, page 78.

Pay no attention to this peculiar mixture of urine and of human blood, suppose it is oil, nitro-glycerin or dynamite and you will be in full modern way. Whether it is Naquet preaching the use of gun cotton under the Empire, the Jews Goldeberg, Hartmann or the Jewess Jessa Heftmann using nitroglycerin in Russia, you will always find the Semite in all these special affairs. The Aryan temperament is not found there nowhere. The Aryan stabs or shoots a shot but doesn't understand anything about all this chemistry.

Relations between 14th-century Jews and foreigners are hardly more debatable. I don't see very well on what reasons could be used to contest the authenticity of the letters addressed to the Israelites by the king of Grenade and the King of Tunis. Authenticity cannot make the omission of a doubt (1).

The most important of these letters, that is, the translation of the original text in French certified by five notaries

(1) If we publish the letters discussed between the Jew Elias Muifsali and the Jewish bankers and statesmen who organized the expedition of Tunisia, where one would undoubtedly find stronger things than this. The clinics of clinicians who were killed for to provide millions for the Cunioudo and the Ilirsch.

THE JEW IN r, 'Hr=;T0rnE Di: francp: 179

the uyaix and sealed, is kept in the treasury of the Charters (National Archives, box J, 427, no. dS).

Here, moreover, is the text of this document which has not been so far exactly published:

"To Sanson, son of Melias, sent by the King of Granada. You told us that you gave to the best by your side Saint-Jaque all the gold we have given you. If you miss gifts that we like that you pay them well, that you us you have sent that CXV meisel por eus and por les autres have done the charged to have; if you order that you give them without fault.

 I>You know that Jacob and Acarias made arrangements with us between the mons. If you order that you prescribe the venom that we have tramped you and made you measure in tanks, in peas and in fontiiincs: and if you do not have enough medicines, I will trametra a.-scz. And we promised you to return the land of pro:nis.>ion, and we will give you a suitable one. And I sent you to-very cliosc that you lie in the water that the king drinks and uses; and not hold on, do not spare any possession to give to those who will give and eieteror.t these poisons, but that the need is faced bastively;
 when I will give you bor and bib in such abundance as you would like, and we do not doubt the expenses or missions, as long as the need to face. And these letters are shown to Aron the young, and you all put together to hear this word. And you are all greetings from the King of Granada, who wishes you to be tuit of an acort and a volunlé.

"From the King of Thunes. To my brothers and their final greetings.
 Think of doing well the work that you have, when I tell you Irameltra enough bor and money for the costs. And [if you me
 If you wanted to keep your children, I would keep them as my own.
 You know that these are part of us, of the Juys and of the niaiucis* was last mentioned on Easter Florios. Don't worry bor ne argent que n.'enpoi>onni>iz htit fment les cre.-;iens. And at surely the air were LXXV July and sick, if like you know, ^we greet you and your brothers, when you are our brothers in love, el no.is we greet the little ones and the big ones.

"Magister Petius do Accra, phisious, juriitus a<i sancta Dd evangeiia dictam liUeram manu et Ungua aiabica sciipiam vera-

180 THE JEWISH FRINGE

cite exponere, ipsam exposait in lingara gallicam forma et modo superius declarato, die jovis post festum apostolorum Petri and Pauli, anno Domini iM" CCG° vicesimo primo, in presentia viri nobilis domini Franconis de Aveneriis, militis, domini nostri régis baillivi Malisconensis, in Castro Matisconensi, domini Pétri Mau-relli, ejusdem domini régis clerici, judicis majoris emerged and appeal-lationum Lugduni, domini Barlholomei de Jo., archdiaconi, and Guioii de Albaspinga, cantor Matisconensis, Stephani Verinci, Guiiielmi de Nuyz, Pétri Pule and Johannis de Cabannis, nolariorum regionum.

"Ego vero Gui'lelraus de Nuyz, clericus, auctoritate regia publicus noiarius et juratus, expo-itioni suprascripte, per dictum magistrum F*etrum, ut premittitur, facte, una cum Petro Pule de Matiscone, Stepliano Verinci and Johanne de Cabanis, clericis, note-riis regiis et testibus scriptis, interfui vocatus et rogalus, teste hoc sign meo, »

(Notary's signature.)

t lit ego Perronetus Pule of Matiscone, clericus, auctoritate regia publicus notarius et juratus, suprascripte expositioni dictates littere, per dictum magistrum Peirum, ut premittitur, fact, inter- l'ui una cum dictis Guiilelmo de Nuyz, Stéphane Verinci and Johaune de Cabannis, clericis, notariis regiis, vocatus et rogatus, teste hoc solito sign meo. »

(Notary's signature.)

“Et ego vere Johannes de Cabannis, clericus, auctoritate regia publicus notarius et juratus, expositioni suprascripte, per dictum magistrum, ut premittitur, fact,. una cum Petro Pule, Guiilelmo de INuix, Stéphane Verinci, de Matiscone, clericis, notariis regiis and testibus scriptis, interfui vocatus et rogatus, teste hoc sign meo. »

(Notary's signature.)

“And ego, Stephanus Verynci, of Matiscone, clericus, aucto- ritate regia publicus notarius et juratus, supradicte expositioni dictum littere, per dictum magistrum Peirum, ut dictum eat, fact, nterfui una cum dictis Guiilelmo de ^'uiz, Johanne de Cabannis,

JEWISH LB IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 48'

Petro Pule, notariia regiis, vocatus et rogatus, teste hoc solit i ïigno meo. »

(Notary's signature.)

And our Petrus de Lugnyaco, civis Matisconensi?, tenens sigil- lum commune excellentissimi governed Francie in bailivia Matisconen^i constitutum, cum nobis constet de expositione suprascripte littere. lingua arabica scripte, per dictum magistrum Petrum de Acra,ut suprascriptum est, in lingua gallicana facte, per faithful relation dictorum notariornm regionum, quibus super hoc et aliis fidem plenariam adhibemus, sigillum commune predictum presentibus litteris duximus apponendum. Datum anno et die jovis pre- dictis.

(Seal of the royal bailiwick of Mùcon, in red wax, on double parchment tail.)

Other documents in any case confirm these rela- tions.

To guide us in appreciating what happened, says Mr. Rupert in his learned work VEgliie et la Syna- igue, we have before our eyes a monument taken from the com-authors of the Bohemian Fastes and published by Marquar and Freher.

The statement of facts is attached to the Pope's leprosis letter
John XXI. In this letter, which dates from the very year 1321, the Sovereign Pontiff reproduces a report addressed to him by Philippe, Count of Anjou and who speaks of the various means put in work by the Jews to harm Christians.

"Finally the next day," said Philippe, "the people of our county did irruption among the Jews about the drinks [impolationes) that they had composed for the use of Christians. By engaging in activities searches in the house of the Jews, in one of the dwellings which belonged to the Jew Bananias, in an obscure place in the house, in a small chest where his treasures and secrets were found, we found a sheepskin or parchment covered with writing from two sides. The seal, which was gold and weighed 19 florins, was held by a red silk cord. On the seal was depicted the figure of the crucifix, before which a Jew appeared in a

H

182 JEWISH FRENCHNESS

posture so ignominious and so dishonest, that I am ashamed to de-
to write.

"Our people would not have paid attention to the contents of the letter, if suddenly and by chance they had not been struck by the long-length and width of this seal. Newly con-vertis translated the letter. Bananias himself and six other Jews sufficiently educated made the same translation, not of themselves-same, but constrained by fear and force. Separated then and put to torture, Bananias and his companions perseveredbegan to present the same translation. Three clerics educated in theological science and in the Hebrew language translated Finally the letter in Latin.

The letter was addressed to the Prince of the Saracens, master of the East and Palestine, seat of the Jewish nation, and whose power extended as far as Granada, Spain.
and asked that a treaty of friendship be concluded between the Jews and the Saracens, and showing the hope of seeing the two people-prince to be willing to restore to the Jews the land of their ancestors. It read:

The Christian nation obeys the son of a vile and poor woman—of our people, who unjustly usurped our heritage and that of our fathers.

When we have forever reduced this nation under the yoke of our domination, you will give us back into possession of our great city of Jerusalem, of Jericho and of Ai, where lies the sacred ark. And we will be able to raise your throne over the kingdom and the great city of Paris, if you help us achieve this goal. In the meantime, and as you will be able to verify by your noble viceroy of Granada, we worked on this work in skillfully throwing poisonous substances into their drinks—born, powders composed of bitter and pernicious herbs, in throwing poisonous reptiles into the waters, into the wells, into cisterns, in fountains and in watercourses, so that Christians, one after the other and each according to his constitution, perish prematurely under the effects of corrupted and inhaled by these poisons.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 183

We completed this project particularly in, distributing considerable sums to a few poor Jews of their religion who are called lepers. But these misers—suddenly turned against us, and seeing themselves surprised by other Christians, they accused us and revealed everything we do. Nevertheless, he misses this glorious point for us, that these Christians had poisoned their brothers, a certain mark of their discord and their dissolutions.

This letter also contains a significant passage:

You will soon be able, with God's help, to cross the sea, you return to Granada, and extend to the rest of the Christians your magnificent sword with a powerful hand and an invincible arm. And then you will sit on the throne in Paris, and in the same time, once free, we will possess the land of our fathers that God has promised us and we will live in harmony under one law and one God. There will never be again from this time, neither anguish nor sorrow, for Solomon said: "He who walks united with one God, he has only one will with him." David adds: Oh! how good it is, how pleasant it is to dwell together as brothers!" Our holy prophet Hosea thus said spoken in advance of Christians: "Their heart is divided and because of this they will perish."

The hatred of the crucifix which is the dominant feeling of the very clearly stated. To use a foreign prince-ger, whether it is a Napoleon I* against Germany or a William against France, as from a point of support, to make Christians fight among themselves and bring about by these divi- the triumph of a race whose children all stand closely by the hand, – such has been the doctrine constant of the Jews and it is to her that they owed all their success.

Europe obviously went through at the end of the 13th century and at the beginning of the 14th century a period of ana-

184 JEWISH FRANCE

similar to the one we are going through at this moment, where the high banking, Freemasonry, the cosmopolitan revolution lite, all three in the hands of the Jews, compete in the same goal by different means. She came up against this claim of the Jew to take away from both Christians and the religious idea that helps to do without money and money all the more necessary since we only believe in one whole life terrestrial.

The suddenness of decision shown by Philip the Fair by stopping the Templars everywhere saved Christianity from Semitism, like the victory of Charles-Martel, at Poitiers, had saved her from the same scourge six centuries earlier, as a vigorous and simultaneous blow struck at the Jews by all the sovereigns of Europe would still save it today-today.

The Jews, alternately driven out and recalled, appeared still some time among us. Under Philip of Valois, we tried to use their fiscal genius by making them per-tax collectors. John the Good, upon arriving at the throne, appears having wanted a decisive test and he attempted it in very striking conditions of loyalty. The Jews were assured a stay of twenty years and the son of King John, Count of Poit-third party, was made guardian of their privileges. Charles V and Charles VI confirmed these provisions.

With their incredible stubbornness in evil, the Jews continued to pursue their multiple intrigues. They began to ruin the country again by usury, they procured-they brought hosts to desecrate them, they slaughtered children on Good Friday. Naturally the less people patient that now screamed, the preachers thundered and the kings had to adopt again preservative measures-vatrices.

Charles VI finally took a decision on September 47, 1394 of definitive expulsion, he banished the Jews from his States to life imprisonment and forbade them to remain there under penalty of death.

This expulsion, as noted in his book:

Jews in France, Mr. Haliez, who is nevertheless in favor to the Israelites, differs absolutely from the previous ones by its character as well as by its results. "It did not have for mobile the love of lucre and the spirit of plunder and what proves that all the Jews' claims are due to their be paid. It seems that we wanted to faithfully execute the ordinances which, since King John, had authorized them to stay in France; because it must be noted that the deadlines set by these laws were almost expired when the The annihilation was ordered.

To enable the Jews to liquidate their businesses, we even extended their stay for two years after which- They had to leave France forever.

This date of 1394 is one of the most important dates of our history. Kings have tried in turn to severity and gentleness; it is now proven that the Jew does not can acclimatize in France. The most diverse breeds, Celts, Gauls, Gallo-Romans, Germans, Franks, Normands, have blended into this harmonious whole which is the French nation, they have softened their angles, they have brought their qualities, they naturally tolerated their defects. Only the Jew could not enter into this amalgam. The France said to him: "My friend, we cannot agree, Let's go our separate ways and good luck!

There is intolerance there, no doubt, but not intolerance. in the religious sense of the word, since the most formidable The Jew's opponents were princes like Philip the

186 JEWISH FRANCE

Beautiful, more political certainly than mystical; there is intolerance- rance in the sense that science gives to this term when- that she says: "The subject cannot tolerate such substance." The France cannot tolerate the Jew, it gives him back; it does not receive him true that a long time later wrapped in a whole philosophical-humanitarian literature and will be very ill from it if she doesn't die from it.

Thanks to the elimination of this venom, France, which Gst still immersed in the horrors of the Hundred Years' War, she will become the great European nation, ruled by the arms, by letters, by the arts, by exquisite courtesy, by taste, by the charm of his benevolent nature and sociable, by his originality of good company which is so accommodating to the ideas of others. She will be the arbiter, the model, the envy of the whole world; she will be among his sons glorious generals, illustrious ministers, incomparable writers; she will have triumphs and setbacks, but honor will always be safe; she will not be free from vices but from those vices which do not degrade, and when she runs to battle it will not be for the good Mexicans, nor for good Tunisians. At her place, everyone The world will be, if not rich, at least happy, because the Jew will not will not be there to exert his parasitic influence on the work of others. usuriousism. In a word, from 139-4, the time when which she drives out the Jews, France will always rise. From 1789, when it took them up again, e) the will descend without ceasing

IiF 1391 A 17S9

The recollection of the Jew after the expulsion of 1394. – The great silence. – The Kabbalah. – Reucblin. – The impression of the Talmud. – The Reformation. – Nostradamus. – Concini. – Lopez-

– The Jews in Holland. – The World of Rembrandt. – The Jews t>n England. – Cromwell and Manasseh. – The drama of Victor Hugo. – The four Jewish families of the Paris of Louis XIV. – The Jews of Metz. – The Prolection of Braricas. – The Jews of Comlat. – A good rabbi's advice. – Papal Avignon and Mistral. – The Jews of Bordeaux. – Montaigne and Alexandre Dumas. – The Princess of Bigdad. – The Maranas. – Efforts Jews to enter Paris. – The request of the merchants and merchants of Paris. – The Jewish golden spider, die judische gol l$-pinne. – Voltaire and the Jews. – The two agents. – Voltaire financier. – The ignorance of the 18th century about the Jews. – The colo-Jewish community of Paris. – Peixotlo. – The first Jewish cemetery.

– Louis XVI and the Jews. – The latent Jewish movement. – Franc-Masonry. – The expulsion of the Jesuits. – The Jews in disguise: Law, Count of Saint-Germain, Cagliostro. – Hatred of the Jews against Marie-Antoinette. – The Jew Angelucci and Beaumarchais.

– Miriam Theresa and the Jews. – The Affair of the Necklace. – The Illuminati- nism. – The Saint-Jean de la Candeur lodge. – The Duke of Orleans, Grand Master of Freemasonry is allied with the Jews. – I^ Paiùon of Louis W\.. – The Acidemia of Metz. – Abbé Grégoire.

– The Jews and the Constituent Assembly. – Emancipation. – The former

FROM 1394 TO 1789

What happened to the Jew from 1394 to 1789? We don't really know. He fainted; he shaved, like the hare for- followed, he changed his plan of action, modified his tricks, extinguishes his ardor a lot. He then seems completely immersed in Kabbalah (1), absorbed in reading the Zoliar or the Sepher Zetzirah. He is an alchemist, he draws horoscopes- copes, he questions the stars and he can, speaking of the Great Work, have access everywhere. On this subject he is inexhaustible, he knows indeed and the wandering brothers with whom he comes into contact in every city also know what this word Grand means Work hidden under its mysterious symbolism. Make of gold, to rule by the banker over this world which only believes in priest and soldier, poverty and heroism, politics Jewish is still there. But this project, on the success of which we constantly consult the numbers, seems very chimerical or rather very far away. What must be reversed before to undertake nothing, it is the old hierarchy, the Church, the Monk, the Pope.

What should we do? We shouldn't think about France. Spain, which the Jews had handed over to the Moors, he conquered step by step the soil of the Fatherland and it is by the expulsion definitive of the Jews that it will prepare itself for the great destinies which awaited him under Charles V and Philip II. Germany

(1) Kabbalah comes from the verb Kibbel, which means in Hebrew race- Toir by IraJilion ora!e.

he.

190 JEWISH FRANCE

is more conducive to a movement, it is divided and there is no will not meet this already so powerful royal authority which on the other side of the Rhine centralizes the force and defends the beliefs of all. As much as France, however, Germany Magne is repugnant to the Jews and burns some of them from time to time in time.

The Jew, made more cautious by his misadventures, does not attacks Catholicism more directly; he blows Luther away, he inspires him, he suggests his best arguments to him.

The Jew, says Mr. Darmesteterfl; very rightly, understands how to reveal-discover, besides the intelligence of the holy books, the redoubtable sagacity of the oppressed. He is the doctor of the unbeliever; all the revolutions of the spirits come to him in the shadows or in the open air. He is at work in the immense blasphemy workshop of the great emperors Frederick and the princes of Swabia or Aragon: it is he who forges all this murderous arsenal of reasoning and irony that he will bequeath to the skeptics of the Renaissance, to the libertines of the great century, and Voltaire's sarcasm is only the last and re-tantalizing echo of a word whispered six centuries before, in the shadow of the ghetto, and even earlier, in the time of Celsus and Origen, in the very cradle of the religion of Christ.

"Any Catholic who becomes a Protestant," said Alexander Weill, takes a step towards Judaism. » All Protestant, would it be more accurate to say, is half Jewish.

Protestantism served the Jews to enter not yet in society but in humanity. The Bible, left in second place in the Middle Ages, took its place later near the Gospels, the Old Testament was placed next to the New. Behind the Bible appeared the Talmud. Reuchlin,

(1) A look at the history of the Jewish people.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 491

the man of the Jews, campaigned to throw it again. the circulation of the book prohibited.

This Reuchlin or Reuchlin appears to have been corrupted by the doctor of Maxirnilien who was Jewish. In 1494, he was shown to be favorable to Israel in this book: of Verbo mirifico, where he had put in pi-ésen-e uû fthiltASophe de antiquity Sidonius, a Jewish brother and philosopher Christian phe Capnio (Latin translation of Reucldia which means small smoke). Chai-gé to examine the Taluiud, it does not found nothing reprehensible in the insults it contained against Christianity.

The trial of the Talmud became a European affair. Faculty of Paris dealt with this question for forty-seven sessions and showed itself, like all of France at the time, resolutely anti-Jewish in condemning Reuchlin. The Emperor Maximilian, on the contrary, agreed with the Jews' lawyer. In 1520, the very year that Luther burned the papal bull In Wittemberjj, the first edition of the Talmud was printed in Venice.

Luther, however, whom the Protestants represent according to

of tolerance, was hard for the Jews, harder than the had never been any priest.

To ashes, he cried, to ashes the synagogues and the houses—sons of the i\i\is, and these ones that we park them in the stables! That from their goods a treasury is formed for the maintenance of converts; that the robust Jews and Jewesses are subjected to the harshest labors, let their prayer book, the Talmud, the Bible, and that they be forbidden, under penalty of death, to pronounce the name of God.

No weakness, no pity for the Jews! Let the princes without any form of trial they drive them out! Let the pastors inculcate in their flock the Jew's tiara. I could have known about the Jews?, that

192 JEWISH FRANCE

I would gather the most educated and the best of them and the would threaten to cut out their tongues at the back of their throats for their prove that Christian doctrine does not teach a single God—but one God in three persons (1).

The work of dissolution of Christian society, between—taken by Protestantism, was nevertheless profitable to the Jew. It was an opportunity for him to free himself, at least in Germany, from this ban on usury thanks to the—which the Church, with maternal solicitude, protected for centuries the fortune of the hardworking and naive Aryan against the lusts of the crafty and greedy Semite. A sermon of the time quoted by Janssen explains admirably—the situation.

What harm does usury not produce? Nothing helps! Like everyone sees that the big usurers of commerce are becoming rich in a short time, everyone also wants to get rich and make money a great profit from his money. The craftsman, the peasant carries his money to a company or a merchant; this evil did not exist in the past; He only became a general ten years ago. They want to win many and often they lose everything they had.

The picture of this period of transition, says Mr. de Breda (2), is no less curious to study by its analogy with what is happening nowadays: "We were losing the taste for work; we looked for businesses that brought in money a lot with little effort. The number of shops—ques and cabarets increased incredibly until in the countryside. The peasants were becoming poorer and were forced to sell their goods; the craftsmen were

(2) Political Economy in its relations with moral law.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE '0:

talent of the corporations and, devoid of their salutary protest
tion, fell into misery. Too many people at the same time throwing into the same speculation business, most failed and formed an irritated proletariat. Wealth increased rapidly for a few, the mass appeimpoverished.

No doubt the Jews were agitated and felt the ground on the side of France. This Corneille looks like a Jewish agent.
Agrippa, professor of occult sciences, involved in all the intrigues of his time, speaking in riddles, going without ' stops from Nuremberg to Lyon, and from Lyon to Italy, making lectures on the mirifico of Verho of Reuchlin. The?
monks were hardly wrong in accusing of Judaism Pantagrue's Her Trippa, this 16th century Cagliostro who, always followed by his black dog, wandered around in col-carrying strange words.

In Provence, we find this strange figure of Nostradamus sitting on his brazen tripod and questioning the Kabbalah about the future of his race, sometimes wondering if his science was not in vain and if the light he saw was indeed the dawn of a rebirth:

Sitting at night in secret study,
Alone resting on the bronze saddle,
Narrow flame emerging from solitude
Let hope be that it is not vain to believe.

.Current view of the mysterious work in which the
his own, he predicted, with a precision that astonishes today, the terrible events that will take place at the end of the 18th century and which will bring Israel out of its grave.

At the end of the great seventh number
A young time of slaughter will appear,

<94 JEWISH FRANCE

Not far from the great thousandth age.
The buried will rise from their graves.

The prophet of Salons was, moreover, from a tribe in which has long perpetuated the gift of prophecy.

Nostradamus, writes the scholar Haitze in his book: Life and the Testament of Nostradamus, was Provençal, from a family noble, although Pitton wanted to say the opposite in his Critique writers from Provence. This family was a neophyte, it was thus included in the famous tax which was made in 1002 on these kinds of family of this province. It is in the article of those which lived in the town of Saint-Remi. His tribe was from Issachar, renownednée for the gift of the science of time on the people of the-
which he had been more particularly rejianda. Nostradamus, who was not unaware of his extraction, he glorified himself, he paraded it. See what is said in the 32nd verse of the 12th chapter of the Paralipo-even which states that those of Issachar were experienced menrhymed able to discern and notice all times.

In any case, the time was not yet right for Israel. Louis XII had extended to the newly united countries the France's final edict of expulsion of Charles VI, which con-probably contributed to giving him the nickname of Father of people. The Reformation itself remained in military France, more disinterested as elsewhere in any financial speculation, that is to say, foreign to any Jewish element.

Only a few Jews, driven out of Spain, arrived then to gain a foothold in Bordeaux, but with what precautions-tions they had to act, what disguises they were obliged to wear! to put on! We will talk about this interesting thing later colony which, at least, paid for its hospitality to France, since it is to her that we owe Monfaigne. Let us note only here that the newcomers did not present themselves in no way as Jews and that they do not ûn-sd for a hundred fifty years at least no exercise of their Tviligion.

THE JEW IN THE FRINGE HISTORY 195

Henry's letters patent authorizing the stay were delivered not to Jews but to new Christians.

Some still tried to enter from another side and, in 1615, the edicts against them had to be renewed, but the Jews, under the minority of Louis XUI, could not believe it return to France in fairly large numbers. They had a powerful protector at Court. Goncini was in-surrounded by Jews. Galigai was considered to be of Jewish origin, c She lived constantly, says Michelet, surrounded by mede-Jewish cins, magicians and as if agitated by furies. When she suffered from the terrible neurosis peculiar to the race, Elie Montalle, still a Jew, killed a rooster and applied it to him-was on the head.

Goncini plundered everything, trafficked, fiddled. France was temporary? What was Gambetta, in fact, if not, in a good way at least points, a second incarnation of Goncini? Under the Farre ministry, it was distributed in the barracks a brochure entitled: General Gambetta. This genius Doesn't the word remind you of this Count della Penna (Count of the Feather), of this Marshal of Ancre who had never drawn a sword?

Our Goncini was unfortunately able to do everything the evil he wanted without having found Vitry. France no longer gives birth to men like this valiant man who, tranquilly, his sword under his arm, with three soldiers at the guards for all company, were made to kiss the passage, on the Louvre bridge, to the proud adventurer who was advancing followed by an escort as numerous as a regiment. – Stop! – Who dares to speak to me like that? And as the funny stranger added a gesture to these words, Vitry, the well-adjusted front, broke his head with a pistol shot.

196 JEWISH FRANCE

Then he went in to the King and said: It is done. – Great Thank you, my cousin, replied Louis XIII to the humble captain, that his courage, as we still see in Spain, had just made the King's relative; you are marshal and duke and I am happy to greet you on the first of your new-calf title.

Through the window, a loud noise was coming at the same time time, it was Paris which, finally avenged of so much shame suffered, clapped his hands frantically.

Today, the industry still has knights and the Barons' purse, but heroism no longer makes a tide-lime or dukes. Foreign Jews can all per-put in our house, no one in Vitry will draw the sword to stop the oppressors of his homeland. However, I know in Paris a bridge, at the end of a famous square, where a colonel who would have hair on the chin could win a title more beautiful than the one that the bold captain of the guards won the April 24, 1617, on the Louvre Bridge.

Goncini had barely been killed when the Jews were ordered to, with their ordinary activity, had already constituted as a small synagogue at the home of a member of Parliament, disappear immediately.

The only Jew in the spotlight, of whom we find a trace in Paris at that time, is Lopez. But was Lopez really Jew? At least he defended himself like a devil and tan; he ate pork every day to the point of becoming obsessed with it make sick to detect suspicions.

Despite all poor Lopez's denials, I fear although he was not of the race. Jeweler, dealer in diaman, banker, political agent, finally advisor
of State, does he not look like a true ruler of today?

THE JEW IN HISTORY EE FRANCE 197

today? There is in him a mixture of Proust and Uchoffsheim.

"Lopez and a few others like him," Talle told us,
mand des Reaux who was very amused by the character,
came to France to negotiate something for the Moorsques he was a part of.

Henry IV saw this as an excellent opportunity to create eni internal barriers to Spain and put Lopez in touch with the Duke of La Force. The death of the king broke off the negotiations, but Lopez did not lose heart, he established himself as a merchant of diamonds; "he bought a large rough diamond, had it cut;
This gave him a reputation, and from all sides people sent him rough diamonds. He had a man at his house to whom he gave eight thousand pounds a year and fed him sixth; this man cut diamonds with admirable diligence and had the skill to split them with a hammer blow when it was necessary, b

In the Rjtnan of the loves of the Duke of Nemours and the Marquise de Poyanne, the Duke consults on the beauty of the adornments "a certain Portuguese named Don Lope who went there knew better than anyone."

Richelieu, whose genius has so much in common with that of the Prince Bismarck, was the first to understand the party that a politician could draw from a press that he would direct and he had encouraged Renaudot, the creator of the newspaper ei; France. He also clearly distinguished the usefulness of which could-were going to be these Jewish agents so clever, so flexible, so well informed who were later to be like the Blowitz, lei Erdan, the Levysons, rendering so many services to the chancellor iron. He employed Lopez as a spy, he was happy with it, the chai'gea of a negotiation relating to vessels in Hollande and on his return he made him an ordinary State Councilor.

Jewish emperor of the West he would find a way to sell the iron crown. Lopez flea market in his mission and return to Paris made a sale which was even more popular than that of Rachel and Sarah Bernhardt. "In Holland he bought a thousand curiosities from the Indies and he did at home as an inventory; we shouted with a [^sergeant. It was like an abridged version of the Saint-Germain fair; there was always many beautiful people.

This Lopez, however, appears to have been relatively honest. He was accused of being a spy for both governments. nements; it was demonstrated that it only served one, this which, an anti-Semite whispers in my ear, would tend to prove that he was truly not Jewish.

It was Ledoux, master of requests, who had put this mal- I'll hear noise in traffic. <l In fact, says Tallemant desReaux, he believed he had complete conviction through Lopez's book where there was: "Guadamisilles por el senor de Bassompierre: -so many thousands of maravedis, » and other similar articles-wounds. Lopez asked M. de Rambouillet to see this good master of requests. The master of requests said to him: Sir, there is nothing clearer; guadamasilles, etc. Mr. de Rambouillet began to laugh: "Hey sir," he said to him, "these are gilded leather tapestries that he brought from Spain for Mr. de Bassompierre.

* Richelieu seems to have been his State Councilor as one would treat a Braun or a Gastagnary.

Cardinal Richelieu, Tallemant still tells, to entertain, one day when Lopez was returning from lluo1 with all his stones-eries that the cardinal had wanted to see on purpose, made him attack by of feigned thieves who nevertheless only frightened him. He went there ^0 all his property; also the fear was so great that he had to shirt changer at the Neuilly bridge, his shirt was so gas-The chancellor in whose carriage it was said that he was pre-felt rather boldly at the thieves. The cardinal was displeased for having played this trick on him, because he had played at killing this poor-real man and to make amends he had him summoned to his table. It was not a small honnear.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 199

j Oa did not spare much, moreover, the jokes to Lopez.

One day the Abbé de Cercey and Lopez were making a fuss about who would go first. - Go on then, Lopez, said Chasteller, the Jews), the Old Testament goes before the New.

Another day he asked an excessive price for a ciiii-cifix. – Hey, they said to him, you delivered the original to meil-their market.

Despite the mockers, Lopez, by dint of accumulating me-various third parties, nevertheless arrived at a considerable fortune-rable that he displayed with the bad tone of his peers. He had six carriage horses, "and never was a carriage more times than he meets ambassadors.

He owned a rather nice house on Rue des Petits-Fields and kept repeating: "There is an im-number of chimneys in my home.

How is this sentence, which the contemp-Is it surprising? This is the reflection that comes-will be to each one and this very astonishment indicates the che-min traveled from polite, refined, well-bred society from then to the brutal and coarse society of today.

Nowadays the feeling of certain delicate nuances is blunted even among Christians. No one is sur-taken when Baron Hirsch, having at his table people who claim to represent the Saint-Ger- suburb

200 JEWISH FRANCE

hand, said quietly to his guests at the moment when Ton serves strawberries in January: "Don't be shy about eating them eat as much as you want, it's expensive, but I don't look at it (1). »

Jewish or not, Lopez, who died in Paris on October 29 1649, lived and died as a Catholic; he was buried in Saint-Eustace and on the marble of his tomb they put the ins-following description:

Natus Iber, vixit Gallus, legemque secutus,
Auspice nunc Christo, mortuus astra tenet.

It was Marshal de la Ferté who bought the house of Lopez, as this passage from Loret testifies.

Marshal of La Ferté,
During the summer season,
Cities for the King to Conquer
And during the winter he acquits,
From what I was told today,

Buying that of the late Lope,
Not the most beautiful in Europe
But very well built, convenient and such
That it can pass for a hotel.

If the Jew could only be accepted in France by energetically denying his origin, he had stopped elsewhere to be the Pariah of the old days; he had found in Hol-

(1) It is still Hirsch who, after citing, said to Lavissee, professor of history at the Sorbonne, university lecturer, who had agreed to give his El's story rehearsals: "Take me
This cigar, you don't smoke like that at home, it costs me twenty-five sous." Lavissee had more dignity than the people of the world and after fifteen days he left the house.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 201

moorland more than an asylum, a favorable terrain where all its defects were powerless to develop, where its quali-
can make a career for themselves.

The destiny of this race is indeed singular: alone
|of all human races she has the privilege of living in all climates and, at the same time, it cannot maintain, without harming others and without harming itself-
even, that in a moral and intellectual atmosphere
special. With his spirit of intrigue, his mania for attacking constantly the religion of Christ, his fury to destroy the faith of others which contrasts so strangely with his absence of any desire to convert foreigners to his own, the
In some countries, a Jew is exposed to temptations which he always succumbs; this is what explains the per-constant persecution of which he is the object. As soon as he has to deal with these great German brains, hungry for systems and of ideas, to these French minds in love with novelties and words, to these imaginations of Slavs always in search of dreams, he cannot contain himself, he invents socialism, the in-internationalism, nihilism; it throws on the society which has it welcomed revolutionaries and sophists, Herzens, Goldebei^, Karl Marx, Lassalle, Gambetia, of Crémieux; he sets fire to the country to cook there
the egg of some bankers and everyone gathers at the end to push it towards the door.

On the strong heads of the English and the Dutch, in the con-milk, the Jew can do nothing. He smells instinctively, with his nose which is long, that there is nothing to try on these attached people to their old customs, firm in the traditions they happy to offer deals that the natives discuss—they try meticulously and that they do when they are good

202 JEWISH FRANCE

but he doesn't tell stories, he doesn't tell the sons that their fathers were horrible scoundrels or abject serfs, he does not invite them to burn their monuments, he does not do that neither fraudulent loan, nor Commune; he is happy, and the others too.

This little Holland, industrious and commercial,
foreign herself to this chivalrous ideal which is so unsympathetic to the sons of Jacob, was truly the cradle of the Modern Jew. For the first time Israel knew there, no not the resounding success which intoxicates the Jew and which loses him, but long-lasting calm, regular and normal life—male (1).

It's Rembrandt that you have to, I'm not saying look at it but con-
to study, to scrutinize, to search, to analyze if you will see the Jew.

Student of Isaacson van Schanenberg and Jacob Pinas,
tenant first then owner of this house Joden Breestraet (Jewish Street), in which he painted his masterpieces, Rembrandt lived constantly with Israel.
His very workshop, cluttered with art objects, a veritable chaosnaum of fabrics and trinkets, resembles those shops of second-hand shops at the bottom of which the eye is momentarily disoriented finally distinguishes a sordid old man with a snotty nose. His

(1) A reaction, however, may be in the offing.
here again, because the Jews will end up exasperating the most peaceful people—
In Amsterdam, in October 1884, we recount the Archives Israélites, the owner of the first café in the city refu^a access to his establishment for Jews, excusing himself on the repu-gnances of his customers. One of those expelled, Mr AG Werlbeim, rides member of the Legion of Honor and officer of the Academy, since he is Jewish and a foreigner, he protested violently, but the owner—
He defended his right, and he was warmly congratulated by all the world.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 203

work has the Jewish color, it is yellow of this ardent yellow and warm which seems like the reflection of gold playing on a old medieval wheel forgotten in a corner.

How talkative these Jews of Rembrandt are, talking business on leaving the s[^]Tiagogue, discussing the course of the florin or the last shipment of BataWa, these travelers who walk with their sticks in their hands with airs of Jews and who feel that they are going to arrive and sit somewhere(i)!

(1) Cue appearance of the Wandering Jew eol place in 1640 in lllaxelieset Bembrandl [read] struck by this story. The bourgeois who meet-rent the eternal traveler the hairy Irouvèreul of a very faded costumebré; he entered with eax into an other>erge, he drank there but refused sit down. He was seen on January 14, 1603 in Lubeck, and the year in Nuremberg where he attended a sermon. Uaitbieu Paris^ one of the first who gave details on this legendary character, reproduces the story that an archbishop of Armenia had told him before-sense of a knight of Auliocbe. This story differs from the popular version in several points. According to him, Cartapbilc, porter of the praetorium of Pontius Pilate, who seized the moment when Jesus crossed the threshold from the door, would have contemptuously punched him in the back and shouted to him: "Go then, Jesus, go then faster, what are you waiting for-IQ t » would have been baptized and called Joseph by Auanias, who baptized
Saint Paul, he would usually live in Armenia.

The last appearance of the Wandering Jew dates back to 1774. It is this period that dates the popular engraving that everyone knows: "adorned with the portrait drawn from life by the bourgeoisie from Brussels.

The seventeenth verse, in its trivial naivety, sums up admirably-surely the Jewish character:

Mes>ieare, h temps me presaa,

Goodbye to conpafoie;
Thanks to King Politeness 1
I thank you for that.
I AM too excited
When I stopped.

I don't really see what thinkers and historians have to add.
to this coDfecsiO s'mcère. Tormented and tormentor as soon as he is

20» JEWISH FRANCE

How much more striking this alchemist in ecstasy before the Kabbalistic circle around which are traced charac-mysterious authors who comment on the Sepher or the Zohar, which reveal the hour and day when the Great will be accomplished
Work! Isn't this doctor a Jew?
Faustus whose face barely emerges from the intense shadow?

Rembrandt, fluttering luminous atoms. This silence is well the one that Fromentin speaks of, "this silence which is not the cessation of all noise, but the beginning in con-milking of these indeterminate noises that the soul alone perceives. We hear this man, so parched, so dried out, thinking, so ossified that he appears half dead and who, through the window open, question the sky to seek the star of Israel, the star that must rise from the side of Chaldea after so much years of waiting.

The physician Ephraim Bonus, resting his hand on the banister of the staircase, says these things in another way. Hairstyle with a large felt hat, dressed in everyone's clothes, he really has the honest appearance of someone who no longer goes to Sabbath every night; he looks more like Germain Sée from Yvon to a maker of potions from the Middle Ages and he seems to whisper to him too that he will be satisfied.

He went quietly somewhere, such is the Jew. He arranges always to so trouble the nations that welcomed him, that one is forced to ask him to leave.

We will consult with interest A booklet printed in 50 copies please only, Cbez Techener, when the novel was published Eugène Sue: Historical and hibernial notice on the legend from Wandering Jew, by GB de B.

See also a reprint of a study published in the Encyclopedia religious sciences: the wandering Jew, by Gaston Paris.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 203

Things were indeed better for the Jews. In England. they had found the man they love, the Sdiilo, the fake Messiah, the exclusively earthly leader who, not relying on any traditional right, is forced to have recourse to the secret force that the Jews hold (1). Cromwell, sou-held by the already powerful but very Freemasonry occult and still very discreet (2), had been the zealous protector Jews and had tried to have the proscription order lifted. tion that weighed on them.

It was stated that the right of residence had been formally granted to them-

(t) The spectacle of this terrible sectarian, causing his king to perish under the axe, seems to have strongly struck the imagination of the Jews, who, even in the most distant countries, were perfectly informed of what was happening in Europe. ■ A singular deputation, writes Léon from the depths of Asia. They were a few Jews, led by a famous rabbi of the East, Jacob Ben Azabel, who came to make sure if Cromwell was not the Messiah. We obtained several audiences from the Protector, and made him the proposal, which he rejected, to buy all the books and Hebrew manuscripts from Cambridge University. As they did not hide the main purpose of their mission enough, they were sent back of London, where the suspicion that Cromwell might be Jewish had produced unrest among the people."

(2) The Jews were as ruthless enemies of the house of the Stuarts, than of the house of Bourbon. He was a Jew from Amsterdam who helped William of Orange to dethrone his father-in-law. "William, Prince of Orange, was preparing his expedition against James II of England and anxiously sought where he would find the funds needed to equip his fleet and carry out his pro-war jets against the English, when an Israelite from Amsterdam-Dam asked him for an audience.

"When this citizen named Schwartzau, was admitted before the prince, He said to him: "My lord, you need money to accomplish your project: Here are two million that I bring you: if you succeed, you will give them back to me; if you fail, we are quits. » {Sameii Mornings, book of moral and religious education to Cusaque ûe lajetnesse Israelite, by Ben Levi.}

12

206 JEWISH FRANCE

only granted at that time; Dr. Tavey in his Annals of the Jews in England denies this. In his curious book on Moses Mendehohn and on the political reform of the Jews in England, Miraherm, who was the man of the Jews like Gambetta, thus recounts the negotiations which began at this subject.

The hatred of popery which then prevailed, or rather which debent other furies, had inspired favorable dispositions for the Jews. Several parliamentary motions were made in their favor and if none was followed by success, they encouraged least the Jews of Amsterdam to make some proposals for to form an establishment of their nation in England.

Negotiations were entered into and Manasseh Ben Israel was chosen for deal with conditions. This venerable rabbi came to England and determined Cromwell to take into very serious consideration the requests he made on behalf of his brothers.

Then the Protector called two judges into his council, seven citizens and fourteen clergymen. He asked them if he

they held in the affirmative, under what conditions this nation should be recalled i Four days were consumed in arguments useless on the part of the ministers of the Holy Gospel, and Cromwell dismissed them, telling them that they left him much more uncertain- than they had found it.

The outcome of the special deliberations of the Pro- detector. Some writers in truth positively declare that he granted permission to the Jews to settle in England; but others maintain that this permission was not granted to them given only under the reign of Charles II, in the year 1664 or 1665.

Manasseh ben Israel, to whom Victor Hugo gave so much relief in his drama of Cromwell, filled almost Cromwell, this role in which the Jew excels, this role of Rei- to which one can say anything without fear of being embarrassed by this consciousness that we feel living in the depths of the soul of the most servile of Christians. By a very frequent contradiction and more logical than one might think, the Protector asked for the secrets of heaven to this man, which he employed at the lowest land negotiations (1).

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE ^07

Strange fate I spy on men and stars!
Astrologer up there, spy down here I

By a sudden change, Manasseh enters the scene by placing a bag of money at Cromwell's feet, suddenly comes from subtle business intermediary apportion- as much as his share of taking to the man in power, a Kaballist, an alchemist, and when the Protector said to him: will I be king? he answers with a certain sincerity:

...In its elliptical walk

Your star does not form the mystical triangle

With the star Zed and the star Nadir.

Then the hatred of the Christian, the thirst for the blood of the goyim resumes the Jew on seeing Rochester asleep; as we says the poet, he tempts the one with whom he speaks. This power

(t) Manasseh was very concerned about the question of the ten tribes; of which We spoke in Book I." "Constant concern," said the Archivei Israelites, Manasseh was concerned: what had become of the ten tribes

Had they been annihilated? The restoration of the kingdom of Judea was impossible without these ten tribes, and even the confirmation of the prophetic promises became doubtful. The meeting of Joda and of Israel that the Prophets had predicted would only be fulfilled with the participation of these tribes. Manasseh thought about it constantly and indulged in every imaginable supposition to find them somewhere. It was then that a chance, which he considered as a revelation from above, put him in contact with Montesiuo who told him that the remains of the ten tribes were in the South Amenoue. It was then also that, not doubting the truth of this story, he wrote—lives his Hope of Israel.

208 JEWISH FRANCE

supreme, Cromwell can have it, it is enough to sacrifice the chre—, yours. Is this not the eternal pact that Israel proposes to the ambitious? Let them strike the Church! and they will be great, we will give them in exchange for persecutions an ephemeral appearance of power.

Manasseh

Strike 1 you can't do a better action.

[Apart.]

By a Christian hand let us sacrifice a Christian I

It's the Sabbath, strike!

But Cromwell is not a Gambetta; he is not one of those generals of the Directory who, after having massacred the republicans ask the Republic for a little gold to pay the girls, he is the intrepid and dark hero of Worcester and Naseby, he is a believer. He wakes up as if from a dream, he trembles at the word sabbath.

It's a fasting day!

What am I doing? A day of divine vigil and rest,
I was going to commit murder and I listened to a fortune teller.
Go away, Jew

The poet, the seer, the one who fell from so high, the author of the Prayer for all who had to abandon their little ones children to the caresses of a Lockroy, was truly possessed by the spirit of Shakespeare when he wrote Cromwell.

Michelet showed us the usurer who demands blood for gold, Shakespeare, too, painted in Shyllock the human flesh merchant; the type that Victor Hugo embodied in Manasseh is different. He is already the modern Jew involved in plots, fomenting civil wars and

and of the Holy Alliance.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 209

Everything is Shakespearean in this scene from the first act; This is the theatre as Shakespeare understood it in Henry V and before him Aeschylus in the Perseus, the story all alive put into dialogue and presented thus to the spectators—Asian tors. Listen to what "Cromwell's spy" says, banker of the Cavaliers.

Of the two rival parties, what does it matter who succumbs?

11 Christian blood will always flow in torrents;

I hope so at least 1 is the good one of the plots.

From the banks of the Seine to the banks of the Spree, do not hear it—Haven't you been saying this monologue for almost a century? it is not the conclusion of all the cannon shots that are fired in Europe? For it to be gold and Christian blood—flowing, Israel always agrees and Berlin, by through VA Llimice Israélite univériellej gives fraterally hand in Paris.

In the 17th century, France, fortunately for it, was not there and had not even entered the path of conciliation of England.

Under Louis XIV, when France was at its peak of his power and truly reigns over the world not only by arms but by the ascendancy of his civilization, do you know how many Jews Paris had?

There were no more than four families of this religion. region living in the capital and one hundred and fifty going and coming(l). In 1705, there were only eighteen individuals in all—

(I) Memoirs of the intendants of the state of generalities drawn up for instruction of the Duke of Burgundy and published by M. de Boi^{li}ie.

12.

210 JEWISH FRANCE

most of them employed in the services and stages of Metz e1 authorized by the Chancellor to stay in the capi—

There can be no doubt, said the lieutenant general of police, that Tagiotage and usury are not their main occupation since 2 is (if one dares to express it thus) their whole study and that they make a kind of religion of deceiving as much as they can :all the Christians with whom they deal.

It is mentioned from time to time in the correspondence of the stewards of a few isolated Jews, in Rouen in particular, the date of 1693, of a man named Mendez, who owned a fortune of 500,000 to 600,000 pounds and whose expulsion would have been detrimental to the province's trade. Everard Jahach, born in Cologne, banker and great collector of paintings, seems to have been Jewish. One can, I believe, to look as a Jew at the comedian Montfleury, whose real name was Zacharias Jacob. It was he who, to take revenge on harmless mockery of Molière who, in Vlmpromptn de Versailles, had reproached him for "being fat and plump like four," addressed a request in December 1663 to Louis XIV, in which he accused the great comedian of having married his own daughter.

Was Samuel Bernard Jewish? Voltaire says yes. We read in a letter addressed to Helvetius: "I love- I would rather have Parliament do me justice for bankruptcy! of the son of Samuel Bernard, Jew, son of Jew, died surin- j tendant of the queen's household, master of requests, rich of nine million and bankrupt.

But this question of money, which always had so much im-bearing for Voltaire, could have inspired this epithet of Jew. In 1738, in his speech on the inequality of conditions, he dedicated to Samuel Bernard, the father, two verses that the poet made di.T appear of his works when the son, who por- was the title of Count of Coubert, would have made sixty disappear a thousand pounds from the poet's purse.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 2H

While there seems little doubt that Samuel's family Bernard was of Jewish origin, the documents published by Jal prove that in the 17th century it was Protestant since two or three generations. Samuel Bernard's father, talented engraver, converted to Catholicism and was buried by the clergy of Saint-Sulpice. Samuel Bernard had married in second marriage Ms. Pauline Félicité de Saint-Ghamans, he had a daughter. Bonne Félicité, who on September 22- September 1743 married Mathieu-François Mole, lord of Champlâtreux. Count Mole, who was charged by Napoleon was therefore a descendant of Samuel Bernard.

During the Regency, we see the appearance of the Jew Dulys, whose misdeeds occupied all of Paris

Enriched by the System, this Jew had a mistress actress named Pelissier. Obligated, after having ruined quite a lot of the world, to flee to Holland where all his fortune was, he gave fifty thousand horses to Pelissier on the condition that she would accompany him, but she ate the money with him Francœur, a violinist from the opera, and did not move. Dulys furious then sent his valet to Paris to assassinate Francœur, the blow missed, the valet was broken on the wheel, and Dulys "contumacy suffers the same torture, but in effigy (1).

(1) The story of Dulys is a great success abroad iron. In 1739, it was published in England: Mimoûes anecdotes pont to the hibtary of Mr. Dul'js or read the continuation of his adventures after the catastrophe of that of Miss PélissUr, actress of Popéi has from Paris to London, at Samuel Harding.

212 THE JEWISH FAANCE

J3arbier. points out that we should have apprehended the Pélissier and condemn her for having had relations with a Jew. In some provinces, indeed, the fact for Christians or Christian women to have had intercourse with the enemies of their race was equated with the crime against nature.

All the songwriters were amused by this:

The hero of the Synagogue,
Who made you richly fashionable,
In a sad state is reduced.
You made him your idolatrous dupe,
On the scaffold he is led
Just for seeing you at the theater.
Let Dulys be put to the wheel
And that Francœur plays with him.
This seems impertinent;
But, if Themis would do well,
Pélissier would go for ten years
Living in Salpétnère.

The Jews were however tolerated in Metz where the kings of France had found some of them settled. Letters three patents given by Henry IV state that he takes under his protection "the twenty-four Jewish households descended

These Jews were settled in the rue de l'Arsenal, near of the Guise entrenchment; the Duke of Epernon granted them, On February 17, 1614, the right to acquire houses in the district of Saint-Ferron, but not elsewhere. His son, the Duke de Lavalette, fixed the interest they could receive, and for purify the neighborhood, ordered that the enclosure they inhabited would be limited by large stone crucifixes embedded in the wall of the last house on each street. The Jews of

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRENCH -ilB

Metz wore beards, a black coat and a small flap white; they had been exempted from the yellow hat.

Some conversions took place among them. Weil brothers abjured in the hands of Bossuet, then canon of the cathedral church of Metz. During the stay of Louis XV in Metz, the dauphine held a young woman at the font Eleven-year-old Jewish girl from a neighboring village. In these Occasionally the cannon was fired and the Mutte sounded.

At the beginning of the 13th century, the Brancas discovered-discovered, I don't know how, the existence of these Jews and eu-came up with the ingenious idea of making money from it.

On December 31, 1715, Louis de Brancas, Duke of Yillars, peer of France, baron of Oise, obtained from the Regent a decree by which the Jews of Metz were subject to a right of pro-protection at a rate of 40 pounds per family.

This royalty was abandoned for ten years in Bi-ancas and to the Countess of Fontaine. The Jews protested that they had no need of such protection; the Bran-cases persisted in protecting anyway and we ended up jwr to trade at 30 pounds. The number of Jewish families in Metz was 480 at the time of the 1717 census. In 1790, The Jews were about 3,000.

It is one of the most comical episodes of the 18th century. that this debate between the Brancas and the Jews; it makes one think of the famous Brazilian round:

Do you want? Do you want?
Will you accept my arm?

-I assure you I'm doing very well on my own, cried Jew, leave this worry...

- No! No! replied the Brancas, he could

Misfortune could happen to YOU if you were not protected, and we would be inconsolable.

Israel subsequently multiplied its efforts to-near the king, the Brancas fiercely defended the Sef which they had created themselves. The brilliant Duke of Lauraguais, a Brancas always, had this royalty continued and received it im-disturbedly until 1792, he did not let go of his protégés
in spite of themselves than in front of the revolutionary Kafaud.

"These are many abuses from which 89 has delivered us!" cries will be the republican writers, and the same writers, who find it abominable that a descendant of Villars should take on Jews a few hundred louis for his menus pleasures, will find it very fair that with the help of scams
Jewish financial institutions take millions from Christians Look, let a beggar from yesterday be the insolent rich man of the tomorrow. On any occasion these are for the stranger.

For me, I see differently. France owed its salute to the heroic soldier of Denain, she fulfilled this duty debt to the nephews of his savior, what could be more just?
All these great lords, moreover, did honor to this money which they spent in the most magnificent way and the widest. The artists and the scholars were at them in the incomparable residences of these patricians good boys. Lauraguais constantly entertained Paris through his adventures, his loves, his words, his duels, his brochures, his epigrams, his eccentric trials, the explosions of his good French humor.

Did not opulence suit this great lord better?
high mine, to this lover of Sophie Arnould, to this genereux who gave the sum necessary to make the disappearance
the benches that cluttered the stage, to this collabora-Lavoisier's author, to this very original fantasist, than to this little

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 215

grumpy Alphonse de Rothschild who passes, gloomy, to through Paris with his pale German face? It's I ask you yourself, Baron, what have we lost?
at the exchange? You take the money like Lamaguais and you take more; only Lauraguais, with his sallies, would have at least entertained me, and you don't amuse me...

There is no medal without a setback and no victory without a brought to France a considerable quantity of Jews

it would have gone well.

Very numerous in Alsace, the Jews were very advancement treated. They depended not on the sovereign directly. but lords who, however, by a singular contrast-bind, had the right to receive them and not to expel them. They had to pay, in addition to the right of residence, an amount usually at 36 pounds per year, a reception fee set at approximately the same amount; they were, in addition, subject to toll rights. Following a sedition which they had excited in 1349, they did not have the ability to stay there. Strasbourg and paid a tax every time they entered were in the city.

The Strasbourg meeting with France improved a little their situation. From 1703, says MA Legrelle in his book Louis A IV and Strasbourg, the French authorities insisted that we relax these ancient customs because Israeli merchants had accepted them the burden of military supplies. The war over, the Senate had to tolerate, for the same reasons, a supplier belonging to the proscribed confession. Moses Blien. This revirement, from which the Cerfbeer family also benefited, attracted so well the Jews that before 89 there were twenty thousand in the country, owners of 12 to 15 million in debts.

216 JEWISH FRANCE

Louis XII had extended to Provence the ordinances which expelled the Jews from France, but many of them had, in these regions, followed the advice given to them given their foreign co-religionists, and pretended to convert. In 1489, when there was talk of a expulsion, Chamorre, rabbi of the Jussion of Arles, had wrote on behalf of his brothers to the rabbis of Constantinople to ask what to do and had received the letter following dated December 21, 1489 (1):

'^^ « Beloved brothers in Moses,

"We have received your letter in which you notify us the troubles and misfortunes you suffer. Resentment which touched us as much as it did you. But the opinion of greatest rabbis and satraps of our law is as follows:

"You say that the King of France wants you to be a Christian- Here, do it since otherwise you cannot do it, but gar- Always keep the law of Moses in your heart.

merchants, and by means of traffic you will gradually have theirs.

"You complain that they are making attempts on your lives, do your children doctors and apothecaries who will make them lose theirs without fear of punishment.

"You assure that they destroy your synagogues, you assure that your children become canons and clerics because they will ruin their Church.

"And to what you say that you bear great ve.\a-tions, make your children lawyers, notaries and people who are ordinary occupied with public affairs, and by this means, you dominate. You will conquer the Christians, win their lands and take revenge on them.

(i) The original text of the two letters was published for the first first time by Abbot Bouis, priest of Arles, in a work which bears this title: The King crowned by the kings of Arles, dedicated to Gentlemen consuls and governors of the city, by J. Bouis, priest, in Avignon, by Jacques Bramerav, 16U.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 217

Do not deviate from the order we give you, because all you will see by experience that you will be lowered than you are very high. »

YSSVF F, Prince of the Jews of Constantinople, on the 21st of CasleaU89.

Needless to say, this letter, too, is declared apocryphal. We do not see, for our part, on which one relies to contest the authenticity of this piece which admirably sums up Jewish politics (1).

In the Comtat Venaissin only which was then land papal, the Jews of France had found freedom at little near complete and relative security. In the middle ages, Avignon could be called the Jewish Paradise.

Mistral did not forget the Jews in the picture full of color and movement that he traced, in NertOf of Avignon of the Popes.

E de cridèsto, de bravado,
Of paro-garo and abrivado,
Fjn'un judièu, from Tes que ia,
Qu'alin davans cour esfraia.
— Lou pecihount lou capèu jaune t

Fifty children ié soun darrié;
And of a thumb, per truffled.
Simulant eli l'auribeto

(1) On this subject, one should read in the work of Abbot Chabauty: Let Jewish our masters, a few pages which are a masterpiece of criticism ingenious and subtle, erudite and moderate.

The eminent writer does not let stone fall upon stone objectiona that the Julys tried to raise against the auhenticile of these lellret.

13

218 JEWISH FRANCE

Em'un gueiroun de sa braieto,
lé crido lou vou d'esparpai:
Vaqui Vaurihù de toun pai!

In short, shouting, noisy parades,

Clashes, alerts,

And sometimes some Jew

Who over there, scared, runs away...

– "The rag! The yellow hat J

To the Jewry! Let him hide!"

Fifty children are after him;

And of a pig, in derision,

They simulate the ear

With a corner of their fly,

The flock of dizzy people shouts to him:

Here is your* father's ear!

Lei5 Jews from Avignon, who included among them distinguished rabbis, seem to have trained even during long enough a particular branch different from the German Jews and Portuguese Jews. In the 14th century, the Rabbi Rouber made them adopt a special ritual which they follow-permanently with the Portuguese Jews.

No doubt, from time to time, popular movements—
res burst against them following too glaring wear, but the Pope or the legate always intervened to calm things down the spirits.

There, as elsewhere, however, the Jews were not embarrassed hardly to do dishonesty to Christians who cou —
felt to welcome them, and to insult their beliefs.
For a long time, at the entrance to the church of Saint-Pierre, we saw from Avignon, a holy water font which recalled one of their tricks:
I stoup the Beautiful Jewess. A Jewess, of rare beauty, had found it pleasant to enter the church on the day of Easter and spitting in holy water. The Beautiful JAiLve,

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 219

today, following this exploit, would be named inspector—general director of schools in France; then, she received the whipping in a public place, and a commemorative inscription recalled the sacrilege committed and the punishment suffered.

In Carpentras, we learn from Andréoli, in the Monogra—phy of the Cathedral of Saint-Siffrein, we saw other—times in the church square a large iron cross with the following inscription: Horatius Capponius Florentinus, episcop. Carpentor.j crucem hanc sumptibus Hehreorum erexit ut, quam irriseraul magis cons^icuam, verendarm ac veierandam aspicerent: il fehr. $160. The Jews, a Good Friday, had solemnly crucified in derision a man of straw. The cross was raised in atonement, and The Jews had to maintain it until 1793, when it was replaced by a liberty tree. The straw man had been deposited in the archives of the Episcopal Court and took it out once a year.

The Jewish colony of Bordeaux alone had prospered. Qnand
Spain, after the final defeat of the Moors of Gre—Nade, saw herself called to play a role in Europe, she filmed this what had France done as soon as the monarchy was cons—established; she eliminated from her bosom the elements which were a perpetual cause of trouble. On March 30, 4492, King Fer—Dinand of Ai-agon and the Queen of Castile Isabella, on the advice of the illustrious Ximenes, issued a judgment which ordered all the Israelites to leave the land.

Some families then took refuge in Portugal where they found a precarious protection; soon they were expelled again, and Michel Montaigne, whose parents distressing moments of this new beginning in a chapter where

220 JEWISH FRANCE

one feels more emotion than in the ordinary pages of the skeptical.

Some of these outlaws came to seek asylum in Bordeaux. Among them were Ramon de Granolhas, Dominique Ram, Gabriel de Tarragera, Bertrand Lopez or of Louppes, the Goveas which were made quite quickly as legal advisers, doctors, merchants, a place in the Bordeaux company (1).

Montaigne's mother, Antoinette de Louppes or Antoinet Lopez, was therefore Jewish and this fact is not without interest-interest for those who like to explain by filiation the

(1) Here again what we said about the influence of the environment for the Jew. Despite their apparent exuberance, the people of Bordeaux are deep down cold and serious people corame their wine. The Angle-land, which occupied these regions for so long, left a little of itself there-even, of his good sense, of his thoughtful mind; the people of Bordeaux, by many points, are more heady English. Israel, represented moreover by men of merit, did not find there a population that he could disturb, but a bourgeoisie very capable of appreciating the serious commercial qualities of the newcomers. More than the letters patent of Henry II, the general provisions of the classes raised protected the arrivals, defended them, allowed them to to found a lasting establishment.

Let us note in passing the vile side of the race which always returns evil for good. Under the Terror, in a feast of Reason, the Jews of Bordeaux organized a sacrilegious parody in the genre of those of today; the Papacy, which in all countries of the world had defended the Jews, was dragged through the mud; a Jew of colossal size marched at the head of the procession vomiting obscenities.

Let us also note on this subject that it is in Bordeaux that the Jewess Deborah, to dishonor the French army, came to weave this plot in which three officers were taken who were, according to all appearances-rence, absolutely innocent, but who were victims of the rumor that The Jewish press covered this affair.

At the time of the execution of the decrees, all the Jewish rabble of Bordeaux insulted the religious people in the street who had just been bassist from home.

temperament of a writer. Down-to-earth wisdom, sweet irony of this mocking and disillusioned man does not attach itself to do they not refer through the centuries to the philosophy de-encharmed by Ecclesiastes? Despite education and the Christian atmosphere of the time, do we not find point, in many passages of the Essays, the echo of the words disillusioned with the biblical Koheleth meditating, pro-leading along the terrace of Etham Palace, on the vanity of human designs, proclaiming that the most beautiful hopes are not worth present pleasures and the good meal washed down with Engadine wine? Who knows? of one is it not related to the perhaps very vague to which the other seems to believe so little?

Kept within the bounds of prudence, the objection discreet to the teachings of the Church, the half joke veiled go further in Montaigne than the undulating phrase and subtle does not seem to indicate it at first glance. In this touching account of the suffering of the Jews of Portugal which is entitled: Jews Afflicted in Various Ways to make them change their religion but in vain, we feels the secret admiration for these stubborn people who have so much suffered without denying (i). Here and there an allusion appears in

(1) This passage does not appear in the first editions, it was "added in the 1593 edition to chapter XL, chapter 11 of first editions which is entitled: May the giust of good and morals depend largely on our opinion of them. Montaigne had judged it useless to draw attention to this passage the origins of his family, at a time when the Israelites of Bordeaux •were forbidding themselves to be Jews. He took up this note at the time when he was tra- was worth a definitive revision of the States, at this time already voi- state of death where childhood memories, reminiscences of maternal stories sometimes come back to you with precision and greater liveliness.

â22 THE JEWISH FRINGE

the work of family misfortunes that we want to make people forget and to forget oneself, so as not to remind men among which we live, the cursed origin. This vision of pyres of Spain which haunted the author of the Essays in this visit to the synagogue in Rome that he told us about, did she not continue in her castle of Montaigne the advisor to Parliament when he wrote: "It is putting one's conjectures at a much higher price than to cook a man with them all alive (i).»

Montaigne and Dumas fils, both of Jewish origin by their mother, are the only two truly French writers worthy of the name that the fertilized race of Israel has produced by the mixture of Christian blood. Without establishing a rapproche- which would be forced between smiling mockery and light of the first, and the harsh mockery of the second, it is per- put to note that both were destroyers, that both, in various forms, have highlighted the vices and ridiculousness of humanity without offering it anything else no higher ideal to achieve. Both were laughers and sad, disillusioned and disillusioned.

(1) On many occasions, we see that Montaigne is obsessed with the plot idea of the stake, for which he has no vocation. To exculpate himself- for having fled Bordeaux at the time of the plague, when his duty was fulfilled as mayor was to set an example, he wrote: I will follow the good gone to the fire, but only if I can. "Well, done Veuillot remarked on this subject, when the plague was raging in ea city, it was in June. It was too hot, that's the explanation- tion. »

The nature of the Jew, little suited to heroism, is revealed elsewhere i each line in Montaigne, and contrasts with the morals of a time when everyone died so fearlessly for their cause. Under this report, he at least has the merit of sincerity, and his confessions are stripped of artifice. "In some way," he said, "that one can to shelter from blows, even under the skin of a calf, I do not I am not a man who would shrink from it.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 223

For Dumas, in particular, the influence exerted by the race constitutes a diminution of intellectual heritage lectual of our country. No contemporary has been more preoc- cut off from religious questions; no one has penetrated further in certain depths of the human being. I had insisted near one of the most eminent members of these con^ega- tions expelled by Gambetta's gang, so that he read these beautiful Prefaces which stir up so many ideas, and I remember of what he wrote to me on this subject: "This man was made for to be a priest.

Enlightened by the Truth, this intelligence so firm, so virile, could have rendered immense services; himself seems to have had an intuition of what he was losing and Ao what he made others lose by not believing; he did not obeyed no base ambition, no vile temptation, no desire to get along with the so-called free-thinkers sisters in power today and of whom he often spoke with a haughty contempt, but he could not take the decisive step; he

That she will be curious to study later in the big writer this kind of racial fatality to which he never could escape!

About Shakespeare, the illustrious playwright spoke eloquently, in the preface to VÉtrangère, àQ% créateurs who, as they grow older, will lose themselves in abstractions and dissolve, in a way, into what is the essence of their being. What light no longer illuminates the psychology of the writer this million in virgin gold of the Princess of Baghdad?

Shakespeare, the Aryan par excellence, launches into the blue, in the dream, in the fairyland, in the fantasy almost impalpable of Cymheline and the Tempest. The last-

224 JEWISH FRANCE

Dumas's latest artistic conception is to materialize excess, instead of spiritualizing, of giving a tangible, palpable, effective to this stubborn concern of the gold that perpetually haunts the one who has a drop of blood of Semite in the veins. Shakespeare returns to heaven, Dumas returns to the East, to Baghdad; one, in the effort supreme and definitive of his talent, wants to seize the cloud, the other wants to pile up metal, a lot of metal at the times and finds nothing that can tempt his heroine than to stir gold with both hands, gold new beating, virgin gold. Doesn't that make one think of the anger which seized the Athenians assembled at the theater of Bacchus when, in Euripides' play, Bellerophon ecried that gold must be worshipped! The Aryan genius rose up before this blasphemy, and the actor, half stoned by the spectators, had to leave the stage.

The Portuguese Jews, as we have said, had never were admitted to France as Jews, but as New Christians. It is only as Christians that they had received letters patent in August 1550 which were verified in the Court of Parliament and in the House from the Paris accounts, September 22 of the same year and recorded only in 1574. The Memoir of the mar-Parisian chands, who opposed in 1767 the entry of Jews in the trades, insists on this circumconstancy.

It is impossible, says this Memorandum, to see a combined project with more finesse and cunning than that of the establishment of Jews in Bordeaux. They first presented themselves under another qua-

- to surprise the religion of the very Christian king. Henry II their

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 223

granted letters patent. One might think that they have eager to have them registered; nothing of that; twenty-four years passed, not in vain for them, but in choosing the place most suited to their views. Bordeaux is chosen. We believe—perhaps they still presented to the Parliament of this Tille their letters patent to register; their march is not so right; less known in Paris than in Bordeaux, they address the first of these two courses and there fooc record their letters patents in 1574.

In any case, the Portuguese protested energetically whenever they were called Jews. Worried a moment, in 1614, they made the king show that "they inhabit—were in the city of Bordeaux for a long time and that the jealousy of the goods they had made them look as Jews, which they were not, but very good Christians—hold on and Catholics.

They scrupulously complied with all the practices—external ques of the Catholic religion; their births—sessions, their marriages, their deaths were recorded on the Church registers; their contracts were preceded by the words: in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit (1).

After living almost one hundred and fifty years like this, the Jews had remained as faithful to their beliefs as the day of their arrival. As soon as the opportunity was favorable, in 1686, according to Benjamin Francia, they returned open—ment to Judaism, they stopped having their children at baptism and to have their marriage blessed by Catholic priests.

. Even Jews whose families, for two hundred years,

(1) On this question, one will always consult with profit the work by Mr. Théophile Malvezin, the History of the Jews of Bordeaux, which is full of research and little-known facts.

13.

226 JEWISH FRANCE

officially practiced Catholicism in Spain, crossed the border and came to be circumcised and rem—

bins were installed there.

The persistence, the stubborn vitality of this Judaism that nothing affects, on which time slides and which remains—passed down from father to son in the privacy of the home, is suddenly sure one of the most curious phenomena for the observer.

The rare minds in France who are still capable of link two ideas in a row, will find there an opportunity for reflection on the anti-religious movement, the study of which is still being carried out to do, because the elements of this study, that is to say the con-birth of the true origins of the persecutors are very incomplete, although we have been working on it for some time gather them together (1).

(1) In this order of ideas, one must read the account of a journey in Spain published by the Jewish Chronicle in 1848, and reproduced by The Archivas Israélites (volume IX). It is nothing, in appearance, but It is an excellent historical and human document.

In 1839, an English Jew wanted to communicate with the coreligionists of Spain and barely obtains a letter for some of them. He arrives at one of them in a Tille, whom he does not name out of discretion, enters a living room in-filled with statuettes of saints, silver crucifixes, and images of piety. He makes himself recognized, but his host, by opening his arms to him, recommends not to say anything that might compromise him, because the paya believes him to be a zealous Catholic and his son and daughter are unaware that he is Jewish.

In the middle of the night, the head of the family and his visitor come down in an underground room. This is where the members of a small Jewish community whose existence no one suspects.

From the ceiling hangs the perpetual lamp, In the east, a cabinet covered with black velvet contains the scrolls of the Pentateus—

THE JLIIF IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 227

Among the countless foreign Jews who have slipped away—spun in France following the great surge of 1789, many have settled without fanfare and have lived out of everyone's life. Suddenly the opportunity arose presented, the old hatred against Christianity, dormant

that and a copy of the aecuons of the irupiiieies, on the t<bii dt
The two commandments are engraved in bronze.

Next to the cabinet is a Jewish calendar and the list of all the illustrious Jewish peoples who, without being recognized as such, have played a considerable role in the affairs of Israel.

In the center, on a black marble table, the phylacteries are spread out, and on the table, the Hebrew prayer books.

Only one grave appears. Forced to endure the humiliation of being buried in the Catholic cemetery and to undergo the prayers of the priests, the Jews were able to save the body of their rabbi, and they buried him there. At the death of each member of the community, we come to place a small stone near the grave.

The foreigner and the Spaniard converse for a long time in this sanctuary of their common hopes, then through one air vent one sees the dawn breaking, here is 1 hour of morning prayer. • He we must not leave the synagogue without having raised our hearts to the God of our fathers." The bell of a nearby convent tolls into the air its Argentinian and clear notes. A slight movement is made in the house: It is the young girl who runs to the church, and who hurries to don't miss the first mass....

The traveler returns to Spain, ten years later, he believes he is mistaken for he finds a palace in the place where the humble maypole once stood." sound of his coreligionist. We sit down at the table and recite the prayer of use out loud: the young girl is openly Jewish.

The Jews, moreover, have almost entirely taken possession of Spain. As early as 1869, Mr. Jules Lan noted that most of the descendants of converted Jews had preserved a Hebrew canon, what is called in German ein Judischer hers. He engaged in dithyrambic transports meeting everywhere in the neighborhood of the great merchants of Madrid, the Montara, iiiCalie f'aen Carrai atm Berheuijdes ilayer, des Levy, des Wesveiller, des Werlheimer.

This is enough to explain why Spain is getting rid of the mid-point. incessant revolutionaries.

At the inauguration of the Lisbon synagogue, there was some^OM

258 JEWISH FRANCE

in the fathers, awoke in the children who, disguised as free thinkers, began to insult the priests, to to break down the doors of the sanctuaries, to throw down the crosses.

In Bordeaux, as elsewhere, the development of evil Judaic followed its psychological course, the evolution that it has everywhere, in all climates, at all times, without

On May 22, 1718, Mr. de Courson, intendant of Bordeaux, noted the presence of 500 people belonging to the Israelite religion. The report submitted on December 8, 1733 to Mr. de Boucher, successor to Mr. de Courson, mentioned the presence of 4,000 to 5,000 Jews. As soon as they had felt a little free they had found a way to open seven synagogues.

With their usual aplomb, they always went from the front. To enhance the splendor of their burials, they were escorted by the knights of the Watch and the sergeants.

We have seen the same facts repeated in a identical order. Under the pretext that a duty officer had complied with the strict text of the regulation and had refused to follow the civil burial of the Jew Félicien David, the Jewish Freemasonry shouted aloud and cried: "Free thought, this sublime thing, what do you do with it?" This is the first step. When it comes to driving Gam-

years, "we were surprised," says Mr. Théodore Reioach, "to see families arrive from far away in the interior of the country, to take part in the feast of the Great Pardon; they were Marranos who had preserved intact, for three hundred years, the faith and traditions of their fathers.

The word Marrane comes from the Hebrew word Marran-âtha, "anaUiègjfi-aur^ you 1 » that the Jew pronounced in a low voice to curse the priest '^^Methicist, when he was forced to attend services.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 229

betta at Père Lachaise, Freemasonry requires magistrates and officers to follow a funeral that sou-raises the indignation of all honest people. It is the second step. In some time we will prevent the magistrates, officers, citizens to attend religious funerals, claiming that it is a way of clerical celebration. This will be the third stage.

After this stage it generally arises, in the countries which have not fallen completely into decay, a energetic man who, armed with a vigorous broom, puts-all these people out. Then the protest scene breaks out, it's the blow of Zion, as we say in slang, a Oh! the fanatics! Poor Israel, victim of the wicked! you cry, but you will have your turn.

banter. The report submitted in 1733 to Mr. de Boucher said: "The Jews have pretty peasant girls as servants—that they make pregnant to serve as wet nurses for their children and make those whose young peasant girls carry give birth to the foundling box.

It's in order: goy, son or daughter of goy, all of this is created to enrich and amuse the Jew. Cannon fodder, cannon fodder pleasure, factory or brothel livestock, that's understood. The his-yesterday's story is today's story. Some women of heart, some heroic virgins once managed to collect some of these wrecks of misery and debauchery, to save them from despair or shame. will prevent this.

Chancellor d'Aguesseau, hardly suspected of being an enemy of the lights, was struck however by the way in which they walked the Jews of Bordeaux and tried to put a stop to it!

In truth, the Portuguese were somewhat victims of their coreligionists. The Gradis, the Fernandez, the Silva, the Laneyra, the FerrejTa, the Pereire and C'% including the chief Joseph Nunez Pereire called himself Viscount of La Menaude and Baron of Ambès from 1720, were at the head of houses of bank or trade which provided certain services. Unfortunately, seeing the city open, a cloud of Jews A.vignonais and Germans had rushed to Bordeaux. tribe of Judah, to which the Portuguese belonged, was compromised by the tribe of Benjamin who had dedicated themselves with eagerness to negotiate old clothes and old braids and which did not always bring all the honor to this traffic desirable stubbornness.

230 JEWISH FRANCE

To make matters worse, a violent quarrel had broken out raised about the kosher wine on which the rabbis pretended to collect a right because they prepared it according to the rite, while the German rabbis wanted prepare it themselves and pay no fees.

In our time, we would calm these differences by appointing all the Jews in rivalry prefects or sub-prefects and in them praying to pass their bad mood on the Christians, but the 18th century was not yet there.

Despite the resistance put up by the Dalpuget, the Astruc, the Vidals, the Langes, the Petits, Avignon Jews who claim—were carrying out a serious trade, a decision of the Council definitive without any delay of "all the Jews of Avignon, Germans or Germans who are established in Bordeaux or in other places in the province of Guyenne.

Thanks to this measure, Portuguese Jews were able to remain in relatively peaceful in Bordeaux until the Revolution.

Bordeaux was, however, a very good place for the

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 231

Jews; they tried in vain in 1729 to spread to the Rochelle; another judgment of August 22, 1729, re-issued on the conclusions of d'A^esseau that we always find when- that it was a question of defending the Fatherland, drove them out of the city of Do not verse.

It was Paris above all that they were aiming for; in 1767 it was believed they had found a way to enter. A stop of the Council had ruled that with the help of patents granted by the king, foreigners could enter the trades. The Jews, always on the lookout, imagined that it would be easy to slip through this door.

The six merchant corps protested energetically. The Petition of the Merchants and Traders of Paris Against The admission of Jews is, without doubt, one of the most most interesting that exist on the Semitic question.

We can no longer, in fact, tell us the old stories- res of fanatical peoples excited by the monks, of pre- considered religious. These bourgeois are Parisians of the 18th century* •century, contemporaries of Voltaire, rather lukewarm probably- ably.

What they are discussing is not the religious point of view, This is the social point of view. Their arguments, inspired by the common sense, patriotism, the feeling of consent, are the same as those of the committees of Berlin, Austria, from Russia, from Romania and we can say that their eloquent request is the first piece of the anti-scimitic file modern on which the twentieth will definitively decide century beginning, if the trial lasts until then.

Parisian merchants protest vigorously against the assimilation that we want to establish between the Jew and the foreigner; the foreigner is inspired by a fund of ideas which is common to all civilized peoples, the Jew is outside of all peoples;

It's a fairground, something like the anti-circulator that.

The admission of this species of men into a politics can only be very dangerous; they can be compared to wasps (I) which only enter hives to kill the bees, open their bellies and take out the honey that is inside their entrails. Such are the Jews to whom it is impossible to assume the qualities of a citizen that one must certainly find-worm in all subjects of political societies.

Of the kind of man we are dealing with today, none has been raised in the principles of legitimate authority. They even believe that all authority is a usurpation on them, they make no vows that to achieve a universal Empire; they look at all the goods as belonging to them and the subjects of all States as having taken away their possessions.

It often happens that in wanting to rise above prejudice-ges, we abandon true principles. A certain philosophy-
The philosophy of our days wants to justify the Jews for the treatment they have received experienced by all the sovereigns of Europe. It is necessary or to regard the Jews as guilty, or to appear to reproach the sovereigns, even to the predecessors of His Majesty, a cruelty worthy of the most barbaric centuries.

These merchants of the 18th century who are less stupid than our hunters of today, who agree to let themselves be drive out of their homes to make way for invaders, indicate in terms worthy of Toussenel, this gift of aggregation that Jews have which attract each other and unite against those who gave them hospitality. This that they write, about the fortunes made honestly through work, is in some way like the testament of the old Parisian merchants so honest, so conscientious.

(1) This is the idea that the Germans express in a more picturesque again by calling Semilism: the Jewish Golden Spider, die judische goldspinne.

THE JEW IN THE HISTORY OF FRANCE 233

so far removed from all the shameless advertising methods which is now used to sell junk and which make tourists look at Paris as a real one den of brigands.

All foreigners are pressured by the Jews. These are lesser slope come together in a main block.

Fortunes in business are seldom made quickly when it is exercised with the good faith that it requires; also one could general guarantee the legitimacy of that of the French and particularly-merchants of Paris. The Jews, on the contrary, have everything time accumulated in a few years immense riches and it is still what is happening before our eyes.

Could it be through some supernatural ability that they manage so quickly to such a high degree of fortune?

The Jews cannot boast of having given the world any advantage in the various countries where they have been tolerated. The inventions, useful discoveries, hard and assiduous work, manufacturing, armaments, agriculture, none of that does not enter their system. But take advantage of the discoveries to alter productions, alter metals, practice all kinds wear and tear, receiving stolen goods, buying from anyone, even of a murderer or a servant, introduce the goods prohibited or defective, offer to wasteful or unfortunate people born debtors of the resources which hasten their ruin, the discounts, small changes, speculation, pawnbroking, bartering, second-hand trade, that's pretty much their entire industry.

